THese words containe three parts: I. a preface. II. the praier it selfe, containing sixe petitions. III. the testification of faith in the last word, Amen.

Which although it be short, yet it doth not containe the smallest point in the praier. It is (I say) a testification of our faith, whereas the petitions that goe before are onely testifications of our desires. Now of these three parts in order.

Wee must consider how our Sauiour Christ doth not set downe the petitions abruptly, abruptly, but he first beginnes with a solemne preface. Whereby we are taught this lesson; that he which is to pray vnto God, is first to prepare himselfe, and not boldly without consideration as it were to rush into the presence of God.

If a man be to come before an earthly Prince, he will order himselfe in apparell, gesture, and wordes, that he may doe all things in seemelinesse and dutifull reuerence: how much more are men to order themselues, when they are to appeare before the liuing God? Eccles. 5.1. Be not rash with thy mouth, and let not thy heart be hastie to vtter a thing before the Lord. And Dauid, Psal. 26.6. washed his hands in innocencie, before he came to the altar of the Lord to offer sacrifice.

The meanes whereby men may stirre vp their dull and heauie hearts, and so prepare themselues to prayer, are three. The first is to read diligently the word of God, concerning those matters about which they are to pray: and what then? this will be a meanes not onely to direct him, but also to quicken the heart more feruently to deliuer his prayer. This is euident by a comparison. The beames of the sunne descending, heat not before they come to the earth, or some solide bodie where they may reflect, and then by that meanes the earth and ayre adioyning is made hot: euen so the Lord sendes downe vnto vs his blessed word, euen as beames and the goodly sunshine, and thereby he speakes to our hearts: now when we make our prayers of that which we haue read, Gods word is as it were reflected, and our hearts are thereby warmed with the comfortable heat of Gods holy Spirit, to poure out our prayers to God more feruently. The second meanes is to pray to God that he would strengthen vs with his spirit, that we might be able to pray as it is practised, Psal. 143.1. The third meanes is, the consideration of Gods most glorious maiestie, wherein we are to remember first his fatherly goodnes and kindnesse, whereby he is willing; and secondly his omnipotencie, whereby he is able to grant our request. One of these imboldened the leper to pray, Lord, if thou wilt thou canst make me cleane. Math. 8.2. Therefore both together are more effectuall.

Now let vs come to the preface it selfe, Our Father which art in heauen. It contains a description of the true Iehoua to whome we pray, and that by two arguments: the first is drawne from a relation, Our father: the second is taken from the subiect or place, which art in heauen.

Father.

1. The meaning.

IN the opening of this word, or title of God, two questions are to be opened.

1. Quest. Whether by this title Father, is signified the whole Trinitie, or some one person thereof. Ans. Otherwhiles this name is attributed to all the persons in Trinitie, or any of them. Mal. 2.10. Haue we not all one father, &c. Luke. 3.38. Which was the sonne of Adam, which was the sonne of God. And in Esa. 36. Christ is called the Father of eternitie, because all that are truly knit to him, and borne anew by him, they are eternally made the sonnes of God. Againe, oftentimes it is giuen to the first person in Trinitie, as in those places where one person is conferred with an other. And so in this place principally for some speciall respects, this title agrees to the first person. For first he is the father of Christ as he is the eternall word of the father, and that by nature, because he is of the same essence with him. Secondly, he is the father to Christ in respect of his manhood, not by nature or adoption, but by personall vnion, because the humane nature doth subsist in the perso of the word. Thirdly, he is a father to all the faithfull by adoption in Christ.

2. Quest. Whether are we to pray to the Sonne and the holy Ghost as to the Father? Ans. Inuocation belongs to all the three persons in Trinitie, and not onely to the Father. Act. 7.59. Steuen praieth, Lord Iesus receiue my spirit. 1. Thes. 3.2. Now God our Father and our Lord Iesus Christ guide our iourney vnto you. 2. Cor. 13.13. The grace of our Lord Iesus Christ, the loue of God, and the communion of the holy Ghost be with you. And men are baptized in the name of the Father, the Sonne, & the holy Ghost, that is, by calling on the name of the Father, Sonne, and holy Ghost.

Some may say, this prayer is a perfect platforme of all prayers, and yet wee are taught to direct our prayers to the Father, not to the Sonne, or holy spirit. I answer, the Father, Sonne, & holy Ghost, are three distinct persons, yet they are not to be seuered or deuided, because they all subsist in one & the same Godhead or diuine nature. And further in all outward actions, as in the creation and preseruation of the world, world, and the ſaluation of the elect, they are not ſeuered or diuided; for they all worke togither, onely they are diſtinguiſhed in the manner of working. Nowe if they be not diuided in nature or operation thē they are not to be ſeuered in worſhip.

And in this place we principally direct our praiers to the father becauſe he is the firſt in order: yet ſo, as then we implie the Sonne and holy Ghoſt. For we pray to the Father in the name of the Sonne by the aſſiſtance of the holy Ghoſt. And to what perſon ſoeuer the praier is directed, we muſt alwayes remember in minde and heart to include the reſt.

THe vſes of this point are manifold.

1. Firſt, whereas we are taught to come to God as to a father, and therefore in the name of his Sonne our Sauiour Chriſt, we learne to lay the firſt ground of all our prayers, which is to hold and maintaine the vnion and the diſtinction of the three perſons in Trinitie. This being the loweſt and the firſt foundation of praier, it is requiſite that all which would pray aright, ſhould haue this knowledge, rightly to beleeue the Trinitie, & to know how the three perſons agree, and how they are diſtinguiſhed, and the order of them, how the Father is the firſt, the Sonne the ſecond, the holy Ghoſt the third: and therefore how the father is to be called vpon in the name of the ſonne by the holy Ghoſt. By this, the praiers of Gods church, and the praiers of heathen men are diſtinguiſhed, who inuocate God as a creator out of the father, Sonne, and holy Ghoſt. And hence it is manifeſt, that ignorant and filly people which doe not ſo much as dreame of the vnion, diſtinctiō, and order of the perſons in Trinitie, make but a cold and ſlender kind of praying.

2. Secondly, we may learne hereby that we are not in any wiſe to inuocate Saints and angels, but onely the true Iehouah. The reaſon ſtands thus: This praier is either a perfect platforme for all praiers, or not: to ſay it were not, were an iniurie to our Sauiour Chriſt: to ſay it is ſo, is alſo to graunt that it doth fully ſet downe to whome all praiers are to be made. Now, in theſe words there is ſet downe no inuocation but of God alone. For in praier to be tearmed, Our father, is proper to God, Eſai. 64. 16. Thou art our father: though Abraham be ignorant of vs, and Iſrael know vs not: yet thou, O Lord, art our father & redeemer. Papiſts therefore that are the great patrons of inuocation of Saints, in their reformed breuiaries and miſſalls, deale very fondly: for firſt they pray to Marie, that ſhee would pray to Chriſt for them, and when they haue ſo done, like iuglers they come to Chriſt and pray vnto him that he would accept Maries praier for them.

3. Thirdly, we learne that there can be no interceſſour betweene God and vs, but onely Chriſt. For here we are taught to come to God not as a iudge, but as to a kind and louing father. Now he is a father to vs onely by Chriſt: as for Angels and Saints and all creatures, they are not able to procure by any means, that God ſhould become a father, no not ſo much as to one man.

4. Againe, if the God to whome we pray be a father, we muſt learne to acquaint our ſelues with the promiſes which he hath made in his word, to quicken our hearts in all our praiers vnto him, & thereby to gather affiance to our ſelues and perſwaſion that he will graunt our requeſts. For this word [Father] implies a readineſſe and willingneſſe in God to heare and be mercifull to our praiers. And a father cannot but muſt needes make promiſe of fauour to thoſe that be his children, & therefore it can not be that he ſhould call to God his father truly, which hath not in his heart this aſſurance, that God will fulfill all his promiſes made vnto him. Promiſes made to praier, as theſe and ſuch like, are to be marked as follow, 2. Chron. 7. 14. If my people, among whome my name is called vpon, doe humble themſelues, and pray, and ſeeke my preſence, and turne from their wicked wayes, then I will heare in heauen, and be mercifull vnto their ſinnes. 2. Chron. 15. 2. The Lord is with you while yee be with him, and if yee ſeeke him, he will be found of you. Eſa. 65. 34. Before they call I will anſwer, and whiles they ſpeake I will heare. Math. 7. 7. Aske and it ſhall be giuen you, ſeeke and yee ſhall finde, knocke and it ſhall be opened. Luk. 11. 13. If yee which are euill can giue good gifts vnto your children, how much more ſhall your heauenly father giue the holy Ghoſt to them that deſire him? Rom. 10. 12. He that is Lord ouer all, is rich vnto all that call on him. Iam. 4. 8. Draw neere vnto God, and he will draw neere vnto you.

5. If God be a father who is called vpon, then praier is the note of Gods childe. S. Luke and S. Paul ſet out the faithfull ſeruants of God by this note. Act. 9. 14. He hath hath authoritie to bind all that call on thy name 1. Cor. 1. 2. To them that are sanctified by Iesus Christ, Saints by calling, with all that call on the name of our Lord Iesus Christ. And contrariwise. Psal. 14. 4. it is made one of the properties of an Atheist, Neuer to call on the name of God. And such persons as neither will nor can, or vse not heartily to pray to God, they may say that they are perswaded there is a God, but in their doings they beare themselues as if their were no God.

6. He which would pray aright, must be like the prodigall child, that is, he must not onely confesse his sinne, saying, Father I haue sinned against heauen, and against thee, &c. but also haue a full purpose neuer after to offend his father. For how can a child call him father whome he cares not continually to displease through his lewd conditions? He can not doe it, neither can any father delight in such a child: therefore in praier we must call to mind our lewdnes and rebellions against our heauenly father, and with the Publican in heauines of soule say, Lord be mercifull to me a sinner. He which can truly doe this, is a kinde childe. If we consider our selues as we are by nature, we are the children of the deuill: no child so like his father as we are like him; and in this estate we continually rebell against God: for the deuil hath all the heart, our whole ioy is to serue and please him. A man that is to pray must thinke on this, & be grieued thereat. And happie, yea a thousand times happie are they, who haue grace giuen them to see this their state and to bewaile it. And further, it is not sufficient to confesse our sinnes against our mercifull Father, but we must set downe with our selues neuer in such sort to offend him againe, and to lead a new life. This point is very profitable for these times. For many there be when any crosse or sickneese comes on them, will pray and promise repentance and al obedience to Gods word, if it shall please God to deliuer them: but this vsually is but in hypocrisie, they dissemble with God and man. For when their sicknes is past, like a dogge that had bin in the water, they shake their eares & runne streight with all gredinesse to their former sinnes. Is this to call God Father? No, he that doth this shall not haue God to be his father: but the man that is wounded in his soule for his offences past, and carrieth a purpose in his heart neuer wittingly and willingly to offend God againe.

7. Lastly, here we are to obserue, that he which would pray, must be indued with the spirit of adoption: the actions whereof in the matter of praier are twofold. The first to moone the heart to crie and call on God as a father. It is no easie thing to pray: for to a man of himselfe it is as easie to moone the whole heart with his hand: how then comes it that we pray? It is a blessed worke of the spirit. Rom 8. 15. We haue receiued the spirit of adoption, whereby we crie, Abba, that is, father. And Rom. 8. 26. Likewise the spirit helpeth our infirmities: for we know not what to pray as we ought: but the spirit it selfe maketh request. And Zach. 12. 10. the holy Ghost is called the spirit of grace, and deprecations, or praiers: Well then, the man that would pray, must haue Gods spirit to be his schoole-master, to teach him to pray with grones & sighes of the heart: for the words make not the prayer, but the grones and desires of his heart: and a man praies for no more then he desires with the heart, and he which desires nothing praies not at all, but spends lip-labour. The second worke of the spirit, is to assure vs in our consciences that we are in the state of grace reconciled to God. Rom. 8. 16. The spirit of adoption beareth witnesse with our spirits that we are the children of God. And this inward certificate of the spirit in all exercises of inuocation is very necessarie: for he which wants this assurance, if he be secure and benummed in his sinnes, will not, and if he be touched in conscience for them, for his life dares not cal God father. Also this confutes the opinion of the church of Rome, which teacheth, that man is to doubt whether he be adopted or no. For how can a man truly call God father, when he doubts whether he be the child of God or no? It is a miserable kind of praying to call God father, and withall to doubt whether he be a father. Indeed it is true that doubts will often arise, but it is our dutie to striue against them, and not to yeeld to them. Yea but (say they) to be certaine of Gods mercy is presumption. I answer, if it be presumption, it is an holy presumption, because God hath bidden vs to call him father.

Our Father.

1. The meaning.

THus much of the argument of relation: now let vs proceede. It is further ſaide, Our Father. And hee is ſo tearmed, becauſe he is the father of Chriſt by nature; and in him the father of euery beleeuer: yea of the whole bodie of the Church.

Queſt. Whether may it be lawfull for vs in praier to ſay, not our father, but my father? Anſ. A Chriſtian may in priuate praier ſay, My father. This is warranted by the example of our Sauiour, Math. 26.39. O my father, if it be poſſible let this cup paſſe from me. And Math. 27.46. My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? And Thomas praied, My Lord and my God. And Paul, I giue thãks to my God, &c. And Gods promiſe is, Ier. 3.19. Thou ſhalt call me, my father. The meaning of Chriſt is not to bind vs to theſe words, but to teach vs that in our praiers we muſt not haue regard to our ſelues onely, but alſo to our brethren, and therefore when we pray for them in our priuate praiers as for our ſelues, we put in practiſe the true meaning of theſe words.

2. The vſes.

When we pray, we muſt not make requeſt onely for our ſelues and our owne good, but for others alſo, as the Church and people of God, perſwading our ſelues that we alſo are partakers of their praiers: and for the bẽtter cleering of this point, let vs ſearch who they are for whome we are to pray.

Of men there be two ſorts, ſome liuing, ſome dead. Of theſe two kinds, the liuing are to be praied for, and there is no praying for the dead.

A man that is dead, knowes not what ſhal be his eſtate eternally: if he died a wicked perſon, that is, an vnrepentant ſinner, his ſtate ſhall be according in eternall torment: if he died, hauing repented of his ſinnes, then he ſhall reſt with God in his kingdome. Apoc. 14.13. Bleſſed are they which die in the Lord, for they reſt from their labours, and their works follow them. Gal. 6. 10. While we haue time let vs doe good to all men. Where we maye note that there is a time, namely after death, when we cannot doe good to others.

Againe, of the liuing, ſome are our enemies, and ſome our friends. Our friends are they which are of the ſame religion, affection, and diſpoſition. Foes are either priuate or publike. Publike foes, are either enemies to our countrie, as tyrants, traytors, &c. or enemies to our religion, as Iewes, Turkes, Papiſts, Infidels, Atheiſts. Now towards all theſe, how ought a man to behaue himſelfe in praier? Anſ. He is to pray for them all. Math. 5.44. Pray for them which hurt you, and perſecute you. 1. Tim. 2. 1. I exhort that praiers, interceſſions, &c. be made for all men, for kings, &c. Yet when Paul gaue this commandement, we read not that there were any Chriſtian kings, but all Infidels. And the Iewes are commanded to pray for Babylon, where they were captiue. Ier. 29.7. And ſeeke the proſperity of the citie, whether I haue cauſed you to be carried captiue, and pray vnto the Lord for it.

Queſt. How and in what manner are we to pray for our enemies? Anſ. We are to pray againſt their ſinnes, counſells, enterpriſes, but not againſt their perſons. Thus praied Dauid againſt Achitophel, 2 Sam. 15.31. Lord I pray thee turne the cõſell of Achitophel to fooliſhnes. And thus did the Apoſtles pray againſt their perſecutors, Act. 4.29. O Lord behold their threatnings, and graunt vnto thy ſeruants with all boldneſſe to ſpeake thy word.

Queſt. Dauid vſeth imprecations againſt his enemies, in which he praieth for their vtter confuſion, as Pſal. 59. and 109. &c. The like is done by Paule, Gal. 5.12. Tim. 4,14. and Peter, Act. 8.20. though afterwards he mitigates his execration. But how could they doe it? Anſ. 1. They were indued with an extraordinarie meaſure of Gods ſpirit, and hereby they were inabled to diſcerne of their enemies; and certenly to iudge that their wickednes and malice was incurable, and that they ſhould neuer repent. And the like praiers did the primitiue Church conceiue againſt Iulian the Apoſtata, becauſe they perceiued him to be a malitious and deſperate enemie. 2. Secondly, they were indued with a pure zeale and not carried with deſire of reuenge againſt their enemies intending nothing els but the glorie of God. Now for vs it is good that we ſhould ſuſpect our zeale, becauſe ſiniſter affections, as hatred, enuie, emulation, deſire of reuenge, will eaſily mingle themſelues therewith.

Queſt. How farre forth may wee vſe thoſe pſalmes in which Dauid vſeth imprecations againſt his enemies? Anſ. They are to be read and ſong with theſe caueats. 1. We are to vſe thoſe imprecations indefinitely againſt the enemies of God and his Church: for we may not perſwade our ſelues that alwaies there bee ſome ſuch ſuch obſtinate enemies: but we muſt not applie them particularly. 2. Secondly, we muſt vſe them (as Auguſtine ſaith) as certaine propheticall ſentences of the holy Ghoſt, pronouncing the laſt ſentence of deſtruction vpon finall and impenitent ſinners, which oppoſe themſelues againſt Gods kingdome. 3. They may be vſed againſt our ſpirituall enemies, the fleſh, the deuill, and his angls, and the world.

2. Furthermore, whereas we are taught to ſay, Our Father, this ſerues to put vs in minde, that in praying to God, we muſt bring loue to men with vs. We muſt all be the children of one father, louingly diſpoſed one to another. For how ſhould he call God his father, who will not take the child of God for his brother? Math. 5.23. when thou art to offer thy gift vnto God, if thou haue ought againſt thy brother: firſt bee reconciled, and then come and offer thy gift. So alſo Eſai 1.15. the Lord ſaith that when they pray vnto him he will not heare. Why? becauſe their hands are full of blood. In theſe times many men can be content formally to pray, but yet they will not leaue bribing, oppreſſion, deceit, vſurie, &c. The common ſong of the world is, Euery man for himſelfe, and God for vs all: this is the common loue and care that men haue each to other. The praiers of ſuch are abhominable, euen as the ſacrifice of a dogge, as Eſai ſaith. For how can they call God their father, that haue no loue to their bretheren?

3. Thirdly, hence we may learne that God is no accepter of perſons. For this praier is giuen to all men of what ſtate or degre ſoeuer. All then, as well poore as rich, vnlearned as learned, ſubiects as rulers, may ſay, Our Father. It is not with the Lord as it is with the world, but all are his children that doe beleeue. The poore man hath as good intereſt in Gods kingdome, and may call God father as well as the king. Therfore the weaker ſort are to comfort themſelues hereby, knowing that God is a father to them as well as to Abraham, Dauid, Peter. And ſuch as are indued with more grace, muſt not therefore ſwell in pride, becauſe they haue not God to be their father more then their inferiours haue.

Which art in heauen.

1. The meaning.

Queſt. HOw may God be ſaid to be in heauen, ſeeing he is infinite, and therefore muſt needs be euery where? 1. King. 8.27. The heauen of heauens are not able to containe him. &c. God is ſaid to be in heauen: firſt, becauſe his maieſtie, that is, his power, wiſdome, iuſtice, mercie, is made manifeſt from thence vnto vs. Pſal. 115.3. Our God is in heauen and doth whatſoeuer he will. Pſal 2.4. He that dwelleth in heauen ſhall laugh them to ſcorne, and the Lord ſhall haue them in derision. Eſai ſaith, 66.2. Thus ſaith the Lord, Heauen is my throne, and the earth is my footſtoole. Secondly, after this life hee will manifeſt and exhibite the fulneſſe of his glorie to his Angels and Saints in the higheſt heauens, and that immediatly and viſibly.

2. The vſes.

1. HEreby firſt we learne that Romiſh pilgrimages, wereby men went frō place to place to worſhip God, are vain & fooliſh. The God to whō we muſt pray is in heauen. Now let men trauell to what place, or countrye they will, they ſhall not come the neater to heauen, or nearer to God by trauelling, ſeeing the earth is in euery part alike diſtant from heauen.

2. Secondly, this ouerthrowes popiſh idolatrie, as worſhipping of croſſes, crucifixes, roodes. &c. vſed to put men in mind of God and Chriſt. We are taught to lift vp our eyes to heauen, ſeeing God is there: and how can we doe this, as long as our mindes and eyes are pouring vpon an image made by mans arte?

3. Againe, we are here admoniſhed to vſe the action of prayer with as great reuerence as poſſible may be, and not to thinke of God in any earthly manner. Well reaſons Salomon, Eccles. 5.1. Be not raſh with thy mouth to ſpeake a word before God. why? he is in heauen, thou art in earth: therefore let thy words be few. This reuerence muſt appeare in holineſſe of all our thoughts and affections, and in all comelineſſe of geſture. And for this cauſe all wandring by-thoughts, and all vaine babbing is to be auoided: but how goes the caſe with vs, that on the times appointed come to the aſſemblies to pray? Many, by reaſon of their blindneſſe pray without vnderſtanding. Many, when they are preſent at praier, yet haue their hearts occupied about other matters, about their goods and worldly buſines: ſuch men haue no ioy or gladnes in praying; it is a burthen to them. Many come to the aſſembly for cuſtome onely, or for feare of puniſhment; if they might be left free they could finde in their hearts not to pray at all. But let all ſuch men know, that this manner of praying is a very grieuous ſinne, nay greater then mocking of father or mother, killing or ſtealing. for it is directly againſt God, the other againſt men. This ſinne becauſe it is againſt the firſt table, and therefore more hard to bee diſcerned, it is lightly eſteemed, and it leſſe troubles the conſciences of ignorant men: yea as it is indeed, ſo it is to be eſteemed as a diſgrace and plaine mockery of Gods maieſtie. Wherefore ſeeing God is in heauen, away with all drowſie and dead praying, let vs come with reuerence in our hearts before the Lord.

4. Againe, we are here to conſider that our hearts in praier muſt mount vp into heauen, and there be preſent with the Lord. Pſal. 25. 1. Vnto thee O Lord lift I vp my ſoule. The litle childe is neuer well but when it is in the fathers lappe, or vnder the mothers wing: and the children of God are neuer in better caſe, then when in affection and ſpirit they can come into the preſence of their heauenly Father, and by prayer, as it were to creepe into his boſome.

5. And here we muſt further learne, ſpecially to ſeeke for heauenly things, and to aske earthly things, ſo far forth as they ſerue to bring vs to an euerlaſting and immortall inheritance in heauen to which we are called. 1. Pet. 1. 3.

6. Laſtly, whereas our Father is in heauen we are to learne that our life on earth is but a pilgrimage, and that our deſire muſt be to attaine to a better countrey, namely, heauen it ſelfe, and that we muſt vſe al meanes continually to come vnto it. In a word, to make an ende of the preface: in it is contained a double ſtay or proppe of all our prayers. The one is to beleeue that God can graunt our requeſts, becauſe he is almighty, and thus much is ſignified when he is ſaid to be in heauen. The ſecond is to beleeue that God is readie and willing to graunt the ſame, and this we are taught in the title Father, which ſerues to put vs in minde that God accepts our praiers, Ioh. 16. 32. and hath a care of vs in all our miſeries and neceſſities, Math. 6. 32. and pitieth vs as much as any earthly father can pitie his childe. Pſalme 103. 13.

Yet muſt we not imagine that God will indeed giue vnto vs whatſoeuer we do vpon our own heads, fancie, & deſire: but we muſt in our prayers haue recourſe to the promiſe of God, and according to the tenour thereof muſt we frame and ſquare our petitions. Things promiſed abſolutely, as all graces neceſſarie to ſaluation, may be asked abſolutely: and things promiſed with condition, as graces leſſe neceſſarie, and temporall bleſſings are to be asked with condition, namely, ſo farre forth as they ſhall be for Gods glory in vs, and for our good: except it be ſo that God promiſe any temporall bleſſing abſolutely, as he promiſed iſſue to Abraham in his olde age. The kingdome to Dauid after Saul. A deliuerance from captiuitie in Babylon after 70. yeares to the Iſraelites.

Againe, the preface ſerues to ſtirre vp loue and feare in the hearts of them that are about to pray. Loue, becauſe they pray to a father. Feare, becauſe he is ful of maieſtie in heauen.

1. The Coherence.

THus much of the preface: nowe follow the petitions. They be ſixe in number, the three firſt concerne God, the three laſt our ſelues. The three former petitions are againe deuided into two parts: the firſt concernes Gods glory it ſelfe; the other two, the meanes whereby Gods glorie is manifeſted and inlarged among men. For Gods name is glorified among men when his kingdome doth come, and his will is done.

Queſt. Why is this petition, Hallowed be thy name, ſet in the firſt place? Anſ. Becauſe Gods glory muſt be preferred before all things, becauſe it is the ende of al creatures and of all the counſels of God. Prou. 16. 4. The Lord hath made all things for his owne ſake: yea euen the wicked for the day of euill. And from the order of the petitions here ariſeth a worthy inſtruction, namely, that euery one in all things they take in hand, are to propound to themſelues and to intende the glory of GOD. The reaſon is this: The ende which God hath appointed to all our doings, we are to propoũd to our ſelues: but God hath appointed that the higheſt ende of all our doings ſhould be his glorie: therefore our harts muſt be ſet to ſeeke it firſt of al. That God will haue his name glorified by vs appeareth in this; that he puniſheth thoſe which which of obſtinacie ſet themſelues to diſhonour him, or by negligence did not ſanctifie him, when they ſhould haue done ſo. Herod ſitting in his royalty, made ſuch an oratiõ, that the people cried, The voice of a God, & not of a man: and immediatly the angel of the Lord ſmote him, becauſe he gaue not glory to God. Act. 12. 12. And Moſes becauſe he did not ſanctifie the Lord in the preſence of the children of Iſrael, therefore he came not into the land of promiſe; yet he did not altogether faile in doing of it. Thus we may ſee by theſe puniſhments, and alſo by the order of the petitions, that it is our duty to preferre the glory of God before all things els.

Queſt. Whether are we to preferre the glory of God before the ſaluation of our ſoules? Anſw. If the caſe ſtand thus that Gods name muſt be diſhonoured, or our ſoules condemned, we muſt account the glorie of God more precious then the ſaluation of our ſoules. This is manifeſt in the order of the petitions. The petitions that conterne Gods glory are firſt, & the petitions that concerne directly our ſaluation are the fift & ſixt. Wherby we are taught, that before God ſhould want any part of his glory, we muſt let body and ſoule and all goe, that God may haue all his glory. This affection had Moſes, Exod. 32. 32. when he ſaid, Either forgiue them, or if thou wilt not, blot my name out of thy booke.

In this petition as alſo in the reſt, we muſt obſerue three things: the firſt is the meaning of the words: the ſecond, the wants which men muſt learne to bewaile: the third, the graces of God which are to be deſired.

2. The meaning.

VEry few among the people can giue the right meaning of the wordes of this praier. They pretend, that ſeeing God knowes their good meaning, it is ſufficiẽt for them to ſay the words and to meane well. But faith beeing one of the grounds of praier, and there beeing no faith without knowledge, neither can there be praier without knowledge, and therfore ignorant men are to learne the right meaning of the words.

Name.

Name in this place ſignifieth,

1. God himſelfe, 1. King. 5. 5. Hee ſhall build an houſe to my Name.

2. His attributes, as his iuſtice, mercie, &c.

3. His workes, creatures, and iudgements.

4. His word.

5. His honour and praiſe ariſing from all theſe.

For God is knowne to vs by all theſe, as men are knowne by their names; & as all a mans praiſe & glory lies in his name, ſo all the glory of God is in theſe.

Hallowed.

TO hallow is to ſeuer or ſet apart any thing from the common vſe, to ſome proper and peculiar ende: as the Temple was hallowed, that is, ſet apart to an holy vſe; and the Prieſts were ſanctified, that is ſet apart to the ſeruice of God. And al that beleeue in Chriſt are ſanctified, that is, ſet apart from ſinne to ſerue God. In like maner Gods name is hallowed, when it is put apart from obliuion, contempt, prophanation, pollution, blaſphemie, and all abuſes to an holy, reuerent, and honourable vſe, whether we thinke, ſpeake of it, or vſe it any manner of way. Leuit. 10. 3. Ezech. 38. 23.

Queſt. How can a ſinnefull man hallow Gods name which is pure and holy in it ſelfe? Anſ. We doe not here pray that we might make Gods name holy, as though we could adde ſomething vnto it to make it holy: but that we might be meanes to declare and make manifeſt to the world by the right vſage of it, that it is holy pure, and honourable. The like phraſe is vſed, Luk. 7. 9. Wiſdome is iuſtified by her children, that is, acknowledged and declared to be iuſt. Ezech. 38. 23.

The ſcope therefore of the firſt petition, is an earneſt deſire that we might ſet forth Gods glory, whatſoeuer become of vs: and it may be expreſſed thus. O Lord open our eyes that we may aright knowe thee, & acknowledge the greatnes of thy power, wiſedome, iuſtice, & mercy, which appeares in thy titles, words, creatures, and iudgements: and graunt that when we vſe any of theſe, we may therein honour thee and vſe them reuerently to thy glory.

1. THe wants, which we in this place are taught to bewaile, are ſpecially foure. The firſt, is an inward and ſpirituall pride of our hearts; a ſinne that none or very few can ſee in themſelues, vnleſſe the Lord open their eies. When our firſt parents were tempted in paradiſe, the deuill cuſtome onely, or for feare of puniſhment; if they might be left free they could finde in their hearts not to pray at all. But let all ſuch men know, that this manner of praying is a very grieuous ſinne, nay greater then mocking of father or mother, killing or ſtealing, for it is directly againſt God, the other againſt men. This ſinne becauſe it is againſt the firſt table, and therefore more hard to bee diſcerned, it is lightly eſteemed, and it leſſe troubles the conſciences of ignorant men: yea as it is indeed, ſo it is to be eſteemed as a diſgrace and plaine mockery of Gods maieſtie. Wherefore ſeeing God is in heauen, away with all drowſie and dead praying, let vs come with reuerence in our hearts before the Lord.

4. Againe, we are here to conſider that our hearts in praier muſt mount vp into heauen, and there be preſent with the Lord. Pſal. 25. 1. Vnto thee O Lord lift I vp my ſoule. The litle childe is neuer well but when it is in the fathers lappe, or vnder the mothers wing: and the children of God are neuer in better caſe, then when in affection and ſpirit they can come into the preſence of their heauenly Father, and by prayer, as it were to creepe into his boſome.

5. And here we muſt further learne, ſpecially to ſeeke for heauenly things, and to aske earthly things, ſo far forth as they ſerue to bring vs to an euerlaſting and immortall inheritance in heauen to which we are called. 1. Pet. 1. 3.

6. Laſtly, whereas our Father is in heauen we are to learne that our life on earth is but a pilgrimage, and that our deſire muſt be to attaine to a better countrey, namely, heauen it ſelfe, and that we muſt vſe al meanes continually to come vnto it. In a word, to make an ende of the preface: in it is contained a double ſtay or proppe of all our prayers. The one is to beleeue that God can graunt our requeſts, becauſe he is almighty, and thus much is ſignified when he is ſaid to be in heauen. The ſecond is to beleeue that God is readie and willing to graunt the ſame, and this we are taught in the title Father, which ſerues to put vs in minde that God accepts our praiers, Ioh. 16. 32. and hath a care of vs in all our miſeries and neceſſities, Math. 6. 32. and pitieth vs as much as any earthly father can pitie his childe. Pſalme 103. 13.

Yet muſt we not imagine that God will indeed giue vnto vs whatſoeuer we do vpon our own heads, fancie, & deſire: but we muſt in our prayers haue recourſe to the promiſe of God, and according to the tenour thereof muſt we frame and ſquare our petitions. Things promiſed abſolutely, as all graces neceſſarie to ſaluation, may be asked abſolutely: and things promiſed with condition, as graces leſſe neceſſarie, and temporall bleſſings are to be asked with condition, namely, ſo farre forth as they ſhall be for Gods glory in vs, and for our good: except it be ſo that God promiſe any temporall bleſſing abſolutely, as he promiſed iſſue to Abraham in his olde age. The kingdome to Dauid after Saul. A deliuerance from captiuitie in Babylon after 70. yeares to the Iſraelites.

Againe, the preface ſerues to ſtirre vp loue and feare in the hearts of them that are about to pray. Loue becauſe they pray to a father. Feare, becauſe he is ful of maieſtie in heauen.

1. The Coherence.

THus much of the preface: nowe follow the petitions. They be ſixe in number, the three firſt concerne God, the three laſt our ſelues. The three former petitions are againe deuided into two parts: the firſt concernes Gods glory it ſelfe; the other two, the meanes whereby Gods glorie is manifeſted and inlarged among men. For Gods name is glorified among men when his kingdome doth come, and his will is done.

Queſt. Why is this petition, Hallowed be thy name, ſet in the firſt place? Anſ. Becauſe Gods glory muſt be preferred before all things, becauſe it is the ende of al creatures and of all the counſels of God. Prou. 16. 4. The Lord hath made all things for his owne ſake: yea euen the wicked for the day of euill. And from the order of the petitions here ariſeth a worthy inſtruction, namely, that euery one in all things they take in hand, are to propound to themſelues and to intende the glory of GOD. The reaſon is this: The ende which God hath appointed to all our doings, we are to propoũd to our ſelues: but God hath appointed that the higheſt ende of all our doings ſhould be his glorie: therefore our harts muſt be ſet to ſeeke it firſt of al. That God will haue his name glorified by vs appeareth in this; that he puniſheth thoſe which which of obſtinacie ſet themſelues to diſhonour him, or by negligence did not ſanctifie him, when they ſhould haue done ſo. Herod ſitting in his royalty, made ſuch an oratiõ, that the people cried, The voice of a God, & not of a man: and immediatly the angel of the Lord ſmote him, becauſe he gaue not glory to God. Act. 12. 12. And Moſes becauſe he did not ſanctifie the Lord in the preſence of the children of Iſrael, therefore he came not into the land of promiſe; yet he did not altogether faile in doing of it. Thus we may ſee by theſe puniſhments, and alſo by the order of the petitions, that it is our duty to preferre the glory of God before all things els.

Queſt. Whether are we to preferre the glory of God before the ſaluation of our ſoules? Anſw. If the caſe ſtand thus that Gods name muſt be diſhonoured, or our ſoules condemned, we muſt account the glorie of God more precious then the ſaluation of our ſoules. 3 The wants which are to be bewailed.

1. THe wants, which we in this place are taught to bewaile, are ſpecially foure. The firſt, is an inward and ſpirituall pride of our hearts; a ſinne that none or very few can ſee in themſelues, vnleſſe the Lord open their eies. When our firſt parents were tempted in paradiſe, the deuill told them they ſhould be as Gods: which leſſon not only they, but we haue learned: and we conceiue of our ſelues, as little Gods, though to the world we ſhew it not. This hidden pride, when our ſinnes die it begins to get ſtrength, and to ſhewe it ſelfe: and appeares in vaine thoughts, continually on euery occaſion aſcending in the mind. As may appeare in the Phariſie whoſe thoughts were theſe when he praied thus within himſelfe, O God I thanke thee that I am not as other men, extortioners, vniuſt, adulterers, or euen as this Publican, &c. And as this was in him, ſo it is in vs till God giues grace: for ſo that men may haue praiſe and glory in the world, they care not for Gods glory though it be defaced. We muſt therefore learne to diſcerne this hidden corruption, and to mourne for it: for it doth poiſon and hinder all good deſires of glorifying God, ſo long as it doth or ſhall preuaile in the heart.

2. Secondly we are taught here to bewaile the hardnes of our hearts: whereby we are hindered from knowing God aright, and from diſcerning the glory and maieſtie of God in his creatures. Mark. 6. 52. The diſciples, through the hardnes of their hearts, could not ſee Gods power in the miracle of feeding many thouſands with a few loaues, though theſelues were inſtruments of it. & the foode did increaſe in their hands. Our redemption what a wonderfull worke is it, but how few conſider of it, or regard it? If we ſee a man haue more wit, wealth, or honour, then we haue, wee ſtraight wonder at him: but beholding Gods creatures, wee ſee nothing in them, becauſe we doe not goe higher to acknowledge the loue, power, wiſedome, and iuſtice of the Creator. And this is the cauſe why Gods name is ſo ſlenderly honoured among men.

3. The third corruption is our great ingratitude, for the Lord hath made heauen and earth, and all other creatures to ſerue man: yet he is the moſt vnthankfull of all creatures. Beſtow many iewels or a kings raunſome on a dead man, he will neuer returne any kindnes: ſo men beeing dead in ſinne, deale with God. commonly men are like the ſwine that run with their groines and eate vp the maſt, but neuer looke vp to the tree from whence it falleth. But the godly are with Dauid, to ſeele this want in themſelues, and to beſeech God to open & as it were to vnlocke their lips, that they may indeauour to be thankfull to God. Pſal. 51. 15.

4. The fourth is the vngodlines and the innumerable wants that be in our liues, and the ſinnes committed in the world. Pſal. 119. 136. Mine eyes (ſaith Dauid) guſh out with riuers of water, becauſe men keepe not thy lawes. The reaſon is becauſe he which liues in ſinne, reproches Gods name; euen as an euill childe diſhonours his father. Now ſome will ſay that this cannot be: becauſe our ſinnes cannot hurt God. True indeed: yet are they a cauſe of ſlandering Gods name among men: for as we honour him by our good workes, ſo wee diſhonour him by our offences. Matth. 5. 16. Let your light ſo ſhine before men, that they may ſee your good workes, and glorifie your father which is in heauen.

4. Graces to be deſired.

1. THe graces to be deſired, and to bee praied for at Gods hand, are three. The firſt is the knowledge of God, that is that we might knowe him as he hath reuealed himſelfe in his word, workes and creatures. For how ſhall any glorifie God before he know him? Our knowledge in this life is imperfect. Exod. 23. Moſes may not ſee Gods face, but his hinder partes. 1. Corin. 13. 12. We may ſee God, as men do through ſpectacles, in his word, ſacramēts, and creatures. And therefore as Paul praied for the Coloſians, Col. 1. 10. That they might increaſe in the knowledge of God: ſo are we taught to pray for our ſelues in this petition.

2. We deſire that a zeale of Gods glorie may be kindled in our hearts, and that we may be kept from prophaning and abuſing of his name. Pſal. 69. 9. The zeale of thine houſe hath eaten me vp. Pſal. 45. 1. My heart ſhall vtter, or caſt vp a good matter. I will ſpeake in my workes of the king. Here the ſpirit of God borrowes a compariſon from men. thus. As he which hath ſomewhat lying heauy in his ſtomacke, is neuer quiet til he haue caſt it vp: euen ſo the care and deſire to glorifie Gods name muſt lie vpon a mans heart as an heauie burden: & he is not to be at eaſe and quiet with himſelfe till he be disburdened, in ſounding forth Gods praiſe. Luther ſaith well, that this is Sancta crapula: that is, an holy ſurfet: and it is no hurt continually to haue our hearts ouercharged thus.

3. A deſire to lead a godly and vpright life before God and men. We ſee men that in ſome great calling vnder honourable perſonages, will ſo order and behaue themſelues, as they may pleaſe and honour their maſters: euen ſo muſt our liues be wel ordered, & we are to labour to walke worthy of the Lord (as Paul ſpeaketh) that we may honour our heauenly father.

Thy kingdome come.

1. The Coherence.

THis petition dependes on the former moſt excellently. For in it is laid down the means to procure the firſt. Gods name muſt be hallowed among men: but howe is it done? by the erecting of Gods kingdome in the heartes of men. Wee cannot glorifie God vntill he rule in our hearts by his word and ſpirit.

2. The meaning.

Thy] This word doeth put vs in minde that there is two kingdomes: one Gods, and that is the kingdome of heauen: the other the deuils, called the kingdome of darkneſſe, Coloſſ. 1.13. For when all had ſinned in Adam, God laid this puniſhment on al, that ſeeing they could not be content to obey their Creator, they ſhould bee in bondage vnder Satan: ſo that by nature we are all the children of wrath, and the deuil holds vp the ſcepter of his kingdome in the hearts of men. This kingdome is ſpiritual, & the pillars of it are ignorance, errour, impietie, & all diſobedience to God, in which the deuil wholly delights; which alſo are as it were the lawes of his kingdome. Blinde ignorant people cannot abide this doctrine, that the deuill ſhould rule in their hearts: they ſpit at the naming of him, and ſay that they defie him with all their hearts: but whereas they liue in ſinne, & practiſe it as occaſion is offered, though they cannot diſcerne of themſelues, yet they make plaine proofe, that they liue in the kingdome of ſinne and darkeneſſe, and are flatte vaſſals of Satan, and ſhall ſo continue till Chriſt the ſtrong man come and binde him and caſt him out. And this is the eſtate of all the children of Adam in themſelues. Wherefore our Sauiour in this petition teacheth vs to conſider our naturall eſtate, and to pray that he would giue vs his ſpirit to ſet vs at libertie in the kingdome of his owne ſonne.

Kingdome] Gods kingdome in Scripture is taken two waies. Firſt generally, and ſo it ſignifieth that adminiſtratiō by which the Lord gouerneth all things, yea euen the deuils themſelues. Of which kingdom mention is made in the ende of his prayer. And in the Pſal. 97. verſ. 1 The Lord raigneth, let the earth reioyce. Againe, it is taken more ſpecially, and then it ſignifieth the adminiſtration of Chriſt the head of the Church, in which he frameth men by his word and ſpirit to the ſubiection of the ſame worde. And ſo it is taken in this petition.

In a kingdome there are 4. things to be noted. 1. There muſt be a King. 2. There muſt be ſubiects. 3. There are lawes. 4. Authoritie.

In this kingdome Chriſt is the king: it is he to whom the Father hath giuen all authoritie, in heauen and earth.

In this kingdome all are not ſubiectes, but ſuch as are willing to giue free and franke obedience to Gods word; or at the leaſt, though their hearts be not ſo ſound, make an outward profeſſion of it.

The lawes of this kingdome is the word of God in the bookes of the old and new Teſtament. Therefore it is called the kingdome of heauen, Math. 13. The Goſpell of the kingdome, Mark. 1.13. The rod of his mouth, Eſay. 11.4. The arme of God, Eſay. 53.1. As a king by his laws brings his people in order, and keepes them in ſubiection; ſo Chriſt by his word, and the preaching of it, as it were by a mightie arme, drawes his elect into his kingdome, & faſhions them to all holy obedience.

The power & authoritie is that whereby Chriſt conuerts effectually thoſe which are to be conuerted by the inward operation of his ſpirit, & glorifies himſelfe in the confuſion of the reſt.

Kingdome beeing taken thus ſpecially, is alſo twofold. The firſt is the kingdome of grace; of which mention is made, Rom. 14.17. The kingdome of God ſtandes not in meate and drinke, but in righteouſneſſe: that is, the aſſurance of our iuſtification before God, in the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt; Peace of conſcience, which proceedes from this aſſurance; and ioy in the holy Ghoſt, which comes from them both. In this kingdome all men liue not, but onely thoſe that are ſubiect to Chriſt, obedient to the lawes of his kingdome, and ruled by his authoritie, and are continually taught in his word by his ſpirit. But thoſe that refuſe to liue according to the lawes of this king, & chooſe to liue at their owne libertie, are in the kingdome of darkeneſſe, that is, ſinne and Satan.

The ſecond is the kingdom of glory in heaheauen, which is the bleſſed eſtate of all Gods people, in which God himſelfe ſhall bee all in all vnto them. And the former kingdome of grace is an entrance and preparation to this kingdome of glorie.

Come] Gods kingdome comes, when it takes place and is eſtabliſhed and confirmed in mens hearts, and made manifeſt to all people, the impediments being remooued.

Queſt. This comming implies a ſtopping: but how ſhould Gods kingdome be hindred? Anſ. Kingdome in this place is not taken for that abſolute and ſoueraigne power of God whereby he rules all things, for that can not bee hindred; but for the kingdome of grace, which in the vſing of the outward meanes, as miniſters, word & Sacraments, may be hindred by the deuill, the world, and mans corruption.

3. The wants which are to be bewailed.

The wants, which wee in this petition are to moure for, are of two ſorts: ſome concerne our owne ſelues, ſome others. That which concernes our own perſons is a bondage and ſlauery vnder ſinne & Satan. This bondage indeed is weakened in Gods ſeruants, but none is wholly freed from it in this life. Paul complaines that he is ſold vnder ſinne, & cries pitifully, O miſerable man that I am, who ſhal deliuer me from this bodie of death?

Queſtion. What difference is then betweene the godly and the wicked? Anſw. The euill and vngodly man in the very middeſt of his bondage hath a merry heart: ſinne is no trouble to him, nay it is meat & drinke to him. But the godly man is otherwiſe minded: who conſidering the power of the deuill, and his craft in manifold fearefull temptations; and ſeeing the proneneſſe of his rebellious nature euer and anon to ſtart away from God, is grieued and confounded in himſelfe, and his heart bleedes within him that he doth offend ſo mercifull a father.

Many men liue in this world and that many yeares, and yet neuer feele this bondage vnder Satan and ſin. Such vndoubtedly cannot tell what this prayer meanes: but he that would haue the right vſe of this petition, muſt be acquainted with his own eſtate, & be touched in his conſcience, that the fleſh and the deuill beare ſuch ſway in him. As the poore captiue is alwayes creeping to the priſon doore, alwayes labouring to get off his bolts and fetters, and to eſcape out of priſon: ſo muſt wee alwayes cry to the Lord for his ſpirit to free vs out of this bondage and priſon of ſin and corruption: and euery day come neerer the priſon doore, looking when our bleſſed Sauiour will vnbinde vs of all the fetters of ſinne and Satan, and fully erect his kingdome in vs.

2. The wants which concerne others are twofolde. The former is the want of the good meanes which ſerue for the furthering of the kingdome of Chriſt, as preaching, Sacraments, and diſcipline. When we ſhall ſee a people without knowledge, and without good guides and teachers, or whē wee ſee one ſtand vp in the congregation not able to teach, here is matter for mourning. This petition puts vs in minde to bewaile theſe wants. Our Sauiour when hee ſaw the Iewes as ſheepe without a ſheapheard, he had compaſſion on them: and he wept ouer Ieruſalem, becauſe they knewe not the things which belong to their peace, Luk. 9. 11. Therefore when preachers want, to hold vp the ſcepter of God before the people, & to hold out the word, which is as it were the arme of God to pull men from the bondage of the deuill to the kingdome of Chriſt; then it is time to ſay, Lord let thy kingdome come.

3 The third want which we are to bewaile is, that there bee ſo many impediments and hinderances of the kingdom of grace, as the deuill and all his angels, their inſtruments, the Pope, the Turke, & all the reſt of the profeſſed wicked of the world, which by ſubtile intiſements and tyranny, keepe backe & repell the meanes whereby Chriſt ruleth as a king in his Church. When the deuill ſees one that was ſometime of his kingdome but to caſt a looke towards the heauenly Ieruſalē, he ſtraightway rageth againſt him and labours quite to ouerthrow him. Wherefore in regard of all theſe impediments, we muſt pray, Thy kingdome come.

4 Graces to be deſired.

1. IN this petition we are taught firſt that we are to haue a feruent deſire, and to hunger, that God would giue vs his ſpirit to raigne and rule our in hearts, & to bow them to all obedience and ſubiection of his will: and further, whereas our hearts haue beene as it were filthy ſties and ſtables of the deuill, that he would renue thē, and make them fit temples to entertaine his holy ſpirit. Pſal. 51. 10. Create in me a cleane heart, O God, and renue a right ſpirit

in

in me, &c. Stablish me with thy free spirit. If we shall consider the conuersation of the wicked and the godly, and their corrupt hearts togither, we shal see little difference but in this, that the wicked is delighted and glad to sinne: but the godly doe wrestle, as for life and death with their temptations, and doe resist the deuill, & doe desire the grace of Gods spirit, and cry to heauen to bee freed from this bondage, howsoeuer their hearts are alwayes readie to rebell against God.

2. Forasmuch as the kingdome of grace is erected in gods church here vpon earth, in this petition we are commanded to pray for the Church of God, and the parts therof. Psal. 122. 6. Pray for the peace of Ierusalem: they shall prosper that loue thee. Esay, 62. 7. Ye which are the Lords remembrancers, giue him no rest, vntil he set vp Ierusalem the praise of the world.

And that Gods Church may flourish and be in good estate, wee are to pray for Christian Kings and Princes; that God would blesse them, and increase the number of them. For they are as nursing fathers and nursing mothers to the Church. And we especially are bound to pray for the Kings most excellent Maiestie, as also for the French king, that they may be blessed and Gods kingdome by them aduanced.

And againe, because ministers are the Lords watchmen in the Church, wee are here also put in mind to seeke their good; and to pray that their hearts may be set for the building of Gods kingdome, for the beating downe of the kingdome of sinne and Satan, and for the saiuing of the soules of his people. And the rather, because the deuill laboureth night and day to ouerthrowe them in this glorious worke, and to resist them in their ministerie: as appeareth in Zacharie. 3. 1. When Ioshua the high priest stood before the Angel of the Lord, Satan stood at his right hand, namely to resist him. Therfore also we are to pray for them, that the Lord would keepe them, and furnish them with giftes, and withall make them faithfull. For where vision faileth the people are left naked, saith Salomon. 2. Thess. 3. 1. Brethren, pray for vs that thy word of the Lord may haue a free passage and be glorified.

Thirdly, we must pray for all Christian Schooles of learning. Howsoeuer some thinke him basely of them, yet they are the ordinarie meanes to maintaine the ministerie; and so the Church of God. A man that hath diuers orchards, will also haue a seminarie full of yong plants to maintaine it. Schooles, they are as Seminaries to Gods church, without which the Church falls to decay: because they serue to make supplie of ministers.

3. Thirdly, we are to desire, that the lord would hasten the second comming of Christ, as the Saints in heauen pray, Come Lord Iesus, come quickly: and therefore the godly are said to loue the comming of Christ. 2. Tim. 4. 8. A penitent sinner so abhorres his owne corruptions, and the irkesome temptations of Satan, that in this respect hee desires that Christ would hasten his particular comming to him by death, for no other cause but that he might make an ende of sinning and displeasing God.

Thy will be done.

1. The Coherence.

IN the second petition, wee desired that God would let his kingdome come, viz. That he would rule in our hearts. If he the must raigne, we must be his subiects: and therefore here wee craue, that beeing his subiects we may obey him, and do his wil. Mal. 1. 6. If I be a father where is my honour, If I be a master, where is my feare?

2. The meaning.

Will] Here it signifieth Gods word written in the old and new Testament: For in his word his will is reuealed. Of the whole will of God there bee three speciall points, which are in this place meant. 1. To beleeue in Christ, Ioh. 6. 40. This is the wil of him that sent me, that euery one which seeth the Sonne, and beleeueth in him, should haue euerlasting life. 2. Sanctification of bodie and soule. 1. Thess. 4. 3. This is the will of God, euen your sanctification, &c. 3. The bearing of affliction in this life. Rom. 8. v. 29 Those which hee knew before, he did predestinate to be made like to the image of his owne sonne. Phil. 3. 10. That I might know him and the vertue of his resurrection, and the fellowshippe of his afflictions, and be made conformable to his death.

Thy will] Not mine: for mans owne will is wicked and corrupt, yea it flat is enmitie to God. Rom. 8. v. 5.

Done] That is, obeyed and accomplished of men. Then the effect of the prayer is this: O Lord, seeing thou art our King giue vs grace to shew our selues good subiects in obeying thy will.

3. The

3. The wants to be prayed against.

1. HEre first wee are to bewaile this, that our hearts are so prone to rebellion and disobedience of Gods commaundements. Put a match to a heape of gunpowder, on a sudden it will bee all on a flame; and as long as we adde matter to the fire, it burnes: so by nature we are most readie to sin, so soone as the least occasion is giuen. Dauid had experience of this when he prayed, Knit my heart to thee O Lord, &c. Psal. 86. 11. and incline my heart to thy commandements. Psal. 119. 37. Those which finde not this want in themselues, and the like affection to bewaile it, are in a miserable and daungerous case: euen as a man that hath a great disease vpon him, and knowes not of it.

2 Againe, wee must here bewaile the sinne of the world, as ignorance, schismes, hipocrisie, pride, ambition, contempt of Gods word, couetousnesse, oppression, want of loue of God and his word, &c. 2. Peter. 2. 7. Lot was vexed, and his righteous heart was vexed with the vncleane conuersation of the Sodomities from day to day: so ought our soules to be vexed and grieued continually at the wickednes of our time and we are to send vp our prayers to God for vnbeleeuing and vnrepentant sinners, that they may bee brought to the obedience of Gods will. Ezech. 9. 4. In a common iudgement vpon Ierusalem, They are marked in the forhead, that mourne and crie for all the abhominations that bee done in the middest of it.

3. Here also wee must humble our selues for our vnquietnesse of minde, and impatience, when God layes any crosse on vs. It is Gods will that we should suffer affliction, and withall humble our selues vnder his mightie hand. Our Sauiour prayed that the cup might be take away, but with submission to his fathers will. Luk. 22. 42. And this Dauid hath learned when he said, But if he thus say, behold I haue no delight in thee, behold here I am, let him do to me as seemeth good in his eyes. 2. Sam. 15. 26.

4. Graces to be desired.

1. THe first thing which wee are here to desire is, that wee may haue grace to denie our selues, wils, and affections: because herein we are vnlike to God, & like the deuill. This is the first Lesson that our Sauiour doeth giue his Disciples, that they must deny themselues and followe him.

2. The second thing is the knowledge of Gods will: for otherwise how shall wee doe it? How can that seruant please his master, which cannot tel what he would haue done of him? Most men will haue bookes of Statutes in their houses, and if they be to deale in any great matter, they will doe nothing before they haue looked on the Statute. In like manner men should haue the Bible, that is the booke of Gods statutes in their houses; the lawes of God must be the men of our counsell: before euery action we are to search what is the will of God, and then to doe it. Here then we are taught to vse the meanes, and to pray for knoweledge.

3. Againe, we are here taught to haue a desire in our hearts, and an indeauour in our liues, in all things to performe obedience to Gods word in our liues and conuersations, and in our particular callings.

4. Lastly, we desire patience & strēgth, when it shal please God at any time to exercise vs with the crosse, as Paul prayes for the Colossians, That God would strengthen them by the power of his might, vnto all patience and long suffering with ioyfulnesse, Coloss. 1. 12.

5. Errour confuted.

THe Church of Rome teacheth, that men by nature haue free will to doe good: and that men beeing stirred vp by the holy Ghost, can of themselues will that which is good. But if this were so, why might we not pray; Let my will bee done? So farre forth as the will of man shal agree with gods wil: but this cannot be, as we see in the tenour of this petition.

In earth as it is in heauē.

1. The meaning.

HAuing shewed the meaning of this petition, Thy will be done: now we are to speake of the condition, which shewes in what manner wee should doe it. For the question might bee how we would do Gods will: and the answere is, that his will must be done in earth as it is in heauen.

Heauen] By heauen here is meant the soules of faithfull men departed, and the elect Angels, Psal. 103. 20. Praise the Lord ye his angels, that excell in strength, that doe his commandements in obeying the voyce of his word.

Earth] By earth is vnderstood nothing but men on earth, because all other creatures in their kinde obey God: onely man he is rebellious and disobedient. Then the meaning meaning is, Let thy wil be done by vs on earth, as the Angels and Saints departed doe thy will in heauen.

Question. Doe we here desire to doe the will of God in that perfection it is done by Angels? must wee bee as perfect as they? Answ. The wordes here vsed in earth as it is &c doe not signifie an equalitie (as though our obedience could in this life bee in the same degree of perfection with angels) but a similitude standing in the like manner of obedience. Now it may be asked in what manner doe the Angels obey God? Ans. They doe the will of God willingly, speedily, and faithfully: and this is signified in that they are said in the Scriptures to bee winged, and to stand continually beholding the face of our heauenly Father. And this is the manner in which we desire to performe Gods will.

2. The wants to be bewailed.

WE are here admonished to bee displeased with our selues, for our slacke and imperfect obedience to God, and for our hypocrisie, prime pride, presumption, deadnesse of spirit, and many other wants which breake out when wee are in doing Gods will. There is no seruant of God, but hath wants in his best works, so we must vnderstand Paul, when he saith, To wil is present with me, but I find no meanes to performe that which is good. Rom. 7. 18. where he signifies thus much in effect, that he could beginne good things, but not perfect them, and goe through-stitch, as wee say. When the godly doe good workes, as heare, speake Gods word, pray, praise God, &c they performe things acceptable to God: but in these actions they finde matter of mourning; namely, the imperfection of the worke: therefore Dauid prayeth, Psal. 143. 2. Enter not into iudgement with thy seruant. And here we may see how farre wide the Church of Rome is, that holdeth good workes to be any way meritorious, that be euery way imperfect. If the men of that Church had grace, they might see that the corruptions of the flesh were as gyues and fetters about their legs, that when they would faine run the wayes of Gods commandements, they are constrained to halt downe right, and to traile their loynes after them.

3. Grace to be desired.

THe grace here to be desired, is syncerite of heart, or a ready and constant purpose and indeauour not to sinne in any thing, but to doe Gods will, so as we may keepe a good conscience before God and men. Act. 28. 24. 18. And for this cause I endeauour alwayes to haue a cleare conscience towards God, and towards men. This must we hunger after, and pray for: seeing it is not sufficient to abstaine from euill, but also to doe good, and in doing good, striue to come to perfection. A conformitie with Angels in this duetie is to be sought for, and to be begunne in this life, that in the life to come we may be like them in glorie.

Giue vs this day our daily bread.

1. The Coherence.

THus much of the three first petitions which concerne God: now follow the other three, which concerne our selues. In which order wee learne to pray for those things which concerne God absolutely: & for those things which cõcerne our selues, not absolutely, but so far forth as they shall make for Gods glorie, the building of his kingdome, and the doing of his will.

But howe depends this petition on the former? In the first we are taught to pray that Gods name might be hallowed: which is done when God raignes in our hearts, and his will is done. Now further, his will is obeyed in three things: first. by depending on his prouidence for the things of this life: secondly, by depending on his mercie for the pardon of sinne: thirdly, by depending on his power and might, in resisting temptations. And thus Gods will is obeyed.

2. The meaning.

B*Read*] by bread in this place, many of the ancient Fathers, as also the Papists at this day vnderstand the elemẽt of bread in the Sacrament, and the bodie of Christ which is the bread of life. But that cannot be: for S. Luke cals it bread for the day, that is, bread sufficient to preserue vs for the present day: and by this he makes it manifest, that the wordes of this petition must bee vnderstood not of spirituall, but of bodily foode: and the bread of life is more directly asked in the second or fourth Petition. As for the opinion of Erasmus, who thinks that in this so heauenly a praier made to God the father, there should be no mentiõ made of bread, that is of earthly things, which euen the Gentiles bestow on their children; it is vaine and friuolous. For it is Gods will, that we should not cast the care of heauenly things onely, but all our care vpon him. 1. Pet. 5. 7. And he hath elſewhere commanded that earthly things ſhould bee asked at his hand, 1. King. 8.35. and the ſame hath beene asked in prayer of Iacob, Gen. 28.10. and Salomon, Prou.20.7. And whereas the Lords prayer is a perfect platforme of prayer, tẽporal bleſſing muſt haue ſome place there, vnleſſe we will aſcribe the hauing and inioying of them to our owne induſtrie, as though they were no gifts of God: which to thinke were great impietie.

By bread then wee muſt vnderſtand properly, a kinde of foode made of the floure of graine that is baked & eaten: and thus it muſt bee taken in thoſe places of ſcripture where bread is oppoſed to water or wine: and by a figure more generally it ſignifies all things whereby temporall life is preſerued; in this ſenſe goates milke is called bread, Prou.27.27. & the fruit of trees, Ier.11.19. and all things that paſſe to and fro in trafficke. Prou.31.14. And ſo likewiſe in this place by this one meanes of ſuſtaining our bodyes and temporall liues, all other meanes whatſoeuer muſt be vnderſtood, as meate, drinke, clothing, health, libertie, peace, &c.

And whereas our Sauiour Chriſt vnder the name of bread, and not vnder the name of any other plentifull or daintie foode, teacheth vs to aske temporall bleſſings; he doth it for two cauſes. The firſt is, that we might hereby learne frugalitie and moderation in our diet, apparell, houſes; and be content if we haue no more but bread, that is, things neceſſarie to preſerue life, which Paul comprehendes vnder food and cloathing. For wee are taught in this petition to aske no more. Wee muſt not with the Iſraelites murmure becauſe they had nothing but Manna.

Queſt. Muſt wee then vſe Gods creatures onely for neceſſitie? Anſw. Wee may vſe them not onely for neceſſitie, but alſo for honeſt delight and pleaſure, Pſal.104. 15. God giues wine to make glad the heart of man: & oyle to make his face ſhine. And Ioh. 12.3. our Sauiour Chriſt allowed of the fact of Marie, which tooke a pound of oyntment of Spikenard very coſtly, and annointed his very feete, ſo that all the houſe was filled with the ſmell; though Iudas did eſteeme it waſt. Yet if it ſo fall out that the Lord doe grant vs but bread, that is, ſo much as ſhal hold bodie and ſoule together, wee muſt thankefully content our ſelues therewith. 1. Tim. 6. 8. Therefore when we haue food and rayment, let vs therewith be content. This contentation was practiſed of Iacob. Gen.28.20.

A ſecond cauſe is to teach vs that there is a particular prouidence. All men willingly confeſſe the generall prouidence of God ouer all things: but beſide that wee muſt acknowledge another more ſpeciall prouidence, euen in the leaſt things that can bee: becauſe euery morſell of bread which we eate, would no more nouriſh vs then a piece of earth, or a ſtone, vnles God giue his bleſſing vnto it.

Daily] The word in the originall is thus much in effect, Bread vnto our eſſence or ſubſtances: then the meaning is, giue vs ſuch bread from day to day, as may nouriſh our ſubſtances. Thus prayeth Agur, Prou.30. 8. Feede mee with foode conuenient for mee. Some there are which put an Angelicall perfection in faſting; but we are taught in Scriptures, that as aboue all things we are to ſeeke for life eternall; ſo we muſt in this life haue care to ſuſtaine & maintaine our naturall life, that we may haue conuenient ſpace and time to repent, and prepare our ſelues to the kingdome of heauen. Faſting in it ſelfe as it is an abſtinence from meate, is no part of Gods worſhip, but in it owne nature, a thing indifferent: & therefore it is to be vſed ſo farre forth as it ſhall further vs in Gods ſeruice, and no further. And ſeeing wee are taught to pray for ſuch food as ſhall preſerue nature, and maintaine the vitall blood, wee ought not to vſe faſting to the hindrance and deſtruction of nature.

Our bread] 1. Queſt. How is bread ours? Anſ. Paul ſhews how, 1. Cor. 3. 22. Ye are Chriſts, and all things are yours. So then by meanes of Chriſt, bread is called ours. For God hauing giuen Chriſt to vs, doth in him and by him giue all things els to vs. 2. Queſt. How may I knowe that the things I enioy are mine by Chriſt, and that I doe not vſurpe them? Anſ. 1. Tim. 4.4. Paul ſaith that the Creatures of God are good, and that the vſe of them is ſanctified to vs by the word and praier. Then if we haue the word of God to tell vs that we may enioy and vſe them: and alſo if we pray to God for the right and pure vſe of them, we are no vſurpers, but indeed right owners of them, not onely before men, but alſo before God. 3. Queſt. If the creatures muſt be made ours by Chriſt, how comes it to paſſe that the vngodly haue ſuch abundance of them? Anſ. We loſt the title and intereſt of the creatures in Adam: yet

God of his mercie beſtowes temporarie bleſſings vpon the vniuſt as well as vpon the iuſt: but for all that, vnleſſe they bee in Chriſt, and hold the title of them by him, they ſhal in the ende turne to their greater condemnation.

And whereas we call it our bread, wee learne that euery man muſt liue of his own calling and his owne goods. Here alſo is condemned all oppreſſion, ſtealing, lying, cogging, and other ſuch deceitfull meanes, which men vſe to get wealth and goods. Many thinke it no ſinne to prouide for their families in ſuch order, but in ſaying this petition they pray againſt themſelues. 2. Theſſ. 3. 10. He that laboureth not, let him not eate. Eph. 4. 28. He which ſtole, let him ſteale no more, but rather labour with his hands the thing that good is.

This day] We ſay not here this weeke, this moneth, this age, but this day: what meanes this? May we not prouide for the time to come? Anſ. It is laweful, yea a man is bound in good manner to prouide for time to come. Act. 11. 28. The Apoſtles prouided for the Church in Iudea againſt the time of dearth foretold by Agabus. And Ioſeph in Egypt in the yeares of plenty ſtored vp againſt the yeares of famine. Wherefore in theſe words our Sauiour his meaning is onely to condemne all diſtruſtfull care, that diſtracts the mindes of men, and to teach vs to reſt on his fatherly goodneſſe from day to day in euery ſeaſon: this is noted vnto vs, Numb. 11. where the Iſraelites were commanded to gather no more Manna then would ſerue for one day, and if they did, it putrified. Whereby God taught them to reſt on his prouidence euery particular daie, and not on the meanes.

Giue vs] Not me. This ſerues to teach vs that a man muſt not onely regard himſelfe, but alſo be mindefull of others. For a man that hath wealth is made a ſteward to diſtribute his goods to the poore and the good of Gods Church. True loue ſeekes not her owne things; the branches of the vine are loden with cluſters of grapes, not for themſelues, but for others; the candle ſpends it ſelfe to giue others light.

Giue] If bread be ours, wherefore are we to aske it? it may ſeeme needeleſſe. Anſw. Not ſo: for hereby we are taught to waite on God, who is the fountaine and giuer of all bleſſings. Men vſually driuen to any diſtreſſe, vſe euill meanes, as robbing, deceiuing, conſulting with wizards, &c, 2. Againe here we learne, that though a man had all the wealth in the world, all is nothing without Gods bleſſing. Queſtion. The rich neede not ſay, Giue vs, &c. for they haue abundance alreadie, and what neede they aske that which they haue? Anſ. Let a man be neuer ſo rich, and want nothing that can be deſired, yet if hee want Gods bleſſing, in effect he wants al. Wherfore euen Kings, & the greateſt perſonages that be, are as much bound to vſe this petition as the pooreſt. Gods bleſſing is riches, ſaith Salomon, Prou. 10. 22. Thou maieſt eate and not haue enough, be cloathed and not warme, earne wages & put it in a broken bagge. Hag. 1. 6. If God doe not bleſſe thee. This bleſſing of God is called the ſtaffe of bread. Eſay. 3. 1. In bread there be two things, the ſubſtance, and the vertue thereof proceeding from Gods bleſſing: this ſecond, that is, the power of nouriſhing is the ſtaffe of bread. For take away from an aged man his ſtaffe, and he falls: and ſo take away Gods bleſſing from bread and the ſtrength thereof, it becomes vnprofitable, and ceaſeth to nouriſh. Laſtly, here we ſee that al labour & toile taken in any kind of calling is nothing and auailes not, vnleſſe God ſtill giue his bleſſing. Pſal. 127. 1.

3. The wants which are to be bewailed.

SInnes which we are taught in this petiō to bewaile are two eſpecially. 1. Couetouſneſſe, a vice which is naturally engrafted in euery mans heart; it is when a man is not content with his preſent eſtate. This deſire is vnſatiable, & men that haue enough would ſtill haue more. Wherefore he which ſhall vſe this petition muſt bee grieued for this ſinne, and pray with Dauid, Pſal. 119. 36. Incline my heart to thy cōmandements, and not to couetouſnes. And he muſt ſorrowe, not ſo much for the acte of this ſinne, as for the corruption of nature in this behalfe. Couetous people wil plead that they are free from this vice but marke mens liues, and we ſhall ſee it is a common diſeaſe, as Dauid noted, Pſal. 4. 6. where he brings in the people, ſaying: Who ſhall ſhewe vs any good? This then is a common ſinne that we are taught to mourne for.

2. The ſecond want is diffidence and diſtruſtfulneſſe in Gods prouidence touching the things of this life. Men alſo will ſhift this off and ſay, they would be ſorrie to diſtruſt God. But if we doe but a little looke into the corruption of our nature, we ſhall ſee that we are deceiued. For beeing in proſperity, we are not troubled: but if once we be preſſed with aduerſitie, then we houle and weepe, and as Paul ſaith. 1. Tim. 6. 10. Men peirce themſelues through with many ſorrowes. If a man ſhall looſe a part of his goods, what then doeth hee? ſtraight he goes out to a wiſe man: is this to beleeue in God? No: it is to diſtruſt God and beleeue the deuill.

4 Graces to be deſired.

THe grace to be deſired is a readineſſe in all eſtates of life to reſt on Gods prouidence, whatſoeuer fall out. Pſal. 37. 5. Commit thy way to the Lord, and truſt in him, and he ſhal bring it to paſſe. Prou. 16. 3. Commit or role thy worke vpon the Lord, and thy thoughts ſhall be directed. Whereby we are admoniſhed to take pains in our callings to get meate and drinke, &c. If the Lord bleſſe not our labour we muſt be content: if he doe we muſt giue him thankes. Now for this cauſe we are further to pray to god that he would open our eies, and by his ſpirit teach vs in all his good creatures to ſee his prouidence, and when meanes faile and are contrary, then alſo to beleeue in the ſame, and to followe Pauls example Phil. 4. 12.

5. Errors confuted.

PApiſts teach that men by workes of grace may merit life eternall, and increaſe of iuſtification in this life. But howe can this be? for heare we ſee that euery bit of bread which we eate, is the free gift of God without any merit of ours. Now, if we cannot merit a peece of bread, what madneſſe is it to thinke that we can merit life euerlaſting?

2 They alſo are deceiued who thinke, that any thing comes by meere chance or fortune, without Gods prouidence. Indeed in reſpect of men who knowe not the cauſes of things, many chaunces there are but ſo, as that they are ordered and come to paſſe by Gods prouidence. Luk 10 31. By chance there came downe a certaine prieſt that way.

Forgiue vs our debts.

1. The Coherence.

THis is the fifth petition & the ſecond of thoſe which concerne our ſelues: in the former we craued temporall bleſſings, in this and the next which foiloweth, we craue ſpirituall bleſſings. Where we may note, that ſeeing there is two petitions, which concerne ſpirituall things, and but one for temporalls; that the care for our ſoules muſt be double, to the care of our bodies. In the world men care for their bodies, their hearts, are ſet for wealth and promotions: they can content to heare the word on the Sabboth, yet neither then nor in the weeke day doe they lay it vp in their hearts, and practiſe it, which argues, that they haue little or no care for their ſoules.

Queſtion. What is the cauſe that firſt we craue things for the body, and in the ſecond place thoſe which concerne the ſoule? Anſw. The order of the holy Ghoſt in theſe petitions is wonderfull: for the Lord conſiders the dulnes and backwardneſſe of mens natures: and therefore hee traines them vp, and drawes them on by litle, euen as a ſchoolemaſter doth his yong ſchollers: propounding vnto them ſome ſmall elements & principles, and ſo carrying them to higher points. For the former petion is a ſteppe or degre to theſe two following. The ruler by the healing of the bodie of his child is brought to beleeue in Chriſt, Ioh. 4. 53. He then that will reſt on Gods mercie for the pardon of his ſinnes, muſt firſt of all reſt on Gods prouidence for this life: and he that cannot put his affiance in God for the prouiſion of meate & drinke, how ſhall he truſt Gods mercie for the ſaluation of his ſoule? Here we may ſee the faith of worldlings: they ſay that God is mercifull, & that they beleeue in Chriſt: which cannot be true: ſeeing in leſſer matters, as meate and drinke, they diſtruſt God, as appeares by their couetouſneſſe. Againe, by this order wee are taught as earneſtly to ſeeke for the pardon of our ſinnes, as wee ſeeke for temporall bleſſings.

2. The Meaning.

Debt] By debts ſinnes are meant, as it is in Luke 11 4. & they are ſo called, becauſe of the reſemblance between them. For euen as a debt doth binde a man, either to make ſatisfaction, or els to goe to priſon: ſo our ſinnes binds vs either to ſatisfie Gods iuſtice, or elſe to ſuffer eternall damnation.

Forgiue] To forgiue ſinne, is to couer it, or not to impute it. Pſal 32. 1. And this is done when God is content of his mercie to accept the death and paſſion of Chriſt as a ſufficient payment and ranſome as for mans ſinnes, & ſo to eſteeme them as no ſinnes. And here vnder this one benefite of remiſſion of ſinnes, all the reſt of the ſame kind are vnderſtoode, as iuſtification, ſanctification, redemption, glorification, &c.

3. The vſes of the words.

HEnce we may learne many leſſons: the firſt is, that ſeeing we muſt pray thus. Lord forgiue &c. we are to hold, that there is no ſatisfaction to Gods iuſtice for ſinne by our workes, no not in temporarie puniſhments: but that the doing away of our ſinnes is of Gods meere fauour: for to forgiue and to ſatisfie be contrarie: wherefore the doctrine of humane ſatisfactions, taught in the Church of Rome, is vile and deuiliſh.

2. Secondly, whereas we are taught thus to pray continually from day to day, we note the great patience and long ſuffering of God, that ſuffers and forbeares ſtill, and doth not poure out his confuſion vpon vs, though we offend his maieſtie day by day. This teacheth vs like patience towards our brethren: we our ſelues cannot put the leaſt iniurie and forbeare but one day, and yet we deſire that god would forgiue vs daily to the ende of our liues.

3. Again we may obſerue, that there is no perfect ſanctification in this life, ſeeing we muſt euery day to the end craue the pardon of our ſinnes. Therefore wicked is the opinion of the Catharists or Puritans, which hold that men may be without ſinne in this life.

4. And when we ſay forgiue not me, but vs: we are put in mind to pray, not onely for the pardon of our owne ſinnes, but likewiſe for our brethren and enemies, Iam. 5. 17. Confeſſe one on other, and pray one for another: for the praier of the righteous auaileth much, if it be feruent, And as ſome thinke, the praier of Steuen was a meanes of the conuerſion of Saul.

5. Alſo we note that before praier for pardon of ſinne, muſt goe a confeſſion of ſinne: for whereas we ſay, forgiue our debts, we confeſſe before God that we are flat bankrupts, and not able to diſcharge the leaſt of our ſinnes: this appeares 1. Ioh. 1. 9. If we confeſſe our ſinnes, he is faithfull to forgiue vs. And it was practiſed by Dauid, Pſal. 51. and 32. 5. The manner of making confeſſion is this: knowne ſinnes, and thoſe which trouble the conſcience, are to bee confeſſed particularly: but vnknowne ſinnes generally Pſal. 19. 12.

6. Laſtly, hence it is manifeſt, that there is no iuſtification by workes. Our ſinnes are debts, and ſo alſo are all workes of the law: and it were a fond thing to imagine that a man might diſcharge one debt by another.

4. Wants to be bewailed.

THe wants to be bewailed are the burthen of our ſinnes and the corruptions of our natures and the wickednes of our liues, and the ſinnes of our youth, and of our old age, Pſal. 40. 12. My ſinnes haue taken ſuch hold vpon mee, that I am not able to looke vp: they are more in number then the haires of head: therefore mine heart hath failed me. Thus with Dauid we are to trauell and grone vnder this burthen: but this griefe for ſinne, is a rare thing in the world. Men can mourne bitterly for the things of this life, but their ſinnes neuer trouble them. Againe, this ſorrowe muſt be for ſinne, becauſe it is ſinne, though there were neither hell to torment, nor deuill or conſcience to accuſe, nor iudge to reuenge.

5. Graces to be deſired.

THe grace which we muſt deſire, is the ſpirit of grace and deprecations. Zachar. 12. 10. which is that gift of the holy Ghoſt, whereby we are inabled to call to God for the pardon of our ſinnes. A man hauing offended the laws of a Prince, and beeing in daunger of death, will neuer be at quiet till he haue gotten a pardon: euen ſo they which feele & ſee their ſinnes hauing this ſpirit, are ſo mooued, that they can neuer be at reſt, till in prayer they be eaſed of the burthen of their ſinnes. A man may, I graunt, babble and ſpeake many wordes but he ſhal neuer pray effectually, before he haue this ſpirit of praier to make him crie, Abba, father. For wordly commodities all can pray: but learne to pray for the want of Chriſt.

As we forgiue our debts.

1. The Coherence.

THeſe wordes bee a part of the fifth petition, which is propounded with a condition. Forgiue vs as we forgiue others: and theſe words depend on the former as the reaſon thereof, which ſeemes to bee take from the compariſon of the leſſe to the greater, thus: if we who haue but a ſparke of mercie, doe forgiue others: then doe thou, who art the fountaine of mercie, forgiue vs: but we forgiue others: therefore doe thou forgiue vs. Thus Luke, 11. 4. hath it, Forgiue vs our ſinnes for euen we forgiue. Rhem. Teſt. on Luk. 7. 47. the Papiſts piſts take it otherwiſe, who ſay, Forgiue vs, as we forgiue, making our forgiuing a cauſe, for which God is mooued to forgiue vs in temporall puniſhments; whereas our forgiuing of men is onely a ſigne or effect that God doeth forgiue vs.

The meaning.

1. Queſt. Whether is a man bound to forgiue all debts? Anſ. The word debt, in this place is not vnderſtood of debt that is ciuil and comes by lawfull bargaining, but of hurts and dammages which are done vnto vs in our bodies, goods, or good name. As for the former ciuill debts, a man may exact them, ſo he doe it with ſhewing of mercie.

2. Queſt. How may any man forgiue treſpaſſes, ſeeing god onely forgiues ſinne. Anſ. In euery treſpaſſe which any doe to their neighbours, there be two offences, one to God, another to man. In the firſt reſpect, as it is againſt God and his commaundement, it is called a ſinne; and that God onely forgiues; in the other reſpect it is called an iniurie or dammage, & ſo man may forgiue it. When a man is robbed, the law is broken by ſtealing, and the iniury that is done is againſt a man that hath his goods ſtolen. This iniury, as it is an iniury a man may forgiue; but as it is a ſinne, he can not but God onely.

3. Queſt. Wheither may a man lawfully pray this petition, and yet ſue him at the law, who hath done him wrong: Anſ. A man may in an holy manner ſue another for an iniury: and as a ſouldier in lawfull warre may kill his enemie, & yet loue him: ſo may a man forgiue an iniury, and yet ſeeke in a Chriſtian manner the remedie: but in doing of this we muſt obſerue fiue things. 1. We are to take heede of all priuate reuenge and inward hatred; which if we conceiue, we doe not forgiue. 2. Wee muſt take heede of offence, and haue care that our doings bee not ſcandalous to the Church. 3. Our ſuites muſt bee taken in hand to maintaine godly peace: for if all iniuries were put vp, there would bee no ciuil ſtate or gouernment. 4. This muſt be, that the partie offending may be chaſtiſed and he brought to repentance for his fault: for if many men were not repreſſed, they would grow worſe. 5. Law muſt bee the laſt remedie. As Phyſitions vſe deſperate remedies, when weaker will not ſerue: euen ſo muſt we vſe law, as the laſt meanes when all other faile. The dealing of the world in this caſe is no example for vs to followe. For through rage and ſtomacke men will abide no priuate agreement, and therefore they vſe the law in the firſt place, as the Corinthians did: but what ſaith Paul. 1. Cor. 6. 7. It is vtterly a fault among you. But if the law bee vſed aright, a Chriſtian man may ſue his neighbour at law, & loue the partie ſued: for there is difference betweene dealing againſt a man before a magiſtrate, and the dealing of one priuate man with an other. For priuate dealing is commonly reuenge, & therfore vnlawfull.

3. The vſe.

THe vſe of this clauſe is very profitable for it ſhews vs a liuely ſigne, whereby our conſciences way bee aſſured of the pardon of our ſinnes, namely a readineſſe and willing deſire to forgiue men. Many vſe theſe words long & often, yet finde no aſſurance of pardon: and the cauſe is: becauſe they haue no deſire of Gods mercie, nor willingneſſe to forgiue others, which if indeede they had, then no doubt the forgiuenes of their ſinnes ſhould by this meanes be ſealed vnto them. Wherefore if any would bee perſwaded of Gods mercie in this point, let them deſcend into their own ſoules, and ſearch narrowly, if they can find their hearts as ready to forgiue, as they are ready to deſire forgiuenes at gods hand, then they may aſſure themſelues of Gods mercie in Chriſt, as we are taught by our Sauiour Chriſt. Mat. 5. 7. Bleſſed are the mercifull for they ſhall obtaine mercie. Conſider theſe compariſons. A man walking vnder a wall in a colde ſunny day, is heated of the wall which firſt receiued heate from the Sunne: ſo hee that ſheweth mercie to others, hath firſt receiued mercie from God. Alſo take a peece of waxe, and put to a ſeale; it leaueth an impreſſion or marke like it ſelfe in the waxe: which when a man lookes on, he doth certainely know that there hath beene a ſeale, the printe whereof is left behind. Euen ſo it is in euery one that hath a readines to forgiue others: by which a Chriſtiã may eaſily know that God hath ſealed to him the forgiuenes of his ſinnes in his very heart: therefore let men looke into their hearts, whether they haue any affection to forgiue others, for that is as it were the print in their hearts of Gods mercie towards thẽ in forgiuing thẽ.

Many there are which pray for pardon at Gods hand, but they cannot brooke it, that they ſhould forgiue their neighbours. Hereupõ come theſe ſayings: I may forgiue him, but I will not foget him:

he

he may come in my Pater noster, but he ſhall neuer come in my Creed. Behold the deuils logicke, which makes malice to be charitie. Blind people pray with the Lords praier, as the flie doeth with the candle till ſhe be burnt: for the more they pray theſe wordes, the more they call for vengeance againſt themſelues, Iam. 2. 13. Neither will it helpe to omitte this clauſe, as ſome haue done in Chryſoſtomes daies: for this is euē to mocke God: and if we doe not forgiue, we ſhall not be forgiuen.

Lead vs not into temptation, but deliuer vs from euill.

1. The Coherence.

IT might ſeeme to ſome, that this petition is ſuperfluous, for what neede he care for temptations, that hath the pardon of his ſinnes? but our Sauiour did not teach vs thus to pray without ſpeciall reaſon. 1. Becauſe forgiueneſſe of ſinnes, and grieuous temptations be inſeparable companions in this life: which thing we finde to be true, both in Gods word and in Chriſtian experience: for there is no man in this world ſo beaten, and buffeted with temptations, as the penitent ſinner that cries moſt bitterly for the pardon of his ſinnes. This is the eſtate that few mē in the world are acquainted with. For many are neuer troubled with temptation, but liue in all peace and quietnes both in body & ſoule. Luk. 11. 21. When the ſtrong man armed keepes his hold, the things that he poſſeſſeth are in peace. Whereby is ſignified, that the wicked of the world beeing poſſeſſed of Satan, are not a whit moleſted by him with any temptations: neither neede he trouble them, ſeeing he hath them at commandement to doe what he will. But when a man once begins to make conſcience of ſin, and to ſue vnto the Lord for pardon of his offences, and ſtil continues in diſlike of ſinne and Satan: then the enemie beſtirs him, and vſeth all meanes to bring that man to confuſion: he offereth all manner of temptations to moleſt him, and neuer affoards this poore ſinner any reſt. Hereupon, for feare of beeing ouercome, he muſt pray continually vnto the Lord, that he may not be lead into temptation.

Here ſome Chriſtian conſcience may reaſon thus. No man is ſo troubled with ſinne and Sathan, as I: therefore I am not in Gods fauour, but am a plaine caſtaway. Anſ. If pardon of ſinne and temptations goe togither, all is contrary. If thou hadſt no griefe for ſinne, no buffetings of thine enemies, the fleſh, the world, and the deuill, thou couldſt not be in Gods fauour, but vnder the power of Satan: nowe this great meaſure of the ſpirituall temptations, is a ſigne rather of Gods loue. For whome God loues, the deuill hates; & where God workes in loue, the deuill workes in malice.

2. Secondly, this petition is ioyned with the former to teach vs, that as we muſt bee carefull to pray for pardon of ſinnes paſt: ſo alſo we muſt endeauour to preuent ſins to come: we muſt not fall againe into our old ſinnes, neither muſt we be ouertaken with new ſinnes.

2. The meaning.

THeſe wordes be but all one petition: which hath two parts, the latter being a declaration of the former. Lead vs not into temptation: how is that done? by deliuering vs from euill.

Temptation.] Temptation is nothiug els, but the enticement of the ſoule or heart, either by the corruption of mans nature, or the allurements of the world, or the deuill, to any ſinne. Iam. 1. 15. God tempts no man: that is, God mooues no man to ſinne.

Lead vs not] Or carrie vs not into temptation. To be lead, is to be ouercome of the temptation when it preuailes and wholly gets the victory: ſo as men tempted are brought to perdition. Then the meaning is this. When we are mooued or entiſed to ſinne, Lord keepe vs that we be not ouercome; and giue thou an iſſue with the tēptation.

Queſt. God is iuſt and cannot ſinne: but if he lead men into temptation ſhall he not be the author of ſinne? Anſ. Indeede many fearing to charge God with ſinne, read the words thus, Suffer vs not to be ledde. But the text is very plaine, Lead, or carry vs not. And the Scriptures elſewhere vſe the like phraſes of God: Exod. 7. 3. God is ſaid to harden Pharaohs heart, 2. Sam. 24. 1. The Lord mooued Dauid to number the people. 2 Theſſ. 2. 11. God ſent ſtrong deluſions that men might beleeue lies. Theſe and ſuch like places haue a ſpeciall meaning, thus to be gathered. There is no action of man, or of the deuill, abſolutely euil: but although in ſome reſpects it be euill, yet in ſome other it is good: for we are not to thinke that as there is a maine or abſolute good, ſo alſo there is a maine or abſolute euill. Thus then, temptation beeing an action, it is not in euery reſpect euill: but in ſome good, in ſome euill. And ſo farre forth as it is good, the Lord workes it: but as it is euill, he doth not worke it, but willingly permits it to be done by man and Satan.

1. And there be foure reſpects in which God may be a worker in temptations, and yet be free from ſinne. I. Firſt, he tempteth by offering occaſions and obiects to trie whether a man will ſinne or not. A maſter ſuſpecting his ſeruant, which in word profeſſeth fidelitie, layes a purſe of money in his way, to trie if he will ſteale it: which if he ſteale, he hath found by watching him, a ſecret theefe; and ſo hath laid him open for deceiuing any more. Now, this trying of him is no ſinne, though he ſinne in ſtealing. In the ſame manner tempteth God his own ſeruants, to proque and trie them. Deut. 13.3. Thou ſhalt not hearken vnto the wordes of the prophet or dreamer of dreames: for the Lord thy God proueth you to knowe whether yee loue the Lord your God with all your heart.

2. Secondly, God leads into temptation by withdrawing his grace. Neither can this be a ſinne in God: becauſe he is bound to no man to giue him grace. And here is a difference between the tempting of God and Satan. God holds backe grace when he tempts, the deuill ſuggeſts euill motions.

3. Euery action, ſo farre forth as it is an action, is good, and of God, Act. 17.28. In him we liue, moue, and haue our being. Therefore God is a worker in temptations ſo farre forth as they are actions. One man kills another: the very mouing of the bodie in the doing of this villanie is of God: but the wickedneſſe of the action is from man and the deuill. A man rides vpon a lame horſe, and ſtirres him: the rider is the cauſe of the motion, but the horſe himſelfe of the halting in the motion. So God is author of the action, but not of the euill of the action.

4. The fourth way is in regard of the ende. God tempts his ſeruants onely to correct and humble them for their ſinnes, to trie how they will abide the croſſe, and to mooue them the more to loue him. Deut. 8.2. God afflicts the children of Iſrael, to trie them whether they would keepe his commandements. 2. Chr. 31.31. He trieth Ezechias to ſee what was in his heart. The deuils end in tempting, is onely to bring the partie to deſtruction. Thus we neede not feare to ſay, that God in ſome reſpects doth tempt his owne ſeruants.

Deliuer vs from euill.] That is, free vs frō the power of the fleſh, the deuil, and the world. Some take euill in this place onely for the deuill, but we may take it more largely for all ſpirituall enemies 1. Ioh. 5. 19. The whole world lieth in euill. viz. Vnder the power of ſin and Satan. Theſe words (as I haue ſaid) are a proofe and explanation of the former: for when a man is deliuered from euill, he is not led into temptation: the cauſe being taken away, the effect ceaſeth.

3. The vſes.

1. HEnce we learne what a righteous God, Iehouah is, that can worke in euill actions, and yet be void of ſinne.

2. Where as we ſay, lead vs not, &c. We note that the deuill in temptations can goe no further then God permits him.

3. We are not to pray that temptations be quite taken from vs, or that we be wholy freed from them: but that they doe not ouercome vs. For it is the Lords will that his Church ſhould be tempted. Nay, Dauid deſired ſome kinde of temptations. Pſal. 26.1. Proque me, O Lord. And Iames ſaith, Account it for exceeding ioy, when yee ſhall fall into diuers temptations. Iam. 1.2.

4. Note alſo that euery man by nature is the bondſlaue of ſin and Satan. For where is deliuerance, there was a bondage firſt. This confutes the Papiſts who maintaine freewil: for we are dead in ſinne by nature, as a man in a graue; and we muſt ſtill pray thus till we be fully deliuered.

4. What is to be bewailed.

THe corruption, which in this petition we ought to mourne for, is the continuall rebellion of our wicked natures; and our proneneſſe to yeeld vp our ſelues in euery temptation to ſinne and Satan. And the remnants of the old bondage vnder Satan muſt be grieuous and irkeſome vnto vs, and we muſt bewaile them bitterly. The Iewes in a bodily captiuitie, wept when they remembred Sion. Pſal. 127. How much more ſhould we weepe, when we feele the lawe of our members rebelling againſt the law of our mindes, and leading vs captiue to ſinne?

5. Graces to be deſired.

THe contrarie bleſſing to be deſired, is that God would ſtabliſh vs by his free ſpirit, Pſalm. 51.12. Which is ſo called, becauſe it ſettes vs euery day more and more at libertie out of the reach of ſinne and Satan.

For

For thine is the kingdome, the power and glorie for euer.

1. The meaning.

THeſe words containe a reaſon of all the former petitions: whereby we are mooued to craue things needfull at Gods hand.

Thine is] Earthly kings haue Kingdome, power, and glorie, Dan. 2.37. yet not from themſelues, but from God, whoſe vicegerents they are on earth. Therefore to make a difference betweene Gods kingdome, power, and glorie, and thoſe of earthly kings, it is ſaid, Thine is the kingdome, &c. that is, that God hath all theſe in himſelfe, and from himſelfe, and men from him.

The kingdome] Theſe words, 1. Chron. 26.11. are fully expounded, Thine, O Lord, is greatneſſe, power, and victorie, and praiſe: and all that is in heauen and earth is thine: thine is the kingdome, and thou exalteſt as head ouer all, &c. The kingdome is ſaide to be Gods, becauſe he is abſolute poſſeſſour and owner of all things that are; and alſo hath ſoueraigne rule ouer all things at his will. Now out of the firſt propertie of God we may gather a ſtrong motiue to induce vs to pray vnto him alone. For ſeeing all things are his, both in heauen and earth whatſoeuer: therefore wee muſt come to him for the graces and bleſſings which we deſire.

The power] Oftentimes earthly princes haue kingdomes, yet want power: but God hath kingdome and power alſo: yea his power is infinite, and hee can doe all that he will, and more then he will: as for thoſe things which come of impotencie, he can not doe them; & if he could, he ſhould not be omnipotent. And as he is omnipotent in himſelfe, ſo all the power which any creature hath, is from him alone.

Queſt. How can this bee, ſeeing the deuill hath power to ſinne; which is not from God? Anſ. To ſinne is no power, but rather a want of power: otherwiſe all the ſtrength and power Satan hath, is of God.

And from this ſecond propertie is taken another motiue to mooue vs to pray vnto God. Becauſe all power being his, wee can neuer do any of the things which we aske, but by power receiued from him.

Thine is the glorie] This third propertie of God, ariſeth from the two former, for ſeeing the title and intereſt in all things, & the power whereby they are diſpoſed and gouerned, is of God: therefore it follows, that al glorie is his: yea in him is fulneſſe of glorie, and the glorie of the creature is all of him. To ſinnefull men belongs nothing but ſhame and confuſion, Dan. 9.7.

This third propertie miniſtreth a third motiue to induce men to pray vnto God alone. For ſeeing all glorie by right is his, therefore we muſt inuocate his holy name, that in ſo doing, we may giue him the glory due vnto him.

For euer] The wordes in the originall are, for ages. Now an age ſignifies the ſpace of an 100. yeres: but here it is take for eternities; becauſe eternitie is nothing but multiplication of ages. And as eternitie is here noted by ages, ſo on the contrarie we read, that eternitie is taken for a certen and diſtinct time. Gen. 17.8. God promiſeth Abraham to giue him the land of Canaan for an euerlaſting poſſeſſion: that is, for a long ſeaſon. For els Abrahams ſeede ſhould inherit the land vntil this time, which it doth not. Wherefore, as often the whole is put for the part, vz. eternitie for a certen time: ſo here the part is put for the whole, ages for eternitie. This alſo makes a difference betweene earthly princes and the mightie Iehoua. They haue kingdome, power, and glorie for a ſhort time, but he abſolutely and for euer.

2. The vſes.

1. HEre we learne in prayer to abaſe our ſelues before God, and vtterly to denie all that is in vs, Kingdome, power, & glorie is all his, not ours: we are no better then rebels and traitours to him: if we haue any good thing, it is from him, euen the grace whereby wee pray. And he that in prayer will not confeſſe this, ſhall no more be heard, then the inſolent begger that will not acknowledge his want.

2 Secondly, in praier we learne, that we muſt be perſwaded of two things, & build vpon them; Gods power & will: his power in that hee is able; his will, in that hee is carefull to performe our requeſts, as it was noted in the preface: the firſt of theſe is ſignified by kingdome & power, the ſecond is noted in that glorie is his. 2. Cor. 1. 20. For all the promiſes of God in him, are yea, and Amen, vnto the glorie of God.

3 Again, we gather that praier & thankſgiuing muſt goe togither: for as in the ſixe petitions we make requeſt vnto God; ſo in theſe words we praiſe him, and there-

by

by giue him thankes. Phil.4. 6. But in all things let your requeſts bee ſhewed to God in prayer and ſupplication with thankeſgiuing. There is none but in want will be ready to pray: but when we haue receiued, we are ſlacke in giuing of thankes: but hee which will pray aright, muſt ioyne them both together. And the ſumme of all Gods praiſe ſtands in theſe three points. 1. That he is an abſolute King. 2. That he hath abſolute power to rule all things. 3. That hauing power and a kingdome, he hath glorie alſo, which appeares in the holding of his kingdome, and the ſhewing of his power in gouerning of it.

4 Whatſoeuer we aske, wee muſt referre it to Gods glorie: this is the firſt thing which we are taught to craue, and the laſt wee are to performe, becauſe it is noted both in the beginning, and in the ende of the prayer,

Thus much of the vſe of theſe wordes altogither: now let vs make vſe of them particularly. 1. Whereas we ſay, Thine is the kingdome, Magiſtrates and rulers muſt know, that all the authority & rule which they haue is from the Lord, and therefore they muſt remember to order themſelues as Gods vicegerents, vſing their power to bring men in ſubiection to Gods lawes, & referring all their callings to his glorie.

2. Where we ſay, Thine is the power, wee are admoniſhed, when we are to performe any worke, as to doe ſeruice to God, to keepe our ſelues in the compaſſe of our callings, and that we haue no power of our ſelues: & for this cauſe we muſt aske power at Gods hands, that we may be inabled to walke vprightly before him, and doe our duties. 3. In ſaying, Thine is the glory, we learne, that if wee would haue a good report and praiſe among men, we muſt aboue all things ſeeke Gods glory, not regarding ſo much our owne. If hee giue praiſe among men, giue him thanks: if not, be content becauſe all glorie is his.

Amen.

1. The Meaning.

WE haue heard the Preface, and the petitions what they are: now followeth the third part, which is the aſſent or teſtification of faith required in prayer in this word, Amen. And it containes more then men at the firſt would imagine. It ſignifies, certnly, ſo be it, or it ſhal be ſo. 2. Cor. 1.20. It is often taken for a bare aſſent of the people, ſaying Amen to the miniſter: but in this place it containes more: for euery point in this prayer is not onely a direction for publike prayer, but for priuate alſo, and muſt be ſaide as well of the miniſter, as of the people. Now then there being two principal things in prayer: the firſt a deſire of grace; the ſecond faith, whereby we beleeue that God will grant things deſired; The firſt is expreſſed in the ſixe Petitions: the latter is ſet forth in this word Amen, carrying this ſenſe in effect. As we haue craued theſe things at thy hands, O Lord; ſo we doe beleeue that for Chriſtes ſake, in thy good time thou wilt grant thē to vs. Therefore this part is more excellent then the former, by how much our faith is more excellent then our deſire. For in this word is contained the teſtification of our faith, whereas the petitions are onely teſtifications of our deſires. And as it is the ende, ſo alſo it is the ſeale of our prayers to make them authenticall, and it is to be vſed (as men commonly take it) not only for this ende to anſwere the Miniſter, praying in the Congregation, but alſo to teſtifie our faith for the thing deſired.

2. Graces to be deſired.

HEreby we are taught, what grace wee are to ſhew in prayer. We muſt labour to giue aſſent to Gods promiſes when we pray, and ſtriue againſt doubting and vnbeleefe. Matth.9. 11. Lord I beleeue; Lord help mine vnbeleefe. Pſa.42.11. Why art thou caſt downe my ſoule, and why art thou diſquieted within me? waite on God.

Many there are that will ſtand vpon the ſtrength of their faith, and plead for themſelues that they neuer doubted, but they are farre wide: for true faith being imperfect, is alwayes accompanied with doubting more or leſſe. Wherefore the heart that neuer felt doubting, is not filled with faith, but with preſumption. As for them which are moleſted with doubtings, and complaine of them, they haue leſſe cauſe to feare: for as fire and water doth neuer ſtriue till they meete; no more doth doubting and faith, till faith be wrought in the heart.

To conclude, we ſee what an excellent worke prayer is: in which two moſt excellent graces of a Chriſtian man bee ſhewed foorth, hungring after mercie, and faith, whereby wee beleeue the obtaining of it. This might mooue men to learne to pray, prayer being the exerciſe of grace.

Of

Of the vſe of the Lords praier.

THe principall vſe of the Lords praier, is to direct Gods Church in making their prayers in all places, at all times, and vpon all occaſions, though their prayers ſhould be innumerable: and vnleſſe they be framed after this praier, they cannot be acceptable vnto God. In the vſing of it there be three things required: 1. The firſt is the knowledge of the Lords prayer, and all the parts thereof. He that would pray by it, muſt vnderſtand the meaning thereof, the wants therein to be bewailed, and the graces to be deſired, for which ende it hath beene expounded. 2. Knowing this, there is in the ſecond place required thus much skill, that he be able to referre euery want and grace to one of the ſixe petitions; for example, feeling in himſelfe pride of heart, he muſt be able to ſay, this is a want in the firſt petition: and feeling a rebellion and ſlowneſſe in doing Gods commaundements, he muſt be able to ſay, this is a ſinne to be praied againſt in the third petition. Thus euery want he muſt referre to his proper head: againe, he muſt referre euery grace to be deſired to one of the ſixe petitions: as ſtrength in temptation to the ſixth; affiance in Gods prouidence to the fourth; knowledge of God to the firſt, &c. and ſo in the reſt. 3. In the third place, he muſt before he pray, conſider what be his wants and imperfections which moſt trouble him, as alſo the graces which he would obtaine: then for helping of his memorie, he muſt goe to the petitions, and he muſt ſet thoſe things firſt in his minde, which concerne the firſt petition: and thoſe which concerne the ſecond petition, muſt haue the ſecond place in his minde, and ſo he muſt proceede in order as he ſhall haue occaſion. Thus a man keeping in minde the order of the petitions as they ſtand, ſhall be able by referring euery grace and want to his proper head, to make diſtinct praier: and to vary it as time, place, and other occaſions ſhall moone him.

Queſt. Muſt we of neceſſitie follow all the petitions in conceiuing a prayer? Anſ. No, but onely thoſe which doe principally belong to the time, place, and occaſion, as Paul maketh a praier, Coloſſ. 1. 9. 10. And all the points of it may be referred to the third and laſt petitions.

Againe, a Chriſtian man may make an excellent confeſſion of his ſinnes by this prayer: if he ſhall, keeping the order of the petitions, confeſſe and bewaile the ſinnes which euery petition requires vs to pray againſt. And it ſerues to make a thankſgiuing to God, thus: let a man remember all the graces which he hath receiued from God, let him then refer them to the petitions, and giue thankes to God after the order of them, turning euery petition into a thankſgiuing.

Of the circumſtances of praier.

Queſt. 1. WHether a man is to vſe a voice in prayer? Anſ. In publike prayer it is requiſite that there be a voice: for the Miniſter is the mouth of the people, and to the prayer which he conceiues, they giue aſſent. For priuate praier, vſing of a voice is conuenient; yet ſo as it may be done in ſilence. I. The Lord gaue vs the voice, as well as the heart to bleſſe him withall. Iam. 3. 9. II. God created the tongue as well as the heart; & ſo will bee praiſed by both. III. The voice often ſtirres vp the heart: and againe, the vehemencie of affection doth often draw out a voice: the voice then in priuate praier is requiſite, yet in ſome caſes may be omitted, for it is not abſolutely neceſſarie. Moſes and Anna praied in ſilence.

Queſt. 2. What geſture is to be vſed in praier? Anſ. The worde doeth not affoard any particular direction. Our Sauiour & his diſciples praied in diuers geſtures: kneeling, ſtanding, groueling, looking to heauen, looking downe to the earth, ſitting, lying. &c. Luke 11. 41. Act. 7. God reſpects not the geſture, but the affection of the heart: yet two things muſt alwaies be in geſture: firſt, that it be comely: Secondly, that it do fitly expreſſe the affection of the heart: as when we aske mercie, to looke to heauen: when we bewaile our ſinnes to looke downward, and to humble our bodies. &c.

Queſtion. 3. What place muſt we praye in? Anſw. The place is ſet downe, 1. Tim. 2. 8. We may pray in all places: of which there is no difference. Some will ſay that in the time of the lawe, the tabernacle and temple were places of diuine praier. Anſw. The temple and tabernacle, were types of Chriſt and his Church, and the vnity of it: but nowe wee hauing the thing it ſelfe ſignified thereby, may pray in all places. Our Sauiour praied in the wilderneſſe, on the Mount, Peter on the houſe toppe, Paul by the ſea ſhore: yet ſo, that publique prayer muſt be vſed in publike places, as Churches, chappels, &c. not becauſe in them is more holines, but for order ſake.

Queſt. 4. What is the time appointed for praier? Anſ. Pray continually, 1. Th. 5. 17 that is vpon all occaſions: for when a man begins any buſines, whether it be in word or deede, Coloſſ. 3. 17. or as Daniel, who praied thriſe euery day, Dan. 6. 11. or as Dauid, who praied at euening and morning, & noone tide, Pſal. 55. 18. and ſeauen times a day: that is, many. Pſal. 119. 140. Thus we ſhall pray continually. Euery day affoards three ſpeciall occaſions. 1. The entrance to our callings in the morning. 2. The receiuing of Gods creatures at noone tide. 3. The going to reſt at night. Againe, beſide ſet and ſolemne prayers, there be certaine kinds of ſhort prayers which the fathers cal Eiaculationes, that is, the lifting vp of the heart into heauen ſecretly and ſuddenly: and this kind of praying may be vſed as occaſion is offered euery houre in the day.

Queſt. 5. Whether may we pray for al men or no? Anſw. We may and we may not. We may, if all men, or mankinde bee taken diſtributiuely, or ſeuerally. For there is no particular countrey, kingdom, towne, perſon, but we may make praiers for it. And though mē be Atheiſts, Infidels, Hereticks, yea deuils incarnate, yet for any thing we knowe, they may belong to the election of God: except they ſinne againſt the holy Ghoſt, which ſin is very ſeldome and hardly diſcerned of men. And in this ſenſe muſt the commandement of Paul be vnderſtood: I exhort therefore that firſt of al ſupplications, praiers, &c. be made for al men. 1. Tim. 2. 1. We may not pray for all men, if al men or mankind be taken collectiuely, that is, if all men be conſidered wholly together as they make one body or companie, and be taken as we ſay in groſſe: For in this body or maſſe of mankind there be ſome, though they be vnknowne to vs, yet I ſay, there be ſome whome God in his iuſt iudgement hath refuſed, whoſe ſaluation by prayer ſhall neuer be obtained.

Queſt. 6. Whether it is poſſible for a man to pray in reading of a prayer? Anſwer. It pleaſeth ſome to mooue this queſtion, but there is no doubt of it. For prayer is a part of Gods worſhippe, and therefore a ſpirituall action of the heart of man ſtanding ſpecially in a deſire of that which we want, and faith whereby we beleeue, that our deſire ſhall be granted. Nowe the voice or vtterance, whether it be reading or otherwiſe, is no part of the prayer, but an outward meanes whereby praier is vttered and expreſſed. Therefore there is no reaſon why a forme of praier beeing read, ſhould ceaſe to be a prayer, becauſe it is read; ſo be it the ſpirit of grace and praier be not wanting in the party reading and the hearers. Obiect. To read a ſermon is not to preach: and therefore to read a prayer is not to pray. Anſ. The reaſon is not like in both. For the gift of preaching or propheſie cannot be ſhewed or practiſed in the reading of a ſermon: and for this cauſe the reading of a ſermon is not preaching or propheſie: but the grace and gift of prayer may be ſhewed in reading of a praier: otherwiſe it would goe very hard with them that want conuenient vtterance, by reaſon of ſome defect in the tongue, or by reaſon of baſhfulneſſe in the preſence of others.

HItherto we haue ſpoken of the making of prayer to God, a word or twaine of Gods hearing our prayers.

Queſt. Howe many waies doth GOD heare mens prayers? Anſ. Two waies. The firſt in his mercie, when he graunts the requeſts of ſuch as call vpon him in the feare of his name. Secondly, hee heares mens prayers in his wrath. Thus he gaue the Iſraelites Quailes according to their deſire. Pſal. 78. 29, 30, 31. Thus often men curſe themſelues and wiſh that they were hanged or dead: and accordingly they haue their wiſh.

Queſt. 2. Why doth God deferre to heare the praiers of his ſeruants? Anſw. Firſt, to prooue them by delay. Secondly, to exerciſe their faith. Thirdly, to make them acknowledge that the things which they receiue are Gods gifts, and not from themſelues. Fourthly, that graces quickly giuen might not be lightly eſteemed. Fiftly that an hungring after grace might be ſharpned and increaſed.

Queſtion. 3. After what manner doth God heare his ſeruants prayers? Anſwer. Two waies. Firſt, by graunting the thing which was asked according to his will. Secondly, by denying the thing deſired, and by giuing ſomething proportionall to it. Thus God denies temporary bleſſings, and in the roome thereof giues eternall in heauen. Thus he refuſeth to remooue the croſſe from his ſeruants, and giues in ſtead thereof thereof ſtrength and patience. Chriſt praied that the cuppe might be remooued. It was not remooued, yet he in his manhood was inabled to beare the wrath of God. When Paul prayed three times that the pricke in the fleſh might be remooued, it was anſwered, My ſtrength is ſufficient for thee.

Queſt. 4. Why doth not God alwaies heare mens praiers? Anſ. There be many cauſes of this. The firſt, becauſe oftentimes we know not to aske as we ought, Math. 20 22. The ſecond, becauſe we aske amiſſe, Iam. 4 3 The third, becauſe otherwhiles the things which we aske, though they be good in themſelues yet they are not good vnto vs, and for that cauſe are withheld. 2. Cor. 12. 7. The laſt, becauſe God will for ſome long time deferre the graunting of that which we aſke, that he may ſtirre vp our faith and hope and our diligence in prayer: and that we might the better eſteeme of the gifts of God when we haue them, and ſhew our ſelues more thankfull.

To the Reader.

PAul in his Epiſtles, hath ſet downe the ſumme of many of his praiers: they are very gratious and heauenly, and I haue here ſet them downe, that thou mighteſt knowe them, and in thy prayers followe them.

Epheſ. 1.

16. I ceaſe not to giue thankes for you, making mention of you in my praiers, 17 That the God of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, the father of glory, might giue vnto you the ſpirit of wiſedome, and of reuelation, in the acknoweledgement of him.

18 The eyes of your minde beeing enlightned, that ye may know what the hope is of his calling, and what the riches are of his glorious inheritance in the Saints.

19 And what is the exceeding greatnes of his power in vs that beleeue, according to the working of his mighty power.

20 Which he wrought in Chriſt, when he raiſed him from the dead, and ſet him at his right hand in heauenly places.

The Expoſition.

IN this excellent praier we are to marke two things: the firſt, to whom it is made the ſecond, is the matter.

For the firſt, it is made to God the father who is deſcribed by two titles. The firſt, The God of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, namely as Chriſt is man: for as Chriſt is God, he is equall with the father. The ſecond, The Father of glory, that is, a glorious father, and is ſo called to diſtinguiſh him from earthly fathers.

The matter of the praier ſtands in two principall points. Firſt, he aſketh of God, the ſpirit of wiſdome, whereby the ſeruants of God are inabled to diſcerne out of the word, in euery buſines which they take in hand, whether it be in word or deede, what ought to be done, and what ought to be left vndone: as alſo the circumſtances, the time, place, manner of doing any thing.

Secondly, he prayeth for the ſpirit of reuelation, whereby the faithful haue their whole eſtate before God, reuealed vnto them according to the word: the thing it ſelfe beeing otherwiſe ſecret and hidden. 1. Cor 2. 9. 10. 12 Further, the worke of this ſpirit in the godly is twofold, the one concernes God himſelfe, the other the things of God.

The worke of the ſpirit of reuelation, which reſpects God himſelfe is, an acknowledgement of the Father or of Chriſt. Now to acknowledge God the Father, is not onely to know, and confeſſe that he is a father of the faithfull, but alſo to be reſolued in conſcience that he is a father to me in particular. Secondly, that Chriſt is not onely in generall a Sauiour of the elect, but that he is in ſpeciall my Sauiour and redeemer.

The ſecond worke of this ſpirit, is an illumination of the eyes of the minde to ſee and know the things of God which he hath prepared for them that doe beleeue: and they are two. The firſt is life eternall, which is deſcribed by 5 arguments. 1. It is the Epheſian hope that is, the thing hoped for in this life. 2. It is the hope of the calling of God: becauſe in preaching of the Goſpell it is offered, & mē are called to waite for the ſame. 3. An inheritāce, properly to Chriſt, becauſe he is the naturall ſonne of God: and by him to all that ſhall beleeue. 4. The excellency, becauſe it is a rich and glorious inheritance. 5. Laſtly, it is made proper to the Saints.

The ſecond thing is the greatneſſe of the power of God, wherby ſinne is mortified, the corrupt nature renued, and mightily ſtrengthened in temptations. This power is ſet foorth by two arguments. The firſt is the ſubiect or perſons in whom this power is made manifeſt. In them that beleeue. Becauſe none can feele this, but they which apprehend Chriſt by faith. The ſecond is the manner of manifeſting this power in them, which is according to the working of his mighty power, which he ſhewed in Chriſt. And that was in three things. Firſt, in putting all his enemies vnder his feete, v. 20. Secondly, in raiſing him from death, death. Thirdly, in placing him at his right hand. Now therefore Paul praies that this wonderfull power of God, which did shew forth it selfe in the head Christ, might likewise shew it selfe in the members of Christ. First, in treading Satan and sinne vnder their feete. Rom. 16.10. Secondly, in raising them from sinne, as out of a graue to holines of life. Thirdly, in aduancing them in the time appointed to the kingdome of glorie in heauen.

Ephes. 3.

14 For this cause I bow my knees vnto the Father of our Lord Iesus Christ 15 Of whome is named the whole familie in heauen and earth.

16 That he would graunt you according to the riches of his glorie, that ye may be strengthened by his spirit in the inner man.

17 That Christ may dwell in your hearts by faith:

18 That yee beeing rooted and grounded in loue, may be able to comprehend with all Saints, what is the breadth, and length, and depth, and height:

19 And know the loue of Christ, which passeth knowledge, that ye may be filled with all fulnes of God.

20 Vnto him therefore that is able to doe exceeding abundantly, aboue all that we aske or thinke, according to the power that worketh in vs,

21. Be praise in the Church by Christ Iesus, throughout all generations for euer, Amen

The Exposition.

These words containe two parts, a praier, and a thanksgiuing. In the prayer these points are to be marked. First, the gesture, I bow my knees, whereby Paul signifies his humble submission to God in prayer. Secondly, to whom he praies. To the Father, who is described by two titles: the first, the Father of our Lord Iesus Christ, and that by nature as he is God, and as he is man by personall vnion. The other title, Of whome the whole familie which is in heauen and earth is named. In which words is set downe a description of the Church: first it is a Familie, because it is the companie of Gods Elect children vnder the gouernment of one Father. 1. Tim. 3.15. It is called the house of God. Eph. 2. 19. They that beleeue are saide to be of the household of God: seconaly, the partes of the Catholike Church are noted, namely, the Saints in heauen departed, and Saints liuing on earth: thirdly, it is said to be named of the Father of Christ, because as the Father of Christ is the father of this familie, so also this familie is called by him. Gen. 6.2. Dan. 9.80. Thirdly, the matter of the prayer stands of foure most worthy points.

The first is strength to beare the crosse & to resist spiritual temptation, v.16. where the strength is set out by diuers arguments. First, that it is the meere gift of God, that he would graunt you: Secondly, the cause of strength, by his spirit: Thirdly, the subiect or place where this strength must be, in the inner man, that is, in the whole man, so farre forth as he is renued by grace, Eph. 6.14. The second is, the dwelling of Christ in their hearts by faith: Faith is when a man beeing seriously humbled for his sinnes, is further in conscience perswaded and resolued of the pardon of them, and of reconciliation to God. Now where this perswasion is indeede, there followes necessarily Christs dwelling in the heart, which stands in two things: the first is, the ruling and ordering of the thoughts, affections, and desires of the heart, according to his will; as a master rules in his house: the second is the continuance of his rule. For he cannot be said to dwell in a place, who rules in it but for a day.

The third, is the knowledge and the acknowledgement of the infinit greatnes of Gods loue in Christ, an effect of the former, v.18. 19. the wordes are thus explaned: Rooted and grounded. Here the loue of God wherewith he loues the elect, is as a roote and foundation of all Gods benefits, election, vocation, iustification, and glorification. Men are rooted and grounded in loue, when Gods spirit assures their hearts of Gods loue, and doth giue them some inward sense and feeling of it. For then they are as it were sensiblie put into the roote, and laide on the foundation. With all Saints: Paul desires this benefit, not only to the Ephesians, but also to all the faithfull with them. What is the length, the breadth. Here is a speech borrowed from the Geometricians, and it signifies the absolute greatnesse or infinitenes of Gods loue, and that it is like a world, which for length, breadth, height, and depth, is endlesse. Here note the order of receiuing grace. First, Christ dwels in the heart by faith. Secondly, then comes a sense and feeling of Gods loue, as it were by certaine droppes thereof. Thirdly, after this ariseth a plentifull knowledge, and apprehension of Gods loue, and as it were the powring out of a sea into a mans heart, that for greatnes hath neither bottome nor banke. And know the loue of Christ: These words (as I take it) are an exposition of the former: for to comprehend the loue of God, is nothing else but to knowe the loue of Christ:

Christ: considering that all whom the Father loueth, he loueth them in Christ: which passeth knowledge, that is, which for the greatnes of it no man can fully know.

The fourth thing is, the fulnesse of Gods graces, v.19. Here the fulnesse of GOD, doth not signifie the fulnesse of the Godhead or diuine nature, but the perfection of the inner man which shall not be till after this life.

Nowe follwes the thanksgiuing, or the praise of God, vers. 20.21. containing these points. The matter of praise, his power and bountifulnesse, whereby he can worke exceeding aboundantly aboue all we aske or thinke: and both these are not onely to bee conceiued in mind, but also may be felt in the heart, according to the power that worketh in vs. 2. The forme of praise, glory vnto God by Christ, as all benefits are receiued from the Father by Christ. 3. The proper place of true praise of God, the Church. 4. The continuance of his praise, thorough all generations for euer.

Philip. 1.

9 And this I pray, that your loue may abound yet more and more, in knowledge and all sense.

10 That ye may discerne things that differ: to the ende, ye may be pure and without offence, to the day of Christ.

11. Filled with fruits of righteousnes, which are by Iesus Christ, vnto the praise and glory of God.

The Exposition.

THis prayer containes three parts. In the first, Paul praieth for increase of loue in the Philippians, whether it be to God or men, v.9. and he shewes the meanes of increase, which are two: knowledge and sense, or feeling. For (to goe backward) the more a godly man feeles Gods loue, and hath experience of Gods word in himselfe; the more he knowes of Gods word, and perceiues his loue vnto him: the more he loues God againe, and his neighbour for his sake.

The second thing praied for, is the gift of discerning, whereby men know, what is true, what false: what is to be done, what to be left vndone: the endes of this gift are two. The first, that by meanes of it, they may be pure and sincere: that is, keepe a good conscience before God and men in their liues and callings. The second is, to be without offence: that is innocent, giuing no occasion of euill to any, and not taking them offered by others: and the continuance of these is noted to the day of Christ; which is the time in which he commeth to vs, either by our death, or by the last iudgement.

Thirdly, he prayeth that they might abound in good workes, which are described by a similitude, fruits of righteousnesse: Christians being fruitfull trees. Ezech. 47. 12. Esay, 61. 3.2. By the cause efficient, which are by Christ. 3. By the ende, vnto the glorie and praise of God.

Coloss. 1.

9. I cease not to pray for you, & to desire that ye might be filled with knowledge of his will, in all wisedome and spirituall vnderstanding.

10. That ye might walke worthy of the Lord, and please him in all things, fructifying in all good workes, and increasing in the acknowledgement of God.

11. Strengthened with all might through his glorious power, vnto all patience & long suffering with ioyfulnesse.

12. Giuing thankes to the father which hath made vs fit to be partakers of the inheritance of the Saints in light.

13. Who hath deliuered vs from the power of darknes, and hath translated vs into the kingdome of his owne sonne.

The exposition.

THese words containe a praier, & a thanksgiuing. In the praier, three things are asked. The first is the increase of the knowledg of Gods reuealed will in his word, & he deuides it into two parts: wisdome, which is not onely to know Gods word, but also to apply it to euery action for the right and holy performing thereof; and spirituall vnderstanding, which is when men by the assistance of Gods spirit, doe conceiue the will of God in generall without applying.

Secondly, Paul praies for the fruits of this knowledge, which are foure. 1. To walke worthy of God, as good seruants doe, who in their apparell, gesture, and al their doings, so behaue themselues that they may credit their masters. 2. To please God in all things. by approouing their hearts vnto him. 3. To be plentifull in all good workes. 4. To increase in the acknowledgement of God. For the more any increase in knowledge and experience in Gods word, the more shall they acknowledge God the father to be their father, Christ to be their redeemer, and the H. Ghost their sanctifier.

Thirdly, he prayes that the Colossians may be strengthened, v.11. Where he notes the cause, Gods glorious power, and the effects, which are three. 1. Patience, because it is necessary that the godly suffer many afflictions. 2. Long suffering, because oftentimes the sams afflictions continue long. 3. Ioyfullneſſe, becauſe the croſſe is bitter.

The thanksgiuing is for a benefit, that God had made the Coloſſians fit for the kingdome of glory: and the reaſon is, becauſe hee had made them members of the kingdome of grace.

1. Theſſ. 3.

12. The Lord increaſe you, and make you abound in loue one towards another, and towards all men: euen as we doe towards you.

13. To make your hearts ſtable and vnblameable in holineſſe before God, euen our father at the comming of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt with all his Saints.

2. Theſſ. 2.

16. Ieſus Chriſt our Lord, and our God, euen the father which hath loued vs, and hath giuen vs euerlaſting conſolation and good hope through grace, 17 Comfort your hearts, and ſtabliſh you in euery word and good worke.

1. Theſſ. 5.

23. Nowe the very God of peace, ſanctifie you throughout: and I pray God that your [a] whole ſpirit and [b] ſoule & bodie may be kept blameleſſe vnto the comming of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt.

LOrd heare my praier, hearke the plaint that I doe make to thee:
Lord in thy natiue truth, and in thy iuſtice anſwer mee.

Regard, O Lord, for I complaine, & make my ſuit to thee:
Pſal. 143. 1. Pſal. 61. 1. Let not my words returne in vaine, but giue an eare to mee.

2. A confeſſion of ſinne with ſorrow of heart.

Behold, in wickedneſſe my kind, & ſhape I did receiue:
Pſal. 51. 5. Pſa. 40. 14. And lo, my ſinfull mother eke, in ſinne did me conceiue.

And I with euills many one, am ſore beſet about.
My ſinnes increaſe, and ſo come on, I can not ſpie them out.

My heart doth faint for very feare, that I am almoſt dead.

Pſa. 143. 4. Thus in me in perplexity, is mine accombred ſpright:
And in me in my troubled heart, amazed and affright.

Pſal. 90. 8. The wicked workes that I haue wrought, thou ſetſt before thine eye:
My ſecret faults, yea eke my thoughts, thy countenance doth eſpie.

Pſal. 130. 3. O Lord my God, if thou ſhalt weigh my ſinnes, and them peruſe:
What one ſhall then eſcape and ſay, I can my ſelfe excuſe?

Pſa. 143. 2. In iudgement with thy ſeruant, Lord, oh enter not at all:
For iuſtified in thy ſight, not one that liueth ſhall.

3. Prayer for pardon of ſinnes knowne & vnknowne. Pſal. 25. 10. And for thy pity plentifull, O Lord, I thee intreat:
To graunt me pardon for my ſinne, for it is wondrous great.

Pſal. 19. 12. O Lord, what earthly man doth know, the errors of this life?
Then cleanſe me from my ſecret ſinnes, which are in me moſt rife.

Knightly, Esquire, one of her Maiesties Iustices of peace in Northampton shere.

SIR, I pray you consider with me an especiall point of Gods word, carefully to be weighed: it is this, [a] Many professors of Christ, in the day of grace, perswade themselues that they are in the estate of grace; and so the true Church esteemeth of them too: yet when the day of grace is past, they contrariwise shall finde themselues to be in the estate of damnation remedilesse. A dolefull case, yet a most resolute trueth, and the reason is plaine. Men that liue in the Church are greatly annoyed with a fearefull securitie & deadnesse of heart, by which it comes to passe that they thinke it enough to make a common protestation of the faith, not once in al their life times, examining themselues whether they be in the estate of grace before the eternall God or not. [b] And indeede it is a grace pecuhar to the man elect to trie himselfe whether he be in the estate of grace or not.

The further opening of the trueth of this point, as also the danger of it, I haue enterprised in this treatise; which I am willing to bestow on you both for the profession of the faith, which you make, as also for that Christian friendship, you haue shewed to me. Accept of it I pray you and vse it for your edification. [c] Thus I commend you to God, and to the word of his grace, that is able to build you vp further and giue you an inheritance among them which are sanctified. Your Worships to command, William Perkins.

To the Christian Reader.

GOod Reader it is a thing to be considered, that a man may seeme both vnto himselfe and to the Church of God to be a true professour of the Gospell, and yet indeede be none. All professors that be of this sort, are excellently described, Luk. 8. vers. 13. in these words. And they which are vpon the stony ground are they, which when they shall heare receiue the word with ioy: but hauing no roote, beleeue for a time, and in the time of temptation goe away. Where are to be noted three things. First, their faith, in that they are said to beleeue for a season. Secondly the fruits of that faith, in that they are said to receiue the word preached with ioy. Thirdly their vnsoundnes in that they are compared to stony ground, and in time of tempation goe away.

Concerning their faith, whereas the spirit of God saith, that they doe beleeue, these things are to be considered. First, that they haue the knowledge of the word of God. Secondly, that they both can and doe giue assent vnto the word of God, that it is most true. Thirdly, in more speciall manner they giue assent vnto the couenant of grace made in Christ, that it is most certaine and sure: and they are perswaded in a generall and confused manner, that God will verifie the same couenant in the members of his Church. This is all their faith: which indeede proceedeth from the holy Ghost, but yet it is not sufficient to make them sound Professors. For albeit they doe generally beleeue Gods promises, yet herein they deceiue themselues, that they neuer apply and appropriate the same promises to their owne soules. An example of this faith we haue, Ioh. 2. 24. where it is said, that when our Sauiour Christ came to Hierusalem at the feast of Easter, many beleeued in his name, and yet he would not commit himselfe vnto them, because he knewe them all and what was in them.

To come to the second thing: those professours which are indued with thus much grace, as to beleeue in Christ in a confused manner, go yet further: for this their faith, though it be not sufficient to saluation, yet it sheweth it selfe by certaine fruits which it bringeth forth: for as a tree or a branch of a tree that hath no deepe rooting, but either is couered with a few moules, or else lieth in the water, at the season of the yeare bringeth forth leaues and blossomes, and some fruite too, and that for one or two, or moe yeares; so one that is an hearer of the word, may receiue the word: and the word asseede, by this generall faith may be somewhat rooted in his heart, and setled for a season, and may bring forth some fruites in his life perduenture very faire in his owne and other mens eies: yet indeed neither sound, nor lasting, nor substantiall. What these fruits are it may be gathered forth of these words, where it is said, that they receiue the worde with ioy, when they heare it: for here may be 1 gathered, First, that they do willingly subiect themselues to the ministerie of the word. Secondly, that 2 they are as forward as any, and as ioyfull in frequenting sermons. Thirdly, that they reuerence the 3 ministers whome they so ioyfully heare. Lastly, they condemne them of impietie, which will not be hearers, 4 or be negligent hearers of the word.

5 DE 60

Now, of these and such like fruits, this may be added though they are not sound, yet they are void of that grosse kind of hypocrisie. For the mindes of those Professors are in part enlightened, and their hearts are indued with such a faith, as may bring foorth these fruits for a time: and therefore herein they dissemble not that faith which they haue not: but rather shewe that which they haue. Adde hereunto, that a man beeing in this estate, may deceiue himselfe, and the most godly in the world, which haue the greatest giftes of discerning, how they and their brethren stand before the Lord: like as the figgetree with greene leaues deceiued our Sauiour Christ as he was man: for when in his hunger he came vnto it to haue had some fruit, he found none.

Marke, that there is a true faith wrought by the holy Ghost, very like sauing faith, yet not sauing faith.

If this be so, it may be then required, how these vnsound professours differ from true professours. I answer, in this they differ, that they haue not sound hearts to cleaue vnto Christ Iesus for euer. Which appeareth in that they are compared to stonie ground. Now stony groundes mingled with some earth are commonly hot, and therefore haue as it were some alacritie and hastinesse in them, and the corne as soone as it is cast into this ground, it sprouteth out very speedily, but yet the stones will not suffer the corne to be rooted deepely beneath, and therefore

when ſummer commeth the blade of the corne withereth with rootes and all. So it is with theſe profeſſors: they haue in their hearts ſome good motions of the holy Ghoſt, to that which is good: they haue a kind of zeale to Gods glorie, they haue a liking to good things, and they are as forwards at any other for a time, and they doe beleeue. But theſe good motions and graces are not laſting, but like the flame and flaſhing of ſtrawe and ſtubble: neither are they ſufficient to ſalnation.

With the true profeſſors it is far otherwiſe: for they haue vpright and honeſt hearts before the Lord, Luk. 8.15. And they haue faith which worketh by loue. Gal. 5.6. And that Chriſtian man which loueth God, whatſoeuer ſhall befal, yea though it were a thouſand deaths, yet his heart can neuer be ſeuered from the Lord and from his Sauiour Chriſt: as the ſpouſe ſpeaketh vnto Chriſt of her owne loue. Cant. 8.6. Set me as a ſeale on thy heart, as a ſignet vpō thy arme: for loue is as ſtrong as death: iealouſie is as cruell as the graue; the coales thereof are fierie coales and a vehement flame. Much water cannot quench loue, neither can the flouds drown it: if a man ſhould giue al the ſubſtance of his houſe for loue, they would greatly contemne it.

Wherefore (good Reader) ſeeing there is ſuch a ſimilitude and affinitie betweene the temporarie profeſſor of the Goſpell, & the true profeſſor of the ſame: it is the dutie of euery Chriſtian to trie and examine himſelfe whether he be in the faith or not. 2. Cor. 13.5. And whereas it is an hard thing for a man to ſerch out his owne heart, we are to pray vnto God that he would giue vs his ſpirit to diſcerne betweene that which is good and euil in vs. Now when a man hath found out the eſtate of his heart, by ſearching it, he is further to obſerue and keepe it with all diligence. Prou. 4.23. that when the houre of death, or the day of triall ſhall come, he may ſtand ſure and not be deceiued of his hope.

And for this purpoſe I haue deſcribed the moſt of theſe ſmall treatiſes which follow, to miniſter vnto thee ſome helpe in this examining & obſerning of thine owne heart. Read them & accept of them, and by the bleſſing of God they ſhall not be vnprofitable vnto thee. And if they ſhall any whit help thee, helpe me alſo with thy prayer. 1595.

CERTAINE

CERTAINE PROPOSITIONS
DECLARING HOW FARRE A MAN MAY goe in the profession of the Gospell, and yet be a wicked man and a Reprobate.

I.

A Reprobate hath in his mind a certain [a] knowledge of God, of common equitie amonge men, of the difference of good from bad: & this is partly frō nature partly from the contemplation of Gods creatures, in which the wisdome, the power, the loue, the mercy, the maiestie of God is perceiued.

II.

This knowledge is only generall & imperfect, much like the ruines of a Princes pallace: it is not sufficient to direct him in doing of a good worke. For example, he knoweth that there is a God, and that this God must be worshipped: come to particulars, who God is? what a one he is? howe he must be worshipped? Here his knowledge faileth him, and he is altogither vncertaine what to do to please God.

III.

By reason of this knowledge, the Reprobate doeth giue consent, and in his heart subscribeth to the equity of Gods law; as may appeare by the saying of Medea: Video meliora proboque; deteriora sequor. That is, I know what is best to bee done, and like it: yet I doe the worst. This approbation in the Reprobate commeth from constraint, and is ioined with a disliking of the lawe: in the elect beeing called, the [b] approbation of the lawe proceedeth from a willing and ready mind, and is ioyned with loue and liking.

[b] Rom. 7. 15.

IV.

And by reason of this light of nature a meere naturall man, and a reprobate may be subiect to some temptations: for example, he may be tempted of the deuill, and of his owne corrupt flesh, to beleeue that there is no God at all. As Ouid saith of himselfe, Eleg. 3. Sollicitor nullos esse putare deos: I am often tempted to thinke there is no God.

V.

The reprobate for all this knowledge, in his heart may be an Atheist, as Dauid saith: [c] The foole hath said in his heart there is no God. And a man may now a daies find houses and townes full of such fooles: Nay this glimmering light of nature, except it be preserued with good bringing vp, with diligent instruction, and with good companie, it will be so darkened, that a man shall know very little, and lead a life like a very beast: as experience telleth, and Dauid knew very well: who saith, [d] Man is in honour, and vnderstandeth not; he is like to beasts that perish.

VI.

Wherefore, this knowledge which the reprobate receiueth from nature, & from the creatures, albeit it is not sufficient to make him doe that which shal please God: yet before Gods iudgement seat, [e] it cutteth off al excuse, which he might alleadge, why he should not be condemned.

[e] Act. 14. 17. Rom. 1. 21

VII.

Beside this naturall knowledge, the reprobate may be made partaker of [f] the preaching of the word, and be illuminated by the holy ghost, and so may come to the knowledge of the reueiled will of God in his word.

[f] Heb. 6. 4. 2. Pet. 2. 21

VIII.

Thus when they heare the preaching of the word, God profereth saluation to them, and calleth them, [g] yet this calling is not so effectuall in them as it is in the elect children of God. For the reprobate when he is called, he liketh himselfe in his owne blindnes, and therefore neither will he; & if he would, yet could he not answer, and be obedient to the calling of God. The elect beeing called, with speed he answereth and commeth to the Lord, and his heart beeing ready, giueth a strong and loud ecche to the voice of the Lord. This ecche we see in Dauids heart: [h] When (saith hee) thou saidst, Seeke ye my face: mine heart answered vnto thee: O Lord, I will seeke thy face. And God himselfe speaketh the same of his children. Zach. 13. 9. They shall call on my name, and I will heare them: I will say, it is my people (newe marke the ecche) and they shall say the Lord is my God.

IX.

After that he hath an vnderstanding of Gods word, [i] he may acknowledge the truth of it, and confesse it: and if neede require, be a defender of it: As Iudas was, and Iulian

the

X.

The reprobate may haue a feeling of his sinnes, and so acknowledge them: and k 1. Sam. 29.21. the punishment due vnto them: [k] as Saul did; who said, I haue sinned: come againe my sonne Dauid: for I will do thee no harme, because my soule was precious in thine eyes this day: Behold I haue done foolishly, and haue
l Gen. 4.13 erred exceedingly. Thus did Caine, [l] when he said; My punishment is greater then I can
m Euseb. l. 8. ca. 17. 18 beare. [m] Galerius Maximinus, a vile persecutor of Christians, had his bowels rotting within him: so that an infinit number of wormes continually crawled forth of his bodie, & such a poysoning stinke came from him, that no man could abide him: being thus plagued with the hand of God, he began to perceiue his wickednes in persecuting Christians, and he confessed his sinnes to the true God: and assembling the chiefe rulers about him he commanded that all within his dominions should cease to trouble Christians, and in all haste he made a lawe for the peace and libertie, and the publike meetings of Christians.

XI.

The reprobate hath oftentimes feare & terrour of conscience: but this is only, because he considereth the wrath and vengeance of God, which is most terrible. When Paul preached before Fœlix: and by the maiestie of Gods spirit, did (as it were) thunder from heauen against his sinnes, doubtlesse he made his heart to ake, n Socrat. l. 3. c. 11. and euery ioynt of him to tremble. [n] Ecebolius a Philosopher of Constantinople, in the dayes of Constantius, professed Christian religion, and went beyond all other in zeale for the same religion: yet afterward vnder Iulian, he fell from that religion vnto Gentilisme. But after Iulians death making meanes to be receiued into the Church againe, ouerwhelmed with the horror of his owne conscience for his wicked reuolting, he cast himselfe downe on the ground before the dores of the church crying aloud, Calcate me salem insipidum: Trample on me vnsauerie Salt. And the deuill beleeueth the worde of God and at his owne damnation he trembleth. These seruile feares, though they harden the heart of the reprobate, as heate doth yron, after it hath bin in the furnace: yet these feares
s Act. 2. 37 Rom. 8. 15 in the children of God [o] are very good preparations, to make them fitte to receiue grace: like as we see the needle which soweth not the cloth, yet it maketh a passage and entrance for the thread, which seweth for this vse, to sowe cloath together.

XII.

A reprobate before he commit a sinne, is often vexed within himselfe, and feareth to commit it: not because he hateth and disliketh the sin for it selfe, but because he cannot abide the punishment due vnto the sinne. [p] When the daughter of Herodias daunced before Herod, and pleased him: p Mark. 6. 20. 26.
that he might doe her a pleasure, he bad her aske what she would: she asked Iohn Baptists head in a platter: Herod did grant her request, but yet he had a grudging in heart, and he was sore grieued at it. [q] In q Math. 27 19. 24.
like maner, Pilate was very much troubled inwardly before he condemned our Sauiour Christ.

XIII.

After he hath committed a sin, he [r] sorroweth and repenteth: yet this repentance r Mat. 27. 3 Heb. 12. 17 hath two wants in it. First, he doth not detest his sinne, and his former conuersation when he repenteth: he doth bewaile the losse of many things which he once enioyed: he crieth out through very anguish & through the perplexities which God in his iudgement layeth on him: yet for his life he is not able to leaue his filthy sinne: and if he might be deliuered, he would sinne as before. [t] Esau wept before his father with t Gen. 27. 38. and 27 41. & 28. 9 great yelling and crying, but after he was gone from his fathers presence he hated his brother, who had got his blessing, and in contempt of his father, chose him a wife against his liking. Pharao, as oft as the Lord laid any calamitie on him, [t] he euermore desired to be deliuered from it, yet t Exod. 8. 8 afterward alwayes he returned to his old byas againe. Fœlix trembled before Paul: for all that, he could not leaue his couetousnes, but euē then he sought for a bribe. Secondly, the reprobate, when he repenteth, he cannot come vnto God, and seeke vnto him: he hath no power, no not so much as once to desire to giue one litle sob for the remission of his sinnes: if he would giue all the world he cannot so much as giue one rap at Gods mercie gate, that he Math. 7. 7. may open to him. He is very like a man vpon a racke, who cryeth and roareth out for very paine, yet cannot desire his tormentor to ease him of his paine. [u] Caine u Gen. 3. 4. 1. Sa. 31. 4.
would haue bin void of his trembling, but he could not aske pardon of his sinne from Math. 27 5 his heart: neither could Saul, or Iudas, or now can the deuill.

XIV.

The

The reprobate may humble himselfe for some sinnes which he hath committed, and may declare this by fasting and teares. When Eliah reproued Ahab for his Idolatrie, and threatned him from the Lord, it is said, that when he had heard these words, [x] he rent his cloaths, and put sackcloath vpon him, and fasted, and went softly in token of mourning: and this humiliation stayed Gods wrath for a time.

x 1 Reg. 21. 27. 29.

XV.

He may confesse his sinnes, euen his particular sinnes before men: but this is only then, when his soule is tormented for them, and can find no ease. For then he sticketh not to vtter his secret filthines to the hearing of all men, and to the open shaming of himselfe. When God smote all that was in the fieldes of Egypt with haile, then Pharao sent, and called for Moses and Aaron, and said vnto them, [y] I haue now sinned, the Lord is righteous, but I and my people are wicked: pray ye vnto the Lord (for it is enough) that there be no more mightie thunders, &c. So Iudas, when he saw that Christ was condemned, and felt an hell in his conscience, brake out, and said, I haue sinned in betraying the innocent blood. And the experience of these daies giueth fearefull examples for the proofe of this point.

y Exod. 9. 27. Num. 22. 44.

XVI.

He hath often a desire to bee like the children of God in happinesse, and to be saued: not because he hath any loue to the kingdome of God, but because he is afraid of hell. As Balaam ouerpressed with the feare of Gods iudgement, praied thus: [z] Oh that my soule might die the death of the righteous, and that my last end might be like his!

z Num. 23. 10.

XVII.

The wicked in their distresse may pray to God, and God may heare their praiers, and grant them their request, [a] as the Israelites wickedly murmuring against God, desired flesh in the wildernes: God heard their crie, and rained Quailes among them. But God heareth the wicked after one sort, and them that feare him after another: them that feare him, he granteth there requests of loue and mercie: to the other of indignation and anger. [b] As may appeare in the Israelites, who when they were in eating of their Quailes, and the meate was within their teeth, GOD in his anger stroke them with a sore plague. And (which is more strange then this) God hath performed that which he hath promised to the vnbeleeuers, though they refused to aske it at his hands, euen then whē they were particularly commanded: [c] of this thing we haue a worthy example in King Achas, who vtterly refused to haue a signe of his deliuerance, and the confusion of his enemies, when GOD offered it to him, and yet the Lord deliuered him.

b Num. 11 33. Psal. 78. 31
c Esa. 7. 11.

XVIII.

The reprobate may goe further in the profession of religion, and may seeme for a time to be planted in the Church: for he doth beleeue the promises of God made in Christ Iesus, yet so that he cannot apply them to himselfe. In this thing the elect & the reprobate differ. The reprobate [d] generally in a confused manner beleeueth that Christ is a Sauiour of some men: and he neither can nor desireth to come to the particular applying of Christ. The elect beleeueth that Christ is a Sauiour of him particularly. The reprobates faith may perish is this life, but the faith of the elect cannot. The reprobate may be perswaded of the mercie & goodnes of God towards him for the present time in the which he feeleth it: the elect is not onely perswaded of the mercies he presently enioyeth, but also he is perswaded of his eternal election before the foundation of the world, and of his euerlasting life, which yet he doth not enioy, Yea [e] if God would confound him, & he saw no thing but present death, and hell fire: yet such is his nature, that stil he would beleeue; for faith and hope are not grounded vpon sense and feeling; but are the euidence of those things which were neuer yet seene or felt. The life of the faithfull is hid in Christ, as the sap in the root of the tree: their life is not in sense and feeling, but in hoping and beleeuing: which oftentimes are contrarie to mans sense and feeling.

XIX.

After that he hath receiued a generall, and a temporarie faith in Gods heauenly word, and his most mercifull promises of euerlasting life contained therein, by the power of the spirit of God, [f] he cometh to haue a tast in his heart of the sweetnes of Gods mercies, and a reioycing in consideration of the election, adoption, iustification, and sanctification, of Gods children. But what is this tast? I expresse it thus, after the meaning of Gods word. Suppose a banquet prepared, in which are many sweet, f Heb. 6. 4. Mat. 13. 20.

and pleasant, and daintie meates. At this banquet, such as are the bidden guestes, they must be set downe, they see the meats, they taste them, they chawe them in their mouthes, they digest them, they are nourished, fed, and strengthened by them: they which are not bidden to this feast, may see the meates, handle them, and taste of them to feele howe good they are: but they must not eate and feede of them. The first resemble the elect, which truely eate, digest, and are nourished by Christ vnto euerlasting life, because they haue great aboundance of the vitall heate of Gods holy spirit in them, and do feele sensibly his grace and vertue in them, to strengthen them & guide them. The second sort truely resemble the repobates; which neuer in trueth enioy Christ, or any of his benefits apperteining to saluation: but onely see them, & haue in their hearts a vanishing, but no certen or sound feeling of them; so that they may be changed and strengthened & guided thereby. To vse another similitude. The reprobates haue no more feeling, and enioying of Christ and his benefits, then those men haue of the sunne, which see only a glimmering of his light at the dawning of the day, before it riseth. [g] Contrariwise, the elect, they haue the day-starre, euen the Sunne of righteousnesse, Iesus Christ, rising in their hearts; the day spring from an high doeth visit them, the glorie of God doth rise vpon them; they haue their eies annointed with the oyntment of the spirit, which is the true eie-salue, and doe plainely behold the sonne of righteousnesse; they enioy his presence, they effectually feele his comfortable heate to quicken and reuiue them.

g 1. Pet. 1. 14. 1. Ioh. 2. 8. Luk. 1. 27. Esa. 60. 1. 2

XX.

From this sense and taste of Gods grace proceed many fruits: as first, generally, he may doe outwardly all things which true Christians doe, and he may lead such a life here in this world, that although he cannot attaine to saluation, yet his paines in hell shall be lesse: which appeareth in that our Sauiour Christ saith, [h] it shall be easier for Tyrus and Sydon, for Sodome and Gomorrha, then for Capernaum, and other cities vnto which he came, in the day of iudgment, h Mat. 11. 20. 21. 22. 23.

XXI.

Also the reprobate may haue a loue of God: but this loue can be no sincere loue, for it is onely because God bestoweth benefits and prosperitie vpon him, as appeareth in Saul, [i] who loued God for his aduancement to the kingdome: and here is a difference betweene the elect and reprobate: the elect loue God, as children their fathers: but reprobates, as hirelings their masters, whome they affect not so much for themselues, as for their wages.

i 1. Sam. 10. 9.

XXII.

Also a reprobate hath often a reioycing in doing those things which appertaine to the seruice of God, as preaching and prayer. [k] Herod heard Iohn Baptist preach gladly: [l] and the second kind of naughtie ground receiueth the word preached with ioy.

k Mar. 6. 20. l Matth. 13. 20.

XXIII.

A Reprobate often desireth the. whom he thinketh to be the children of God, to pray for him. [m] As Pharao desired Aaron and Moses to pray for him. [n] So did Simō Magus desire Peter to pray that none of the things which he had spoken against him, should come to passe. But yet they cannot pray themselues, [o] because they want the spirit of Christ.

m Exod. 9. 27. n Act. 8. 24 o Rom. 8. 16. 26.

XXIV.

He may shewe liking to Gods Ministers, he may reuerence them, and feare to displease them. [p] Thus did Simon Magus, who at Philips preaching beleeued, wondred at his miracles, and kept company with him. And [q] Herod is said to feare Iohn, knowing that he was a iust man and holy: also he gaue reuerence to him. Antonius the Emperour, called Pius, though he was no Christian, [r] yet in a generall parliament held at Ephesus, he made an acte in the behalfe of Christians: that if any man should trouble or accuse a Christian, for beeing a Christian; the party accused should goe free though he were found to be a Christian, and the accuser should be punished. [s] And Plinius secundus, gouernour of Spaine vnder Traianus the Emperour, when he saw an innumerable companie of Christians to be executed; beeing mooued with compassion, he wrote in their behalfe beeing no Christian, vnto Traianus to spare them that could be charged with no crime: and his letter is yet extant.

p Act. 8. 13 q Mar. 6. 20 r Eus. lib. 4. s Plin. l. 10 Epist. 39.

XXV.

He may be zealous in the religion which he professeth, and fall from that profession, as the Galatians did, [t] who, after they had receiued Paul as an angel, & would haue plucked out their eies to haue done him good: yet they fell from the doctrine which he had taught them to iustification by the workes of the law, which flat ouerthroweth iustification by faith alone. The u 2.King. 10,16. u same appeareth in Iehu, who was very zealous for Gods cause, and for the defacing of idolatrie, and thereupon God blessed him in his children: yet neuertheless he was a wicked man x and followed the vile sinnes of Ieroboam his father. x 2.& 30.31.

t Gal. 4. 16

y 2.Pet.2. 20. Hos.6.4. 1.Sam.9. 21. y After that he hath sinned, he doeth in many things in which he is faultie, amend & reforme his life, and doeth professe great holinesse outwardly. Herod, he did many things which Iohn Baptist in preaching mooued him vnto: Saul, when he was to be chosen king, professed great humilitie. They may represse their vices & corruptions, & so moderate themselues that they breake not out z as did Haman; of whome it is written: that when he was full of indignation against Mordecai, yet he refrained himselfe. And herein the elect and the reprobate differ: for a the Elect are somewhat reformed in euery one of their sinnes. But the Reprobate, though he be amended in many faults: yet some one fault or other, he cannot abide to haue it reformed; and by that in a vile maner the deuil wholly possesseth him. As Herod, who did many things, yet would not leaue his brothers wife. And no doubt, in Iudas most of his sinnes in appearance were mortified: and yet by couetousnesse the deuill possessed him, and held him fast chained in bondage vnder him. For one sinne is sufficient to him, that by it he may bring a man to damnation. Secondly, in infidels liuing honestly, the spirit of God bridleth the force of sin, and the corrupt nature that it breake not out, as it doth in many other. But in Christians that are indeede godly, the same spirit not onely represseth the corruption of nature outwardly; but also mortifieth it within at the roote, & regenerateth the whole man into a newe creature. Thus thē neither the faithfull nor infidels doe effect any thing that is laudable but by the spirit of God: the faithfull by the spirit of regeneration infidels by the same spirit, onely suppressing the outward acte of sinne. z Hest.5.9. 10. a 1.Thess. 5.23.

XXVII.

Beside this, he may haue the gift of working miracles, ot casting forth deuils, of healing, and such like: b and this power of doing strange miracles, shal be vsed as an excuse of some of the reprobates in the day of iudgment. b Mat 7.22 Mar.9.38.

XXVIII.

Oftentimes, vnto him is giuen the gifts of the holy Ghost, to discharge the most waighty calling that can be in any commō wealth. And this is meant, when God is said, c to giue Saul another heart; that is, such vertues as are meete for a king. c 1.Sam.10 9.

XXIX.

A reprobate may haue the worde of God much in his mouth, and also may be a preacher of the word: d for so prophecying in Christs name, shalbe vsed as an excuse of reprobates: and we knowe that among the twelue Apostles, e Iudas was a reprobate. And this may be well preceiued in the resemblance of tasting, which the Authour to the Hebrews vseth. We knowe, that cookes commonly which are occupied in preparing of bankets, haue as much feeling and seeing of the meate, as any other: and yet there is none that eateth lesse of it then they: for their stomackes are cloyed with the smell and taste of it: so, in like manner it may come to passe, that the minister which dresseth and prouideth the spirituall food, may eate the least of it himselfe; and so, labouring to saue others, hee may be a reprobate. And it is thought, that some of them which built the Arke, were not saued in the Arke, but perished in the floud. d Mat.7.22 e Act.1.16 17. Colos.4. 2.Tim.4. 10.

XXX

When as a reprobate professeth thus much of the Gospel, though indeede he be a goate, yet he is taken for one of Gods sheepe: he is kept in the same pastures, and is folded in the same fold with them. f He is counted a Christian of the children of God, and so he taketh himselfe to be; no doubt becaus through the dulnesse of his heart, he cannot trie and examine himselfe, and therefore truely cannot discerne of his estate, whether he be in Christ or not: and it may be thought that Satan is ready with some false perswasion to deceiue him. For this is his propertie, that vpon whom God threatneth death, there Satan is bold to pronounce life and saluation: as on the contrarie, to those, to whome God pronounceth loue and mercie, to those (I say) he threatneth displeasure and damnation: such malice hath he against Gods childrē. f 1.Ioh.3. 23.24.25.

XXXI.

And hereby it commeth to passe, that an g hypocrite may be in the visible church, and obey it in the word and discipline, and so be taken for a true member of Christ: when as a man indeede regenerate may be excommunicate, and end his life before he be receiued againe: for this is the ende of g The elect may be of the Catholike Church & not of the visible, and the reprobate may be of the visible and not of the Catholike.

[a] 1.Cor.5.5. of excommunication [a] that the flesh, that is, the part vnregenerate, may be destroyed: and the spirit, that is, the part regenerate, may be kept alive in the day of the Lord. Now the man in whome is spirit and flesh, [b] Rom 8.9.11. must needes be the child of God, because this argueth that he hath the sanctifying spirit of Christ. Againe, Paul when hee biddeth the Corinthians to comfort the [c] 2 Cor 2 7.11. incestious man, [c] least through the sleight of Sathan he should bee ouerwhelmed of ouer much heauines, giueth men to vnderstand, that he might haue ended his life in great extremitie of sorrowe, before he had bene visibly receiued into the Church againe.

XXXII.

Though God will neuer adopt any reprobate: yet by the adoption of the elect they may receiue profit. For they finde the blessing of God to be on them by reason that they dwel togither, and haue societie [d] Gen. 7.1 and 19 21 and 18 32 and 39.3. with the children of [d] God. For Noahs sake euery one in his family is saued in the flood. For Lots cause the men of Zoar are preserued from the fire. And God would haue spared Sodom, if there had bene but ten good men in it. For Rahabs cause, her family & kindred are at liberty in Iericho. [e] Sam.7.13 When Ioseph was in Putiphars house, all things prospered well. [e] For Samuels cause the Israelites were deliuered from the Philistimes: [f] Act.27 24. [f] And for Pauls cause they which were with him in the ship were preserued. And againe, a reprobate by meanes of the faith of either of his parents may be within Gods couenant, and so be made partaker of Baptisme, one of the seales of the couenant. For so God made his couenant with [g] Gen.17.7.10. Abraham, [g] that he would bee not onely his God, but also the God of his seede after him: [h] Gal.3.8 which Paul expoundeth not of a few, but of all nations. Also he saith manifestly that those children, either of whose [i] 1.Cor.7.14. parents are beleeuers, [i] are holy which holinesse is not inherent in their persons, but [k] Ro.11.16. onely outward: and it is a spirituall prerogatiue graunted them of God, in that hee vouchsafed them to be in his couenant: whereby they are distinguished from the wicked and prophane men of the world.

XXXIII.

Besides this, reprobates haue some prerogatiues of God: [k] as that he is patient towards them: that before he will destroy them, he vseth many meanes to win them, that they commonly spend all the daies of their liues in prosperity: insomuch, that it is saide of them in the Psalme: [l] that they goe in continuall prosperity vnto their death, and pine not away as the children of God doe. [l] Psa.73.12

[m] But after a certain time God in his iust iudgement hardneth their hearts, blindeth the eies of their mindes, he maketh their heads giddy with a spirituall drunkennes, and by the strength of their inward lust, as also by the effectual operation of Satan, they fall to open infidelity and contempt of Gods word, and so run headlong to their owne damnation, and perish finally. And in this they are like to Haukes, which so long as they liue are carried on the hands of noblemen: but when they are dead, they are cast on the Dunghill. [n] Iulian the Apostata was first a man learned and eloquent, and professed the Religion of Christ, but afterward he fell, and wrote a booke against the Religion of Christ, answered by Cyril: and on a time, in a battel against the Persians, was thrust into the bowels with a Dart, no man then knewe how, which Dart he pulled out with his owne hand, and presently blood flowed, which as it gushed out, hee tooke it in his hand, and flung it into the ayre, saying, Vicisti Galilæe, vicisti. O thou Galilean (meaning Christ) thou art the conquerour: thou art the conquerour: thus he ended his daies in blaspheming Christ whom he had professed. The reason of this apostacie is euident. [o] Seede, that is not deeply rooted in the earth, at the beginning of the yeare, springeth vp; it is greene, and bringeth forth leaues and flowers, and (it may be) some kind of fruit too: when the heat of sommer commeth, it parcheth the earth, & the corne wanting deepe rooting and therefore wanting moysture, withereth away. Gods word is like seed; which that it may bring forth fruite vnto euerlasting life, it must be first receiued of the ground: secondly, it must bee rooted: the receiuing of it, is when the mind vnderstandeth it, and remembreth it: the rooting of it, is when being beleeued, it pierceth to the heart, and taketh hold of the affections. This rooting is of two sorts: the first is, when the word rooteth, but not deepe ynough, as when the word is receiued into the minde, and into the heart, by the ioy of the heart, but not with the residue of the affection. The second, is a deepe and liuely rooting of the word, when the word is receiued into the mind and into the heart by the will and all the affections of the heart. The first kind of rooting of the word, befalleth to a reprobate, who vnderstandeth and reioyceth in the promise of saluation, yet he doth not put any confidence in them: he can not rest in them, he doth not reioyce that his name is written in the booke of life, hee doth not work out his saluation with feare and trembling. In a word, his heart is in part softned to reioyce at the preaching of the word of God: [p] yet his heart is not opened as Lydias was; not enlarged (as Dauid saith) to imbrace the trueth: but the Elect, he receiueth the word, not only into his mind, least it should be onely an imagination, but also it is deepely rooted in his heart. For, p Act.15. fal.1 19. Psal.1.19. 32.

1. In sure confidence he resteth himselfe on Gods promises. Rom.8.38. Heb. 10.22.

2. He hopeth and longeth to see the accomplishment of it. 1.Thess.1.10.

3. He heartily loueth God, for making such a promise to him in Christ. 1. Ioh.4.10.

4. Hee reioyceth in it and therefore doth meditate on it continually, Luk.10. 20.Rom.5.2.

5. He hateth all doctrines which are against it.

6. He is grieued when he doth any thing that may hinder the accomplisnmēt of it.Math.26.75.

Phil.2.12 7. He vseth the meanes to come to saluation but with feare and trembling.

8. He burneth with zeale of the spirit, &c. And so the rest of the affections are exercised about the promises of God in Christ, and by this meanes, is the deepe rooting of the word in the heart.

Thus it commeth to passe, that the Reprobate falleth away from faith in the day of triall and temptation, but the Elect cannot be changed.

XXXIIII.

Thus it appeareth how far a reprobate may proceede in religion; the consideration of this point I direct vnto two sorts of men. Carnal gospellers, & Papists. Carnall gospellers are such among vs, as know the word but obey it not; or such, as bearing a profession neither know it, nor obey it. And the best of these come short of reprobates in two points. 1. In faith, they come short of the deuill most of them. The deuill beleeueth and trembleth: but they contrariwise liuing in their sinnes, beleeue and hope. Howe comes this to passe? The deuill knoweth the Gospell, and the points of it: & withall he beleeueth the terrible threatnings of the law, and therefore trembleth. Drowsye Protestants beleeue the Gospell as the deuill doth; though he conceiues the points of it better then they do: as for the law and the threatnings thereof, they doe not beleeue them: and that makes them euen whē they liue in their sinnes to hope and presume of mercie. Therefore the deuill beleeues more of Gods word then they doe. Secondly they come short of wicked men in outward obedience. The young man not yet conuerted to Christ, when he was bidden to keepe the commaundements of the second Table, answered, that he had kept them from his youth: and therefore our Sauiour Christ looked vpon him, and loued him: although this externall obedience was not sufficient: for Christ telleth him that one thing is wanting vnto him. And in another place he saith, except your righteousnesse exceed the righteousnes of the Scribes and Pharisies, you cannot enter into the kingdome of heauen. Nowe the careleslle Gospeller is farre from performing this: in so much that commonly hee makes an open practise of synne one way or other.

Mark.10, 20.21.

The causes of their carelesnes are first a perswasion that a man may repent whē he will: because the Scripture saith, At what time soeuer a sinner doth repent him of his sinnes from the bottome of his heart, God will put all their wickednesse out of his remembrance. But indeede late repentance is seldome true repentance; & it may be iustly feared, least that repentance, which men when they are dying frame to themselues, die also with them. Secondly, they flatter themselues, imagining that the best man that is, hath seuen falls euerie day into grosse sinnes: whereas the place which they abuse out of the Prouerbs, The righteous man falleth seuen times in a day and riseth againe: is rather to be vnderstood of falls into affliction, then falls into actuall sinns. Thirdly they deceiue thēselues, most falsly thinking, smal sinnes, or hidden synnes, to be no synnes: and grosseste synnes in which they liue and lie most dangerously, to bee but synnes of infirmity.

XXXV.

By this which hath beene said, the professours of Christian religion are admonished of two things. First [q] that they vse most painfull diligence in working their saluation, in attaining to faith, in dying to synne, in liuing to newnesse of life: and that their hearts be neuer at rest, till such such time as they goe beyond all reprobates in the profession of Christ Iesus. Seest thou how farre a reprobate may goe? presse on to the straight gate with maine and might, with all violence lay hold on the kingdome of heauen. Shall Herod feare and reuerence Iohn Baptist, and heare him gladly? and wilt thou neglect the Ministers, and the preaching of the word? shall Pharao confesse his sinne, nay shall Satan beleeue and tremble? And wilt not thou bewaile and lament thy sinnes, and thy wicked conuersation? It behoooueth thee to feare & take heede, least wicked men, & the deuil himself rise in iudgement and condemne thee. For if thou shalt come short of the duties of a reprobate, & doe not goe beyond him in the profession of the Gospel, sure it is, thou must looke for the reward of a reprobate.

The second thing is, that the professour of the Gospell, [r] diligently trie and examine himselfe, whether he is in the state of damnation, or in the state of grace: whether he yet beare the yoke of Satan, or is the adopted child of God. Thou wilt say, this neede not, thou professest the Gospel, and art taken for a Christian: yet marke & consider, that this often befalleth reprobates to be esteemed Christians: and they are often so like them, that none [t] but Christ can discerne the sheepe from the Goates, true Christians from apparant Christians. Wherefore it behooueth all men that shewe themselues to be Christians, to lay aside all pride, and selfeloue, and with singlenesse of heart to put themselues into the ballance of Gods word, and to make iust triall, whether in them, repentance, faith, mortification, sanctification, &c. giue weight answerable to their outward profession: which if they do, let them praise God: if not, let them with all speed vse the meanes that they may be borne anew to the Lord, and may bee inwardly guided by his holy spirit, to giue obedience to his wil, least in the day of Gods triall, they start aside from him like a broken bow, & fall again to their first vncleannes.

XXXVI.

To come to the second sort of men and to conclude; let the most zealous papish that is, trie himselfe and his whole estate with a single heart as in the presence of Gods maiestie, & he shal find that by his whole religion & profession he doth come short of a reprobate, or at the least not goe beyond him in these points before named. The Lord open their eyes that they may see it. Amen.

Election.

[a] Eph 1. 4. 5, 6, 7.

THe [a] Elect are they whome God of the good pleasure of his will hath decreed in himselfe to choose to eternall life, for the praise of the glorie of his grace. For this cause the Elect only are [b] Apoc. 20 12. said to haue their names written in [b] the Booke of life.

Vocation.

II.

Whome God electeth, them he calleth in the time appointed for the same purpose. This calling of the Elect is nothing

[c] 2. Thes. 2 13. 14. else but a [c] singling and a seuering of them out of this vile world, and the customes

[d] Eph. 2. 19 thereof, to bee [d] citizens of the kingdome of glory after this life. And the time of their calling is tearmed in Scriptures, [e] the day of visitation, the day of saluation, the time of grace.

[e] 2. Cor. 6 1. Luke 19. 42.

III.

[f] Col. 2. 7. Ioh. 15. 19

This [f] seuering and choosing of the elect out of the world, is then performed, when God by his holy spirit indueth the with true sauing faith: a wonderfull gift peculiar to the elect. For the better knowing of it, there is to bee considered: First, what faith is: Secondly, howe God doth worke it in the hearts of the elect: Thirdly, what degrees there be of faith: Fourthly, what are the fruites and benefits of faith.

IV.

Faith is a wonderfull grace of God, by which the elect doe apprehend and apply Christ and all his benefits vnto themselues particularly.

VVhat faith is.

Here first it is to be considered, that the very nature of faith standeth in a certaine power, of apprehending and applying Christ. This is declared by Paul when he saith, [g] Ye are buried with him through baptisme, by whome yee are also risen againe with him by the faith of the power of God, who raised him from the dead. Where it appeareth that faith is made a meanes to communicate Chriſt himſelfe, his death and buriall, and ſo all other benefits to the beleeuer.

k Ioh.1.12 Rom.5.17 Againe to beleeue in Chriſt, and to [k] receiue or to lay hold on Chriſt, are put one for another by S. Iohn: which declareth that there is a ſpeciall applying of Chriſt; euen as we ſee, when a man hath any thing giuen him, he reacheth out his hand and pulleth it to himſelfe, and ſo makes it his owne. Moreouer, faith is called the l Gal.3.27 [l] putting on of Chriſt: which cannot bee vnleſſe Chriſts righteouſneſſe be ſpecially applied to the heart, as the garment to the backe, when it is put on. Laſtly, this may appeare, in that faith is called

m Ioh.6.36. [m] the eating and drinking of Chriſt: for there is no eating of meate that nouriſheth, but firſt it muſt bee taſted and chewed in the mouth: then it muſt bee conuaied into the ſtomacke and there digeſted: laſtly, it muſt be applyed to the parts of the bodie that are to be nouriſhed. And Paul praieth for the Epheſians: that Chriſt n Eph.3.17. [n] may dwell in their hearts by faith: which plainely importeth, this apprehending and applying of Chriſt.

I adde further, that faith is a wonderfull grace of God, which may appeare: firſt, in o Col.2.12. that Paul calleth it [o] the faith of Gods power, becauſe the power of God is eſpecially ſeene in the begetting of faith. Secondly, experience ſheweth it to bee a wonderfull gift of God: when a man neither ſeeth, nor feeleth his ſinnes then to ſay he beleeueth in Gods mercie, it is an eaſie matter; but when a man ſhall feele his heart preſſed downe with the weight of his ſinnes, and the anger of God for them; then to apply Gods free mercie to his owne ſoule, it is a moſt hard matter: for thē it is the property of the curſed nature of mā to blaſpheme God and to diſpaire of mercie. Iudas, who (no doubt) often preached mercie and redemption by Chriſt in the ſecuritie of his heart, when Gods hand was vpon him, & the Lord made him ſee the vileneſſe of his treacherie; he could not comfort himſelfe in Chriſt, if one would haue giuen him ten thouſand worlds, but in an helliſh horror of conſcience hanged himſelfe deſperatly: which ſheweth what a wonderfull hard thing it is at the ſame inſtant when a man is touched for his ſinnes, then to apply Gods mercie to himſelfe. Yet a true Chriſtian by the power of faith can doe this, as p Pſal.77.2.3. it may appeare in Dauid, [p] In the day of my trouble (ſaith he) I ſought the Lord: my ſore ranne and ceaſed not in the night: my ſoule refuſed comfort: I did thinke vpon God and was troubled: I prayed & my ſpirit was full of anguiſh: & he addeth the word Selah, a note (very likely) of ſome wonderfull thing.

q Pſal.103.1. [q] Againe, he being almoſt in the gulfes of hell, euen then cried to the Lord for helpe.

r Iob.13.15. Iob ſaith, [r] If God ſhould deſtroy him, yet hee would for all that beleeue in him ſtill. Vndoubtedly, ſtrange is the band of faith knitting Chriſt and his members togither, which the anguiſh of ſpirit cannot, and the ſtrokes of Gods hand doe not vnlooſe.

V.

This apprehending of Chriſt is not done by any corporall touching of him, but ſpiritually by aſſurance, which is, when the elect are perſwaded in their hearts by the holy Ghoſt, of the forgiueneſſe of their owne ſinnes, and of Gods infinite mercie towards them in Ieſus Chriſt. According to that of s 1 Cor.2.12. [s] Paul. Now we haue receiued, not the ſpirit of the world, but the ſpirit which is of God, that we might know the things which are giuen vs of God. The things which the ſpirit of God maketh knowne to the faithfull particularly, are their iuſtification, adoption, ſanctification, eternall life: and thus when any are perſwaded of theſe things concerning themſelues, they doe in their hearts diſtinctly apply and appropriate Chriſt & his benefits to themſelues.

VI.

How God worketh in the heart. The manner that God vſeth in the begetting of faith is this. Firſt, hee prepareth the heart that it may bee capable of faith. Secondly, he cauſeth faith by little and little to ſpring & to breed in the heart. The preparation of the heart is by humbling and ſoftning of it: vnto the doing of this there are foure things requiſite. The firſt of them is the knowledge of the worde of God, both of the lawe and the Goſpell, without the which there can bee no faith; according to that ſaying of Eſaiah:

Knowledge. t Eſa.53.11. [t] By his knowledge ſhall my righteous ſeruant iuſtifie many. And that of Iohn:

u Ioh.17. [u] This is eternal life that they know thee to be the onely very God, and whom thou haſt ſent Ieſus Chriſt. The x Iob.33.23. Rom.10.14. [x] onely ordinarie meanes to attaine faith by, is the word preached: which muſt bee heard, remembred, practiſed, and continually hid in the heart. The leaſt meaſure of knowledge without which a man cannot haue faith, is the knowledge of Elements, or the fundamentall doctrines of a Chriſtian Religion. A fundamentall doctrine is that, which being obſtinately denied, all religion religion, and all obtaining of ſaluation is ouerthrowne. This knowledge hath a generall faith going with it, which is an aſſēt of the heart to the knowne truth of Gods word. This faith when it is growne vp to ſome great meaſure, it is called πληροφορίαν συνέσεως, the [x] full aſſurance of vnderſtanding, and it is to be ſeene in the Martyrs who maintained Gods truth againſt the perſecutions of the falſe church, vnto death.

x Col. 2 2. Rom. 14. 14

VII.

Although both Elect and Reprobate may be enlightned to know the word of God: yet the Elect in this thing goe farre beyond all reprobates: for it is ſpecially ſaid of them, that God is their ſchoolemaſter, that he ſoftneth their ſtony hearts, and maketh them pliable, that he draweth thē, that he openeth their ſenſes, hearts, eares, vnderſtandings: that the holy Ghoſt is their annointment, & their eie-ſalue, to cleare the eies of their minde, to conceiue the myſteries of Gods word. And the difference of illumination in them is threefold.

I. First, the knowledge which the reprobate hath concerning the kingdome of heauen, is onely a generall and confuſed knowledge: but the knowledge of the elect is pure, certaine, ſure, diſtinct, and particular: for [a] it is ioyned with a feeling and inward experience of the thing knowne: though indeed the minde of man is able to conceiue more then any Chriſtian heart can feele: and this is to be ſeene in [b] Paul, who vſeth not onely to deliuer the points of Gods worde in a generall manner, but alſo ſetteth thē down ſpecially in his owne experience. So that the enlightning of the reprobate may be compared to the ſight of the [c] blind man, who ſaw men walking like vnto trees, that is in motion like men, but in forme like trees: and the elect are like the ſame blind man, who afterward ſaw a farre off cleerely.

b Gal. 5. 17 cum Rom. 7. 23. & Ro. 3. cum Rom. 8. 38.

c Mark. 8. 24. 25.

II. Secondly, the knowledge of the wicked [d] puffeth them vp: but the knowledge of the godly humbleth them.

d 1. Cor. 8. 2. & 14. 23

III. Laſtly, the elect, beſides the knowledge of Gods worde, haue [e] a free and franke heart to performe it in their liues & conuerſations, which no reprobate can haue: for their illumination is not ioyned with true and ſincere obedience. By this it is eaſie to diſcerne of the illumination of Anabaptiſts, or Familiſts, and many other, which brag of the ſpirit.

e Pſal. 40. 8 2. Tim. 3. 5 Tit. 1. 16.

VIII.

The ſecond is the ſight of ſinne ariſing of the knowledge of the lawe. To this Ieremie exhorteth the Iewes of his time, ſaying, [f] Know thine iniquitie, for thou haſt rebelled againſt the Lord thy God, &c. The chiefe cauſe of the ſight of ſinne is Chriſt by his holy ſpirit [g] who detecteth the thoughts of many hearts, and iudgeth the world of ſinne. The manner of ſeeing our ſinnes muſt be, to knowe them particularly: for the vileſt wretch in the world can generally and confuſedly ſay, he is a ſinner: but that the ſight of ſinne may be effectuall to ſaluation, it muſt be more ſpeciall and diſtinct euen in particular ſynnes, ſo that a man may ſay with Dauid, [h] My ſinnes haue taken ſuch hold of me that I am not able to looke vp: they are more in number then the haires of mine head: therefore my heart hath failed me. Againe, a man muſt not barely ſee his particular ſinnes, but he muſt alſo ſee the circumſtances of them, as namely the fearfull curſes & iudgements of God, which accompanie euery ſinne: for the conſciences of many tell of their ſynnes in particular, yet they cannot be humbled for them, and leaue them; becauſe they haue not ſeene that ougly taile of the curſe of God, that euery ſynne draweth after it.

h Pſal. 40. 12.

IX.

The meanes to attaine to the ſight of ſinne is, by a diligent examinatiō of a mans own ſelfe. This was the practiſe of the children of Iſrael in affliction: [i] Let vs trie (ſay they) and ſearch our wayes, and turne againe to the Lord. And Dauid giueth the ſame counſell to Sauls Courtiers: [k] Tremble and ſinne not, examine your owne heart on your bed, and be ſtill. This examination muſt be made by the commandements of the Law, but ſpecially by the tenth, which ranſacketh the heart to the very quick: & was the meanes of Pauls conuerſion. For he being a proud phariſie, [l] this commandement ſhewed him ſome ſynnes, which otherwiſe he had not knowne, & it killed him, that is, it humbled him. If ſo be it, that after examination a man cannot find out his ſynnes (as no man ſhall find out all his ſynnes, for [m] the heart of mā is a vaſt gulfe of ſynne, without either bottom or banke, and hath infinit & hidden corruptions in it) thē he muſt in a godly iealouſie, ſuſpect himſelfe of his vnknowne ſynnes: as Dauid did, ſaying, [n] Who can vnderſtand his faultes? cleanſe me from my ſecret faults. And as Paul did, [o] I know nothing by my ſelfe,

3 Sorrow for ſinne.

The third is a ſorrowe for ſinne, which is a paine and pricking in the heart ariſing of the feeling of the diſpleaſure of God, and of the iuſt damnation which follow-r Act.2.37 eth after ſinne. This was in the r Iewes after Peters firſt ſermon: and in Habacuk at the ſ Hab.3.16 hearing of Gods iudgements: ſ *When I heard (ſaith he) my belly trembled: my lippes ſhooke at thy voice: rottennes entred into my bones: and I trembled in my ſelfe, that I might reſt in the day of trouble.* This ſorrow is cal-t Rom.8.15 led the t ſpirit of bondage to feare: becauſe when the ſpirit hath made a man ſee his ſinnes, he ſeeth further the curſe of the law, and ſo he findes himſelfe to be in bondage vnder Sathan, hell, death, and damnation: at which moſt terrible ſight his heart is ſmitten with feare and trembling, through the conſideration of his helliſh and damnable eſtate.

This ſorrow if it continue and increaſe to ſome great meaſure, hath certen ſymp-

XI.

In the feeling of this ſorrow, three things are to be obſerued. The firſt, all men muſt looke, that it be ſeriouſly and ſoundly wrought in their hearts: for looke as men vſe to breake hard ſtones into many ſmall peeces and into duſt; ſo muſt this feeling of Gods anger for ſinne bruiſe the heart of a poore ſinner & bring it to nothing. And that this may be ſo, ſorrow is not to be felt for a brunt, but verie often before the end d Pſal. 88. 15. of a mans life. The godly man d from his youth ſuffereth the terrours of GOD. Iacob wreſtling with the Angel gets the victory

f Exo.12.8 Zac.12.10 after him continually. f The paſchall lamb was neuer eaten without ſowre hearbes, to ſignifie that they which wil bee free from the wrath of God by Ieſus Chriſt, muſt feele continually the ſmart & bitternes of their owne ſinnes. The ſecond, all men muſt take heede, leaſt when they are touched for their ſinnes, they beſnare their owne conſciences: for if the ſorrowe be ſomwhat ouer-ſharpe, they ſhal ſee themſelues euen brought to the gates of hell, and to feele the pangs of death. And whē a man is in this perplexitie, he ſhall find it a moſt hard matter to be freed from it, without the maruailous power & ſtrength of Chriſt Ieſus, who onely is able to helpe him and comfort him: yea many when they are once plunged in this diſtreſſe and anguiſh of ſoule, ſhall neuer eſcape it, as may appeare in Cain, Saul, Achitophel, Iudas, and now of late in Iohn Hoffmeiſter a Monke, and Latomus, who for the ſpace of certaine daies neuer left crying that hee was damned, becauſe that he had wilfully perſecuted the Goſpel of Chriſt, and ſo he ended his life. Therefore moſt worthy is Pauls counſell for the moderating of this
g 2.Cor.2. 6.7. ſorrow: g It is ſufficient (ſaith he) vnto the inceſtuous man that he was rebuked of many, ſo that now contrariwiſe ye ought rather to forgiue him and comfort him, leaſt he ſhould be ſwallowed vp for ouermuch heauines. And further he giueth another reaſon, which followeth, leaſt Satan ſhould circumvent vs:
m Or polocie. for we are ignorant of his m enterpriſes. And indeede common experience ſheweth the ſame, that when any man is moſt weake, then Satan moſt of all beſtirreth himſelfe to worke his confuſion. The third is, that all men which are humbled haue not like meaſure of ſorrow, but ſome more ſome leſſe. Iob felt the hand of God in ex-
h Iob 6.3 ceeding great meaſure, when he cried, h O that my griefe were well wayed, and my miſeries were laid togither in the ballance, for it would be now heauier then the ſand of the ſea: therefore my wordes are now ſwallowed vp, for the arrowes of the Almightie are in me, and the venome thereof doth drinke vp my ſpirit, and the terrours of God fight againſt me. The ſame did Ezechias, when on his death-bed i Eſay 38. 13.14. he ſaid, i He brake all my bones like a Lyon, and like a crane or a ſwallow, ſo did I chatter: I did mourne like a doue, &c. Contrariwiſe the theefe vpon the croſſe, and Lydia in her conuerſion neuer felt any ſuch meaſure of griefe: for it is ſaid of her, that God
k Act.16 14. k opened her heart to be attentiue to that which Paul ſpake, and preſently after ſhe intertained Paul and Silas chearefully in her houſe, which ſhe could not haue done if ſhee had bene preſſed downe with any great meaſure of ſorrow: neither are any to diſlike themſelues. becauſe they are not ſo much humbled as they ſee ſome others: for God in great wiſdome giueth to euery one which are to be ſaued, that which is conconuenient for their eſtate. And it is often ſeene in a feſtered ſore, that the corruption is let out as well with the pricking of a ſmall Pinne, as with the wide lance of a Raſer.

XII.

4. Good deſpaire. The fourth thing in true humiliation, is an holy deſperation: which is, when a man is wholly out of all hope euer to attaine ſalnation by any ſtrength or goodnes of his owne: ſpeaking & thinking more vily of himſelfe then any other can doe, and heartily acknowledging himſelfe to haue deſerued not one onely, but euē ten thouſand damnations in hell fire with the deuil and his angels. This was in Paul, when he [l] 1. Tim. 1. 15. ſaid of himſelfe that he was the [l] chiefe of all ſinners. This was in Daniel, when in the name of the people of Iſrael he praied and
[m] Dan. 7. 9 ſaide, [m] O Lord righteouſnes belongeth vnto thee, and to vs open ſhame, as appeareth this day, &c. The ſame was in the prodigall
[n] Luk. 15. 19. child, who ſaid, [n] father, I haue ſinned againſt heauen and againſt thee, and I am no more worthy to be called thy ſonne. Laſtly, it was in [o] Ezra. 9. 6 Ezra, [o] who ſaid, O my God I am confounded, and am aſhamed to lift vp mine eyes vnto thee, my God: for our iniquities are increaſed ouer our head; and our treſpaſſe is growne vp vnto the heauen.

XIII.

Sorrow for ſinne, melancholie. Many are of opinion that this ſorrow for ſinne is nothing els but a melancholike paſſion: but in truth the thing is farre otherwiſe, as may appeare in the example of Dauid: who by all coniectures was leaſt [p] 1. Sa. 16. 23. troubled [p] with melancholy, and yet neuer any taſted more deepely of the ſorrow & feeling of Gods anger for ſinne then he did, as the booke of Pſalmes declareth. And if any deſire to know the difference, they are to be diſcerned thus. Sorrow for 1 ſinne may be where health, reaſon, ſenſes, memorie, and all are ſound, but melancholike paſſions are where the bodie is vnſound, and the reaſon, ſenſes, memory, dulled and troubled. Secondly, ſorrow for
2 ſinne is not cured by any phyſicke, but onely by the ſprinkling of the blood of Ieſus Chriſt: melancholike paſſions are remooued by Phyſicke, dyet, muſicke, and ſuch like. Thirdly, ſorrow for ſinne ariſeth
3 of the anger of God, that woundeth and pierceth the conſcience: but melancholike paſſions riſe onely of meere imaginations
4 ſtrongly conceiued in the braine. Laſtly, theſe paſſions are long in breeding, and come by little and little: but the ſorrow for ſinne vſually commeth on a ſuddaine as lightening into a houſe. And yet howſoeuer they are differing, it muſt be acknowledged that they may both concurre together: ſo that the ſame man which is troubled with melancholie, may feele alſo the anger of God for ſinne.

XIIII.

Thus it appeareth how God maketh the heart fitte to receiue faith, in the next place it is to be conſidered how the Lord cauſeth faith to ſpring and to breed in the humbled heart. For the effecting of this ſo bleſſed a worke, God worketh foure things in the heart. Firſt, when a man is ſeriouſly humbled vnder the burden of his ſinne, the Lord by his ſpirit makes him lift vp himſelfe to conſider and to ponder moſt diligently the great mercie of God offered vnto him in Chriſt Ieſus. After the conſideration of Gods mercie in Chriſt: he comes in the ſecond place to ſee, feele, and from his heart to acknowledge himſelfe to ſtand in neede of Chriſt, and to ſtand in need of euery drop of his moſt pretious bloud. Thirdly, the Lord ſtirreth vp in his heart a vehement deſire and longing after Chriſt and his merits: this deſire is compared to a [q] thirſt: which is not onely the feeling of the drineſſe of the ſtomacke, but alſo a vehement appetite after drinke, and Dauid fitly expreſſeth it when he ſaith, [b] I ſtretched forth my hands vnto thee: my ſoule deſireth after thee as the thirſtie land. Laſtly, after this deſire he begins to pray, not for any worldly benefit, but onely for the forgiuenes of his ſinnes, crying with the poore Publican, O God be mercifull to me a ſinner. Nowe this praier, is made, not for one day onely, but continually from day to day: not with the lips, but with greater ſighes and groanes of the heart thē that they can be expreſſed with the tongue. Now, after theſe deſires and prayers for Gods mercie, ariſeth in the heart a liuely aſſurance of the forgiuenes of ſynne. For God, who cannot lie, hath made his promiſe, [c] Knocke, it ſhall be opened: and againe, before they call I wil anſwer, and while they ſpeake I will heare. Therefore when an humbled ſynner comes crying and knocking at his mercie gate for the forgiuenes of ſyn, either then or ſhortly after the Lord worketh in his heart a liuely aſſurance thereof. And [d] whereas he thirſted in his heart, beeing ſcorched with the heat of Gods diſpleaſure beating vpon his his conſcience, Chriſt Ieſus giueth him to drinke of the well of the water of life freely: and hauing drunken thereof, he ſhall neuer be more a thirſt, but ſhall haue in him a fountaine of water ſpringing vp into euerlaſting life.

XV.

For the better vnderſtanding of this, that God worketh ſauing faith in the heart of man after this manner; it muſt be obſerued, that a ſinner is compared [e] to a ſicke man oft in the Scriptures. And therefore the curing of a diſeaſe fitly reſembleth the curing of ſinne. A man that hath a diſeaſe or ſore in his bodie before he can be cured of it, he muſt ſee it, feele paine of it, and be in a feare leaſt it bring him into danger of death: after this he ſhall ſee himſelfe to ſtand in need of Phyſicke, and he longeth till he be with the Phyſitian: when he is once come to him, he deſireth him of all loues to helpe him, and to ſhew the beſt skill he can: he will not ſpare for any coſt: then he yeelds himſelfe into the Phyſitians hands, perſwading himſelfe, that by Gods bleſſing he both can and will helpe him: after this he comes to his former health againe. On the ſame manner, euery man is wounded with the deadly wound of ſinne at the very heart: and he that would be ſaued and eſcape damnation, muſt ſee his ſinne, be ſorrowfull for it, and vtterly deſpaire of his owne ſtrength to attaine ſaluation thereby: furthermore, he muſt ſee himſelfe to ſtand in neede of Chriſt, the good Phyſitian of his ſoule, and long after him, and crie vnto him with deepe ſighes and groanes for mercie: after this, Chriſt Ieſus will temper him a plaiſter of his own heart blood; which being applied, he ſhall finde himſelfe reuiued, and ſhall come to a liuely aſſurance of the forgiuenes of all his ſinnes. So it was in Dauid, when he repented of his adulterie and murther. Firſt, God made him ſee his ſinnes: for he ſaith, [f] I know mine iniquities, and my ſinnes are euer before me. Secondly, he felt Gods anger for his ſinnes, [g] Make me (ſaith he) to heare ioy and gladneſſe, that the bones which thou haſt broken may reioyce. Thirdly, he vtterly deſpaired of his owne ſtrength, in that he ſaid, [h] Stabliſh me with thy free ſpirit; ſignifying thereby, vnleſſe the Lord would ſtay him with his glorious power, he ſhould runne headlong to his owne confuſion. Fourthly, he comes to ſee himſelfe ſtand in great neede of Gods fauour: [i] one mercie will not content him: he praieth for the whole innumerable multitude of his mercies to be beſtowed on him, to doe away his iniquities. Fiftly, his deſire and his prayer for the forgiueneſſe of his ſinne, are ſet downe in the whole Pſalme. And in his prayer he gathereth ſome comfort and aſſurance of Gods mercie towards himſelfe, in that he ſaith, The ſacrifices of God are a contrite ſpirit: [k] a contrite, and a broken heart, O God, thou wilt not deſpiſe. Againe, the like appeareth in Dauid, Pſal. 32. 3. When I held my tongue, my bones conſumed in my roring all the day. 4. For thy hand was heauie vpon me day and night: my moiſture was turned into the drought of Sommer. Sela. 5. I confeſſed my ſinnes vnto thee, neither hid I mine iniquities: I ſaid I will confeſſe againſt my ſelfe my wickednesſe vnto the Lord, and thou forgaueſt the iniquity of my ſinne.

To this purpoſe is the example of R. Glouer, Martyr, who beeing ſomewhat troubled at his entrance into priſon, teſtifieth thus of himſelfe. So (ſaith he) I remained without any further conference of any man by the ſpace of eight daies, and till the biſhops comming: in which time I gaue my ſelfe continually to praier & meditation of the mercifull promiſes of God made to all without exception of perſons that call vpō the name of his deare ſonne Ieſus Chriſt. I found in my ſelfe daiely amendment of health of bodie, increaſe of peace of conſcience, and many conſolations from God by the helpe of his ſpirit: and ſometime as it were a taſte and glimmering of the life to come: all for his only ſonne Ieſus Chriſts ſake.

XVI.

Degrees of faith.

There are diuers degrees and meaſures of this vnfained faith. according as there be diuers degrees of Chriſtians: ſome [p] are yet in the wombe, and haue their mother the Church trauelling of them: ſome [q] are newe borne babes feeding on the milke of the word: ſome are perfect men in Chriſt [r] come to the meaſure of the age of the fulneſſe of Chriſt.

XVII.

The leaſt meaſure of faith.

The leaſt meaſure of faith that any Chriſtian can haue, is compared to the [s] graine of muſtard ſeed, the leaſt of all ſeedes and to flaxe [t] that hath fire in it, but ſo weak that it can neither giue heat nor light but only maketh a ſmoke, and is called by the name of a [u] little faith: and it may bee thus deſcribed. When a man of an humble heart doth not yet feele the aſſurance of the forgiuenes of his owne ſinnes, and yet he is perſwaded that they are pardonable

XVIII.

A litle faith may more plainly be known by considering of these foure points: first, that it is onely in his heart, who is humbled for his sinne: [x] For the Lord dwelleth with him that is of a contrite and humble spirit, to receiue the spirit of the humble, and to giue life to them that are of a contrite heart. Secondly, it is in a man especially at the time of his conuersiō, & calling to Christ, after which hee is to growe from faith to faith. Thirdly, this faith though it be in the heart, yet it is not so much felt in the heart: this was in Dauid at some times [y] My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me, saith he? The first words, my God, my God, are speeches of faith: yet the latter, why hast thou forsaken me? shew that then he had no feeling of Gods mercie. A little faith then is in the heart of man, as in the spring time the fruit is in the budde, which yet appeareth not, but onely hath his nature & substance in the budde Lastly the beginnings and seeds of this faith, or at the least, signes and effects thereof, are three.

x Esa. 57. 17.

The first is a perswasion, that a mans owne sinnes are pardōnable: this perswasion though it be not faith, yet it is a good preparation to faith: for the wicked cutte themselues off quite from Gods mercie, in that with Cain [a] they say, their sinnes are greater, then that they can bee forgiuen.

1. A perswasion that sinne is pardonable.

a Gen. 4. 13.

The second, is a desire of the fauour and mercie of God in Christ, and of the means to attaine to that fauour. [b] This desire is a speciall grace of God, and it hath the promise of blessednes; and it must bee distinguished frō that desire which wicked men haue: who though they desire life eternall, as Balaam did, yet they cannot sincerely desire the meanes, as faith, repentance, mortificatiō, reconciliation, &c. The third is prayer for nothing in this world, but onely for the forgiuenes of their sinnes with great sighs & groanes, from the bottome of the heart, which they are not able to expresse, as they feele them. Now this heartie praying and desire for the pardon of sinne can neuer come from the flesh, but only from the spirit, who [c] stirreth vp these heauēly motions of longing, desiring, sighing after remission of sinne, and all other graces of God, which he bestoweth vpon his children. And where the spirit of Christ dwelleth, there must needes be faith: for [d] Christ dwelleth in the hearts of the faithfull by faith. Therefore as Rebecca, [o] whē she felt the Twinnes striue in her wombe, though it pained her, yet she knew, both that shee had conceiued, and that the children were quicke in her: so they who haue these motions and holy affections in them before mentioned, may assure themselues that the spirit of God dwelleth in them, & consequently that they haue faith, though a weake faith.

2. A desire of reconciliation to God in Christ for sinne.

XIX.

Examples of this smal faith are euident in the apostles, who though [e] they beleeued that Christ was the Sauiour of the world, yet they [f] were ignorant of his death and resurrection, which are the cheife meanes of saluation. After his resurrection they were ignorant of his ascension, & of his spirituall kingdome, for they dreamed [g] of an earthly kingdome: and at his death they all fled from him, and Peter fearefully denied him. They beeing in this estate, are not said to haue no faith, but to be of [h] little faith. Another example we haue in Dauid, who hauing continued a long space in his two great sinnes, adultery, and murther, was admonished thereof by Nathan the prophet: beeing admonished he confessed his sinnes, and straightway Nathan declared vnto him from the Lord the forgiuenesse of them. Yet afterward Dauid humbleth himselfe, as it appeareth in the 51. Psalme. and praieth most earnestly for the forgiuenesse of those and all other his sinnes, euen as though it had not bin true: that they were forgiuen, as Nathan tolde him: the reasō is: howsoeuer they were remitted before God, yet Dauid at his first repenting of them felt none assurance in his heart of the forgiuenes of them, onely he had a perswasion, that they might be pardoned. And therefore he vehemently desired & praied to the Lord, to remit thē, and to sanctifie him anew. This then beeing the least measure of faith, it must be remembred, that he who hath not attained to it, hath as yet no sauing faith at all.

XX.

The greatest measure of faith is a full perswasion of the mercie of God. For it is the strength and ripenes of faith, Rom. 4. 20. 21. Abraham not weake in faith, but beeing strengthned in the faith, was fullie perswaded, that he who had promised was able to doe it. This full assurance is when a man can say with Paul, [i] I am perswaded that neither life nor death nor Angels nor principalities, nor powers

i Rom. 8. 38

powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature shall bee able to separate vs from the loue of God, which is in Christ Iesus our Lord. And least any should thinke, this saying is peculiar to Paul, he [i] testifieth of himselfe that for this cause hee was received to mercie, that he might be an example to thē which after should beleeue in Christ to life eternall: and the whole Church, in the Cantic. vseth the same in effect: saying, [k] Loue is as strong as death, iealousie is as cruell as the graue, the coales thereof are fierie coales, and a vehement flame. Much water can not quench loue, neither can the floods drown it: if a man should giue all the substance of his house for loue, they would contemne it.

i 1. Tim. 1. 16.

k Cant. 8. 6, 7.

XXI.

No Christian attaineth to this full assurance at the first, but in some continuance of time, after that for a longe space he hath kept a good conscience before God, and before men: and hath had diuers experiences of Gods loue and fauour towardes him in Christ. This Paul declareth to the Romanes: [l] in afflictions God sheddeth abroad his loue in their hearts, by the holy Ghost, which is giuen to them: but how? by degrees: for from affliction ariseth patience, from patience commeth experience, from experience, hope: and hope neuer maketh ashamed, or disappointeth him of eternall life. This is euident in Dauids practise: [m] Doubtlesse, saith hee, kindnes and mercie shall follow me all the dayes of my life, and I shall liue a long season in the house of the Lord. Marke this his resolute perswasion: and consider how he came vnto it, namely, by experience of Gods fauour at sundry times, and after sundry manners. For before he set downe this resolution, hee numbred vp diuers benefits receiued of the Lord: that [n] he fed him in greene pastures, & led him by the refreshing waters of Gods word: that he restoreth him & leadeth him in the paths of righteousnes: that he strēgtheneth him in great daungers, euen of death, and preserueth him: that in despight of his enemies, he inriched him with many benefits. By meanes of all these mercies of God bestowed on him, he came to be perswaded of the continuance of the fauour of God towards him. Againe Dauid said before king Saul, [o] Let no mans heart faile because of Goliah: thy seruant will goe and fight with the Philistine. And Saul said [p] to Dauid, thou art not able to goe against this Philistine to fight with him: for thou art but a boy, and he is a man of warre from his youth. Dauid answered, that he was able to fight with, and to slay the vncircumcised Philistine. And the ground of his perswasion was taken from experience: for thus hee said, [q] Thy seruant kept his fathers sheepe, and there came a Lyon, and likewise a Beare, and tooke a sheepe out of the flocke, and [r] I went out after him and smote him, and tooke it out of his mouth, and when hee arose against mee, I caught him by the beard, and smote him and slew him. [s] So thy seruant slew both the Lyon and the Beare: therefore this vncircumcised Philistine shall bee as one of them, seeing hee hath railed on the host of the liuing God. The like proceeding must bee in matters concerning eternall life. Little Dauid resembleth euery Christian: Goliah and the armie of the Philistines, resembleth Sathan and his power. He therefore that will bee resolued, that he shall be able to ouercome the gates of hell, and attaine to life euerlasting, must long keepe watch & ward ouer his owne heart, and hee must fight against his owne rebellious flesh, and crucifie it: yea hee must haue experiences of Gods power strengthening him in many temptations, before he shall bee fully assured of his attaining to the kingdome of heauen.

Thus much concerning faith it selfe: now follow the fruits & benefits of faith. By meanes of this speciall faith, the Elect are truely [a] ioyned vnto Christ, and haue an heauenly communion and fellowship with him; and therefore doe [b] in some measure inwardly feele his holy spirit mouing and stirring in them, as Rebecca felt the Twins to stirre in her wombe. Christ is as [c] the head in the bodie; euery beleeuer as a member of the same bodie: nowe as the head giueth sense and motion to the members, and the members feele themselues to haue sense, and to moone by means of the head: so doth Christ Iesus reuiue and quicken euery true beleeuer, and by his heauenly power maketh him to dó the good which he doth. [d] And as from the stocke, sappe is deriued to the grift, that it may liue and grow, and bring forth fruit in his kinde: so doe all the faithfull that are grafted into Christ the true vine. And as the grift looseth his wild nature, and is changed into the nature of the stocke, and bringeth forth good fruit: so in like maner it is with them that are in Christ, who by litle and litle are wholly renued [e] from euill to good.

XXIIII.

Iustification. This Iustification is wrought in this manner. Sinne is that which maketh a man vnrighteous, and the childe of wrath and vengeance. In sinne, there are three things which are hurtfull to man: the first is condemnation, which commeth of sinne: the second is, actuall disobedience of the lawe in sinne: the third is, the roote and fountaine of sinne, originall corruption. These are three deadly wounds, and three running sores in the hearts and consciences of all sinners. g Nowe Christ Iesus is perfectly righteous, and in him a sinner may finde three inestimable benefites answerable to the three former euills. First, the sufferings of Christ vpon the Crosse, sufficient for all mens sinnes. Secondly, the obedience of Christ in fulfilling the law. Thirdly, the perfect holines of the humane nature of Christ: these are three souereigne medicines to heale all wounded consciences: and they are as three running streams of liuing water to bathe and to supple the buised and contrite heart. h Now then commeth faith, and first layeth holde of the sufferings of Christ, and so a sinner is freed from the punishment and guilt of sinne, and from eternal damnation, & thus the first deadly wound is cured. i Againe, faith layeth holde on the perfect obedience of Christ, in fulfilling the law, and thus the second wound is cured. k Thirdly, faith applieth the holinesse of Christs humane nature to the sinner, and then he is accepted of God as perfectly righteous, & so his third deadly wound is cured. Thus a sinner is made righteous by the righteousnesse of Christ imputed to him.

XXV.

From true iustification proceede l many other benefits, & they are either outward, or inward. Outward benefits are three. The m first is Reconciliation, by which a man iustified is perfectly reconciled to God; because his sinne is done away, and he is araied with the perfect righteousnes of Christ. The n second is, that afflictions to the faithfull are no punishments for sinne, but onely fatherly and louing chastisements. For the guilt and punishment of sinne was borne of Christ. Now therefore, if a Christian be afflicted, it is no punishment: for then God should punish one fault twise, once in Christ, and the second time vpon the Christians: which thing doth not agree with his iustice: it remaineth therefore that afflictions are onely corrections in the faithfull. The third benefit is, that the man iustified doth o deserue and merit at Gods hands the kingdome of heauen. For beeing made perfectly righteous in Christ and by his righteousnes, he must needes merit eternall life, in and by the merits of Christ. And therefore Paul calleth it the iustification of life. XXVI.

Inward benefits proceeding from iustification, are those which are inwardly felt in the heart, and serue for the better assurance of iustification, and they are principally fiue. The first is, Peace and quietnes of conscience. As all men naturally in Adam are corrupt, so all men naturally haue corrupt and defiled consciences, accusing them and arraigning them before Gods iudgement for their sinnes: in such wise that euery suspition of death and feare of imminent danger maketh a naturall man stand agast at his wits ende, knowing not what to doe: p but by faith in Christ, the Christian is perswaded of remission of his sinnes, and so the disquietnesse of his conscience is appeased and he hath an inward peace in all extremities, which cannot be taken from him.

1 Peace of conscience.

p Heb. 10. 22. Rom. 5. 1. and 26. 19.

XXVII.

A difference betweene a dead conscience and a quiet conscience. The slumbering and dead conscience is much like to the good conscience pacified, & many through ignorance take the one for the other. But they may be seuered and discerned thus. First, let the beginning Christian examine himselfe, whether his conscience was afflicted with the sense of Gods iudgements and pressed downe with the burthen of his sinne before hee came to that quietnes: for then he may be in good hope, that it was the Spirit of God who brought that peace, because God hath promised, q That he wil dwell with the humble and contrite, to reuiue and quicken them. But if he haue alwayes had that peace from the beginning of his dayes, he may easily deceiue himselfe, by taking the numnesse and securitie of a defiled conscience, for the true peace of conscience. Secondly, let him ſearch from whence this peace of his conſcience proceedeth. [g] For if it come from any thing els but from the certentie of the remiſſion of ſinne, it is no true peace: as many, flattering themſelues in ſinne, and dreaming of a pardon, are thereupon quiet, and the deuill is readie enough to put this into their mindes: but this can be no true peace. Thirdly, let him examine himſelf if he haue a care to keepe a good conſcience: which if he haue, he hath alſo receiued from the Lord a good and a quiet conſcience. [h] For if God beſtow vpon any man a gift concerning his ſaluation, he giueth him alſo care to keepe it.

XXVIII.

2. Entrance with boldnes, vnto Gods preſence.

The ſecond inward benefit is, [i] An entrance into Gods fauour, and a perſeuerance in it, which is indeede a wonderfull benefit. When a man commeth into fauour with his Prince, then he is bold to come vnto him, & he may haue free acceſſe vnto his preſence, and hee may ſue to his Prince for any benefite or preferment whereof he ſtandeth in neede, & may obtaine it before any other: ſo they which are in Gods fauour by reaſon that they are freely pardoned, and iuſtified in Chriſt, doe boldly approach into Gods preſence, and they are readie to aske, and ſure to obtaine any benefite that is for their good. [k] k Rom. 5. 3 and 8. 17.

III.

3. Ioy.

The third is a ſpirituall ioy in their hearts, euen then when they are afflicted: becauſe they looke certenly to obtaine the Kingdome of heauen. The fourth is, [l] that the loue of God is ſhed in the hearts of the faithfull by the holy Ghoſt: that is, that the holy Ghoſt doth make the faithfull very euidently to feele the loue of God towardes them, and doth as it were, fill their hearts with it.

4. Feeling of Gods loue.

XXIX.

The ſecond maine benefite is [a] Adoption, whereby they which are iuſtified, are alſo accepted of God as his owne children. From Adoption proceed many other benefits. Firſt the elect child of God hereby is made a brother to Chriſt. Secondly, he is a King, and the Kingdome of heauen is his inheritance. Thirdly, he is lord ouer all creatures ſaue Angels. Fourthly the holy Angels miniſter vnto him for his good: they guard him and watch about him. Fifthly, all things, yea grieuous afflictions & ſinne it ſelfe, turne to his good; though in his owne nature it bee neuer ſo hurtfull: [b] and therefore death (which is moſt terrible (vnto him is no entrance into hell, but a narrow gate to let him into euerlaſting life. Laſtly, beeing thus adopted, he may looke for comfort at Gods hand, anſwerable to the meaſure of his affliction: as God hath promiſed.

XXX.

Affurance of adoption.

The inward aſſurance of Adoption is by two witneſſes. The firſt is our ſpirit, that is, an heart and conſcience ſanctified, by the ſprinkling of the blood of Chriſt. Now becauſe it commeth to paſſe that the teſtimonie of our ſpirit is often feeble and weake, God of his goodnes hath giuen his owne ſpirit to bee a fellow witneſſe with our ſpirit: for the Elect haue in themſelues the ſpirit of Ieſus Chriſt, teſtifying vnto them and perſwading them that they are the adopted children of God. [c] For this cauſe the holy Ghoſt is called the ſpirit of adoption, becauſe it worketh in vs the aſſurance of our adoption: [d] and it is called a pawne or earneſt. For as in a bargaine, when part of the price is payed in earneſt, then aſſurance is made, that men will pay the whole: ſo when the child of God hath receiued thus much from the holy Ghoſt to be perſwaded that he is adopted & choſen in Chriſt, he may be in good hope, and he is already put in good aſſurance, fully to enioy eternall life in the kingdome of heauen.

c Rom. 8. 16. Gal. 4. 6. 1. Pet. 1. 21

d 1. Cor. 1. 22.

[e] Indeede this teſtimonie is weake in moſt men and can ſcarſe be perceiued: becauſe moſt Chriſtians, though they may be olde in reſpect of yeares, yet generally they are babes in Chriſt, and not yet come to perfect growth: and may finde in themſelues great ſtrength of ſinne, and the graces of God to be in ſmall meaſure in them. And againe, the children of God beeing moſt diſtreſſed, as in time of triall, and in the houre of death, then the inward working of the holy Ghoſt is felt moſt euidently. But a reprobate cannot haue this teſtimonie at all: though indeed a man flattereth himſelfe and the deuill imitating the ſpirit of God, doth vſually perſwade carnal men and hypocrites that they ſhall bee ſaued, But that deuilliſh illuſion, and the teſtimonie of the ſpirit may be diſcerned by two notes. The 1. is, heartie and feruent prayer to God in the name of Chriſt. For the ſame ſpirit that teſtifieth to vs that wee are the adopted children of God, doth alſo make vs cry, that is, feruently with groanes and ſighs filling heauen and earth, pray to God. Nowe, this heartie, feruent, and loud crying in the eares of God, can the deuill

Labour in prayer: for it is the proper ſpirit of adoption: and in prayer, wee ſhall moſt of all feele the ſpirit of adoption.

deuill giue to no hypocrite: for it is the ſpeciall marke of the Spirit of God. The other note is, that they which haue the ſpeciall teſtimonie from the ſpirit of God, haue alſo in their hearts the ſame affections to God, which children haue to their father; namely loue, feare, reuerence, obedience, thankfulneſſe, for they call not vpon God, as vpon a terrible iudge, but they crie Abba, that is, father. And theſe affections they haue not, whome Sathan illudeth with a phantaſticall imagination of their ſaluation: for it may be, that through hypocriſie, or through cuſtome, they may cal God father, but in truth they cannot doe it.

XXXI.

The elect beeing thus aſſured of their adoption and iuſtification, are indued with hope: [a] by which they looke patiently for the accõpliſhing of all good things which God hath begunne in them. And therefore they vndergoe all croſſes and afflictions with a quiet and contented minde becauſe they know that the time will come when they ſhall haue full redemption from all euills. This was [b] the pacience of Pauls hope, when he ſaide, that nothing in the world could ſeuer him from the loue of God in Chriſt. And like to this was the patience of Policarpe, & of Ignatius, who when he was condemned & iudged to be throwne to wild beaſts, & nowe heard the Lions roaring, he boldly and yet patiently ſaid; I am the wheate of Chriſt, I ſhal be grõd with the teeth of the wild beaſts, that I may be found good bread. Alſo the ſame was the patience of the bleſſed Martyr S. Laurence, who like a meeke lambe ſuffered himſelfe to be tormented on a fiery gridyron: and when he had bin preſſed downe with fire pikes for a great ſpace. in the mighty ſpirit of God, ſpake vnto the Emperour that cauſed him thus to be tormented, on this wiſe.

[c] Gal. 5. 24 Col. 3. 5.

The third maine benefit is [b] inward ſãctification: by which a Chriſtian in his minde, in his will, and in his affections is freed from the bondage and tyranny of ſinne and Satan, and is by little and little inabled through the ſpirit of Chriſt to deſire and approoue that which is good, and to walk in it. And it hath two parts. [c] The firſt is mortification, when the power of ſinne, is continually weakned, conſumed, and diminiſhed. [d] The Second is viuification, by which inherent righteouſnes is really put into them, and afterward is continually increaſed.

[d] Eph. 1. 1. 1. Cor. 15. 45.

XXXIII.

Mortification.

This ſanctification is wrought in all chriſtians after this manner. After that they are ioyned to Chriſt, and made myſtically bone of his bone, and fleſh of his fleſh, Chriſt worketh in them effectually by his holy ſpirit, and his workes are principally three. Firſt, [e] he cauſeth his owne death to worke effectually the death of all ſinnes, and to kill the power of the fleſh. For it is as a corraſiue, which beeing applied to the part affected, eateth out the venome and corruption: and ſo the death of Chriſt by faith applyed, fretteth out and conſumeth the concupiſcence & the corruption of the whole man. Secondly, his buriall cauſeth the buriall of ſinne, as it were in a graue. [f] Thirdly, his reſurrection ſendeth a quickning power into them, & ſerueth to make them, riſe out of their ſin, in which they were dead and buried, to worke righteouſnes, and to liue in holines of life. Lazarus bodie lay foure dayes, and ſtanke in the graue, yet Chriſt raiſed it and gaue him life againe, and made him doe the ſame workes that liuing men do: ſo alſo Chriſt dealeth with the ſoules of the faithfull; they rot and ſtinke in their ſinnes, and would periſh in them, if they were left alone: but Chriſt putteth a heauenly life into them, and maketh them actiue and liuely to doe the will of god in the workes of chriſtianity, and in their workes of their callings. And this ſanctification is throughout the whole man in the ſpirite, ſoule and minde, 1. Theſſ. 5. 23. And here the ſpirit ſignifieth the mind and memory; the ſoule, the will and affections.

XXXIIII.

The ſanctification of the mind is the enlightning of it with the true knowledge of Gods word. It is of two ſorts, either ſpirituall vnderſtanding, or ſpiritnall wiſedome. Spirituall vnderſtanding is a generall conceiuing of euery thing that is to be done or not to be done, out of Gods word. Spirituall wiſedome is a worthy grace of God, by which a man is able to vnderſtand out of Gods word, what is to be done or not to be done in any particular thing, or action, according to the circumſtances of perſon, time, place, &c. Both theſe are in euery Chriſtian, otherwiſe Paul would k Col.1.9. neuer haue prayed for the Colloſſians, [k] that they might be fulfilled with knowledge of Gods wil,in al wiſdome & ſpiritual vnderſtanding. In both theſe excelled Dauid, who m v.98.99. and that God [m] by his commaundements had made him wiſer then his enemies: that he had more vnderſtanding then all his teachers, becauſe Gods teſtimonies were his meditations n 100. [n] that he vnderſtood more then the ancient, becauſe he kept Gods precepts. The properties of the minde enlightened are ſpecially two. The firſt is, that by it a Chriſtian ſees his owne blindnes, ignorance, and vanitie, as appeareth in Dauid, who beeing a Pro-o 18. phet of God, yet praied, [o] Open mine eyes (O Lord) that I may ſee the wonders of thy law. And thēce it is that the godly ſo much bewailed the blindnes of their minds. Cōtrariwiſe, the wicked [p] man in the middeſt p Ioh.9.42 of his blindnes, thinks himſelfe to ſee. The ſecond is, that the mind runneth and is occupied in a continuall meditation of Gods q Pſal.1.2. word. So Dauid ſaith, the [q] righteous mans delight is in the law of the Lord, and in his law doth he meditate day and night.

XXXV.

Sanctification of the memory

The memorie alſo is ſanctified in that it can both keepe and remember that which is good and agreeable to Gods wil; whereas naturally it beſt remembreth lewdnes, and wickedneſſe, and vanity. This holy r Pſal.119. 11. memorie was in Dauid: [r] I haue hid thy promiſes in mine heart, that I might not ſinne againſt thee. And Marie [ſ] kept all the ſayings ſ Luk.2.19 of Chriſt and pondered them in her heart. And to the exerciſe of this memorie, Salomon hath a good leſſon, My ſonne hearken vnto my wordes, incline thine eares vnto my t Prou 3.8 ſayings: [t] let them not depart from thine eyes, but keepe them in the middeſt of thine heart.

XXXVI.

Sanctification of the will.

Furthermore, the will of a Chriſtian is renued and purified by Chriſt, which appeareth in that it is ſo far forth freed from ſinne, that it can wil & chooſe that which is good and acceptable to God, and refuſe that which is euill, according to that of u Phi.2.13 Paul, [u] It is God which worketh in you the wil and the deed, euen of his good pleaſure. Nowe, if a man be conſidered as he is naturally, he can neither will, nor performe that x Iob.15. 16. Ephe.2.2 Luk.11.22 [x] which is good, but only that which is euill: for he is ſold vnder ſinne, as the oxe or the aſſe, & committeth iniquity, as the fiſh draweth in water; yea he is in bōdage vnder Satā, who inſpireth his mind with vile motions, and boweth his wil, affections, & the members of his body to his curſed wil: ſo that for his life, he is not able to do any thing but ſinne and rebell againſt God. And it muſt be remembred, that although the Chriſtian mans will be freed in part frō the bondage of ſinne in this life, yet it ſhall not be free from the power of ſinne vntill the life to come: for [y] Paul that worthy Saint ſaith of himſelfe being regenerate, that he was carnall and ſold vnder ſinne. y Rō.7.14

Sanctification of the affections.

Sanctified affections are known by this that they [z] are moued and inclined to that which is good, to embrace it: and are not commonly affected and ſtirred with that which it euill, vnleſſe it be to eſchewe it. Examples hereof are theſe which followe.

XXXVIII.

Zeale for Gods glory

But among all theſe ſanctified affections, there are foure ſpecially to be marked. The firſt is a zeale for Gods glorie: by which a Chriſtian is thus affected, that rather then God ſhould looſe his glorie, he could be content to haue his owne ſoule damned. As it was with Moſes, who feared leaſt God ſhould looſe his glorie, if he did vtterly deſtroy the Iſraelites for their idolatrie trie, whome he had choſen to be his people: and therefore in this reſpect prayed [a] Exo. 32. 32. vnto the Lord, [a] Therefore now if thou pardon their ſinne, thy mercie ſhall appeare: but if thou wilt not, I pray thee raſe me out of the [b] Rom. 9. 3. booke which thou haſt written. [b] And Paul could haue wiſhed with all his heart to be cut off from all fellowſhip with Chriſt, & to be giuen vp to eternall deſtruction, for his countrey men the Iewes, and for Gods glory ſpecially. Some may ſay, this affection is not common to all, but peculiar to ſuch as are lead with ſuch an exceeding affection, as theſe holy men were, & which haue their hearts ſo pierced and kindled with diuine loue, and ſo rauiſhed with the ſame out of themſelues, that they forget all other things, yea themſelues, hauing nothing before their eyes but God, and his glorie. To this I anſwer, that this affection is cõmon to al, though the meaſure of it be diuers, in ſome more, in ſome leſſe: which appeareth in that our Sauiour Chriſt teacheth euery one in his prayer which he made, before he craue any other thing, either concerning God, or himſelfe, to pray that Gods name may be ſanctified. For by this all Chriſtians are taught that they are to ouerpaſſe all conſiderations of themſelues, their owne pleaſure and profite; their ſaluation or damnation: and abſolutely with an heartie affection, to ſeeke after the glorie of God in all their doings, that as Gods glorie is moſt deare vnto himſelfe, ſo it may appeare alſo that it is moſt deare vnto them. If any thinke it ſtrange that Moſes, Paul, or any other ſhould be content to fall into miſerie, to looſe their liues, and to be caſt into eternall perdition in hell fier, with reprobate and damned ſpirits, rather then Gods honour ſhould be turned into diſhonour and blaſphemie: let them conſider that wonderfull is the power of true loue, [c] which maketh all things eaſie: [d] which is as ſtrong as the graue, that ouercomes all, and was neuer yet ouercome: which is as a flaming fire, that a whole ſea of water cannot quench. And the loue which theſe mẽ had to God did ſo rauiſh them, that they felt nó feare of hell fire.

XXXIX.

The ſeare of God.

The ſecond affection is the feare of God, a moſt excellent and wonderfull grace of God Salomon [e] matcheth it, yea preferreth it too, before all things in this world, making it the ende of all. Without it a mã cannot be wiſe, it is the firſt ſtep to wiſdome, [f] in it is aſſured ſtrength alſo it is a welſpring of life to eſchew the ſnares of death. The Churches of Iudea beeing in peace, were edified, and walked in the [g] feare of God, and were abundantly filled with the comfort of the holy ghoſt. In this feare of God there be two parts: the firſt is a perſwaſion in the heart, that a mã is in Gods preſence whereſoeuer he is, & whẽ he by infirmity forgets God, a drawing of himſelfe into Gods preſence. As it was in Dauid, [h] I haue (ſaith he) ſet the Lord alwaies before me. For he is at my right hand, therefore I ſhall not ſlide. And this his being in the preſence of God, he ſetteth downe moſt excellently in the 139. Pſalme. [i] Enoch walked with God. [k] Abraham is commanded to walke before God & to be vpright. The ſecond part of the feare of God is, in Gods preſence to ſtand in awe of him; which is when a man takes heede to his wayes leaſt he offend God. This aduiſe, Dauid giues to Sauls Counſellers. [l] Stand in awe and ſinne not. Pharao commanded the midwiues of Egypt to kill all the male childrẽ of the Iſraelites at their birth: they did it not, becauſe [m] they ſtood in awe of God, fearing to diſpleaſe him. And hence it is, that the [n] godly heare Gods word with feare and trembling.

XL.

Hatred of ſinne.

The third is, the hatred and deteſtation of ſinne, becauſe it is ſinne, and ſpecially of a mans owne corruptions: wherewith a Chriſtian is ſo turmoiled, that in regard of them and for no other cauſe, he moſt heartily deſireth to be forth of this moſt miſerable world, that he may be diſburdened of his ſinne, and leaue off to diſpleaſe God. Paul feeles in himſelfe a huge maſſe of deadly corruption, it makes him deeme himſelfe moſt miſerable, and to mourne becauſe he was not deliuered from it, ſaying, [o] Oh miſerable man that I am! who ſhall deliuer me from this bodie of death? Againe, it is ſinne that makes the Church complaine that ſhe is blacke, that the ſunne hath looked vpon her, and therefore ſhe cryes, [q] Come Lord Ieſus, come quickly.

The fourth is, ioy of heart in conſideration of the neerenes or preſence of the terrible day of iudgement. The [r] reprobate either trembleth at the conſideratiõ of the day of iudgement, or els in the ſecurtie of his heart he regardeth it not. XLII.

Sanctification of the bodie. The ſanctification of the bodie is, when x Rom.6. 19. x all the members of it are carefully preſerued from being meanes to execute any ſinne: and are made the inſtruments of righteouſnes and holines. So Paul prayed y 2. Theſſ. 4.4. for the Theſſalonians y that they might know how to poſſeſſe their veſſels in holines, and in honour, and not in the luſt of concupiſcence, as the Gentiles doe which know not God. And z Iob.31.1 Iob z made a couenant with his eies not to look on a woman. In whoſe example it appeareth how euery member is to be kept pure and holy.

XLIII.

A conſolation. If any humbled Chriſtian finde not this meaſure of ſanctification in himſelfe, yet let him not be diſcouraged. For if any man a Rom.8.5 haue a a willingnes and a deſire to obey all Gods commandements, he hath the ſpirit, and he who hath the ſpirit is in Chriſt, and he who is in Chriſt ſhall neuer ſee damnation. And though hee faile greatly in the action of obedience, yet God will accept his affection to obey, as obedience acceptable vnto him. God will approoue of thee for his owne worke which he hath wrought in thee, and not reiect thee for thine.

XLIV.

Repentance. From ſanctification ariſeth repentance. For a man cannot hate his own ſinnes before he be ſanctified: and he cannot truly repent for them before he hate them. Repentance is when a man b Act.16. 26. b turnes to God, and brings foorth fruits worthie amendment of life. This turning vnto God hath two parts. The firſt a purpoſe and reſolution of heart neuer to ſinne any more, but to lead a newe life. This was in Dauid, who fully purpoſed to keepe Gods commandements, c Pſal.119. 6. and c applied his heart to fulfill his ſtatutes vnto the ende. And vnto this did Barnabas d Act.11. 23. exhort the brethren at Antioch, d that with full purpoſe of heart, they would cleaue vnto the Lord. The ſecond part is an holy labour in mans life and conuerſation to purifie and cleanſe himſelfe from ſinne: of e 1.Ioh.3 3 this ſpeaketh Iohn, e And euery one that hath this hope in him purgeth himſelfe euen as he is pure. This did Dauid practiſe, as may appeare in that he ſaide, f Certenly, I haue cleanſed my heart in vaine, and waſhed my hands in innocencie. If any maruaile howe repentance followeth ſanctificatiõ, conſidering it is the firſt thing of all, that the Prophets, Apoſtles, and Miniſters of God preach vnto the people whom they would winne to Chriſt: I anſwere, that all other graces are more hidden in the heart, whereas repentance is open, and ſooner appeareth to a mans owne ſelfe, and to the eyes of the world. It is like the budde in the tree, which appeareth before the leafe, the bloſſome, the fruit: and yet in nature, it is the laſt: for a man muſt be renewed, and come to an vtter diſliking of his owne ſinnes, before hee will turne from them, and leaue them. f Pſal.73. 13. Repentance after faith and ſanctification in nature, but firſt in ſenſe & appearance.

XLV.

By this it may appeare, that there is one manner of ſinning in the godly, and another in the vngodly, though they fall both into one ſinne. A wicked man when hee ſinneth in his heart he giueth full conſent to the ſinne: but the godly though they fall into the ſame ſinnes with the wicked, yet they neuer giue full conſent: for they are in their mindes, willes, and affections partly regenerate, and partly vnregenerate, and therefore their willes doe partly will and partly abhorre that which is euil: according as Saint Paul ſaith of himſelfe, g I delight in the law of God according to the inner man, but I ſee another law in my members rebelling againſt the law of my minde, and leading me captiue, &c. And that the godly man neuer giueth full conſent to ſinne, it is euident by three tokens. Firſt, before hee commeth to doe the ſinne, he hath no purpoſe nor deſire to doe it: but his purpoſe and deſire is to doe the will of God contrary to that ſinne. Secondly in the act or doing of the ſinne, his heart riſeth againſt it, yet by the ſtrength of temptation, & by the mightie violence of the fleſh, he is haled and pulled on to doe wickednes. Paul ſaith of himſelfe, that he was ſold vnder ſinne, that is, he was like a ſlaue, who deſireth to eſcape out of his maſters hands, and yet is faine in great miſerie to ſerue him. Thirdly, after hee hath ſinned he is ſore diſpleaſed with himſelfe for it, and truely repenteth. As h Peter before the denying of his maſter, had no purpoſe to doe it, but rather to die in his cauſe. In the act he had a ſtriuing with himſelfe, as appeareth by this that firſt he anſwered faintly, I know not what g Rom.7. 22. h Mat. 26.69, 70, 71,72.

thou sayest: and yet after when the assault of Satã more preuailed, he fel to swearing, cursing, and banning. And after his fall hee repented himselfe and wept bitterly for it. All was contrary in Iudas, who went to betray his master with full intent and purpose: for the deuill long tempting him vnto it, entred into him, that is, made him yeelde, and resolued himselfe to doe it.[i] Afterward when Christ was betrayed and condemned, Iudas was not sorrowfull for his sinne with a godly sorrow, but in despaire of mercy hanged himselfe.

XLVI.

Fruits of repentance.

Fruits worthie of amendment of life are such fruits as the[k] trees of righteousnesse beare, namely, good workes: for the doing of a good worke there be three things requisite: First, it must proceede from iustifying faith. For the worke cannot please God except the person please him, and the person cannot please him without this faith. Secondly, it is to be done in obedience vnto Gods reuealed word.[l] To obey is better then sacrifice, and to harken is better then the fat of Rams. Thirdly, it is to be referred to Gods glorie,[m] Whether ye eate or drinke (saith Paul) or whatsoeuer ye doe, doe all to the glory of God. The speciall workes of Christians, which they and none but they truely performe, are these fiue which follow.

XLVII.

Hearing of the word.

The first is: good hearing of the word,[y] My sheepe (saith Christ) heare my voice and follow me. And againe: he which is of God heareth his voice. And this was one note of the faithful in the primitiue church to assemble to heare the word. This good hearing of the word is the sauing hearing that bringeth life eternall. In this action, Christians are vsually thus disposed. Before they come to heare the word of God they make themselues readie to heare it, as the men of Berea did,[z] who receiued the word with all readines. This preparation standeth in two points: First, they disburden themselues of all impediments, that like vnto runners in a race, they may[b] bee swift to heare: these impediments, are sinne and troubled affections: and they come with humbled hearts[c] as foales, that they may become wise. Secondly, they quicken vp themselues, and come vnto the assemblies, hungring and thirsting after the word of God, as men doe after meat and drinke.

When they come in, hearing Gods word, first, their mindes are fixed and attentiue only to that which is spoken, as[d] Lydias was. Secondly, they truly beleeue the word of God, & carefully apply it to their owne soules. Thirdly, they feele the liuely power of it in themselues: it is as[e] salt in them, to draw out their inward corruption; it is to them the[f] sword of the spirit, and as a[g] sacrificing knife in the hand of Gods minister, by which their flesh is killed, and they are offred vp in a liuing sacrifice to God: it is[h] spirit and life to quicken and reuiue their soules that are dead in sin: and the reason of this is plaine: The word of God preached is as a cup of wine: the true christian is the Lords guest, but he hath sauce of his own: he bringeth his sugar with him, namely, his true faith, which[i] he tempereth and mingleth with Gods word, & so it becommeth vnto him as a cup of sweet wine, & as water of life. Now the hypocrite, because he bringeth no faith with him, drinketh of the same, but he findeth the wine to be sowre and tart, and voide of relish, & in truth it is vnto him as a cup of ranke poison. Againe, they[k] heare the word of God as in Gods presence, and therefore their hearts are full of feare and trembling. And they receiue the Worde, not[l] as from man but as from Christ Iesus the only[m] Doctor of the Church: and they regard not so much the Embassadour, or his ability, as the Embassage of reconciliation sent from the king of heauen.

Receiuing of the Sacraments.

The second worke is, the receiuing of the Sacrament, of Baptisme once onely, when a man is openly and solemnly admitted into the Church: and of the Lords supper often. The first sealeth vp to the heart of a Christian, that he is vnited vnto Christ, & hath true fellowship with him in beeing fully iustified before God, and inwardly sanctified. The second serueth to seale vp in the heart of a Christian the cõtinuall growing & increasing of the same graces. This thing euery true beleeuer shal haue of-often experience of, either in or after the receiuing of the Sacrament: and yet it ſhal not be ſo alwaies, for ſomtimes the church p Cant.2.5 being p brought into Chriſts wine ſeller, ſhall fall into a ſwowne and not feele any refreſhing there. Yet the beleeuer is not to be diſmayd, if he feele not alwayes comfort preſently after the Sacrament. A ſick man feeles no comfort or nouriſhment, when he eateth meate, and yet it preſerueth his life: So the weake chriſtian: though he feele himſelfe not nouriſhed at the Sacrament by Chriſts body and blood, yet he ſhal ſee in time that his ſoule ſhall bee preſerued thereby vnto euerlaſting life. Furthermore, when a chriſtian feeleth no comfort by the Sacrament, let him then humble himſelfe before the Lord more heartilie then euer before, confeſſing his ſinnes and praying for increaſe of grace, and then he ſhall feele the fruite of the Sacrament.

XLIX.

Reliefe of the poore. The third worke is, a relieuing of the poore brethren in Chriſt, proceeding of a brotherly kindneſſe towards them. This is a ſpeciall worke not to be done to all men q Gal 6.11 alike, as Saint Paul ſaith, q Do good to all men, but eſpecially to them of the houſhold of faith. Directions for this matter are the r Act.2.44 faithfull of Hieruſalem, r who were all in i Act.4.32 one place, and had all things common: namely in vſe. And they ſold their poſſeſſions and goods and parted them to all men: as euery one had need. Alſo the brethren at Corinth t 2.Cor.8. 23. in their extreame pouertie t relieued the churches of Macedonia liberally, not only according to their power, but alſo ſtraining themſelues beyond their power. Yea this reliefe muſt goe further, euen to the beſtowing of a mans life, if neede ſo require (as u 1.Ioh. 3. 16. Saint Iohn ſaith) u Hereby we haue perceiued loue, that he laid downe his life for vs: therefore we ought alſo lay downe our liues for the brethren.

Prayer. The fourth worke, is true praier: and Saint Luke ſetteth out the faithfull, and the

In praier he is thus diſpoſed: firſt, bef Eccl.5.1. Dan.9.4. fore he praieth, f he is ſtricken with ſome feare and reuerence in regard of Gods maieſtie, for he conſidereth that praier is a familier talking with God.

Secondly, he is inwardly g touched with g Dan.9.4 a huely feeling of his owne wants, but eſpecially he is vexed and grieued at his owne ſinne and rebellion: and this ſenſe of his miſerie is as a ſpurre to quicken his benummed heart.

Thirdly, he humbleth himſelfe before his God, and layeth h open his heart before h 1.Sam.1. 15. the Lord, ſhewing a feruent and longing deſire to obtaine thoſe things of which he findeth an extreame want in himſelfe, as the Prophet Dauid did, whoſe i deſire was k Ro.8.26 ſtirreth vp groanings in the heart, which a man oftentimes for his life cannot expreſſe.

Fourthly, when he maketh his requeſt, he doubteth not, but by l faith he beleeueth that God will graunt his requeſt, which he maketh according to his word.

Fiftly, he praieth not for a brunt or two, but he continueth in prayer: And although God ſeeme not to heare him at the firſt, o yet he patiently waiteth on the Lord o 1.Theſſ. 5.17. and ſtill calleth vpon him.

A lawfull calling The fift worke is, to walke in ſome lawfull calling with painefulneſſe, and vprightneſſe, ſo that in performing al the duties of it, a p man may keepe a good con-p Act.24. 16. ſcience before God and man. Thus Dauid determined to walke in the gouernmẽt of his houſe and kingdome. q I will doe
q Pſal.101 2. wiſely (ſaith he) in the perfect way till thou comeſt to me, I will walke in the vprightneſſe of mine heart, in the middeſt of mine houſe: I will ſet no wicked thing before mine eyes: I hate the worke of them that fall away: it ſhall not cleaue vnto me. This ſincerity of Dauids behauiour in his calling made him bolde to offer himſelfe to be tried not only by men, but much more by the Lord God himſelfe and to be puniſhed accordingly.
r Pſa.26 1,2. Pſa.119. 23. Pſal.18.23 24. r Iudge me O Lord (ſaith he) for I haue walked in mine innocencie: Proue me, O Lord, and trie me, examine my reines and mine heart. So vpright and cleere was he in all his doings.

LII.

Spirituall exercise in temptations.

Thus much of faith and the benefits that come by faith: Nowe followeth the spirituall exercise of a Christian in his manifold temptations, which are in this life inseparable cõpanions of grace. The reason is, because the deuil hateth Christ with a deadly hatred, & sheweth this hatred in a continuall persecution of his members: (as Saint Iohn saith) [f] the dragon was wroth with the woman and went and made warre with the remnant of her seede, which kept the commandements of God, & haue the testimonie of Iesus Christ. Now therefore as soone as Christ Iesus beginneth to shewe any token of his loue to any man, the deuill contrariwise sheweth forth his enmitie, and stirres vp his fellow champions the flesh and the world to warre against him for his confusion. And furthermore the Lord in great wisdome permits temptations to the last ende of a Christian mans life [t] to trie his faith, to purge him of sinne, to humble him, and to make him depend of his Maiestie; to quicken and reuiue the graces of his spirit, which otherwise would be dead and decay.

LIII.

Inward motions of the flesh.

The temptations of a Christian are specially sixe. The first is whē inwardly in his heart, [u] he is drawn away & intised by his own concupiscence vnto any sin. The Christians exercise in temptation is [x] a fight & battell betwixt the flesh & the spirit. And this fighting standeth in 4. things: First, the flesh stirs vp euil thoughts and desires as a burning furnace continually sendeth vp smoke and sparkes of fire; and it eggeth a man forward to euill words and deeds, according to that of S. Marke. [y] For frō within, euen from the heart of a man proceed euill thoughts, adulteries, fornications, murders, thefts, couetousnes, wickednes, deceit, vncleannes, a wicked eie, backbiting, pride, foolishnesse.

[u] Iam. 1. 14

[y] Mar. 7. 21. 22.

II. The flesh hindereth & choketh the good motiōs & desires of the heart, as Paul saith. [a] I see another lawe in my members rebelling against the law of my mind, & leading me captiue to the law of sinne which is in my mēbers. Againe the same flesh mingleth euery good motiō & desire with some corruptions: so that the godly misslike the best thing they do. Esay saith of his own & the peoples righteousnes, that it is but a [b] menstruous clout. [c] the praiers of the saints must be perfumed with sweet odours, before they can ascend vp sweet & sauory into the nosthrils of God. And Paul said of himself, he did that which he disliked: not that he was ouertaken with grosse sins: but because whē he was to doe his dutie the flesh hindred him, that he could not doe that which he did exactly and soundly according to his wil and desire: euen as a mā who hath a iourney to goe, his mind is to dispatch it in all hast, yet when he is in his trauell he goes but slowely by reason of a lameness in his ioynts.

[c] Rom. 8. 3. 4.

III. The spirit on the contrary, kindles in the heart good motions and desires, and puts a man forward to good wordes and deeds; as it was in Dauid. [e] I will praise the Lord (saith he) who hath giuen me counsell: my raines also teach me in the night season.

[e] Ps. 16. 7

IV. The spirit rebukes a man for his euil intents and desires, and represseth the force of them, and as it were nips them in the head. Thus Esay describeth the inward motions of the spirit, [f] And thine eares shall hear a word behind thee saying, this is the way walke yee in it, when thou turnest to the right hand and when thou turnest to the left. And Saint Iohn saith, The spirit [g] iudgeth the world of sinne. This was in Dauid, who when he did any euill, his heart smote him. 2. Sam. 24. 10. Out of this doctrine issueth a notable differēce betwixt the wicked & the godly: In the godly when they are tempted to sinne, there is a fight betweene the heart & the heart; that is, betweene the heart & it selfe: In the wicked also there is a fight, when they are tempted to sinne: but this fight is only betweene the heart & the conscience. The wicked man whatsoeuer he is hath some knowledge of good & euill: and therefore when he is in doing any euill, his cōscience accuseth, checketh, and controuleth him, & he feeles it stirring in him, as if it were some liuing thing that crauled in his body, and gnawed vpon his heart, & thereupō he is very often grieued for his sins, yet for all that he liketh his sins very well, and loueth them, and could find in his heart to continue in them for euer: so that indeed whē he sinneth, he hath in his heart a striuing & a conflict, but that is only betweene himselfe and his conscience. But the godly haue another kind of battel and conflict, for not only their conscience pricke them and reproue them for sinne, but also their harts are so renued, that they rise in hatred and detestation of synne; & when they are tempted to euill by their flesh and Satan, they feele a lust & desire to doe that which is good.

Little feeling.

The second temptation is a disquietnes in the heart of a Christian, because he cannot according to his desire, haue fellowſhip with Chriſt Ieſus, he is exerciſed in this temptation on this manner.

[a] Cant. 6, 2. I. [a] Chriſt lets him ſee his excellencie and how he is affected towards him.

[b] verſ. 3. II. [b] Then the Chriſtian conſidering this deſireth Chriſt and his righteouſneſſe.

III. He delighteth himſelfe in Chriſt, and hath ſome inioying of his benefits, [c] verſ. 4. IV. [c] Then he comes in into the aſſēblye of the Church as into Gods wineſeller, that in the word & Sacraments he may feele a greater meaſure of the loue of Chriſt.

[d] verſ. 5. V. But he [d] falls loue-ſicke: that is, he becomes troubled in ſpirit, becauſe he cannot enioy the preſence of Chriſt in the ſaid manner, as he would.

[e] verſ. 6-7. verſ. 8. VI. [e] In this his ſpirituall ſyckenes he feeles the power of Chriſt ſupporting him, that the ſpirit be not quenched, and he heares Chriſt as it were whiſpering in his heart, as a man ſpeakes to his friend when he is comming towards him a farre off.

[f] verſ. 9. VII. [f] After this Chriſt comes neerer, but the Chriſtian can no otherwiſe enioy him, then a man enioyes the companie of his friend, who is on the other ſyde of a wall looking at him through the grate or latteiſe.

VIII. Then his eies are opened, to ſee the cauſes, why Chriſt ſo withdrawes himſelfe, to be his [g] owne ſecurity and negligence in ſeeking to Chriſt, his ſlackeneſſe in ſpirituall exerciſes, as in praier and thankſgiuing, the deceitfulnes and malice of falſe teachers.

[g] 10. 11. 12. 13. 14. 15.

[i] verſ. 17. IX. [i] Then he comes to feele more liuely his fellowſhip with Chriſt.

X. Laſtly, he prayeth, that Chriſt would continue with him to the ende.

LV.

No feeling. The third temptation, is trouble of minde, becauſe there is no feeling of Chriſt at all, who ſeemeth to be departed for a time. The exerciſe of a Chriſtian in this tentation is this.

[k] Cant. 5. 3 verſ. 2. 1 [k] The poore ſoule lying as a man deſolate in the night without cōfort ſeekes for Chriſt by priuate praier and meditation, but it will not preuaile.

[m] verſ. 3. 3 [m] Then he ſeekes to godly miniſters, to receiue ſome comfort by them, by their meanes he can feele none.

4 [n] After that all meanes haue beene thus vſed, and none will preuaile, then by Gods great mercie, when he hath leaſt hope, he finds Chriſt, and feeles him come againe. [n] verſ. 4.

5 Preſently his faith reuiueth, & layeth faſt hold on Chriſt.

6 And he hath as neere fellowſhippe with Chriſt in his heart as before.

7 [o] Then comes againe the ioy of the holy Ghoſt: & the peace of conſcience as a ſweete ſleepe fals vpon him. [o] verſ. 5.

8 [p] Then his heart ariſeth vp into heauen by holy affections and praiers, which doe as pillars of ſmoke mount vpwarde, ſweet as mirrhe and incenſe. [p] verſ. 6.

9. [q] Alſo he is rauiſhed there with the meditation of the glorious eſtate of the kingdome of heauen. [q] verſ. 8. 9. 10.

10. [r] He labours to bring others to conſider the glorie of Chriſt and his kingdome. [r] verſ. 11.

11. [ſ] After all this Chriſt reueales to his ſeruant, what his bleſſed eſtate is, both in this life, and in the life to come, more cleerely then euer before, and makes him ſee thoſe graces which he hath beſtowed on him. [ſ] Cap. 4. verſ. 1 to the 15.

12. [t] Then the Chriſtian prayeth that Chriſt would breath on him by his holie ſpirit, that he may bring forth the fruits of thoſe graces which are in him. [t] verſ. 16.

12. [u] Laſtly, Chriſt graunteth him this his requeſt. [u] verſ. 1. & 5.

LVI.

The fourth temptation is ſecurity of heart, riſyng of ouermuch delight in the pleaſures of the world. The exerciſe of a Chriſtian in this temptation is this. 4. A ſpirituall ſlumber in worldly pleaſures. Cant. 5. Math. 25. 5 Cant. 5.

1 He ſlumbers and is halfe aſleepe in the pleaſures of this world.

2 Chriſt by his word and ſpirit labours to withdrawe him from his pleaſures, and [x] to make him more heartily receiue his beloued. [x] verſ. 2.

3 But he [y] delaieth to doe it beeing loath to leaue his eaſe and ſweete delights. [y] verſ. 3.

4 [z] Then Chriſt awakes him and ſtirs vp his heart: by making him to ſee the vanity of his pleaſures. [z] verſ. 4.

5 He then begins to be more earneſtly affected towards Chriſt.

6 [a] With ſorrowe hee ſets his heart to haue fellowſhip with Chriſt after his olde manner: & this he expreſſeth by bringing forth ſweet fruits of righteouſneſſe. [a] verſ. 5.

7 [b] Then he feeleth that Chriſt hath with- [b] verſ. 6.

8 He almost despaires for this.

9 Yet by priuate prayer seekes for Christ.

e verse.7. 10 e When that will not helpe, he resorts to the ministers of the word, at whose hands he finds no comfort.

d vers.8.9. 10. 11. 12. 13. 14. 15. 16. 11 d Not recouering his first estate, through impatience of the loue of Christ, he makes his misery knowne to strangers, to see if they can comfort him, and he somwhat comforts himselfe in describing Christs excellencie to them.

e vers.17. 12 e They then are rauished with him to seeke Christ, and require them to know where to finde him.

f cap. 6. 1. 13 f Answer is made in the assemblies of the Church.

g vers.2. 14 g After this communication the Christians faith & feeling reuiueth, Christ returning to him againe.

h vers.7. to the 7. verse. 15 h Then Christ assureth him in his heart of his loue and liking towards him.

i cap.7. 16 Giuing further assurance to him that he shall grow vp and be made fruitful in euery good grace.

17 After this the Christian comes in such a high measure to loue Christ, that nothing shall be able to seuer him from Christ.

LVII.

5. A fall into some sinne. The fift temptation is a fall into some great sinne, as Noah into drunkennes Dauid into Adulterie, and murder, Peter into the deniall of Christ. The exercise of a Christian in this temptation is this.

1 At the first his heart is vsually dulled and made secure with sinne.

2 Yet after a while there by some means ariseth in his heart a godly sorrow: which is when he is grieued for this onely cause, that by his sinne he hath displeased God, who hath beene to him so louing & mercifull a father, whose fauour he would be content to purchase, (so he might haue it and obtaine it) euen with the damnation of his owne soule.

k 2. Cor. 7. 11. 3 k Then he beginnes to repent himselfe of his sinnes, renuing afresh his former repentance.

4 This repentance he sheweth by seauen signes.

1 A care to leaue that sinne into which he is fallen. As they which crucified our Saviour Christ, when they were pricked in their hearts at Peters sermon, they shewed this care in saying, l Men and brethren what shall we doe to be saued? l Act. 2. 37

2 An Apologie, which is when a man in the heauinesse of his heart shall not excuse or defend his sinne, but confesse it to the Lord, and vtterly condemne himselfe for it, acknowledging withall that there is no way to escape the wrath of God, but by hauing Gods free pardon in Christ.

3 Indignation, which is an inward anger and fretting against his owne selfe, because he was so carelesse in looking to his own waies. m Peter when he had denied his master, he wept and that bitterly, which sheweth that with sorrowe, he had also an anger against himselfe. m Math. 26 75.

4 A feare rising not so much from the iudgements of God, as from this, least he should hereafter fal into the same sinne againe, and by so doing more grieuously displease God.

5 A desire euer after more carefully to please God.

6 Zeale in the seruice of God.

7 Reuenge vpon himselfe for his former offences: for example, if a man sinne in surfetting and drunkennes, if he euer repent, he will bring vnder his corrupt nature by sparing and moderating himselfe.

LVIII.

The sixt temptation is outward afflictions, which the godly in this life must suffer. Outward afflictions.

a If any will goe after Christ he must denie himselfe, take vp his owne crosse and followe him. And S. Peter saith, b that iudgement beginnes at Gods house. c And Paul, that we must enter into the kingdome of heauen through manifold temptations. The exercise of a Christian in affliction is this: a Math. 16 24. b 1. Pet. 4. 17. c Act. 14. 22.

1. d At the first they are very heauy & bitter. d Heb. 12. 11.

2 He suffereth them with great lenitie and patience, submitting himselfe vnder the hand of God. Yet e if they be in great measure, they will driue him to impatience. e Ioh. 3.

3 If they continue he shall feele (according to his owne iudgement) the f wrath & displeasure of God in his heart. f Iob. 6. 2. 3

4 g His old sinnes will come a fresh into his remembrance, and trouble him. Hee is sleepie, h and in his sleepe he hath visions, and dreames, and anxietie of spirit. g Iob. 13. 26. h 1. Reg. 19. 4. 5. 7.

5 i In this misery God supports his faith, that it faile not, and he then forsake Christ. i Iob. 13. 15.

6 k He feeling thus Gods power to strengthen him, hath experience of it in himselfe. k Rom. 5. 4

7 From experience proceeds hope, that

the

the grace of God ſhall neuer be wanting vnto him in any afflictions to come: and as he hopeth, ſo it comes to paſſe.

l Iob.42.5.6. m Heb.12.11. 8. With this hope is ioyned [l] a ſerious humiliation before the Lord [m] with the fruit of peace and righteouſneſſe.

If the afflictions be for Chriſts cauſe vnto death, then he in more ſpeciall manner is filled with the ioy of the holie Ghoſt, and he is then ſtabliſhed with the greateſt meaſure of the ſtrength of Chriſt, that no torment is able to foile and to bring him from Chriſt, though the Chriſtian ſhould die a thouſand times for it. According to that of Paul, [n] To you it is giuen for Chriſt not onely to beleue in him, but alſo to ſuffer for his ſake. And this is grounded vpon the promiſe of God, [o] When thou paſſeſt through the waters I will be with thee, and through the flouds that they doe not ouerflowe thee: when thou walkeſt through the very fire, thou ſhalt not be burnt: neither ſhall the flame kindle vpon thee.

LIX.

Hence ariſeth a notable difference, betweene the godly and the wicked, in the ſuffering of afflictions. A reprobate the more the Lord laieth his hand on him, the more he [p] murmureth & rebelleth againſt god: it is contrarie with the true Chriſtian: none feeleth more the power and rebellion of ſinne then he: none is more aſſaulted by Satan then he, and oftentimes it commeth to paſſe that God withdraweth the ſignes of his fauour from him, and lets him feele his wrath. And this is the greateſt temptation of all other, when a man ſhall ſee the Lord to be his enemie, and to his thinking to arme himſelfe againſt him to his deſtruction. As [q] Ezechias did who ſaith, that the Lord did craſh his bones like a Lyon. Or [r] as Iob ſaith, that the arrowes of the almightie were in him, and the venime thereof drunke vp his ſpirit, and the terrours of God did fight againſt him. Yet the true Chriſtian when the world, the fleſh, and the deuil, and God himſelfe too are againſt him, doeth euen then moſt of all reſt in the Lord, and by faith cleaue to him. [s] Though God ſhould deſtroy me, yet would I truſt in him. (ſaith Iob.) [t] And Dauid ſaith, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? Whē he ſaith that God had forſaken him, it may ſeeme to be the complaint of a deſperate man, not having ſo much as one ſparke of faith: yet then he ſaith, My God, my God: which words containe a confeſſion proceeding from true faith: ſo that in Dauid it appeareth, that the faithfull when they feele themſelues forlorne, and vtterly reiected of God, according to the ſenſe and iudgement of the fleſh, yet by faith they can apprehend his hidden mercie, and behold it a farre off in the glaſſe of his promiſe. And ſo they doe often ſhew contrarie affectiōs in their praiers as Dauid doth. [u] Iacob when he wraſtled with the Angel for life & death, never gaue ouer: & when he was foild he would not ceaſe before the Lord had bleſſed him. This his wraſtling is a type of the conflicts which the faithfull are to haue with the Lord himſelfe, who vſeth to bring his owne children (as it were) to the field: & aſſaileth them with the one hand, and with the other he holdeth them vp, that ſo he may prooue and exerciſe their faith. And for this cauſe the church [x] is called by the name of Iacob. An example may be had in the woman of Canaan. [y] Firſt, our Sauiour Chriſt gaue her faith, & by that faith ſhee was mooued to ſeeke to him: but whē ſhee was once come to him, he gaue her three repulſes. Firſt by ſaying nothing. Secondly, by denying her. Thirdly, by calling her dogge. Thus Chriſt in appearance made ſhewe, as though he would neuer haue graunted her requeſt. But ſhee at euery repulſe was more inſtant, crying more earneſtly vnto him: and ſhee plainly oppoſed her ſelfe to him, & would take no denial: for ſuch is the nature of true faith. Wherfore the faithfull whē they feele themſelues ouerwhelmed with ſinne, turmoiled with conflicts of Satan, when they feele the anger of God offended with thē, yet they can euen then lift vp their eielaids, and giue a glimps at the brazen ſerpent Ieſus Chriſt, and can fling themſelues into the armes of Gods mercie, and catch hold on the hand of God buffeting them, and kiſſe it.

LX.

By theſe temptations it comes to paſſe, that a Chriſtian though he cannot fall finally from Chriſt, yet he may fall very dāgerouſly from his former eſtate. Firſt, the graces of God may be by his default leſſened in him: elſe Paul would not haue giuē out theſe exhortations, [a] queneh not the ſpirit. [b] Grieue not the holy ſpirit of God, by whome ye are ſealed vnto the day of redemption. Secondly, the graces of God may be buried in him, and couered for a time, ſo that he may bee like a man in a traunce, who both by his owne ſenſe and by the iudgement of the Phyſition is taken for dead.

dead. This was the estate of Peter, who though he confessed that Christ was the c Mat.26. 69,70. Sonne of the liuing Lord, c yet he denied him and forswore him at the voice of a damsell. Thirdly, he may fall againe into the same sinne after repentance. Indeede this is a dangerous case; yet it may befall a true Christian. Otherwise when as the Israelites (Gods people) had fallen away from him by their sinnes, & idolatries, he would not d Es.14.18 still haue offered them mercie, d as he doth e 2.Cor.5. 20. by his Prophets. And e Paul prayeth the Corinthians in Christs stead that they would be reconciled to God: who neuertheles were before reconciled to God. Fourthly, hee may commit a sin of presumption, which is a fearefull sinne, being done wittingly of knowledge, and willinglie, and with some f Ps.19.13. wilfulnesse. Therefore Dauid praied, f Keep thy seruant from presumptuous sinnes: and to shewe himselfe to be in daunger of it, he prayeth further, let them not haue dominion ouer me. Lastly, he may fall into despaire of Gods mercie for a time, and this is a dangerous sin. For he which despaires, makes all the promises of God to be false: and this sinne of all other is most contrary to true sauing faith. In this estate was Dauid g Ps 77.11 when being in trouble, he said, g this is my death. And Paul shewes that the incestuous man might haue fallen into desperath 2.Cor.2 2. on, h when he saith, Comfort him, least he be swallowed vp of ouermuch heauinesse. And it must be remembred that the Church of Rome erreth in this, that shee teacheth desperation to be a sinne against the holy Ghost. This sinne against the holy Ghost is a blasphemy spoken against the known truth of Gods word, or a deniall of Christ, of a wilfull and obstinate malice. But desperation may arise through ignorance of a mans owne estate: through horrour of conscience for sinne: through an often relapse into some sinne: through the ouerdeepe consideration of a mans owne vnworthinesse: lastly, by abiuration of the trueth, through compulsion and feare.
i What is to be thought of Fr. Spira
i This befell Francis Spira, who after his Apostasie despaired. Yet they are much ouerseene that write of him as a damned creature. For first, who can tell whether he despaired finally or no? Secondly, in the very middest of his desperation, he complained of the hardnesse of his heart, which made him that he could not pray: no doubt then he felt his hardnesse of heart: and the feeling of corruption in the heart, is by some contrary grace; so that we may conueniently thinke, that he was not quite bereft of all goodnesse: though hee neuer felt it then, nor shewed it to the beholders.

LXI.

The cause why a Christian cannot quite fall away from grace, is this: after that he is sanctified, he receiueth from God another speciall grace, which may be called Corroboration. For he hath in him not onely the sanctifying, but also the strengthening power of Christ. Therefore Paul praieth to the Ephesians i that they may be strengthened in the inner man: for the Colossians, k that they might be strengthened with the glorious power of Christ. And of himselfe he saith l that he is able to doe all things through the power of Christ that strengtheneth him. m Dauid saith, that God renueth them that feare him, as the Eagle renueth her decaied strength. From hence as from a speciall cause ariseth Patience and Perseuerance vnto the ende: for when a man is supported by the power of Christ, he may be able to beare many crosses patiently with a contented minde, and perseuere in bearing of it, howe long soeuer the crosse endureth.

LXII.

Thus much of the estate of a Christian in this life. Nowe I will adde some reasons in the way of perswasion to al men, but especially to wordlings, and to loose professours of the Gospell, that they would vtterly denie themselues, d & vse al meanes to become true Christians by beeing made newe creatures in Christ, and e by leading such a life as may adorne the Gospell of Christ.

A perswasion to christianitie.

d 2.Cor.5. 17.

e Tit.2.10

My first reason is this; the man that liueth in this world, not beeing a true Christian, is farre more vile thē the basest creature of all, euen the dogge, or toade. For first he is nothing else but a filthie dunghill of all abomination and vncleannesse, the f stinke whereof hath infected heauen and earth, and no pertumes could euer delay it in the nostrils of God, but onely the suffering of Christ, beeing a g sacrifice of a sweet smelling sauour to God. We make it very dainty to come neere a lazar man that is ful of botches, blaines, and sores; but much more are those men to be abhorred, who haue lien many yeares starke h dead in sinnes and trespasses: and therefore nowe doe nothing else but rot and stinke in thē like vgly loathsome carrions.

h Eph.2.1.

Secondly, he which is no Christian is vnder the power of darkeneſſe, hauing Sathan for his prince [i] and God, and giuing vnto him in token of homage his beſt parts, euen his minde and conſcience [k] to be his dwelling place: and his whole conuerſation is nothing elſe but a perpetuall obedience to Sathan. If Atheiſts & worldlings, and carnall goſpellers were perſwaded of the truth of this (as it is moſt true) it would make them howle & cry, though nowe they liue at eaſe without feeling any pricke of conſcience for ſinne. And if they had but the leaſt ſenſe of it in the world it would make their flintie hearts to bleede, and it would make them ſhed riuers of teares. But how long ſhall they continue in this vile eſtate? Truely, vntill they come to Chriſt: awake therefore thou that ſleepeſt, and ſtand vp from the dead, & Chriſt ſhall giue thee light: open thine heart to receiue Chriſt, and then he will come and bind the ſtrong man Sathan, and caſt him out, and dwell in thee himſelfe.

i 2. Cor. 4. 4.

k Luk. 11. 24.

Thirdly, he which is no Chriſtian is in danger of all the iudgements of God, ſo that euery moment ſome of them may befall him. He may periſh ſuddenly by water with the olde world, he may be conſumed with fire and brimſtone with Sodome and Gomorrha, he may be ſwallowed vp of the earth with Dathan, and Abiram, he may hang himſelfe with Iudas, hee may haue his braines daſhed againſt the groũd and be eaten vp of dogges with Iesabel, he may die in hardnes of heart with Pharao, he may deſpaire with Caine and Iudas, hee may be ſtricken with ſuddaine death with Ananias and Saphira his wife, hee may be eaten with wormes with Herod, he may be ſmitten with trembling that hee cannot heare Gods word with Fœlix, he may void his guts at the ſtoole with Arius, hee may crie at his death that hee is damned with Latomus, he may bee left vnto himſelfe to mocke, blaſpheme, and renounce Chriſt with Iulian: and he may ſuffer many more fearefull iudgements, whereof the Lorde hath [l] great ſtore, and all tend to the confounding of them which will not be humbled vnder his hand. Contrariwiſe, the true Chriſtian is ſo farre out of the reach of Gods iudgements that they cannot hurt him. [m] Chriſt is a couering and a cloud againſt the heate and tempeſt of Gods iudgements, [n] when a mans heart is ſprinckled with the blood of this immaculate Lambe, all the plagues of God paſſe ouer him. In the deſtruction of Ieruſalem the [o] righteous beare a marke in their foreheads and are ſaued. Therefore let him that hath regard to his owne ſafetie become a Chriſtian.

n Exod. 12. 22.

o Ezech. 9. 4.

Thirdly, the man which is no Chriſtian is in danger of eternall death and damnation in hell fire: & they which fall into this eſtate it had beene tenne thouſand fold better for thẽ if they had neuer bin borne: [p] for they are quite ſeparated from the preſence of God and from his glorie: all the companie they haue is with the deuill and his angels. Their bodies and ſoules are tormented with infinite horror and anguiſh ariſing of the feeling of the whole wrath of God, in which as into a bottomleſſe ſea, they are plunged. Thus they are alwayes dying, and yet are neuer dead. Furthermore, the length of this torment muſt bee conſidered which greatly aggrauates the paine. If a man might bee deliuered from the paines of hell when hee had ſuffered them ſo many yeares as there bee droppes in the ſea, or litle ſands in the whole earth, it were ſome comfort: but after that thoſe yeares be expired there ſhall come no releaſe, but the damned ſhall continue in ſhriking, yelling, and gnaſhing of teeth, enduring the conſuming heate of Gods wrath without any ende for euer and euer. Yea, to goe further, a wicked man carrieth an hell about him in his life, namely, an euill conſcience, which if it be neuer ſo little touched with any part of Gods anger, a man ſhall feele himſelfe to haue euen the pangs of hell in his heart. Nowe therefore they that would eſcape out of this helliſh and damnable eſtate, while they haue time let them pray for the pardon of their ſinnes in Chriſt, and walke according to the ſpirit in newnes of life; and then they may aſſure themſelues, that there is no condemnation can belong to them. And it muſt be alwayes remembred that he which would liue, when he is dead, muſt die while he is aliue, namely to ſinne. And againe, hee which would riſe to eternall life in the day of iudgement, muſt riſe from ſin before he die, vnto newnes of life.

p 1. Theſſ. 1. 9.

A godleſſe man carrieth hell in his boſome.

The fourth reaſon: God hath appointed vnto euery man that liueth in the Church a certaine time of repentance, and of comming to Chriſt. And he which miſpendeth that time and is not made a Chriſtian then, can neuer bee ſaued. This made our Sauiour Chriſt weepe for Ieruſalem, and ſay, [q] O if thou hadſt knowne at the leaſt in this thy day, thoſe things which belong

q Luk. 19. 42.

belong to thy peace, but now are they hidden from thine eyes. And he further signifieth r verſ. 44. the deſtruction of Ieruſalem,[r] becauſe ſhe knew not the time of her viſitation. Againe, the neglecting of this time is one cauſe, s Luk. 13. 24. why not one or two, but many [s] ſhal ſeeke to enter into the kingdome of heauen and yet ſhall not be able. It is a marueilous thing, that they which ſeeke to be ſaued ſhould periſh, but the fault is theirs which ſeeke whe it is too late. Now therfore thou ſecure worldling, thy conſcience telleth thee that thou haſt not yet repented, and that thou art not as yet a liuely member of Ieſus Chriſt. And thou knoweſt further, that howſoeuer thou art aliue at this time, yet thou haſt no leaſe of thy life. God may call thee forth of this world the next yere, the next weeke, the next houre: yea he may ſtrike thee with a ſudden death at this very preſent. And in very truth, if thou goeſt forth of this world being no repentant ſinner, thou goeſt damned to hell. Wherefore delaie not one minute of an houre longer, but with all ſpeed repent & turne vnto God, and bring forth fruites worthy of amendment of life, that all thy ſinnes may be done away, when the day of death, or the day of iudgement ſhall be. And doe not thinke with thy ſelfe that it ſhall be ſufficient to deferre thy turning vnto God till the laſt ende. For late repentance is ſeldome true repentance. And he which continueth long in any ſinne is in a dangerous caſe. If a man lie long in any diſeaſe he will ſcarce recouer his former health: and he which is growne in the cuſtome of any ſinne, and the ſinne is become ripe in him, it is a thouſand to one, he is neuer ſaued; according to that of t Iam. 1. 13 Saint Iames, [t] ſinne being perfited bringeth forth death.

The fift reaſon. Eternall life is a thing deſired of all men: yet none ſhall be made partakers of it, but the true chriſtian, and the glorious eſtate of this life would moue any man to be a Chriſtian. Firſt of all, they which haue eternall life are freed from all paines, ſickneſſes, infirmities, hunger, thirſt, cold, wearines; from all ſinne, as anger, forgetfulneſſe, ignorance, from hell, death, damnation, Satan, and from euery thing that cauſeth miſerie: according to that of Saint Iohn: And [u] God will wipe u Reu. 21. 4 away all teares from their eyes: & there ſhall be no more death, neither ſorrow neither crying, neither ſhall there be any more paine: for the firſt things are paſſed. Secõdly, the faithfull ſhall be in the preſence of Gods maieſtie in heauen there to behold his face, that is, his glorie, as our Sauiour Chriſt x Iohn. 17. 24. ſaith, Father, [x] I will that they which thou haſt giuen me, be with me euen where I am, that they may behold my glorie which thou
y Pſal. 16. 11. haſt giuen me. And Dauid ſaith, In [y] thy preſence is fulneſſe of ioy, and at thy right hand Reu. 22. 4. there are pleaſures for euermore. Thirdly, z 1. Cor. 15. 28. they [z] ſhall haue ſuch an excellent cõmunion with God, that he ſhal be vnto them all in all. For in the end of the world when the whole number of the elect is accompliſhed, Chriſt ſhall preſent them to his father, and as he is Mediatour he ſhal ceaſe to be a King, a Prieſt, a Prophet: for though the efficacie of his offices be euerlaſting: yet the execution of them ſhall a 1. Cor. 15 24. ceaſe, as Paul ſaith, [a] Then ſhall be the end, when he hath deliuered vp the kingdome to God euen the father, when he hath put downe all rule, all authoritie and power. Againe, among the elect there ſhall not be king and ſubiect, father, mother, child, maſter, ſeruant, noble, ignoble, rich, poore, liuing dead. Some will ſay, what then ſhall be? I anſwer, one glorious & euerlaſting God, the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghoſt ſhall be in all the elect, all that heart can wiſh and deſire. Men ſhall not be in darknes, neither ſhall they need the light of the Sunne, Moone, or Starres. God himſelfe b Reu. 21. 23. immediatly ſhall be their light, [b] as Iohn ſaith, And the citie hath no need of the Sunne, neither of the Moone to ſhine in it, for the glorie of God doth light it, and the Lambe is the light of it. Men ſhall not then neede meate, drinke, cloathing, ſleepe, recreation, fire, ſhade, reſpiration, or any other ſuch like, but God himſelfe immediately ſhall be their life, & all things concerning life by Chriſt. Which Iohn ſignifieth when c Reu. 22. 1. 2. he ſaith, that he ſaw a pure riuer of water of life, eleere as chryſtall, proceeding out of the throne of God, and of the Lambe: there beeing by either ſide of it the tree of life which bare two manner of fruits, and gaue fruit euery moneth. And whereas God is continually to be worſhipped in heauen: they need no other tabernacle or temple thereunto, but God himſelfe ſhall be their temple: as d Reu. 21. 22. Iohn ſaith, [d] I ſawe no temple therein: for the Lord God almightie and the Lambe are the temple of it. Fourthly, from this glorious communion which is betweene God and Chriſt as hee is man, and all the Saints which are his members, there ariſeth an vnſpeakable ioy and gladneſſe, where-

[e] Pſal.36. with they are filled. Dauid ſaith, [e] that gods children ſhall be ſatisfied with the fatneſſe of his houſe, & that he ſhall giue them drinke out of the riuers of his pleaſures. This ioy vndoubtedly is infinit, and the Saints are not onely repleniſhed with it, but they are alſo ſwallowed vp of it as with an huge and infinite ſea of waters, as may appeare in Peter, who at the transfiguration of Chriſt was ſo rauiſhed out of meaſure with ioy at the ſight of it, that he quite forgot himſelfe, ſaying [f] to Chriſt, Maſter, it is good being here: let vs make three Tabernacles, one for thee, one for Moſes, one for Elias. Laſtly, out of this communion ariſeth a perfect loue of God, wherby the Saints loue God with all their hearts, with al their ſoules, & ſtrength, and this loue ſheweth it ſelfe in that they are eternally occupied in [g] worſhipping God, by ſinging of ſongs of praiſe and thanksgiuing vnto him. Nowe then ſeeing the kingdome of heauen is ſo glorious, and none can haue it but the true Chriſtian, let all men account the beſt things in the world [h] as droſſe and dung, ſo that they may obtaine Chriſt and his righteouſneſſe.

[g] Reu 7. 11.12.

[h] Phil.3.8.

The laſt reaſon is the endleſſe loue of Ieſus Chriſt ſhewed in his death & paſſion. Thou art by nature the child of wrath and vengeance. Sathā hath wounded thee with many a deadly wound of ſinne: thou lieſt bleeding at the heart, and art like to die eternally. Thou beeing in this eſtate, there is no man on earth, no Saint in heauen, no Angel, no creature at all, is able to helpe thee; Chriſt onely was able: he therfore came downe from heauen and became man, for this cauſe, to worke thy deliuerance. Furthermore in the curing of the wound of ſinne, no hearbe, no water, no plaiſter, no phyſicke can doe thee any good: only the bodie and blood of Chriſt is ſoueraigne for this matter, being ſtieped in the wrath of God. He therefore ſubiected himſelfe to the death of the croſſe, vpō which he ſuffered the wrath of God due to the ſin of mankind: & of his own heart blood he tempered for them a ſoueraigne medicine to heale all thy woundes and ſores. Nowe therefore deſpiſe not this mercie; ſeeke vnto Chriſt, lay open all thy ſores, pray him that he would vouchſafe thee if it be but one droppe of his blood; then he will come vnto thee by his holy ſpirit, he will waſh and ſupple thy wounds in his blood, and bind them vp. He is the [a] tree of life, the leaues whereof heale the nations. If thou get but one leafe of him thou art well, it will heale thee and reſtore thy dead ſoule, that thou maiſt liue eternally in the kingdome of heauen. If this reaſon will not moue thee to be a Chriſtian, thy caſe is deſperate. It is the beſt reaſō that Peter could vſe to this purpoſe. As obedient children (ſaith he) faſhiō not your ſelues vnto the former luſts of your ignorance, [b] but as he which hath called you is holy, ſo be ye holy in all manner of conuerſation. His reaſon followeth: [c] Knowing that ye were not redeemed with corruptible things, as ſiluer & gold from your vaine conuerſation receiued by the tradition of the Fathers, but with the pretious blood of Chriſt, as a lambe vndefiled and without ſpotte.

Thus much haue I ſpoken to the worldling, who in his heart makes no more account of Chriſt then of his old ſhooes: & who had rather be without Chriſt, then be without his pigges, with the Gaderens. Math.8. Nowe for the true Chriſtians I haue nothing to ſay but this. The Lord increaſe the number of them. And the [d] Lord fulfil them with the knowledge of his will in all wiſdome & ſpirituall vnderſtanding, that they may walke worthy of him, and pleaſe him in al things, being fruitfull in all good workes and increaſing in the knowledge of God. And whereas they are at continuall warre againſt the fleſh, the world, and the deuill: Lord Ieſus ſtrengthen them with all might through thy glorious power, vnto all patience & long ſuffering with ioyfulneſſe. And deare father of all mercie plant that gouernment in thy Church euery where which thou haſt reuealed in thy word, that thy Saints may worſhippe thee in thoſe meanes, in that order and comelineſſe, which thou haſt appointed, abounding in righteouſneſſe, peace of conſcience, and ioy of the holy Ghoſt. A DIALOGVE OF THE STATE of a Chriſtian man, gathered here and there out of the ſweete and ſauorie writings of Maſter Tindall and Maſter Bradford.

Imotheus. Becauſe of our ancient acquaintance and familiarity (deare friend Euſebius) I wil make bold with you to aske ſuch queſtions as may be for my edificatiō and cōfort, and of no other matters but euen of religion, wherof I ſee you are an old profeſſour. And the firſt of all, let me be bold to aske this queſtion of you, howe it pleaſed God to make you a true chriſtian, & a member of Chriſt Ieſus, whom I ſee you ſerue continually with a feruent zeale.

Euſebius. For that olde acquaintance that was betweene vs, and for that you are deſirous to liue a godly life in Chriſt Ieſus, I ſhill not conceale the good worke of my God in me: therfore I pray you marke a litle what I ſhall ſay, and I will declare vnto you the trueth euen forth of the feeling of mine owne conſcience. The fall of Adam did make me the heire of vengeance and wrath of God, and heire of eternall damnation, and did bring me into captiuitie & bondage vnder the deuill: and the deuill was my Lord, my ruler, my head, my gouernour and my prince, yea and my God. And my will was locked and knit faſter vnto the will of the deuill, then could a hundred thouſand chaines bind a man vnto a poaſt. Vnto the deuils will did I conſent withall my heart, withall my minde, with all my might, power, ſtrength, will, & life: ſo that the lawe and will of the deuill was written as well in my heart as in my members, and I ran headlong after the deuill with full ſaile, and the whole ſwing of all the power I had, as a ſtone caſt into the aire commeth downe naturally of it ſelfe with all the violent ſwing of his owne waight. O with what a deadly and venemous heart did I hate mine enemies? With how great malice of minde inwardly did I ſlay and murder? With what violence and rage, yea with what feruent luſt committed I adultery, fornication, and ſuch like vncleanneſſe? With what pleaſure and delectation like a glutton ſerued I my belie? With what diligence deceiued I? How buſily ſought I the things of the worlde? Whatſoeuer I did worke, imagine, or ſpeake, was abominable in the ſight of God, for I could referre nothing vnto the honour of God: neither was his law or wil written in my mēbers, or in my heart, neither was there any more power in me to followe the will of God, then in a ſtone to aſcend vpward of it ſelfe. And beſides that, I was a ſleepe in ſo deepe blindneſſe that I could neither ſee nor feele in what miſery, thraldome, and wretchednes I was, til Moſes came and awaked me and publiſhed the lawe. When I heard the law truly preached how that I ought to loue and honour God with all my ſtrength and might from the low bottome of the heart, becauſe he did create me Lord ouer it, & my neighbour, yea mine enemies as my ſelfe inwardly from the ground of my heart, becauſe God hath made them after the likneſſe of his owne Image, & they are his ſons as wel as I, & Chriſt hath bought them with his blood, & made them heires of euerlaſting life as well as I: and howe I ought to do whatſoeuer God biddeth, and to abſtaine from whatſoeuer God forbiddeth, with all loue and meekeneſſe, with a feruent and burning luſt from the center of the heart. Then began my conſcience to rage againſt the law and againſt God. No ſea be it neuer ſo great a tempeſt was ſo vnquiet, for it was not poſſible for me a naturall man to conſent to the lawe that it ſhould be good, or that God ſhould be righteous which made the law: in as much as it was contrary vnto my nature, and dāned me and all that I could doe, and neuer ſhewed me where to fetch helpe, nor preached any mercie [a] but onely ſet me at variance with God, and prouoked and ſtirred me to raile on God, and to blaſpheme him as a cruell tyrant. And indeede it was not poſſible to doe otherwiſe, to think that God made me of ſo poyſoned a nature, & gaue me an impoſſible lawe to performe: I being not borne again by the ſpirit & my wit, reaſon, and will beeing ſo faſt glewed, yea nailed and chained vnto the wil of the deuill. This was the captiuity & bondage whence Chriſt deliuered me, redeemed, & looſed me. His bloud, his death, his patience in ſuffering rebukes and wrongs and the full wrath of God, his prayers and faſtings, his meekneſſe and fulfilling the vttermoſt points of the lawe, appeaſed the wrath of God, brought the fauour of God to me againe, obtained that God ſhould loue me firſt, and be my father, and that a mercifull father, that would conſider my infirmitie and weaknes, and would giue me his ſpirit againe, which he had taken away in Adam, to rule, gouerne and ſtrengthen me, and to breake the bands of Satan, wherein I was ſo ſtraight bound. Whē Chriſt was on this wiſe preached, and the promiſes rehearſed which are contained in the booke of God (which preaching is called the Goſpell or glad tydings,) and I had deepely conſidered the ſame: then my heart began to waxe ſoft and melt at the bounteous mercie of God, and kindnes ſhewed of Chriſt. For when the goſpel was preached, the ſpirit of God (mee thought) entred into my heart, and opened my inward eies and wrought a liuely faith in me, and made my woefull conſcience feele and taſte how ſweet a thing the bitter death of Chriſt is, and how mercifull and louing God is through Chriſts purchaſing and merits, and made me to beginne to loue a gaine, and to conſent to the lawe of God how that it is good & ought ſo to be, and that God is righteous that made it: laſtly, it wrought in me a deſire to be whole, and to hunger and thirſt after more righteouſneſſe and more ſtrength to fullfill the law more perfectly: and in all that I do or leaue vndone to ſeeke Gods honour and his will with meekeneſſe, euermore condemning the imperfectnes of my deedes by the law.

Now then this good worke of God to my ſaluation ſtandeth in two points, the working of the law, and the working of the goſpel: the preaching of the law was a key that bound and damned my conſcience: the preaching of the goſpel was another key that looſed me again. Theſe two ſalues (I meane the law and the goſpell (vſed God and his preacher to heale and cure me a wreched ſinner withall. The law did driue out my diſeaſe and made it appeare, and was a ſharpe ſalue, and fretting corraſiue, and killed the dead fleſh, and looſed and drew the ſore out by the root, and all corruption. It pulled from me all truſt and confidence I had in my ſelfe, and in mine owne works, merits, deſeruings, and ceremonies, and robbed me of all my righteouſneſſe, and made me poore. It killed me in ſending me downe to hell, and bringing me almoſt to vtter deſperation, and prepared the way of the Lord, as it is written of Iohn Baptiſt. For it was not poſſibe that Chriſt ſhould come vnto me as long as I truſted in my ſelfe or in any wordly thinge, or had any righteouſneſſe of mine owne, or riches of holy works. Then afterward came the goſpell a more gentle plaiſter, which ſuppled and ſwaged the woundes of my conſcience & brought mee health: it brought the ſpirit of God, which looſed the bandes of Satan, and coupled me to God and his will through a ſtrong faith and feruent loue. Which bandes were too ſtrong for the deuill, the world, or any creature to looſe. And I a poore and wretched ſinner felt ſo great mercie, that in my ſelfe I was moſt ſure that God would not forſake me, or euer withdraw his mercie and loue from me. And I boldly cried out with Paule, ſaying, Who ſhall ſeperate me from the loue of God? &c. Finally, as before when I was bound to the deuill, and his will I wrought all manner of wickednes, for I could do no otherwiſe, it was my nature: euen ſo now ſince I am coupled to God by Chriſts blood, I doe good freely, becauſe of the ſpirit and this my nature. And thus I truſt I haue ſatisfied your firſt demand.

Timoth. Yea, but me thinks you doe too much condemne your ſelfe in reſpect of ſinne. For I can remember that from your childhood you were of a good and a gentle nature, and your behauiour was alwayes honeſt and ciuill, and you could neuer abide the companie of them that were royſters and ruffians, and ſwearers, and blaſphemers, and contemners of Gods word, and drunkards, which now are tearmed good fellowes. And your dealing with all men hath bin euer commended for good, faithfull and iuſt. What meane you then to make your ſelfe ſo abominable and accurſed, and to ſay you were ſo wholie addicted vnto wickedneſſe, and your will ſo fearefully and miſerably in captiuitie vnto the will of the deuill?

Euſeb. Brother Timothie, I knowe what I ſay, God giue me grace to ſpeake it with more liuely feeling of my weaknes & with a more bitter deteſtation of my ſin. By nature through the fall of Adā am I the child of wrath, heire of the vengeance of god by birth: yea & ſo from my firſt conception: and I had my fellowſhip with the damned deuils vnder the power of darkeneſſe and rule of Satan, while I was yet in my mothers wombe: and allthough I ſhewed not the fruits of ſinne as ſoone as I was borne nor long after: yet was I full of the naturall poiſon, from whence all wicked deedes doe ſpring, and cannot but but ſinne outwardly, as ſoone as I am able to worke (be I neuer ſo young) if occaſion be giuen: for my nature is to ſinne as is the nature of a ſerpent to ſting: and as a ſerpent yet young, or yet vnbrought forth is full of poiſon and cannot afterward (when time and occaſion is giuen) but bring forth the fruits thereof; And as an Adder, a toad, or a ſnake is hated of man, not for the euill it had done but for the poiſon that is in it, and hurt which it cannot but doe: ſo am I hated of God for that naturall poiſon which is conceiued and borne with me before I doe any outward euill. And as the euill which a venemous worme doth, maketh it not a ſerpent, but becauſe it is a venemous worme, therefore doth it euill, and poiſoneth: euen ſo doth not our euill deedes make vs euill firſt, but becauſe we are of nature euill, therefore doe wee euill, and thinke euill, to eternall damnation by the law, and are contrarie to the will of God in our will and in all things conſent vnto the will of the fiend.

Timoth. As yet I neuer had ſuch a feeling of my ſinne as you haue had, and although I would bee loath to commit any ſinne, yet the Law was neuer ſo terrible vnto me, condemning mee, pronouncing the ſentence of death againſt me, and ſtinging my conſcience with feare of euerlaſting paine, as I perceiue it hath bin vnto you: therefore I feare oftentimes leaſt my profeſſion of religion ſhould bee onely in truth meere hypocriſie, I pray you let mee heare your minde.

Euſeb. A true ſaying it is that the right way to goe vnto heauen, is to ſaile by hell, and there is no man liuing that feeleth the power and vertue of the blood of Chriſt, which firſt hath not felt the paines of hell. But yet in theſe paines there is a difference: and it is the will of God, that his children in their conuerſion ſhall ſome of them

But the Lord which bringeth forth euen to the borders of hell his beſt beloued when they forget themſelues, knoweth alſo howe well to bring them backe againe. Goe no further then downward, but lift vp thy heart together with thine eye, & ſeeke vnto the Lord, to reach vnto thee his mercifull and a helping hand.

Againe, in the Scriptures wee finde examples of men conuerted vnto the Lorde without any vehement ſorrow of their ſins. The ſame may be ſpoken of the Iailer, and of them which heard Peters ſermon at Ieruſalem, who for all that they had murdred our Sauiour Chriſt, yet in their conuerſion, their hearts were onely for the time pricked. So then God in preparing vs, which in truth are nothing but fleſhly and ſtinking dunghills of ſinne, nay, very vncleaneſſe and pollution it ſelfe, I ſay in preparing vs to be the Temples of his holy Spirit to dwell in, and the ſtorehouſes to hoord vp his heauenly graces in, doth otherwhiles vſe a milde and gentle remedie, and maketh the Lawe to looke vpon vs, though with no louing and gentle, yet with no fearefull countenance, & otherwhiles in ſome hee ſetteth a ſharpe edge vnto the Law, and maketh it to wound the heart very deepe, and as a ſtrong corraſiue to torment them, and to frette and gnaw vpon their consciences. And we see by experience that a botch or a bile in a mans body, is as well eased of the corruption that is in it by the pricking of the point of a smal needle, as by the launcing of a great raser. Wherefore if God by his spirit haue wrought in you sorrow for sinne in any smal measure, though not in as great measure as you desire, you haue no cause to complaine: and in that you are grieued with a godly sorrow for your sinnes, it is a good token of the grace of God in you.

Timoth. Surely this is a great comfort you giue me, God make me thankfull for it. And I pray you more plainly shew me the state of your life till this houre, that I and all other may take warning by it.

Euseb. That which may doe good vnto other men I will neuer conceale, though it be to my perpetuall shame. As I was conceiued and borne in sinne, so my parents brought me vp in ignorance, and neuer shewed me my shame & miserie by Gods law: and liued a long time, euen as a man in a dead sleepe or trance, and in truth I liued as though there were neither heauen nor hell, neither God nor deuill. And the deuill himselfe (as I now perceiue) did often perswade my secure conscience that I was the child of God, and should be saued as well as the best man in the world: and I yeelded to his perswasion, and did verily thinke it: so that whē the preacher for wickednesse and securitie denounced Gods iudgements and hell fire, I haue said vnto my neighbours that I hoped I should be saued, and he should goe to hell: and when I was asked whether I could keepe all the commandements of the law, I said that I could: and being asked whether I neuer sinned, I said I thought that otherwhiles I did; but for them which were but fewe, I hoped God would haue mercie, and haue me excused, and all my neighbours were glad of my companie, they spoke well of me, and I was taken for an honest man when as indeede before God I was a vile beast, and the child of wrath, inspired with the spirit of the deuill continually. Well, after I heard the Law preached, and saw & remembred many fearefull iudgements of God vpon men, whom I in reason thought were as good mē as I, then I begā to consider mine owne estate, and to perceiue my sinnes, and my cursednes, and vpon a time aboue all other, the curse of the law made me inwardly afraid, and my flesh then began to tremble and quake: thē I could not sleepe in the night season, I was afraid of euery thing. If I were in my house, I thought the house would fal on my head: if abroad, I thought euery crannie of the earth would open it selfe wider and swallow me. I started at euery strawe and at the mooning of a flie: my meat was loathsome vnto me, & I thought I was not worthy of so good a creature of God, and that God might iustly turne it to my bane: the griefe of my heart for my life past made me shedde aboundance of teares: and vpon that I remembred in Dauids psalmes, that his teares were his drink and that he did wet his bedde with teares. And now the deuill chaunged both his coate and his note, & in fearefull manner cried in my eares, that I was a reprobate, his child: that none of Gods childrē were as I am, that this griefe of my soule was the beginning of hel. And the greater was my paine, because I durst not open my minde vnto any for feare they should haue mocked me, & haue made a iest of it. Wherfore I was faine to go to a godly learned preacher; I shewed mine estate vnto him; after I had continued with him the space of two or three daies, I receiued comfort both by the promises of mercie, which he shewed me in the booke of God, & by his feruent, godly, and effectuall praiers: and I thanke God euer since I haue had some assurance (in spite of the deuill) that I do appertaine to the kingdome of heauen, and am now a member of Iesus Christ, and shall so continue for euer.

Timoth. How know you that God hath forgiuen your sinne?

Euseb. Because I am a sinner, and he is both able and willing to forgiue me.

Timoth. I grant that he is able to forgiue you, but how know you that he will? you know your sinnes are very great.

Euseb. I grant: but Christs passion is far greater: & although my sinnes were as red as skarlet & as purple, yet they shall be as white as snow, and as soft as wooll.

Timoth. Oh but you haue sinned very often.

Euseb. Tell me not I pray you what I haue done, but what I will doe.

Timoth. What will you doe?

Euseb. By Gods grace it is my full purpose, & my earnest praier to God is, hereafter to take better heede, and to amend my former life.

Timoth. Is that enough thinke you?

Euseb. What lacketh?

Timoth.

Timoth. The fauour and mercie of God, that may cleane forsake you.

Euseb. Nay, that I will neuer grant: for I am certainly perswaded of the fauour and mercy of God, euen to the saluation of my soule.

Tim. Oh shew me that, that is the thing I earnestly desire, to bee assured of Gods special goodnes, euen by your experience.

Euseb. According as God hath giuen me to feele the same, so will I shew it you. And first of al the dealing of God towards me is a good argument to me. In the first commandement, God hath commaunded me to take him to be my God, and in the Lords prayer, hee teacheth me to call him father: he hath created the word generally, and euery creature particularly for man and so for mee, to serue for my commoditie, necessitie, & admonition. Also he hath made mee for his owne image, hauing a reasonable soule, bodie, shape, where hee might haue made me a Toade, a Serpent, a swine, deformed, franticke. Moreouer, hee hath wonderfully preserued mee in my infancie, childhood, youth, middle age hitherto from manifold daungers and perills: all which doe confirme in me a perswasion of Gods fatherly loue: and that I should not doubt hereof: where I might haue beene borne of Turkes; loe it was the will of God that I should bee borne of Christian parents, and bee brought into Gods Church by Baptisme, which is the Sacrament of adoption, & requireth faith, as well of the remission of my sinnes, as of sanctification, & holinesse to be wrought of God in me by his grace and holy spirit: where I might haue beene borne in an ignorant time and religion, God would that I should be borne in these dayes, & in this countrie, where is more knowledge reuealed then euer was here, or in many places else is. Where I might haue beene of a corrupt iudgement, & intangled with many errours of Papistrie, and of the Familie of loue, & of the schisme of Browne, by GODS goodnesse my iudgement is reformed, and he hath lightened mine eies to see, and my heart to imbrace his sincere truth. By all which things I doe confirme my faith of this, that God alwayes hath bin, is, and will be for euer my father, & at my departing forth of this world will giue mee the crowne of euerlasting glory. Secondly, whē as man is euermore doubting of the promises of God bee they neuer so certaine, GOD of his infinite mercie to preuent all occasions of doubting, premiseth to giue his owne spirit as a pledge, pawne, or earnest penie vnto his children of their adoption, & election to saluation. Now, since it pleased God to call me from hypocrisie to be a member of his Church, I feele that in my self which I neuer felt or heard of before. In times past, I came to praiers & to the preaching of Gods word, euen as a Beare commeth to the stake; now the word of God is meate and drinke to me, and prayer is no burthen vnto mee, but my ordinarie exercise. If I rise in the morning I am not well till I haue praied & giuen thankes to God, if I doe any thing, it commeth into my minde to pray. In my prayers I find great ioy and comfort and exceeding fauour of God, I neuer thinke I can well take my rest, or doe any thing else except first I aske it at Gods hand in Christ. Lastly, when my minde and heart is wholly occupied in worldly matters, I am stirred vp, and as it were drawn to pray vnto God for the remission of my sinnes, and the assurance of my saluation, and in prayer I haue had those grones which for their greatnes cannot be expressed. Nowe from whence commeth all this? From the deuill? No. In these actions I haue found him my enemie, and a continuall hinderer of them. For he by his craft when I haue beene heauie and weake, hath assailed to prouoke mee to some sinnes wherevnto my cursed nature was most giuen, and I hauing yeelded to him, haue beene so hardened and blinded by those sinnes, that for a time I haue made light account of the word of God and prayer. Well then, peraduenture this came from mine owne selfe: No neither. This cursed nature of mine hath beene more pleased and delighted with sinne, and with the pleasures of the world, thē with such exercises from which it draweth me and presseth me downe as lead I cannot thinke that such a poisoning Cockatrice can lay such good egs, or that wilde crab trees (such as all men are in Adam) can bring forth sweete fruites, according to the will of God, except God plucke them forth of Adam, & plant them in the garden of his mercie, and stocke them, & graft the spirit of Christ in them. Wherefore these are the workes of Gods spirit, and my conscience is thereby certified that God hath giuen mee the spirit of adoption, and therefore that his fauour and mercie shall continue towards me for euer. For the gifts of God are with-without repentance, and whome God once loueth, him he loueth for euer. Thirdly, there be certaine fruits of Gods childrē which I finde in me by which I am confirmed in Gods fauour. S. Iohn in his first Epistle saith, that hereby we know that we are translated from death to life, because we loue the brethren. Truely, I feele in my heart a burning loue towards them which are good Christians, though I neuer knew them nor saw them, and I am very desirous to doe any good for them: and if drops of my heart blood would doe them good, they should haue them. Moreouer, I hate all sinne and wickednesse with a bitter hatred, and I long to see the comming of my Sauiour Christ to iudgement, I am grieued & disquieted because I cannot fulfill the law of God as I ought, al which I haue learned forth of Gods word to bee tokens of Gods children. And thus you see what euidence I haue to shewe that I am a true member of the Church militant, and in the fauour of God.

Tim. Haue you a stedfast faith in Christ, (as these arguments seeme to prooue) without all wauering, doubting, and distrusting of Gods mercie?

Euseb. No, no. This my faith which I haue in Christ is euen fought against with doubting, & euer assailed with desperation, not when I sinne onely, but also in tentations of aduersitie, into which God bringeth me to nurture mee and to shewe me mine owne heart, the hypocrisie and false thoughts that there lie hidde, my almost no faith at all, and as litle loue, euen then happely when I thought my selfe most perfect of all: for when temptations come I cannot stand, when I haue sinned faith is feeble, when wrong is done vnto me I cannot forgiue, in sickenesse, in losse of goods, in all tribulation I am vnpatient, when my neighbour needeth my helpe that I must depart with him of mine owne, then loue is cold. And thus I learne and feele that there is no power to doe good but of God onely. And in all such temptations my faith perisheth not vtterly, neither my loue & consent to the law of God: but they be weake, sicke, wounded, & not cleane dead. As I dealt with my parents beeing a childe, so nowe deale I towards God my louing father. When I was a child, my father and mother taught mee nurture and wisdome, I loued my father and all his commandements, & perceiued the goodnes he shewed mee, that my father loued me, and all his preceps are vnto my wealth and profit, & that my father commandeth nothing for any need he hath thereof but seeketh my profit onely, and therefore I haue a good faith vnto all my fathers promises, and loue all his commaundements, and doe them with good will, and with good will goe euery day to the schoole: And by the way happily I sawe a companie play, and with the sight was taken and rauished of my memorie, and forgot my selfe, and stood & beheld, and fell to play also forgetting father and mother, and all their kindnesse, all their Lawes, and mine owne profit also. Howbeit, the knowledge of my fathers kindnes, the faith of his promises, & the loue that I had againe vnto my father, and the obedient minde were not vtterly quenched, but lay hidden, as all things doe when a man sleepeth or lyeth in a trance. And as soone as I had played out all my lusts, or else by some had beene warned in the meane season, I came againe to my olde profession. Notwithstanding many tentations went ouer my heart, and the law as a right hangman tormented my conscience, and went nie to perswade me that my father would thrust me away, and hang me if he catched me, so that I was like a great while to run away, rather then to returne to my father againe. Feare and dread of rebuke and of losse of my fathers loue, and of punishment, wrastled with the truit which I had in my fathers goodnes, and as it were gaue my faith a fall. But I rose againe as soone as the rage of the first brunt was past, and my minde was more quiet. And the goodnesse of my father and his olde kindnesse came vnto my remembrance, either by mine owne courage, or by the comfort of another. And I beleeued that my father would not put me away or destroy me: and he hoped that I would doe no more so. And vpon that I gate me home againe dismaied, but not altogether faithlesse: the olde kindnes would not let me despaire, howbeit all the world could not set mine heart at rest, vntil the paine had beene past, and vntill I had heard the voice of my father, that all is forgotten.

Timoth. Seeing that you haue thus plainely & truly shewed the weaknesse of yours, and consequently of all mens faith, shew me, I pray you how by the weaknes of faith a Christian is not rather discomforted then comforted, and assured of his saluation.

Euseb.

Euſeb. God doth not ſo much regard the quantity of his graces as the truth of them, he approoueth a little faith if it be a true faith: yea, if faith in vs were no more but a graine of muſtard ſeede (which is the leaſt of all other ſeedes) it ſhould be effectuall, and God would haue reſpect vnto it. The poore diſeaſed begger with a lame hand, hauing the palſie alſo, is able neuertheles to reach out the ſame and receiue an almes of a king: and ſo in like manner a weake & languiſhing faith is ſufficiently able to reach out it ſelfe, and to apprehend the infinite mercies of our heauenly King offered vnto vs in Chriſt. Faith in the 3. of Iohn is compared vnto the eie of the Iſraelite, which although it were of dimme ſight, or looked a ſquint, yet if it could neuer ſo little behold the braſen ſerpent, it was ſufficient to cure the ſtings of the fiery ſerpẽts, and to ſaue life.

Timoth. Seeing that you ſatiſfie mee in euery point ſo fully, ſhewe me I pray you whether a man may be wicked and haue faith, and whether faith entring expelleth wickednes. For I haue heard ſome ſay, that a man might beleeue the word of God, & yet be neuer the better in his life, or holier then before he was.

Euſeb. Many there are which when they heare or read of faith, at once they conſent thereunto, and haue a certaine imagination and opinion of faith: as when a man telleth a ſtory, or a thing done in a ſtrange land that pertaineth not to them at all: which yet they beleeue and tell as a true thing, and this imagination or opinion they call faith. Therefore as ſoone as they haue this imagination or opinion in their hearts, they ſay verily, this doctrine ſeemeth true, I beleeue it is euen ſo: then they think that the right faith is there; but afterward whẽ they feele in themſelues no maner of working of the Spirit, neither the terrible ſentence of the Law, and the horrible captiuitie vnder Sathan, neither can perceiue any alteration in themſelues, and that any good workes followe, but finde they are altogether as before, and abide in their old eſtate, then thinke they that faith is not ſufficient, but that workes muſt be ioyned with faith to iuſtification: but true faith is onely the gift of God, and is mightie in operation, euer working, beeing full of vertue: it renueth man, and begetteth him a freſh, altereth him, chaungeth him, and turneth him altogether, into a new creature and conuerſation: ſo that a man ſhall feele his heart cleane changed, and farre otherwiſe diſpoſed then before, and hath power to loue that which before hee could not but hate, and delighteth in that which before he abhorred, and hateth that which before he could not but loue. And it ſetteth the ſoule at liberty, and maketh her free to followe the will of God, and is to the ſoule as health to the body. After that a man is pined with long ſicknes, the legges cannot beare him, he cannot lift vp his hands to helpe him, his taſte is corrupt, ſugar is bitter in his mouth, his ſtomacke longeth after ſlubberſauce and ſwaſh, at which a whole ſtomacke is ready to caſt his gorge: when health commeth ſhe chãgeth and altereth him cleane, giueth him ſtrength in all his members, luſt and wil to doe of his owne accord that which before he could not doe, neither could ſuffer that any man ſhould exhort him to doe, and hath now luſt in wholſome things, and his members are free and at liberty, and haue power to do all things of his owne accord which belong to a ſound and whole man to doe. And faith worketh in the ſame maner, as a tree brings forth fruit of his owne accord: and as a man neede not bid a tree bring forth fruit, ſo is there no law put to him that beleeueth and is iuſtified through faith, to force him to obedience, neither is it needfull. For the law is written and grauen in his heart, his pleaſure is daily therein, and as without commandement euen of his owne nature he eateth, drinketh, ſeeth, heareth, talketh, goeth: euen ſo of his owne nature without any compulſion of the law he bringeth forth good works: & as a whol man whẽ he is a thirſt tarieth but for drink and when he hungreth abideth but for meate, and then drinketh and eateth naturally: euen ſo is the faithfull euer a thirſt, & an hungred after the will of God, and tarrieth but for an occaſion: and whenſoeuer an occaſion is giuen he worketh naturally the will of God. For this bleſſing is giuen them that truſt in Chriſts blood, that they thirſt and hunger to do Gods will. He that hath not this faith, is but an vnprofitable babler of faith and workes, & neither woteth what he bableth, nor whereunto his words tend. For he feeleth not the power of faith nor the working of the ſpirit in his heart, but interpreteth the Scriptures which ſpeake of faith and workes after his own blind reaſon, & fooliſh fantaſies, not hauing any experience in himſelfe.

Timoth. Euery member of Chriſts congregation

gregation is a ſinner, & ſinneth daily, ſome more and ſome leſſe: for it is written, 1. Iohn. 1. If we ſay we haue no ſinne, we deceiue our ſelues, and the truth is not in vs. And Paul, Rom. 7. That good which I would, that doe I not: but that euil which I would not, that doe I. So it is not I that doe it (ſaith he) but ſinne that dwelleth in me. So the Chriſtian man is both a ſinner and no ſinner: which how it can be, ſhew it me by your experience.

Euſeb. I beeing one man in ſubſtance am two men in qualitie, fleſh and ſpirit, which in me ſo fight perpetually the one againſt the other, that I muſt goe either backward or forward, and cannot ſtand long in one eſtate. If the ſpirit ouercome in tentations, then is ſhee ſtronger and the fleſh weaker. But if the fleſh get a cuſtome, then is the ſpirit none otherwiſe oppreſſed of the fleſh, then as though ſhe had a mountaine on her backe, and as we ſometime in our dreames thinke we beare heauier then a milſtone on our breaſts: or when we dreame now and then that we would run away for feare of ſome thing, our legges ſeeme heauier then lead: euen ſo is the ſpirit oppreſſed and ouerladen of the fleſh through cuſtome, that ſhee ſtruggleth and ſtriueth to get vp, and to breake looſe in vaine, vntill the God of mercie, which heareth my groane through Ieſus Chriſt, come and looſe her with his power, and put ſomething on the backe of the fleſh to keepe her downe, to miniſh her ſtrength, and to mortifie her. So then no ſinner I am if you regard the Spirit, the profeſſion of my heart toward the Law of God, my repentance and ſorrow that I haue both becauſe I haue ſinned, and am yet full of ſinne, and looke vnto the promiſes of mercie in our Sauiour Chriſt, and vnto my faith. A ſinner am I if you looke to the frailtie of my fleſh which is a remnant of the old Adam, and as it were the ſtocke of the old oliue tree, euer and anon when occaſion is giuen, ſhooting forth his branches, leaues, budde, bloſſome, and fruit alſo: which alſo is as the weakneſſe of one which is newly recouered of a great diſeaſe, by the reaſon whereof all my deedes are imperfect, and when occaſions bee great I fall into horrible deedes, and the fruit of the ſinne which remaineth in my members breaketh out. Notwithſtanding the Spirit leaueth me not, but rebuketh me, and bringeth me home againe vnto my profeſſion, ſo that I neuer caſt of the yoke of God from off my necke, neither yeelde vp my ſelfe vnto ſinne to ſerue it, but fight a freſh, and beginne a new battaile. And I had rather you ſhould vnderſtand this forth of the Scriptures, by the example of Ionas & the Apoſtles. Ionas was the friend of God, and a choſen ſeruant of God to teſtifie his will vnto the world. He was ſent from the land of Iſrael, where he was a Prophet, to goe amongſt an heathen people and the greateſt citie of the world, then called Niniue, to preach that within fourty daies they ſhould be deſtroied for their ſinnes: which meſſage the free will of Ionas had as much power to doe as the weakeſt hearted woman in the world had power, if ſhe were commanded to leape into a tubbe of liuing ſnakes and adders: as happily if God had commanded Sara to ſacrifice her ſonne Iſack, as he did Abraham, ſhe would haue diſputed with God, ere ſhee had done it, as though ſhee were ſtrong enough. Well, Ionas hartened by his owne imagination, and reaſoning after this manner; I am here a Prophet vnto Gods people the Iſraelites: which though they haue Gods word teſtified vnto them daily, yet diſpiſe and worſhip God vnder the likenes of calues, and after all manner of faſhions ſaue after his owne word, and therefore are of all nations the worſt and moſt worthie of puniſhment. And yet God for loue of a fewe that are among them, and for his names ſake ſpareth and defendeth them: how then ſhall God take ſo cruell vengeance on ſo great a multitude of them to whome his name was neuer preached, and therefore are not the tenth part ſo euill as theſe: If I therefore ſhall goe preach, I ſhall lie and ſhame my ſelfe and God too, and make them the more to deſpiſe God. Vpon this imagination he fled from the preſence of God and from the countrey where God is worſhipped. When Ionas entred into the ſhippe, he laid him downe to ſleepe, for his conſcience was toſſed betweene the commandement of God which ſent him to Niniue, and his fleſhly wiſdome which diſſwaded and counſelled him to the contrarie, and at laſt preuailed againſt the commandement, and carried him an other way as a ſhippe caught betweene two ſtreames (as the Poets faine the mother of Meleager to be betweene diuers affections; while to auenge her brothers death ſhee ſought to ſlay her owne ſonne) whereupon for very paine and tedioufnes he lay downe to ſleepe to put the commaundement out of minde, which did ſo gnaw and fret his conſcience, as alſo the nature of all the wicked is, when they haue ſinned in earneſt, to ſeeke all meanes with ryot, reuell, and paſtime to driue the remembrance of ſinne forth of their hearts, as Adam did to couer his wickednes with aprons of figleaues. But God awoke him out of his dreame, and ſet his ſinnes before his face: for when the lot had caught Ionas, then be ſure that his ſinne came to remembrance againe, and that his conſcience raged no leſſe then the waters of the ſea. And then he thought, he onely was a ſinner, & thought alſo that as verily as he had fled from God, as verily god had caſt him away: for the ſight of the rod maketh he naturall child not onely to ſee and acknowledge his fault, but alſo to forget all his fathers old mercie and goodnes. And then he confeſſed his ſinne openly, and of very deſperation to haue liued any longer he had caſt himſelfe into the ſea betimes, except they would be loſt alſo: for al this God prouided a fiſh to ſwallow Ionas. When Ionas had beene in the fiſhes belly a ſpace, the rage of his conſcience was ſomwhat quieted, and he came to himſelfe againe, and had receiued a little hope, and the qualmes and pangs of deſperation which went ouer his heart were halfe ouercome: then he praied to God, and gaue thanks vnto him. When Ionas was caſt vpon the land againe, then his will was free, and he had power to goe to whither God ſent him, and to what God commanded him, his owne imagination laid apart: for he had beene at a new ſchoole, and in a furnace, where he was purged of much refuſe and droſſe of fleſhly wiſdom which reſiſted the wiſdome of God. For as farre as we are blind in Adam we cannot but ſeeke and will our owne profit, pleaſure, and glorie: and as farre as we be taught in the ſpirit, we cannot but ſeeke and will the pleaſure of God onely. Then Ionas preached to Niniue, & they repented: then Ionas ſhewed againe his corrupt nature for all his trying in the Whales belly. He was ſo diſpleaſed becauſe the Niniites periſhed not, that he was wearie of his life, and wiſhed death for very ſorrow, that he had loſt the glorie of his propheeying, in that his prophecie came not to paſſe, but he was rebuked of God, as in his prophecie you may read.

The Apoſtles, Chriſt taught them euer to be meeke and to humble themſelues: yet oft they ſtriued among themſelues who ſhould be greateſt: the ſonnes of Zebedee would ſit one on the right hand of Chriſt, the other on the left. They would pray that fire might deſcend from heauen and conſume the Samaritans. When Chriſt asked, Who ſay men that I am? Peter anſwered, Thou art the ſonne of the liuing God, as though Peter had bin as perfect as an angel. But immediately after when Chriſt preached vnto them of his death and paſſion, Peter was angrie and rebuked Chriſt, and thought earneſtly that he had raued, & not wiſt what he had ſaid: as at another time in which Chriſt was ſo feruently buſied in healing the people, that he had no leiſure to eate, they went out to hold him, ſuppoſing that he had beene beſide himſelfe. And one that caſt forth deuills in Chriſts name they forbad, becauſe he waited not on them, ſo glorious were they yet. And though Chriſt taught alway to forgiue, yet Peter after long going to ſchoole, asked whether men ſhould forgiue ſeuen times, thinking that eight times had beene too much. And at the laſt ſupper, Peter would haue died with Chriſt, but yet within few houres after he denied him both cowardly and ſhamefully. And after the ſame manner, though he had ſo long heard that no man muſt auenge himſelfe, but rather turne the other cheeke to the ſmiter againe, yet when Chriſt was in taking, Peter asked whether it were lawfull to ſmite with the ſword, and tarried no anſwer, but laid on raſhly. So that although we be once reconciled to God, yet at the firſt we bee but children and young ſchollers, weake and feeble, and muſt haue leiſure to grow in the ſpirit, in knowledge, loue, and deedes thereof, as yong children muſt haue time to grow in their bodies: and ſo in like maner the ſting of the ſerpent is not pulled out at once, but the poiſon of our nature is miniſhed by little and little, and cannot before the houre of death be wholly taken away.

Timoth. I perceiue by your godly diſcourſe, the manifold conflicts betweene the fleſh and the ſpirit, and that the fleſh is like to a mightie gyant, ſuch a one as was Goliah, ſtrong, luſtie, ſtirring, enemie to God, confederate with the deuill: and the ſpirit like to a little child, ſuch a one as was litle Dauid, new borne, weake, and feeble, not alwaies ſtirring: now then what meanes doe you vſe to weaken the fleſh, and ſtrengthen the ſpirit?

Euseb. I vse to tame my flesh with praier and fasting, watching, deedes of mercie, holy meditations, and reading the Scriptures, and in bodily labour, and in withdrawing all manner of pleasures from the flesh, and with exercises contrarie to the vices which I finde my bodie most inclined to, and with abstaining from al things that encourage the flesh against the spirit: as reading of toyes and wanton bookes, seeing of plaies and enterluds, wanton communication, fooliſh iesting, and effeminate thoughts, and talking of couetousnes, which: Paul forbiddeth, Eph. 5. magnifying of worldly promotions. If these will not mortifie my flesh, then God sendeth me some troubles, and so maketh me to grow and waxe perfect, and fineth and trieth me as gold in the fire of tentations and tribulations. Thus very often he maketh me to take vp my crosse and naileth my flesh vnto it, for the mortifiing thereof. Marke this, if God send thee to the sea, and promise to goe with thee, he will raise vp a tempest against thee, to prooue whether thou wilt abide his word, and that thou maist feele thy faith and weaknes, and perceiue his goodnes: for if it were alwaies faire weather & thou neuer brought into such ieopardie, whence his mercie onely deliuereth thee, thy faith should bee onely a presumption, and thou shouldest be euer vnthankful to God, and mercileſſe vnto thy neighbour. If God promise riches, the way thereunto is pouertie: whom he loueth, him he chasteneth: whom he exalteth, he casteth downe: whome he saueth he first damneth: he bringeth no man to heauen, except he send him to hell first: if he promise life, he slaieth first: when he buildeth, he casteth downe all first: he is no patcher: he cannot abide another mans foundation: he will not worke till all bee past remedie, and brought to such a case that men may see how that his hand, his power, his mercie, his goodnes, his truth hath wrought altogether: he will let no man be partaker with him of his praise & glory: his works are wonderfull and contrarie to mans works: who euer (saue he) deliuered his owne sonne, his only sonne, his deere sonne, his darling vnto death, and for his enemies, to winne his enemies, to ouercome them with loue, that they might see loue and loue againe, and of loue likewise to doe to other men, and to ouercome thē with well doing? Ioseph saw the sunne and the moone and seuen starres worshipping him, neuertheleſſe ere that came to passe God laid him where he could see neither sunne, nor moone, neither any star of the skie, and that many yeares, and also vndeserued, to nurture him, to make him humble and meeke, & to teach him Gods waies, and to make him apt and meete for the roome and honour against he came to it; that he might be strong in the spirit to minister it well. God promised the children of Israel a land with riuers of milke and honye, yet he brought them forth the space of fourtie yeares into a land wherein no riuers of milke and honey were, but where so much as a drop of water was not, to nurture and teach them as a father doth his sonne, and to do them good at the latter end, to subdue their cankred nature, to make them strong in the spirit to vse his benefits aright. Lastly, God promised Dauid a kingdome, and immediatly stirred vp Saul against him to persecute him, and to hunt him as men doe hares with Grayhoundes, and to ferret him out of euery hole, and that for the space of many yeares, to turne him, to make him to mortifie his lusts, to make him to feele his owne diseases: in fine, to make him a good man, and a good king.

Timoth. But how if it come to passe that you be tempted to any great sinne, and the flesh ouercome the spirit, in what case are you then?

Euseb. There is no bodie here but you and I, and I take you to be a Christian and a faithfull friend: therefore I will shewe a little of my experience. The last yeare by reason of the dearth, I & my familie were put to great pinches, and most commonly wee had nothing but Bread and Water: hereupon I bethought me howe I might get somewhat to releeue my family: it came into my minde that in our towne a rich man had a great flocke of sheepe, and that I might take one of them without any hurt of him. I was very loath at the first: but becauſe there was such great stealing of sheepe, and I was in extremitie, in the night I went among his sheepe and tooke a lambe, and I told my familie that it was giuen me: I presently killed it, the skin & the entrals I buried in my backside, the flesh we dressed by quarters, and did eate it with thanksgiuing (as my manner is) but surely very coldly, and me thought my praier was abhominable in Gods sight. After I had thus done: we fared well for the space of two daies, but I felt my heart hardened, ned, and my lippes were almost locked vp, that I could not as I was woont praise the Lord. The third night after, I went with a quiet conscience (me thought) to my bed, and then I slept soundly till three of the clocke in the morning, but I dreamed that one came to carry me to prison, vpon that on a sudden I awaked, and being afraid looked about me, and fell to consider why I should be afraid, and I remembred that I had sinned against God by robbing my neighbour: O then my feare increased, & I thought that hell gaped to deuoure me, and the law looked vpō me with such a terrible countenance, and so thūdered in mine eares, that I durst not abide in my bed, but vp and to goe. Then the deuill assailed me on euery side, to perswade that God had cast me away: saying, they that be Gods haue power to keep his lawes, thou hast not, but breakest them: therfore thou art a cast-away and a damned creature, and hell gapeth and setteth open his mouth to deuoure thee. And I thought with my selfe that I had bin alwaies a ranke hypocrite: for as the clouds of the ayre doe couer the sunne, so that sometimes a man cannot tell by any sense that there is any sunne, the clowdes and winds hiding it from our sight: euen so my cecitie and blindnes, & corrupt affections, & the rage of my conscience did so ouershadow the sight of Gods seed in me, and so ouerwhelme his spirit, as though I had bin a plaine reprobate. And thus it came to passe that Dauid making his praier to God according to his own sense & feeling, but not according to the truth, desired of God to giue him againe his spirit, which thing God neuer doth indeed: although he made me to thinke so for a time: for alwaies he holdeth his hand vnder his childrē in their fals, that they lie not stil as other do which are not regenerate. I being thus turmoiled and stung with the conscience of sin & the cockatrice of my poisoned nature, hauing beheld her selfe in the glasse of the righteous law of God, there was no other salue or remedie but to runne to the brasen serpent Christ Iesus which shed his blood, hanging vpon the crosse, and to his euerlasting testament and mercifull promise, that was shed for me for the remission of my sinnes: therfore I got me speedily into a close corner in my house, and thereupon my face groueling, I confessed my sinne & praied after this manner in effect. Father, what an horrible mōster am I? What traytor? What wretch and villaine? Thy mercie is wonderfull, that hell hath not deuoured me hauing deserued a thousand damnations. I haue sinned against thy godly, holy, and righteous law, and against my brother by robbing him, whom I ought to loue for thy sake as my selfe: forgiue me father for thy sonne Christ his sake, according to thy most mercifull promises & testament: forget not good Lord thy old mercies shewed vpon me, let them not at this time in me be quite remooued. On this manner praying I cōtinued many houres, and God which is neere to al them that call vpon him, heard me, eased my paine, and assured me of the remission of my sinne. After presently, for the more easing of my conscience, I went to my neighbour, and betweene him & me vpon my knees cōfessed my fault with teares, desiring him to forgiue me, and I would (as Gods law requireth) restore that which I stole, fourefold: he (I thanke him) was contented and tooke pitie on me, and euer since hath been by Gods mercy my good friend. So by little and little, God restored me to my first estate: but (me thinkes) I haue not that feeling which I had before, and haue beene worse euer since: God of his great mercie amend me, & increase his graces in me.

Timoth. But I pray you, what thinke you, will not God condemne his owne elect children if they sinne?

Euseb. No, for the ground-worke of our saluation is laid in Gods eternal election, & a thousand sinnes in the world, nay all the sinnes in the world, nay al the deuils in hell cannot ouerthrow Gods election. And it may be that sinnes doe harden our hearts, weaken our faith, make sad the spirit of God in vs: but take away faith, or altogether quench the spirit, they cannot. God condemneth no man for his sinnes, if he be adopted in Christ. For then Ioseph, Abraham, Dauid, Peter, Marie Magdalene, should be condemned. God is like a father: and a father if his childe be sick, and therefore be froward, and refuse and cast away his meate, and hauing eaten it spew it vp againe, and in his fit be impatient and raue, and speake euill of his father, yet I say the father will not cast him forth of his doores, but pitieth him, and prouideth such things as may restore him to health, and when he is whole remembreth not his disordered behauiour in his sicknesse.

Euſeb. Iuſe to tame my fleſh with praier and faſting, watching, deedes of mercie, holy meditations, and reading the Scriptures, and in bodily labour, and in withdrawing all manner of pleaſures from the fleſh, and with exerciſes contrarie to the vices which I finde my bodie moſt inclined to, and with abſtaining from al things that encourage the fleſh againſt the ſpirit: as reading of toyes and wanton bookes, ſeeing of plaies and enterluds, wanton communication, fooliſh ieſting, and effeminate thoughts, and talking of couetouſnes, which: Paul forbiddeth, Eph. 5. magnifying of worldly promotions. If theſe will not mortifie my fleſh, then God ſendeth me ſome troubles, and ſo maketh me to grow and waxe perfect, and fineth and trieth me as gold in the fire of tentations and tribulations. Thus very often he maketh me to take vp my croſſe and naileth my fleſh vnto it, for the mortifiing thereof. Marke this, if God ſend thee to the ſea, and promiſe to goe with thee, he will raiſe vp a tempeſt againſt thee, to prooue whether thou wilt abide his word, and that thou maiſt ſeele thy faith and weaknes, and perceiue his goodnes: for if it were alwaies faire weather & thou neuer brought into ſuch ieopardie, whence his mercie onely deliuereth thee, thy faith ſhould bee onely a preſumption, and thou ſhouldeſt be euer vnthankful to God, and mercileſſe vnto thy neighbour. If God promiſe riches, the way thereunto is pouertie: whom he loueth, him he chaſteneth: whom he exalteth, he caſteth downe: whome he ſaueth he firſt damneth: he bringeth no man to heauen, except he ſend him to hell firſt: if he promiſe life, he ſlaieth firſt: when he buildeth, he caſteth downe all firſt: he is no patcher: he cannot abide another mans foundation: he will not worke till all bee paſt remedie, and brought to ſuch a caſe that men may ſee how that his hand, his power, his mercie, his goodnes, his truth hath wrought altogether: he will let no man be partaker with him of his praiſe & glory: his works are wonderfull and contrarie to mans works: who euer (ſaue he) deliuered his owne ſonne, his only ſonne, his deere ſonne, his darling vnto death, and for his enemies, to winne his enemies, to ouercome them with loue, that they might ſee loue and loue againe, and of loue likewiſe to doe to other men, and to ouercome thē with well doing? Ioſeph ſaw the ſunne and the moone and ſeuen ſtarres worſhipping him, neuertheleſſe ere that came to paſſe God laid him where he could ſee neither ſunne, nor moone, neither any ſtar of the skie, and that many yeares, and alſo vndeſerued, to nurture him, to make him humble and meeke, & to teach him Gods waies, and to make him apt and meete for the roome and honour againſt he came to it; that he might be ſtrong in the ſpirit to miniſter it well. God promiſed the children of Iſrael a land with riuers of milke and honye, yet he brought them forth the ſpace of fourtie yeares into a land wherein no riuers of milke and honey were, but where ſo much as a drop of water was not, to nurture and teach them as a father doth his ſonne, and to do them good at the latter end, to ſubdue their cankred nature, to make them ſtrong in the ſpirit to vſe his benefits aright. Laſtly, God promiſed Dauid a kingdome, and immediatly ſtirred vp Saul againſt him to perſecute him, and to hunt him as men doe hares with Grayhoundes, and to ferret him out of euery hole, and that for the ſpace of many yeares, to turne him, to make him to mortifie his luſts, to make him to feele his owne diſeaſes: in fine, to make him a good man, and a good king.

Timoth. But how if it come to paſſe that you be tempted to any great ſinne, and the fleſh ouercome the ſpirit, in what caſe are you then?

Euſeb. There is no bodie here but you and I, and I take you to be a Chriſtian and a faithfull friend: therefore I will ſhewe a little of my experience. The laſt yeare by reaſon of the dearth, I & my familie were put to great pinches, and moſt commonly wee had nothing but Bread and Water: hereupon I bethought me howe I might get ſomewhat to releeue my family: it came into my minde that in our towne a rich man had a great flocke of ſheepe, and that I might take one of them without any hurt of him. I was very loath at the firſt: but becauſe there was ſuch great ſtealing of ſheepe, and I was in extremitie, in the night I went among his ſheepe and tooke a lambe, and I told my familie that it was giuen me: I preſently killed it, the skin & the entrals I buried in my backſide, the fleſh we dreſſed by quarters, and did eate it with thanksgiuing (as my manner is) but ſurely very coldly, and me thought my praier was abhominable in Gods ſight. After I had thus done: we fared well for the ſpace of two daies, but I felt my heart hardened, ned, and my lippes were almoſt locked vp, that I could not as I was woont praiſe the Lord. The third night after, I went with a quiet conſcience (me thought) to my bed, and then I ſlept ſoundly till three of the clocke in the morning, but I dreamed that one came to carry me to priſon, vpon that on a ſudden I awaked, and being afraid looked about me, and fell to conſider why I ſhould be afraid, and I remembred that I had ſinned againſt God by robbing my neighbour: O then my feare increaſed, & I thought that hell gaped to deuoure me, and the law looked vpō me with ſuch a terrible countenance, and ſo thūdered in mine eares, that I durſt not abide in my bed, but vp and to goe. Then the deuill aſſailed me on euery ſide, to perſwade that God had caſt me away: ſaying, they that be Gods haue power to keep his lawes, thou haſt not, but breakeſt them: therfore thou art a caſt-away and a damned creature, and hell gapeth and ſetteth open his mouth to deuoure thee. And I thought with my ſelfe that I had bin alwaies a ranke hypocrite: for as the clouds of the ayre doe couer the ſunne, ſo that ſometimes a man cannot tell by any ſenſe that there is any ſunne, the clowdes and winds hiding it from our ſight: euen ſo my cecitie and blindnes, & corrupt affections, & the rage of my conſcience did ſo ouerſhadow the ſight of Gods ſeed in me, and ſo ouerwhelme his ſpirit, as though I had bin a plaine reprobate. And thus it came to paſſe that Dauid making his praier to God according to his own ſenſe & feeling, but not according to the truth; deſired of God to giue him againe his ſpirit, which thing God neuer doth indeed: although he made me to thinke ſo for a time: for alwaies he holdeth his hand vnder his childrē in their fals, that they lie not ſtil as other do which are not regenerate. I being thus turmoiled and ſtung with the conſcience of ſin & the cockatrice of my poiſoned nature, hauing beheld her ſelfe in the glaſſe of the righteous law of God, there was no other ſalue or remedie but to runne to the braſen ſerpent Chriſt Ieſus which ſhed his blood, hanging vpon the croſſe, and to his euerlaſting teſtament and merciſull promiſe, that was ſhed for me for the remiſſion of my ſinnes: therfore I got me ſpeedily into a cloſe corner in my houſe, and therevpon my face groueling, I confeſſed my ſinne & praied after this manner in effect. Father, what an horrible mōſter am I? What traytor? What wretch and villaine? Thy mercie is wonderfull, that hell hath not deuoured me hauing deſerued a thouſand damnations. I haue ſinned againſt thy godly, holy, and righteous law, and againſt my brother by robbing him, whom I ought to loue for thy ſake as my ſelfe: forgiue me father for thy ſonne Chriſt his ſake, according to thy moſt merciſull promiſes & teſtament: forget not good Lord thy old mercies ſhewed vpon me, let them not at this time in me be quite remooued. On this manner praying I cōtinued many houres, and God which is neere to al them that call vpon him, heard me, eaſed my paine, and aſſured me of the remiſſion of my ſinne. After preſently, for the more eaſing of my conſcience, I went to my neighbour, and betweene him & me vpon my knees cōfeſſed my fault with teares, deſiring him to forgiue me, and I would (as Gods law requireth) reſtore that which I ſtole, fourefold: he (I thanke him) was contented and tooke pitie on me, and euer ſince hath been by Gods mercy my good friend. So by little and little, God reſtored me to my firſt eſtate: but (me thinkes) I haue not that feeling which I had before, and haue beene worſe euer ſince: God of his great mercie amend me, & increaſe his graces in me.

Timoth. But I pray you, what thinke you, will not God condemne his owne elect children if they ſinne?

Euſeb. No, for the ground-worke of our ſaluation is laid in Gods eternal election, & a thouſand ſinnes in the world, nay all the ſinnes in the world, nay al the deuils in hell cannot ouerthrow Gods election. And it may be that ſinnes doe harden our hearts, weaken our faith, make ſad the ſpirit of God in vs: but take away faith, or altogether quench the ſpirit, they cannot. God condemneth no man for his ſinnes, if he be adopted in Chriſt. For then Ioſeph, Abraham, Dauid, Peter, Marie Magdalene, ſhould be condemned. God is like a father: and a father if his childe be ſick, and therefore be froward, and refuſe and caſt away his meate, and hauing eaten it ſpew it vp againe, and in his fit be impatient and raue, and ſpeake euill of his father, yet I ſay the father will not caſt him forth of his doores, but pitieth him, and prouideth ſuch things as may reſtore him to health, and when he is whole remembreth not his diſordered behauiour in his ſickneſſe.

Timoth. What meanes doe you find moſt effectuall to ſtrengthen your faith, to increaſe Gods graces in you, & to ariſe you vp againe when you are fallen?

Euſeb. Surely I haue very great comfort by the Sacrament of the Lords Supper: for whereas I am ſpiritually diſeaſed, and am prone and ready to fall, and am moſt cruelly oftentimes inuaded of the fiend, the fleſh, and the law, when I haue ſinned, and am put to flight, a nd made to runne away from God my father: therefore hath God of all mercie and of his infinite pitty & bottomleſſe compaſſion ſet vp his Sacrament as a ſigne vpon a high hill, whence it may be ſeene on euery ſide farre and neere, to call againe them that be runne away. And with this Sacrament hee (as it were) clocketh to them, as a hen doth for her chickens, to gather them vnder the wings of his mercy: and hath commaunded his Sacrament to be had in continuall vſe, to put vs in minde of his continuall mercy laid vp for vs in Chriſts blood, and to witnes and teſtifie it vnto them, and to be the ſeale thereof. For the Sacrament doth much more liuely Print the faith, and make it ſinke downe into the heart then doe bare wordes onely. Nowe when the wordes of the Teſtament and promiſes are ſpoken ouer the bread (this is my body which was broken for you: this is my bloode that was ſhedde for you) they confirme the faith; but much more when the Sacrament is ſeene with the eies, & the bread broken, the wine powred out and looked on: and yet more when I taſte it and ſmell it: As you ſee when a man maketh a promiſe vnto another with light words betweene themſelues and ſo they departed, he to whome the promiſe is made beginneth to doubt whether the other ſpeake earneſtly or mocked, and doubteth whether he will remember his promiſe to abide by it or no. But when any man ſpeaketh with aduiſement, the wordes are more credible: and if he ſweare it confirmeth the thing more, and yet the more if he ſtrike hands, if he giue earneſt, if he call record, if he giue hand writing and ſeale it: ſo is he the more and more beleeued, for the heart gathereth: lo, he ſpake with aduiſement, deliberation and good ſadneſſe, he clapped hands, called record, and put to his hand and ſeale: the man cannot be ſo faint without the feare of God as to deny all this: ſhame ſhall make him abide his promiſe, though he were ſuch a man as I could not compel him, if he would denie it. And thus we diſpute: God ſent his ſonne in our nature, and made him feele our infirmities, and named his name Ieſus, that is a Sauiour, becauſe he ſhould ſaue his people from their ſinnes, and after his death he ſent his Apoſtles to preach theſe glad tydings, to thruſt them in at the eares of vs, and ſet vp a Sacrament of them to teſtifie them and to ſeale them, and to thruſt them in, not at the eares onely by rehearſing the promiſes of the Teſtament ouer it: neither at our eies onely in beholding it, but beat them in through our feeling, taſting, and ſmelling alſo, and to bee repeated dayly and to bee miniſtred to vs. He would not (thinke we) make halfe ſo much ado with vs if he loued vs not, and would not haue his Sacrament to be a witneſſe and teſtimonie betweene him & vs, to confirme the faith of his promiſes that we ſhould not doubt in them, when we looke on the ſeales of his obligatiõs wherwith he hath bound himſelfe: and this to keepe the promiſes and conenants better in minde, & to make them the more deeply to ſinke into our hearts, and be more earneſtly regarded, Timoth. Conſidering that this which you ſay is too plaine, great ſhame it is that there is ſuch neglect of the ſacrament as there is, and that it is ſo ſeldome vſed: but ſurely want of faith and the ſecurity which ouerſpreadeth this our countrie is the cauſe of it, the Lord if it be his will remooue the ſame. Now let me heare a little howe you lead your life, and haue your conuerſation among men.

Euſeb. I haue my conuerſation among men as ſincere as I can in righteouſnes & holines, which is after Gods commandements: our Sauiour ſaith, Let your light ſo ſhine before men, that they may ſee your good workes, and glorifie your father which is in heauen.

Timoth. It is but a dim light which wee can carrie before men, and ſmall are our good workes, and to be eſteemed of no value: if wee were preachers or rich men, or noble men, then we might ſaue ſoules, giue good counſell, helpe many by our almes, but you and I are poore men, of baſe birth, and of lowe degree, howe can we then doe any good workes?

Euſeb. As touching good workes by that meaſure of knowledge that God hath giuen me, I thinke that all works are good which are done according to the obedience of Gods law in faith & with thankſgiuing to God, and with a minde deſirous of his glorie alone, & I thinke that I or any man els in doing them pleaſe God, whatſoeuer I doe within the lawe of God, as when I make water. And truſt me if either wind or water were ſtopped, I ſhould feele what a pretious thing it were to doe either of both, and what thanks ought to be giuen God therefore. Moreouer, I put no difference betweene workes, but whatſoeuer commeth into my hands, that do I as time, place, and occaſion giueth, and according to my degree. For as touching to pleaſe God there is no worke better then other: God looketh not firſt on my works as the world doth, or as though he had neede of them: but God looketh firſt on my heart what faith I haue to his word, how I beleeue him, truſt him, and how I loue him, for his mercie that he hath ſhewed to me, he looketh with what heart I worke, and not what I worke, how I accept the degree he hath put me in, not of what degree I am. Let vs take example. You are a miniſter and preach the word, I am a kitchin boy, and waſh my maſters diſhes. Of the Miniſterie harke what the Apoſtle ſaith: if I preach I haue naught to reioyce in, for neceſſitie is put vpon me: if I preach not the goſpel, as who ſhould ſay God hath made me ſo, woe is to me if I preach not. If I doe it willingly (ſaith he) then I haue my reward; that is, then I am ſure that Gods ſpirit is in me, and that I am elect to eternall life. If I doe it againſt my will, the office is committed to me, that is, I doe it not of loue to God, but to get a liuing thereby, and for a worldly purpoſe, and had rather otherwiſe liue: then doe I that office which God hath put vpon me, but doe not pleaſe God. So then if you preached not, or in preaching had not your heart aright, you miniſter the office, and they that haue the ſpirit of God heare his word, yea, though it were ſpokē by an Aſſe, and the woe belongeth to you: but and if you preach willingly with a true heart and conſcience to God, then you ſhall feele the earneſt of eternall life, & the working of the ſpirit of God in you, and your preaching is a good worke in you. Now I that miniſter in the kitchin, and am but a kitchin boy, receiue all things at the hand of God, know that God hath put me in ſuch an office, ſubmit my ſelfe to his will, and ſerue my maſter, not as a man but as Chriſt himſelfe, with a pure heart according as Paul teacheth me, putting my truſt in God, & of him ſeeke my reward. Moreouer, there is not a good deede done, but mine heart reioyceth therein, yea, when I heare that the word of God is preached by you and ſee the people turne vnto God; I conſent to this deed, my heart breaketh out in me, yea it ſpringeth and leapeth in my breaſt that God is honoured, & in my heart I do the ſame that you doe with the like delectation & feruency of ſpirit. Now he that receiueth a Prophet, in the name of a prophet, receiueth a prophets reward that is, he that conſenteth to the deed of a prophet and maintaineth it, the ſame hath the ſpirit and earneſt of euerlaſting life, which the prophet hath, and is elect as the prophet is. Now if we compare worke to worke, there is a difference betwixt waſhing of diſhes, and preaching the word of God: but as touching to pleaſe God none at all. For neither that nor this pleaſeth God, but as farre forth as God hath choſen a man, and hath put his ſpirit in him, and purified his heart by faith and truſt in Chriſt. As the ſcriptures call him carnall which is not renued by the ſpirit & borne againe in Chriſts fleſh, and all his workes like, euen the very motions of his heart & minde, as his learning, doctrine, and contemplation of high things, his preaching, teaching, and ſtudie in the ſcripture, building of Churches, founding of Colledges, giuing of almes, and whatſoeuer he doth, though they ſeeme ſpirituall, and after the lawe of God neuer ſo much: So contrariwiſe he is ſpirituall which is renued in Chriſt, and all his workes which ſpring frō faith ſeeme they neuer ſo groſſe, as the waſhing of the diſciples feete done by our Sauiour Chriſt, and Peters fiſhing after the reſurrection, yea deedes of matrimony are pure & ſpirituall if they proceed of faith, & whatſoeuer is done within the lawes of God though it be wrought by the body, as the wiping of ſhoes and ſuch like, howſoeuer groſſe they appeare outwardly, yet are ſanctified.

Timoth. What be the ſpeciall things in which you leade your conuerſation?

Euſeb. One thing is the reading of the ſcripture.

Timoth. It is dangerous to read the ſcriptures, you that haue no learning may eaſily fall into errors and hereſies.

Euſeb. As he which knoweth his letters perfectly; and can ſpell, cannot but reade if he be diligent: and as hee which hath cleere eies without impediment or let, and walketh thereto in the light & open day, cannot but ſee, if he attend and take heed: euen ſo I hauing the profeſſion of my baptiſme onely written in my heart, and feeling it ſealed vp in my conſcience by the holy Ghoſt, cannot but vnderſtand the ſcripture, becauſe I exerciſe my ſelfe therein, and compare one place with another, and marke the manner of ſpeech, and aske here and there the meaning of a ſentence of them that be better exerciſed then I: for I feele in my heart, and haue a ſenſible experience of that inwardly, which the ſpirit of God hath deliuered in the ſcriptures. So that I finde mine inwarde experience as a commentarie vnto me.

Timoth. We are all baptized, belike then we ſhall all vnderſtand the Scripture.

Euſeb. But alas very few there be that are taught and feele their ingrafting into Chriſt, their iuſtification, their inward dying vnto ſinne and liuing vnto righteouſneſſe, which is the meaning of their Baptiſme. And therefore we remaine all blind generally, as wel the great Rabbins which bragge of their learning, as the poore vnlearned lay man. And the Scripture is become ſo darke vnto them, that they grope for the doore and can finde no way in, & it is become a maze vnto them in which they wander as a miſt, or as (we ſay) lead by Robbin goodfellow. And their darknes cannot comprehend the light of the Scriptures, but they read them as men doe tales of Robbinhood, as riddles or as old prieſts read their Ladies Mattins which they vnderſtood not. And vntill a man be taught his Baptiſme, that his heart feele the ſweetnes of it, the ſcriptures are ſhut vp from him, and ſo darke that he could not vnderſtand it, though Peter, Paul, or Chriſt himſelfe did expound it vnto him, no more then a man ſtarke blind can ſee though thou ſet a candle before him, or ſhew him the ſunne, or point with thy finger vnto that thou wouldſt haue him looke vpon. As for hereſie there is no danger if a man come to the Scripture with a meeke ſpirit, ſeeking there to faſhion himſelfe like vnto Chriſt, according to the profeſſion and vowe of his baptiſme: but contrariwiſe he ſhall there find the mightie power of God to alter and change him in the inner man by little and little, till in proceſſe he be full ſhapen after the image of our Sauiour in knowledge & loue of all truth, and power to worke thereafter. Hereſies ſpring not of Scripture, no more then darknes of the Sunne, but are darke clouds which ſpring out of the blind hearts of hypocrites giuen to pride and ſingularitie, and doe couer the face of the Scripture, and blinde their eyes that they cannot behold the bright beames of the ſcripture.

Timoth. By this I alſo can gather that the Papiſts which cannot read the Scriptures, except they fall into errours, haue not the ſpirit of Chriſt working in them, and teaching them, but the lying ſpirit of Antichriſt the deuill, and that if God would giue them any true feeling, and open their eies, they would quite change their minds. But what other exerciſes haue you?

Euſeb. Praier and thankſgiuing to God. For God hath promiſed very bountifully vnto them which pray in truth, & it is one of the greateſt comforts I haue at all times. Againe, God which commanded me not to ſteale, commandeth me alſo to pray, & his will is, that one cõmandement ſhould be as well kept as another: and therefore I am perſwaded that condemnation wil befall a man as well for the one as for the other. And that praier ought to be continually euen in euery buſines a man doth, me thinketh it moſt agreeable to Gods will. For if I ſhould come into my neighbours houſe and take his goods, & vſe them not borrowing them, or asking any leaue, they would lay hands on me, and make me a theefe. The world, and all the things in the world are the Lords, not mine: ſo then if I ſhall daily vſe them, neuer ſeeking to the Lord by praier for the vſe of them, before God I am an vſurper, nay a ranke theefe, & therefore I deſire of God heartily that I may vſe all his good creatures with feare and reuerence; & that I may ſanctifie his name in them, which Paul ſheweth me to be done by the word of God and praier, the word ſhewing me the lawful vſe of his creatures: praier obtaining at Gods hands, that I may vſe them aright. If this practiſe were vſed of men in their profeſſions and callings, I am perſwaded there would be a thouſand vices cut off which in mẽ aboũd, and are committed without ſhame.

Timoth. I thinke the reſt of your Chriſtian exerciſes be the practiſing of the cõmandements of the law.

Euſeb. Yea they are indeede.

Timoth. Me thinks it is an hard point of the law for a man to loue his enemie.

Euſeb. It is indeed: yet in the faithfull it will be ſo: for they haue in their hearts a perperſwaſion, that whereas they are damned in themſelues, yet in Chriſt the mercie of God is moſt plentifull to their ſaluation, and all this God confirmeth and ſealeth vnto them by his holy ſpirit, and therefore they cannot but loue God againe, and that with a feruent loue euen aboue all things in the worlde, and ſo they loue all Gods creatures, and euen their enemies, becauſe they beare the image of God whome they loue: like as I haue a friend and loue him, I loue all of his name, all his kinred, and all that appertaine vnto him. And by the way, here is a good way to know whether we haue faith or not, Though faith onely iuſtifie and make the marriage betweene our ſoule and Chriſt, and is properly the marriage garment, yea, and the ſigne Tau, that defendeth vs from the ſmiting and power of euill angels, and is alſo the rocke on which Chriſts Church is built, and ſtandeth againſt all weather of winde and tempeſt: yet is faith neuer ſeuered from hope and charitie: then if a man will bee ſure that his faith is perfect, let him examine himſelf whether he loue the law: and in like manner if hee will know whether he loue the law, that is, loue God and his neighbour, then let him examine himſelfe whether he beleeue in Chriſt onely for the remiſſion of his ſinne, and obtaining the promiſes made in the Scripture. And euen ſo let him compare his hope of the life to come with faith, and loue, and to the hatred of ſinne in his life, which hatred the loue of the law ingendreth in him. And if they accompanie not one another al three together, then let him bee ſure all is but hypocriſie.

Timoth. Yet by your leaue, faith cannot make a man iuſt before God without hope and charitie: then they alſo with faith haue ſome ſtroke in iuſtification.

Euſeb. I anſwer, though they be inſeparable, yet I praiſe God I doe conceiue how theſe three haue three ſeparable and ſundrie offices. Faith, which onely is an vndoubted and ſure affiance in Chriſt, and in the Father through him, certifieth the conſcience that the ſinne is forgiuen, and the damnation of the law taken away. And with ſuch perſwaſions mollifieth the heart and maketh it loue God againe, and his law. And as oft as wee ſinne, faith onely keepeth, that we forſake not our profeſſion, and that loue vtterly quench not, and hope faile, and onely maketh the peace againe: for a true beleeuer truſteth in Chriſt alone, and not in his owne workes, nor ought els for the remiſſion of ſinnes. The office of loue is to powre out againe the ſame goodnes that it hath receiued of God vpon her neighbour, to be to him as it feeleth Chriſt to be to himſelfe. The office of loue is onely to haue compaſſion, and to beare with her neighbour the burthen of his infirmities. 1. Pet. 4. Loue couereth the multitude of ſinnes: that is to ſay, conſidereth the infirmities, and interpreteth all to the beſt, and taketh for no ſinne at all a thouſand things, of which the leaſt were enough (if a man loued not) to goe to lawe for, and to trouble and diſquiet a whole towne, and ſometime a whole realme too. The office of hope is to comfort in aduerſitie, and to make patient that we faint not, nor fall downe vnder the Croſſe, or caſt it off our backes. Thus theſe three inſeparable haue ſeparable offices and effects, as heate, and drines, being inſeparable in the fire haue yet their ſeparable operations: for drines onely expelleth the moiſtnes of all that is conſumed by fire, & heat onely deſtroieth the coldnes. And it is not all one to ſay, the drines onely, and the drines that is alone, neither is it all one to ſay, faith onely, and faith that is alone.

Timoth. You are to be commended, you are ſo perfect in theſe high points of religion, but I know you ſpeake of experience, for in you faith and hope towardes God, and charity towards your neighbour are inſeparable.

Euſeb. I require no commendations: ſhame and confuſion befall mee eternally, that all glorie may be vnto God.

Timoth. But let vs talke on further of our duties which we muſt performe if wee will liue Chriſtian like among men. And I pray you tell me, what doe you meane that you giue ſo much vnto the poore, conſidering you are ſo poore your ſelfe, I ſpeake my conſcience if you had abilitie, you would doe more then an hundred of thoſe rich men doe.

Euſeb. God knowes my heart, it is a hell vnto me to ſee my brother for whom Chriſt ſhed his blood, to want, if I haue any thing in the world to giue him. Among Chriſtiã men, loue maketh all things common: euery man is others debter, and euery man is boũd to miniſter to his neighbour, and to ſupplie his neighbours lacke of that wherewith God hath indued him. Chriſt is Lorde ouer all, and euery Chriſtian is heire annexed with Chriſt, and therefore Lord ouer all, and euery one is Lord of whatsoeuer another hath: if thē my brother or neighbour neede, I haue to helpe him; and if I shewe not mercie but withdraw my hands from him, then I rob him of his owne, and am a theefe. A Christian man hath Christs spirit: nowe Christ is mercifull, if I shall not bee mercifull, I haue not Christs spirit: if I haue not Christs spirit, then am I none of his. And though I shewe mercie vnto my brother, yet if I doe it not with such burning loue as Christ did it vnto mee, I must knowledge my sinne and desire mercie in Christ.

Timoth. If a man must be franke & free, then a man must giue of his owne stocke to the poore members of Christ, and diminish his owne substance.

Euseb. Yea indeede (if neede so require) wee are made stewards of those goods which God hath giuen vs: shall a steward Act. 2. take all vnto himselfe without reproofe? I am sure that they which were conuerted at Peters first Sermon after Christs ascension, diminished their substance whē they sold them and gaue them to the poore. I
2. Cor. 8. am sure that the Churchs which were in Macedonia, which sent releif vnto their Churches euen aboue their abilitie, they beeing in extreame pouertie, did diminish their possessions: and God grant our conuersations may be like theirs. And that we should bee like them, their examples of great compassion are recorded in the scriptures.

Timoth. Many of vs haue our selues, wife, children, father, mother, and kinsfolke to relieue, so that it will bee hard to deale after this manner.

Euseb. Had not these men so? yea I warrant you had they. And the want of loue which you deeme of, the Gospell of Christ knoweth not, that a man should beg in at himselfe, and then descend I wot not by what steppes. Loue seeketh not her owne profit, but maketh a man to forget himselfe, and turne his profit to another man, as Christ sought not himselfe or his owne profit, but ours. This tearme (my selfe) is not in the Gospell, neither yet father, mother, sister, brother, kinsman, that one should in loue bee preferred before another. The loue that springeth out of Christ excludeth no man, neither putteth difference betweene one another. In Christ wee are all of one degree without respect of persons. Notwithstanding, though a Christian mans heart bee open to all men, and receiueth all men, yet because his abilitie of goods extendeth not so farre, this prouision is made that euery man should care for his owne household, as father, mother, thine elders that haue holpen thee, wife, children, and seruantes. When a man hath done his dutie to his household, & yet hath further aboundance of the blessing of God, that hee oweth to the poore that cannot labour, and cannot get worke, and yet are destitute of friends; to the poore I meane which hee knoweth, and to them of his owne parish. For that prouision ought to be had in the Church, that euery parish prouide for the poore. If his neighbours which hee knoweth bee serued, then is he a debter to the brethren a thousand miles off, if hee heare of their necessitie and haue himselfe any plentie: yea, to the very Infidels hee is a debter if they neede, as farre forth as hee doth not maintaine them against Christ. Thus is euery man that needeth my helpe, my father, mother, sister and brother in Christ: euen as euery man that doeth the will of the father, is father, mother, sister, and brother vnto Christ.

Timoth. Nowe yee somewhat perswade mee of that which mee ought at the first blush, was against common sense.

Euseb. By Gods grace I will perswade you more yet. How it our Sauiour Christ Iesus should nowe dwell vpon the earth in pouertie and want, could not you be content to bestowe halfe your goods on him?

Timoth. Halfe my goods? Nay, truly all: and my heart blood: for I know if I should loose my life for him, I should saue it.

Euseb. Very well, Christ is all in all. Euery Christian man to another is Christ himselfe, and whatsoeuer is done to the poore is done to Christ himselfe, and therefore your neighbours neede hath as good right in your goods as hath Christ himselfe which is heire and Lord ouer all. And looke what you owe to Christ, that you owe to your neighbours neede: to your neighbour owe you your heart and life, and whatsoeuer you haue or can doe.

Timoth. Wee neede not giue our relieue except the poore require it.

Euseb. Aske or not, if they want you are bound to relieue them; As Christ loued you, so loue them. Christ loued you being his enemy, when I am sure of it you neuer asked remission of sinnes.

Timoth.

Timoth. Wee neede not relieue them often, need we?

Euseb. Yes, as long as you are able, & as oft as they want. If Christ should forgiue vs but once we should come short of heauen.

Timoth. The world is full of naughtines, and lewde people take pleasure in doing wrong, and in slaundering, and in hindering their brethren: howe can you liue among them in quietnesse, doe you vse to giue like for like?

Euseb. No, you must vnderstand that there bee two states or regiments in the world, the kingdome of heauen which is the regiment of the Gospell: and the regiment of the world, which is the temporall kingdome. In the first state there is neither father nor mother, neither master, mistres, maid, nor seruant, nor husband, nor wife, nor Lord, nor subiect, nor inferiour, but Christ is all, and each to other is Christ himselfe, there is none better then other, but all alike good, all brethren, and Christ onely is Lord ouer all, neither is there any other thing to doe, or other lawe, saue to loue one another as Christ loued vs: in the temporall regiment, is husband, wife, father, mother, sonne, daughter, mistresse, maide, manseruant, subiect, Lord. Now euery person is a double person, and vnder two regiments: In the first regiment I am a person of mine own selfe vnder Christ & his doctrine, and may neither hate nor be angrie, and much lesse fight or reuenge: but must after the example of Christ, humble my selfe, forsake & denie my selfe, and hate my selfe, and cast my selfe away, and be meeke and patient, and let euery man goe ouer me, & tread me vnder foote, and doe me wrong: and yet I am to loue them, & pray for them, as Christ did for his crucifiers: for loue is all, & whatsoeuer is not of loue is damnable and cast forth of that kingdome. In the temporal regiment, thou art a person in respect of another, thou art husband, father, mother, daughter, wife, Lord, subiect, and there thou must doe according to thine office. If thou bee a father, thou must doe the office of a father & rule, or else thou dammest thy selfe: thou must bring all vnder obedience, whether by faire meanes or by foule: thou must haue obedience of thy wife, of thy seruants, and of thy subiects: if they will not obey in loue, thou must chide, fight, and correct, as farre as the lawe of God and the lawe of the land will suffer thee. Now to the purpose: whether a man may resist violence, and defend or reuenge himselfe: I say nay, in the first state where thou art a person for thy selfe alone, and Christs Disciple, there thou must loue, and of loue doe, studie, and enforce; yea and suffer all things (as Christ did) to make peace, that the blessing of God may come vpō thee, which saith Blessed are the peacemakers for they shal be the children of God. If thou suffer and keep peace in thy selfe only, thy blessing is the possession of this world: but if thou so loue the peace of thy brother that thou leaue nothing vndone or vnsuffered to further it, thou shalt possesse heauen. But in this worldly state where thou art no priuate man, but a person in respect of other, thou must, and art bound vnder paine of damnation to execute thine office. Of thy seruants thou must exact obedience, and must not suffer thy selfe to be despised. If thou art a ruler, thou must take, imprison, and slay too not of malice and hate to reuenge thy selfe, but to defend thy subiects and to maintaine thine office: the ruler must not oppresse his subiects with rents, fines & customes, at all: neither pill them with taxes, and such like to maintaine his own lusts: but be louing and kinde vnto them as Christ was to him: for they be the price of his blood. I wil shew my mind more plainly by one example. You are in your fathers house among your brethren and sisters, there if one fight with another, or if any doe you wrong, you may not reuenge or smite, for that pertaineth to the father only. But if your father giue you authoritie in his absence and command you to smite, if they wil not be ruled but abuse you, then you are another person. Notwithstanding yet you haue not put off the first person, but are a brother still, and must euer loue and prooue all things to rule with loue: but if loue will not serue, then you must vse the office of another person, or sinne against your father. Euen so when you are a temporall person you put not off the spirituall: therefore you must euer loue, but when loue will not helpe, you must with loue execute the office of the temporall person. You must loue your neighbor in your heart, because he is your brother in the first state; yet you must obey your ruler which hath power ouer you, and when neede requireth, at his commandement you must goe with the Constable or like officer and breake open your neighbours doore, if he wil not open it in the kings name: yea if he wil not yeeld in the kings name, you may ſmite him to the ground till he be ſubdued, and looke what harme hee getteth, thas be vpon his owne head.

Timoth. I vnderſtand you wel. As I am a member of the ſpirituall bodie of Chriſt, I muſt in all my conuerſation follow him with patience, meekeneſſe and long ſuffering, ouercomming other mens euils, with well doing: yet if the hurt be greater then I can beare, I muſt take a newe perſon on me, and if I be a Ruler, with loue ſeeke amendment: if a ſubiect, then in the feare of God, complaine to my ruler. But further I pray you ſoyle me this doubt. If I ſhall be take for a ſouldier, me thinks that I ſhould then ſhake off all loue and meekenes, and then I could not practiſe this Chriſtian rule.

Euſeb. Yes, if our King (God ſaue his Grace) ſhould ſend you on warfare into another countrie, you muſt obey at Gods commandement, & goe and auenge your Princes quarrell, which you know not but that it is right. When you come thither, remember the two ſtates in which you are: and knowe that in the firſt ſtate, that is, the regiment ſpirituall, you muſt loue them with whom you fight, and that they are your brethren bought with Chriſts blood, as well as you, and for Chriſts ſake hate them not, yet as you are in the ſecond ſtate, a ſouldier at your Princes commandement you muſt fight againſt them, and maintaine your princes quarrell, & bring them vnder his power: and therewithal be content with your Princes wages, neither deſire your aduerſaries life or goods, ſaue to aduantage your prince. So then a ſouldier, neede not caſt away meekeneſſe, for hee may fight with his enemie & ſley him, and yet loue him.

Timoth. Another thing I would knowe of you, which now commeth to my mind, I haue a Landlord, he ſeemeth to be a very good man, he countenanceth all the good preachers in our countrie, and he rideth vſually ten miles to heare Sermons: I holde of him a houſe and a little land, not ſcarſe enough to find my poore familie: my leaſe is come out, and I haue taken a new leaſe, but I haue paid ſuch a great fine, and my yearely rents are ſo racked, that I feare I and all my houſhold are like to begge our bread: this is it diſquieteth mee, and almoſt maketh me at my wits ende, what is your counſell and aduiſe?

Euſeb. Surely, it maketh my heart to bleede to ſee how many men brag of the Goſpell, and yet what little fruit the Goſpell hath in them, and what little loue they ſhewe, euen they which abound in rents and landes. My poore aduiſe is this, that you would with patience depend vpon Gods prouidence. It is ſaid, Bleſſed are the meeke, for they ſhall inherite the earth. Then let all the world ſtudie to doe you wrong, yea let them ſtudie to bring you to extreame miſerie, & doe it too: yet if you be meeke you ſhal haue food and raiment enough for you and yours. And no doubt, God (who is alwayes true of his promiſe) ſhall raiſe vp ſome to helpe you. And my counſaile is, that you giue your Landlord now and then a capon, now a pigge, now a gooſe, and if you bee able a lambe or a calfe, & let your wife viſit your Landladie now and then with ſpiced cakes, with apples, peares, cherries, and ſuch like: and be you readie with your oxen, or horſes, fiue or ſixe times in the yeare, to fetch home their wood, to plowe their land, then no doubt God may ſoften their heartes and mooue them to haue ſome pittie and compaſſion on your poore eſtate.

Timoth. I haue done all this. Nay (may it be ſpoken betweene you and me) I am at commaundement, and am as a drudge to them, to doe their buſineſſe, and to leaue my owne vndone, and yet haue neither meate, drinke, nor money.

Euſeb. More is the pittie. But remember that they which cannot come to ſee men deale vprightly in the world, yet doe in their heartes hunger and thirſt after this righteouſneſſe, are pronounced bleſſed.

Timoth. To let this paſſe: ſhewe me one rule how I might generally in all matters behaue my ſelfe among men, and then for this time I will ceaſe to trouble you.

Euſeb. Aske your owne conſcience what you may or ought to doe. Would you men did ſo with you? Then doe you it. Would you not bee ſo dealt with? Then do it not. You would not that men ſhould doe you wrong and oppreſſe you. You would not that men ſhould doe you ſhame and rebuke, lie on you, kill you, hire your houſe from you, or tice your ſeruant away, or take againſt your wil ought that is yours. You would not that men ſhould ſell you falſe ware, when you put them in truſt to make them readie, or to lay it out for you: and you would not that men ſhould deceiue you with great oathes, ſweaſwearing that to be good which is indeed very naught: you would not that men ſhould ſell you ware that is naught, & too deare to vndoe you: doe no ſuch thing then vnto your neighbours. but as loath as you would bee to buy falſe ware, and too deare, for vndoing your ſelfe: ſo loath be you to ſell falſe ware, or too deare, for vndoing your neighbor. And in all caſes how glad would you bee to be holpen, ſo glad be to helpe your neighbour. So in al things aske your conſcience what is to bee done betweene your neighbour and you, and ſhee will teach you. But becauſe you are wearie of reaſoning I will alſo ende. Deſiring God to increaſe in vs his heauenly graces, as faith, and repentance, and loue, according to his good pleaſure. Amen.

The aſſertion.

A Reprobate may in truth bee made partaker of all that is contained in the religion of the Church of Rome: and a Papiſt by his religion cannot goe beyond a Reprobate.

The firſt argument.

HE which may in truth be made partaker of the chiefe points of the popiſh Religion may bee made partaker of all: but a Reprobate may be made partaker of the cheiſe points of the popiſh religion: therfore a Reprobate may be made partaker of all.

The proofe of the Argument.

THe propoſition is plaine, and euery Papiſt wil grant it: all the controuerſie is of the aſſumption: wherefore I proue it thus:

The Sacrament of Penance (as they call it) is one of the chiefe things in the religion of the church of Rome: for it is ſuch a ſacrament, [a] that by the power and efficacie of it, the blood of Chriſt is deliuered to vs to waſh away our ſinnes: and they ſay [b] it hath ſuch vertue that the kingdome of heauen is promiſed to it in the Scriptures, and that it is not regeneration, but an healing of a man regenerate, & that it pardoneth ſinne, as baptiſme. And as touching Contrition, Papiſts write, [c] it hath power to doe away ſinne, and to obtaine pardon at Gods hand: the ſame they ſpeake of Confeſſion, which they ſay deliuereth frō death, openeth paradiſe, and giueth hope of ſaluation: and hereby it may appeare, that penance is one of the greateſt points of the popiſh religion.

But a Reprobate may bee truely made partaker of the popiſh ſacrament of penance, & indeed performe all in it. There be three parts of penance, Contrition of the heart, Confeſſion of the mouth, Satiſfaction in the deed. All theſe three Iudas performed: firſt, he had Contrition: for when he ſaw that our Sauiour was condemned, [d] then he ſawe his owne ſinne, & was ſtricken with a griefe for his owne treacherie, and repented, & preſently after he [e] confeſſed his ſinne openly vnto the chiefe Prieſts and Elders. Alſo he made Satiſfaction, when he brought againe the thirtie pieces of ſiluer which he tooke to betray his maiſter.

Againe, Contrition of the heart is the ground of penance: & papiſts ſay, it is not an acte of the holy Ghoſt [f] but an act of mans free will proceeding from it: and therefore a reprobate may haue it. And as for Satisfaction, if a reprobate cannot doe it by himſelfe, yet he may performe it by another: for ſo they ſay [g] that one may ſatisfie by another: wherefore for any thing I can ſee, a reprobate may haue all that is contained in the popiſh ſacrament of penance.

Faith is another of the chiefeſt points, that is in the religion of the Church of Rome, for [h] they ſay, it is the foundation & ground-worke of Iuſtification. But Reprobates may haue that faith which they meane. For they ſay, that it is nothing elſe, but [i] a gift of God, & a certaine light of the minde, wherewith a man being enlightened giueth ſure and certaine aſſent to the reuealed word of God. And the Rhemiſts ſay, it is onely an acte of the vnderſtanding: and Andradius ſaith, that Faith is onely in generall actions, and cannot come to the particular applying of any thing: now all this reprobates may haue. [k] for their minds are enlightened to know the trueth, and to be perſwaded of it, and therfore they haue this acte of the vnderſtanding: & this is a generall faith: yea the deuill himſelfe can do thus much, who beleeueth and trembleth. And their implicite faith which ſaueth the lay mā, what reprobate cannot haue it? for there is nothing els required, but to beleeue as the Church beleeueth, though he know not howe the Church beleeueth. And the Papiſts themſelues ſay as much: for their [l] Coūcels hold, that a wicked mā & an heretick may haue cōfidence in Chriſt, & that an heathē man, by the naturall knowledge of God, and by the works of creation, might haue faith, & in a generall manner beleeue in Chriſt.

The

The second argument.

THat religion whose precepts are no directions to attaine peace of conscience leaueth a man still in a damnable case: but the precepts of the religion of the church of Rome, are not directions to attaine peace of conscience therefore it leaueth a man in a damnable case which if it be true, a reprobate may be as sound a professour of it as any other.

The proofe.

THe proposition is certen: becausse as long as any mā hath his conscience to accuse him of sin before God, he a 1.Ioh. 3. 20. is in state of damnation, as [a] S.Iohn saith: If our heart condemne vs, God is greater then our heart, and knoweth all things. And this is peculiar and proper to the elect children of God, [b] to receiue these gifts
b Rom. 5. 1 c Heb. 10. 22. and graces from God, [c] the enioying of which bringeth peace of conscience. True it is indeede, that reprobates receiue many gifts and graces at Gods hand, but they are no other then such as may be ioyned with trembling of conscience, as the deuill is said to beleeue, but withall to tremble.

The assumption (namely, that the religion of the Church of Rome cannot pacifie the conscience) may be easily prooued on this wise.

A man whose conscience must be truely quieted, must first of all be truely humbled: [d] Come vnto me (saith our Saviour d Mat. 11. 28. Christ) all ye which are wearied and burdened, and I will ease you. Whereby it appeareth, that they who are to haue their consciences refreshed in Christ, must first of all be afflicted with the sense of Gods iudgement: yea they must be pressed downe to hel-ward with the waight and burden of their sinnes, that they may see & from their hearts confesse, that in themselues there is no way to escape damnatiō.

[e] The good Phisitian Christ Iesus can not e Mat. 9. 12 Mat. 15. 24 Esa. 44. 11 1. Cor. 11. 33. heale vs before he hath lanced our woūds to the very bottome: he neuer can find any of his sheepe before they be quite lost: he neuer powreth into vs the liuing waters of his spirit, before we be barren and drie ground voide of all moisture, and that man must condemne himselfe, that would not haue Christ to pronounce sentence of condemnation against him.

Nowe this true humiliation of a sinner cannot be wrought in any mans heart by the religion of the Church of Rome. True and sound humiliation is wrought by two meanes: first, by making a man to see the greatnesse of his sinne and wickednesse: secondly, by making him to acknowledge that he is destitute, and quite bereft of all goodnesse. For if a man either see not the greatnesse of his sinne, or haue confidence of any thing in himselfe, he cannot be hūbled: but neither of these two thinges are performed in the Church of Rome. As touching the first, the Romish religion is so farre from amplifying and enlarging the greatnesse of mens sinnes, that it doth extenuate them, and lessen them out of measure: for it maketh some sinnes to be venial f Gal. 3. 13 g Canis. Oper. cat. pag. 491. [f] when as the least sin that can be against Gods lawe deserueth damnation, [g] it teacheth that lesser sinnes are done away by an humble accusation of a mans selfe, by saying the Lords praier, by knocking vpon the breast, and by such like: the greater sinnes may be done away by almes, deeds, and such like satisfactions. But how can any sinne be great, that may be done away with such easie and slight meanes? Furthermore it teacheth, that euill thoughts & desires, and motions of the heart without consent are no sinnes: & this opinion cutteth off all true humiliation: for Paul neuer repented, before hee vnderstood the meaning of the last commandement, and perceiued thereby, that the desyres & lusts of his heart, to which he did not yeeld his consēt, were sinnes damnable before God, and knowing this, he then saw himselfe to be most miserable, and renouncing his owne righteousnes, he sought for righteousnesse in Christ. Lastly, [i] it teacheth, that i Cens. Col. pag. 46. 54 originall sinne is done away in Baptisme, and that it is the least synne of all other. What is this but to extenuate mans corruption? for when the roote of corruption is taken away, and it is made so litle a syn, actuall synnes cannot be taken for such heinous matters.

And for the second point, the Church of Rome doth too much extoll the power of man, and his naturall strength. [k] It

By this it appeareth that the Church of Rome aſcribeth too much to man, r which in himſelfe is onely and altogither euill, dead in ſinne, chained vp in miſerable bondage vnder Sathan the prince of darkneſſe: & therfore it is euident that al the preaching that is vſed in that Church, will not humble a ſinner, and make him deny himſelfe, & therefore their preaching may peraduẽture benumme a corrupt conſcience and make it ſecure, but it cannot pacifie the troubled conſciẽce, nor diſquiet it by the threatning of the lawe, that by the promiſes of the Goſpell it may be quieted.

r Gen. 6. Eph. 2. 1. 2

II. Againe, s this religion teacheth, that a man muſt doubt of his ſaluation as long as he is in this life: behold a racke or gybbet erected by the Church of Rome, for the tormenting of tender conſciences: for whẽ a man doubteth of his ſaluation, he alſo doubteth õf Gods loue and mercie to him: and he which doubteth of Gods loue, cannot loue God againe: for how can any man loue him of whoſe good will he doubteth? and when a man hath not the loue of God in him, he hath no grace in him, and therefore his conſcience muſt needes be defiled, and void of true peace, yea he muſt needes be a wicked man, and that t ſaying of Salomon muſt needs agree to him: The wicked flieth when no man purſueth (by reaſon of the guiltineſſe of his conſcience) but the godly is bold as a Lion. Againe, u Bleſſed is the man ſaith Dauid) whoſe ſinnes are pardoned: where he maketh remiſſion of ſinnes to be true felicity: nowe there is no true felicity but that which is inioyed, and felicitie cannot be enioyed, vnleſſe it be felt, and it cannot be felt, vnleſſe a man knowe himſelfe to be in poſſeſſion of it, and a man cannot knowe himſelfe to be in poſſeſſiõ of it, if he doubt whether he hath it or not: and therefore this doubting of the remiſſion of ſinnes is contrary to true felicity, and is nothing els but a torment of the conſcience. For a man cannot doubt whether his ſinnes be pardoned or not: but ſtraight way (if his conſcience be not ſeared with an hote yron) the very thought of his ſinne will ſtrike a great feare into him: for the feare of eternall death, and the horror of Gods iudgment will come to his remembrance, the conſideration of which is moſt terrible. Vndoubtedly this religion muſt needs be comfortleſſe. Alas poore ſoules, we are no better then paſſengers in this world, our way it is in the middle of the ſea, where we can haue no ſure footing at all, and which way ſoeuer we caſt our eies, we ſee nothing but water, euen opening it ſelfe to deuoure vs quicke: the deuill and our rebellious fleſh raiſe vp againſt vs infinite thouſand of tempeſts and ſtormes to ouerthrow vs: but behold, God of his great and endleſſe mercy hath brought vs to Chriſt, as to a ſure anchor-hold, he biddeth vs to vndoe our gables, and fling vp our anchors within the vaile, and faſten them in Chriſt: we doe it as we are commanded: but a ſiſter of ours (I meane the Church of Rome) paſſing in the ſhippe with vs (as it ſeemeth) who hath long taken vpõ her to rule the helme, dealeth too vnkindly with vs: ſhee vnlooſeth our anchors, and cutteth in peeces our gables, ſhee telleth vs that we may not preſume to faſten our anchor on the rocke: ſhe will haue vs freely to rowe in the middle of the ſea in the greateſt fogges and the fearefulleſt tempeſts that beat: we ſhall follow her aduiſe, we muſt needes looke for a ſhippe-wracke: for the leaſt flawe of winde ſhall ouerturne vs, & our poore ſoules ſhall be plunged in the gulfe of hell.

Cant. 1. 5.

III. Laſtly, Iuſtification by workes cauſeth trouble and diſquietneſſe to the conſcience. No mans conſcience can be appeaſed, before Gods wrath be appeaſed, and Gods wrath cannot be appeaſed by any workes: for the beſt workes the regenerate can doe, are imperfect, and are ſtained with ſome blemiſh of corruption, as may appeare x both in the prophet Eſay, and in Paul, both which had a great miſlyking of that good which they did, becauſe it was mingled with ſin. And againe, euery man is bound in duty to keepe the whole lawe, ſo that if a man could keepe it perfectly, he ſhould doe no more then he is by duty inioyned to doe: and therefore he which looketh to merit eternal life at gods hand by keeping the lawe, truſteth but to a broken ſtaffe, and is like the bankrout that will pay one debt by another: for by his ſinne, euery man is indebted to the Lord, and is bound to anſwer to the Lord the full puniſhment of all his ſinnes: this debt, the Papiſt ſaith, we may diſcharge by obedience to the lawe, that is by a newe debt, which wee are as well bound to pay to our God as the former.

To end this point, let a man looke to be saued by workes, and therefore let a man imploy himselfe to doe the best workes he can, yet he shall neuer come to know whē he hath done sufficient to satisfie Gods wrath: and this vncertaintie, all his life, but especially in the houre of death, must needs disquiet him. And truely, when a man shall haue done many thousand workes, yet his heart can neuer be at quiet, as it appeareth in the young man, who though he had laboured all his life to fulfill the lawe thereby to be saued, yet distrusting all his doings, he asketh further of our Sauiour Christ, what he might doe to bee saued. Mat. 10. 17.

Furthermore, it is the doctrine of the Church of Rome, that there is nothing in the regenerate that God can hate: and that they are inwardly pure and without spot. A doctrine that wil make any Christian conscience despaire. For if a man shall fall to examine himselfe, he shall finde [a] that he is sold vnder sinne, [b] compassed about of sinne, [c] hee shall see his particular sins to be as the haires of his head: at the sight and feeling of which, hee shall finde that there is much matter in him worthy of hatred and damnation too. He beeing in this case, will begin to doubt whether he bee the childe of God or not: & perseuering in this doubting, he shall be driuen to despaire of Gods loue towards him, considering that he cannot finde any such purenes in himselfe as the doctrine of the Church of Rome requireth. Conci. Trid. sess. 5 [a] Rom. 7. 14. [b] Heb. 12. 1 [c] Psal 40. 12.

Lastly, experience it selfe teacheth that the Romish religion can bring no peace to the conscience, in that some for the maintaining of it haue despaired. As Frācis Spira, who against his own conscience hauing abiured the truth, & subscribed to the doctrine of the Romish Church, most fearefully despaired of his saluatiō: which could not haue bin if that doctrin had bin agreeable to Gods word which is spirit & life to the receiuer. For the same cause Latomus a doctor of Louaine despaired, crying that he was damned, becausse he had opposed himselfe to the knowne truth. This also befell Gardner at his death, as the booke of Acts and Monuments declareth. Illiricus de fide. Epist Senar de morte Diazii.

The third argument.

THat religion which agreeth to the corruption of mans nature, a Reprobate may truely professe it: the religion of the Church of Rome agreeth to the corruption of mans nature: therefore a Reprobate may truely professe it.

The Proofe.

I Neede not stand to prooue the proposition, the assumptiō is rather to be confirmed: which first I will prooue by induction of particulars. First, that a mā should be iustified by workes, is an opinion setled in nature, as may appeare in them that crucified our Sauiour Christ: for when they were pricked in their hearts at Peters sermon, [a] they said, Men and brethren, what shall we doe to be saued? and this said the yong man before named, not what should I beleeue, but what should I doe to bee saued. So then in them it appeareth, that it is a naturall opinion of all men to thinke that they must be saued by doing of somewhat. A Papist will say, though this be naturall thus to thinke, yet it may bee good: for there is some goodnesse in nature, [a] Act. 2. 37. Iob. 6. 28. Mar. 10. 17

I answer, that the wisedome of the flesh is enmitie to Gods wisdome, Rom. 8. 7. and all men by nature are nothing but flesh: for naturally they are the children of wrath. Secondly, the worshipping of God in images is a great matter in the Church of Rome: but this manner of worshipping is nothing but a worke of the flesh, which thus I prooue: [b] Idolatrie is natural, and a worke of the flesh; but to worshippe God in Images, is idolatrie. The children of Israel when they erected the goldē calfe, they did commit idolatrie, and yet they did not worshippe the calfe it selfe, but God in the calfe. For when the calfe was made, they [c] proclaimed an holy day, not to the calfe, but to the Lord. And Baal that detestable idol, was nothing but the image of [d] God, as appeareth in Hosea the prophet. At that day, saith the Lord, thou shalt call me no more Baal. It remaineth therefore, that to serue God in an image, is a worke of the flesh, and altogether agreeth to the vile corruption of nature. Thirdly, pride, & a desire to be aduanced aboue other, is a naturall corruptiō: to this agreeth the Popes primacie, his double sword, and triple crowne; yet the outragious pompe of that seate is as a peare of bellowes to kindle the concupiscence, and to make the hidden sparkes of pride to breake out into a great flame. Fourthly, Doubting of Gods prouidence and mercy is a naturall corruption in all men: to this agreeth, & from hēce issueth that foolish and vaine opinion, [b] Gal. 5. 20 [c] Exo. 32. 5 [d] Hos. 2. 16

concernimg doubting of our ſaluation, & of the remiſſion of ſinnes. Fiftly, ſelfe-loue, and ſelfe-liking are naturall corruptions: to this agreeth that doctrine of the Papiſts, not ouermuch to abaſe our ſelues, but to maintaine free-will by nature, and to thinke that we haue ſo much goodneſſe that we are able to prepare our ſelues to receiue, and in ſome ſort to merit grace. Sixtly, idleneſſe and riotouſneſſe is a naturall corruption, and to it very fitly anſweareth the great number of feaſts, of holy dayes, of halfe holidaies, which the church of Rome vſeth. Seuenthly, Couetouſneſſe is a naturall corruption, and to the feeding of this vice ſerueth purgatorie, a fire of great gaine which in very trueth, if it had not burned very hot, the fire in the Popes kitchin had burned very cold, hitherto ſerue Pilgrimages, ſaying of Maſſes, and ſelling of Pardones for money. Eightly, to be at liberty is the deſire of nature: anſwerable to this is that opinion, that the ſpiritualty is to be exempted from ſubiection to Magiſtrates. Ninthly, to commit adulterie is naturall: to this agreeth the Stewes, and the permiſſion of ſimple fornication. Tenthly, ignorance is a filthy corruption in nature: this the church of Rome maketh the mother of deuotion, and it is inioyned the lay man as a meanes of his ſaluation: for he muſt beleeue as the Church beleeueth, he is not bound to knowe. XI. Infidelitie is naturall, and to this agreeth that they call vpon Saints and angels, the Lord hauing commaunded them to call vpon him in the name of Chriſt: what argueth this els, but hearts diſtruſting Gods goodneſſe, and guiltie conſciences? XII. Images in the Churh of Rome came from infidelity, becauſe men in reaſon could not perſwade themſelues that God was preſent, vnleſſe that were made manifeſt by ſome ſigne and image. Which thing the Iſraelites declared when they ſaid to Aaron in the wilderneſſe in Moſes abſence, Make vs gods to goe before vs. XIII. Satisfactions for ſinne are naturall: for wicked men when they haue offended God, they haue alwaies vſed ſome ceremonies to pacifie God with, which whē they haue performed, then they thinke they haue done enough. XIV. The Church of Rome ſaith, that the ſcriptures are darke and obſcure: the blind man findeth fault with the darkeneſſe of the ſun: If the ſcriptures appeare to any to be obſcure, the fault is not in the ſcriptures, but in the blindneſſe of the minde of him which reade th and heareth thē. XV. Laſtly, pardons open a gap to all licentiouſneſſe: therefore they agree to mans corrupt nature: for who almoſt will not ſinne, when he may get a pardon for his ſinnes, for a little peece of money, as twēty ſhillings, or foure nobles? And what is it but coſenage to ſell pardons which ſhall be in force many yeares after the end of the world, as the pope doth?

c Mich. 6. 7. Iſa. 58. 4. 5

It is naturall to a man to ſerue God in certaine ceremonies, without the power of godlineſſe: and this ſeruice is preſcribed by the religion of the Church of Rome, which ſtandeth only in outward and corporall ceremonies, as the outward ſucceſſion of Biſhops, garments, veſtures, geſtures, colours, choice of meate, difference of daies, times, and, places, hearing, ſeeing, ſaying, touching, taſting, numbring of beades, gilding & worſhipping of images, building Monaſteries, riſing at midnight, ſilence in cloiſters, abſtaining from fleſh and whit meate. Faſting in Lent, Keeping Imber daies, hearing Maſſe & diuine ſeruice, ſeeing and adoring the body in forme of bread, receiuing holy water, and holy bread, creeping to the Croſſe, carrying Palmes, taking aſhes, bearing Candles, Pilgrimages-going, cenſing, kneeling, knocking, altars, ſuperaltars, candleſtickes, pardons: In orders, Croſſing, annointing, ſhauing, forſwearing marriage. In baptiſme, ſalting, croſſing, ſpatling, exorciſing, waſhing of hands: At Eaſter, confeſſion, penance, dirge, ſatisfaction, & in receiuing with beardes newe ſhauen, to imagine a body where they ſee none: and though hee were there preſent to be ſeene, yet the outward ſeeing and touching of him, of it ſelfe without faith conduceth no more then it did the Iewes. At Rogation daies to carry banners, to followe the Croſſe, to walke about the fieldes: After Penteceſt to goe about with Corpus Chriſti play. At Hollowmaſſe to watch in the Church, to ſay Dirge or commendation, and to ring for all ſoules, to pay tithes truely, to giue to the hie Altar. And if a man will be a Prieſt, to ſay Maſſe or Mattens, to ſerue the Saint of that day, and to lift well ouer the head. In ſickenes to be annoiled, to take his rites, after his death to haue funerall and obites ſaid for him, and to be rung for at his Funerall, moneths mind, and yeare mind. This is the ſumme of the catholike religion, ſtanding in bodilie actions not in any motions or worke of the holy Ghoſt, working in the heart.

For. Act. in the begin.

The morall lawe containing perfect righteouſnes, is flat oppoſite to mans corrupt nature: therefore whatſoeuer religion shall repeale and make of none effect the commandements of the morall lawe, that some religion must needs ioine hands with the corruption of nature, and stand for the maintenance of it. This doth the religion of the Church of Rome: it may be it doth not plainly repeale them, yet in effect it doth: [a] and if it shall frustrate but any one point of any one commandement, yea the whole lawe thereby is made in vaine. 1. The first commandement requireth, that we haue the true Iehoua for our only God: the Church of Rome maketh other Gods beside this true God: it maketh the body of Christ to be God, because they hold it may be in many places, in heauen, in earth at the same time, which thing is only proper to God. It maketh euery Saint departed to be god because it holdeth that saints doe heare vs now beeing vpon the earth, and that know our thoughts when wee pray to them, which none but the true god can doe. It maketh the Pope to be God, and that in plaine words. [b] Pope Nicholas saith, Constat summum Pontificē á pio principe Constantino Deum appellari: It is well known that the Pope of the Godly prince Constantine was called God. Againe in [c] the extrauagants of the same Cannō law it is written Dominus Deus noster Papa, Our Lord God the Pope. And againe, [d] Christopher Marcellus said to the Pope, Tu es alter Deus in terris, Thou art another God vpon earth: and the Pope tooke it to himselfe. As the Pope in plaine words is made God, so the power giuen to him declareth the same. [e] He can make holy that which is vnholy, and iustifie the wicked, and pardon sinnes: [f] he may dispense contrary to the saying of an Apostle: he can change the nature of things, & of nothing make somewhat. What is all this but to place the Pope in Gods roome, and to robbe the Lord of his Maiestie?

Againe, the Church of Rome maketh Marie the mother of Iesus to bee as God. In the Breuiary reformed and published at the commandement of Pius the V. [a] shee is called a Goddesse, in expresse wordes: and shee is further tearmed the Queene of heauen, the Queene of the world, the gate of heauen, the mother of grace and mercie: Yea shee is farre exalted aboue Christ, and he in regard of her is made but a poore vnderling in heauen: for papists in their seruice vnto her pray on this manner, saying: Shew thy selfe to be a mother: and cause thy sonne to receiue our prayers: set free the captiues and giue light to the blind. [b] Lastly, the verye crosse is made as a God. For they salute it by the name of their onely hope and pray it to increase iustice to the Godly, and to giue sinners pardon. Wherefore the Church of Rome beside the one true God, distinguished into three persons the father, the sonne, & the holy Ghost, maketh also many other, and so in truth hath repealed his first commandement.

And they haue very plainly repealed the second commandement, in that they teach it lawfull to make images of the true God, and to worship him in them. For the flatte contrary is the very scope of this commandement: namely that no image must be made of the true Iehoua: nor any worship be performed vnto him in an image: which appeareth thus. In Deutronomie Moses maketh a large Commentarie of this commandement and this very poynt he sets down expressely, saying take heed to your selues: for ye saw no image in the day that the Lord spake vnto you in Horeb, out of the middest of the fire: that ye corrupt not your selues, and make you a grauen image, or representation of any figure, &c. His argument I set downe thus: As God appeared in mount Horeb, so he is to be conceiued and represented: but he appeared in no image in mount Horeb, only his voice was heard: therefore he is not to be conceiued or represented in any image: but men are to be content, if they may heare his voice. Againe that sinne to which the people of Israell were specially giuen, euen that doth the Lord specially forbid: but to this were the people of Israell specially giuen, not so much to make images of false Gods, as to make images of the true God, and to worship him in them: which I prooue thus,

In the booke of Iudges it is said, that the childrē of Israel did wickedly in the sight of the Lord, and serued Baalim. Now these Baalims, what are they? Surely Idols resembling the true God: as the Prophet Hosea declareth. And at this day saith the Lord, thou shalt call me Ishai, and shalt call me no more Baali. Here it appeareth that the Israelits meaning was not to worship a false God, but the true God in Baalim. And Aaron when he made the golden calfe proclaimed that the next day should be holy day, not of any false god, but of the Lord that brought thē out of Egypt: the prophet Esa. after that he had set forth Gods maiesty very worthily, he comes in with this conclusion: To whome then will ye liken God? or what similitude wil ye set vp of him? which declareth that the Iewes after the manner of the Gentiles ran a whoring after Idols, that is, Images not onely of false Gods, but also of the true God. I conclude therefore as I began, that the Church of Rome, by maintaining images, hath repealed this commandement.

Neither doth it shew lesse fauour to the third commandement: which also is repealed. First, in that they teach men to giue the glorie which is proper to God, to some thing else, it is proper to God after the daie of iudgement to be all in all: this they giue to Marie, saying that shee is all in all

1. Cor. 15. 28.

It is proper to Christ in respect of other creatures to be a light lightening all that come into the world, yet they pray to Marie to giue light to the blind. It is proper to Christ to be the redeemer of mankind, & this worke of redemption is ascribed to Marie, whome the Papists call their hope, their ioy, their mediatresse, a medicine for the diseased, a defence from the enemy, a friend in the houre of death. Againe, they make S. Martin a Priest according to the order of Melchisedech which is proper to Christ.

Ioh. 1.9.

Breuiar & missal. & reform.

Secondly, they hold that the people is to be barred frō the reading of the Scriptures, vnlesse it be in an vnknown tongue, and so they maintaine ignorance and the prophaning of gods name, for the preaching of the word, and therefore also the hearing, learning, reading, searching, of it, is the glorifying of the word, and so the glorifying of Gods name.

2. Thes. 3. 1

The fourth commandement is repealed in that they require that their feast daies should be kept as solemnly as the Lords sabboth: For they must be kept in al honour and comlines: and men must rest from their labours, from morning to euening, as on the Sabboth: whereas contrariwise the Lord hath giuen permission to his seruants to labour the sixe daies, so bee it, on the seuenth they will rest from the workes of their callings, and do the workes of the spirit.

Con. Mogunt c. 36. 37. Matisc. con 2. c. 1. 2.

They repeale the fift commaundement in that they teach that their Cleargie hath an immunity, and therefore is not bound to performe obedience to magistrates, for so they haue decreed, that Clearks are to be iudged of Bishops: and that they are only to rescue them from iniuries. Againe, that the Bishop must not be iudged of the secular power: and that the Pope himselfe oweth no subiection to Kings, Princes, Emperours, but hath power to make them and to put them downe at his pleasure. But S. Paul for the maintaining of the fift commandement, bids euery soule be subiect to the higher powers: and therefore the pope with his cleargie (as Chrysostome hath expounded it) must be subiect to ciuill magistrats, vnlesse they will exclude themselues out of the number of men, for Paul speakes to all.

Matisc. con c. 7. 8. 9.

Against the sixt commandement they haue decreed asyles for murderers plainly permitting them which feare authority, to haue safety in the lap of their mother the Church. Thus they annihilate Gods commandement: yea and more then this, whither tends al that they teach but to the very murdering of soules? For example, saluation by workes of grace is one of their chiefe points: But that man that is perswaded that he must be saued by his workes, must also put his trust in them, and hee which trusteth to his workes is accursed before God. For cursed is that man that trusteth in man, whether it be himselfe or other.

Matisc. 2. c. 8

Ier. 17. 7.

The seuenth Commandement is repealed diuers waies. First, in that they maintaine the occasions of Adulterie & fornication: namely, the vowe of single life both in man & woman, when as they haue not receiued the gift from God to be continent: which gift when they want, and yet are bound to single life, they must needes breake out into much loosenes. This sinne made Mantuan, Palingenius and Petrarch to crie out against the Church of Rome. Againe, some Papists defend the toleration of the Iewes in Rome, for the auoiding of greater euils. And in the councell of Trent, chastity and Priests marriage are made opposite, so that mariage with them is a filthy thing, although God hath ordained it for the auoiding of fornication in all. Furthermore, that which is most abominable & prooues the Church of Rome to be an Antichristian Church, they maintaine marriages within the degrees forbidden both by the law of nature, and of Gods word. For in the table of consanguinity they which are placed in the transuerse vnequal line cannot marry, because they are as parents and children, yet if they be distant foure decrees on diuers sides from the common stocke they may marry togither by the Canon law. As for example, the grand vncle may marry his sisters nephewes neece, a thing very filthy in nature, considering that a man cannot marry with any honestly his sisters childe. To go further, by Gods word they which are distant foure degrees in the transuerse equall line, are not forbidden to marry together, as cosin germans. Thus the daughters of Zelophehad were married to their fathers brothers sonnes: this example (as I take it) may be a warrant of the lawfulnes of this marriage: Yet the Canon law vtterly condemnes this marriage of cosin germanes, and the marriage of their children after them, though they be 8. degrees distant. Thus the Church of Rome doth ouerthwart the lord: where he giues liberty, they restraine it; and when he restraineth men, then they giue liberty.

Eclog. 5. l. 4. 5. 9.

Sess. 24. c. 6

Greg. cap. 8 de consang nasculus maximus abnepotis.

Num. 36. 11.

They repeale the 8. commandement by their spiritual marchandize, in which they sel those things which are not to be sold, as Crosses to dead men, Images, prayers, the sound of bels, remission of sinnes, and the merits by which men may come to the kingdom of heauen: their shaueling priests will doe no duty without they be fed with money: hence comes the prouerb, no penny no pater noster.

They teach men to beare false witnes, & so to sinne against the ninth commandement, in that they hold that Marie is the Queene of heauen: whereas indeed she is no Queen, but doth continually cast down her crowne before Christ with the rest of the saints. And a man may as well beare false witnesse in speaking too much, as in speaking too little.

Reu. 7. 11. and, 5. 10.

In the 10. commandement the first motions that goe before consent are forbidde: otherwise there shall be no difference between it and the rest. For they also are spirituall, and forbid inward motions: but the difference is, that they forbid only the motions that goe with consent. Nowe the Papists say, that these motions are no sin properly, vnlesse consent follow: and therefore they in expresse wordes repeale this commandement. For if concupiscence and the first motions be no sinnes properly, then there neede no prohibition of them.

The fourth Argument.

THat religion which is contrarie to it selfe, is onely a meere inuention of man: the religion of the Church of Rome is quite contrarie to it selfe: therefore it is onely an inuention of man: which if it be true, as well a Reprobate as any other may performe the things required in it.

The Proofe.

THe proposition is most true, because it is a priuiledge of Gods word, and so of the true religion gathered forth of it, to be consonant to it selfe in al points: which properly no doctrines nor writings beside can haue. The assumption may be made manifest by an induction of particular examples.

I. The Church of Rome saith, that men are saued by grace: and againe it saith that men are saued by workes. A flat contradiction. For Paul saith, if election be of grace, it is no more of workes: or else were grace no more grace: but if it be of workes, it is no more grace: for els were work no more worke. Answer is made, that in this place Paul speaketh of works of nature, which indeede are contrarie to grace, but not of workes of regeneration, which are not cōtrary to grace. This answer is false; for Paul in a like place vnto this opposeth grace & workes of regeneration. Ye are saued by grace (saith he) through faith, and that not of your selues: for it is the gift of God, not of workes, least any should boast himselfe: for we are his workmanship created in Christ Iesus vnto good workes, that we should walke in them. Now let the Church of Rome speake what are the workes, of which any man may most of all boast? And what are the works, for the doing of which we must be fashioned anew in Christ Iesus? Assuredly they must be the workes of regeneration, dipped & dyed in the blood of Christ (as they speake) wherefore it is euident, that Pauls meaning is to conclude, that if we be saued by grace, we cannot be saued by workes of regeneration.

Eph. 2. 8. 9.

II. The Church of Rome confuteth and condemneth in Councels, & derideth this doctrine that we teach, that men are to be iustified by the imputation of the righteousnesse of Christ: which righteousnesse is not in vs but in Christ. And the Rhemists call it a fantasticall iustice, a newe no iustice. But herein that Church is contrarie to it selfe: for it defendeth workes of supererogation, and workes of satisfaction of one man for another: and their ground is, because the faithful are all members of one bodie, & haue fellowship one with another, & therefore one may satisfie for another. Hereby it is plaine, that the church of Rome most of all defendeth that imputation of righteousnes, which most of all

all it hath impugned. For when one man ſatisfieth for another, the worke of one man is imputed to another. But what? ſhall one man ſatisfie for another, and ſhall not Chriſt by his righteouſnes ſatisfie for vs? ſhall God accept the worke of one man for another, and not accept the righteouſnes of Chriſt for vs? Truly there is greater fellowſhip and coniunction betweene the head and the members, then of the members among themſelues: becauſe they are ioyned together by meanes of the head.

III. It holdeth that the guilt and fault of ſinne may be remitted by Chriſt: and yet the temporall puniſhment of ſinne be vnremitted: but theſe are quite contrary. Paul ſaith, there is now no condemnation to them that are in Chriſt Ieſus. Yet if a man were puniſhed for his ſinne after he were in Chriſt, and had the fault of ſinne remitted, ſome condemnation ſhould now remaine him. And Dauid ſaith, Bleſſed is the man to whome the Lord imputeth no ſinne: therefore he to whome the Lord imputeth no ſinne, hath not onely the guilt of ſinne, but alſo the puniſhment of his ſinne remitted: otherwiſe he could not be bleſſed, but miſerable. And this agreeth not with Gods iuſtice, when the fault is quite pardoned, and a man is guiltie of no ſinne, that then any puniſhment ſhould be laid on. And S. Auſten ſaith, that Chriſt by taking vpon him the puniſhment of ſinne, & not taking vpon him the fault, tooke away both the puniſhment and the fault. Wherfore this opinion, that Chriſt hath taken away the guilt of ſinne, ouerthroweth all Satisfactions and Purgatorie, becauſe the fault and guilt beeing taken away, all puniſhment for ſinne is alſo taken away.

Auguſt. de verb dom. ſerm. 37.

IV. Tranſubſtantiation is a monſter, ſtãding on manifold contradictions. Firſt, it maketh Chriſts body to be in many places: an euident contradiction. For it is of the nature and eſſence of a bodie to be in one place onely: which I prooue thus: A bodie is a magnitude, a magnitude is a continued quantitie, a continued quantitie can not be but in one place: therefore a bodie cannot be but in one place. In this argument the doubt is onely of the laſt part: which vndoubtedly is moſt true. For it is called a continued quantitie, becauſe his parts are cõtinued & knit togither the one with another in a cõmon tearme or bond, as a line by a point, a plane and his parts by a line, a ſolide by a Superficies or plane. Now theſe points can in no wiſe be continued, vnleſſe euery one of them keepe one onely ſpeciall place. For examples ſake:

ſuppoſe the plane, a,b,c,d, to be deuided into three parts, i,k,l, by two lines, e,g, and f,h, which doe both deuide the three parts, and continue them the one with the other. Now I ſay, that euery one of the parts may be continued with his next fellow, it is neceſſary that euery one of them ſhould haue one ſpeciall and diſtinct place. That the firſt place of the plane, i, may be continued with k, it muſt be ſituated onely there where it is, and no where els: for if it ſhall be ſituate elſwhere, as in the place m, then it cannot be continued with k. Now then, if the parts muſt of neceſſitie haue their owne particular place onely, then the whole figure, a,b,c,d, muſt alſo be onely in one place. And this is that which the Prince of Philoſophers teacheth, that euery magnitude hath his parts ſited in ſome one place, one by another, ſo that a man may ſay of them, here it is, and there it is. To conclude therefore, this muſt needes agree to a bodie, and to the parts of it, to be in one place alone. So that the Church of Rome, when it ſaith that Chriſts bodie is in many places, in effect they ſay, that Chriſts body is no body: for if it be a bodie, it is onely in one place: and if it be in many places, it is no bodie. They obiect that God is omnipotent. True indeede, but there be ſome things, the doing of which agreeth not with Gods power, as to make contradicentia, things contradictorie to be both true: of which ſort theſe are. For, that Chriſts bodie is a true bodie, and that it is in many places at once, are flat contrarie: becauſe (as hath beene ſhewed) it is eſſentiall to all magnitudes to be in one place, and therefore to a bodie. And God cannot take away that which is eſſentiall to a thing, the eſſence remaining whole. 2. Againe, tranſubſtantiation maketh the Accidents of bread & wine to remaine without the ſubſtance. Here alſo is another contradiction as impoſſible as the former: for it is a cõmon ſaying in ſchooles, Accidentis eſſe, eſt inheſſe. It is the eſſence of an Accident to be in the ſubſtance. Now therefore, if the Accidents be, there is alſo the bread and wine: and if there be no ſubſtance of bread or wine, neither can there be any accidents. 3. It holdeth that bread is turned into the bodie of Chriſt, and therefore it muſt needes hold, that Chriſts bodie is made of bakers bread, and yet it holdeth & teacheth that Chriſts body is onely made of the ſeede of Marie, quite ouerthrowing the former Tranſubſtantiation.

V. It teacheth, that a man muſt alwaies doubt of his ſaluation: and likewiſe it teacheth, that in praying we are to call God father, which are things quite contrarie. For who can truly call God father, vnleſſe
Rom. 8. 16 he haue the ſpirit of adoption, and be aſſured that he is the child of God? For if a man call God father, and yet in his heart doubt whether he be his father or not, hee plaieth the diſſembling hypocrite: wherefore to doubt of ſaluation, and to ſay, Our father, &c. in truth are contrarie.

Can. Treſant. de pœna. diſt. 1. Lum. l. 4. diſt. 16. Can. de quotis, die. pœnit. diſt. 3.

VI. The Church of Rome maketh praier to be one of the chiefe meanes to ſatisfie for ſinnes. But praier indeede is an asking pardon for ſinnes. Now asking of pardon and ſatisfaction for ſinne, are contrarie: therefore by the iudgement of the Papiſts, praier which is a ſatisfaction is no ſatisfaction. And indeed let vs conſider what madnes is contained in this popiſh diuinitie: the poore begger commeth very hungrie to the rich mans doore to craue his almes: and ſtraightway by his begging he will merit and deſerue it. The ſame doth the Papiſt, he praieth very poorely for the thing which he wanteth, yet he looketh very proudly to merit no leſſe then the kingdome of heauen by it.

VII. Doubting of ſaluation and hope
Rom. 5. 5. cannot agree together, for hope maketh a man not to be aſhamed, that is, neuer diſappointeth him of the thing which he looketh for. And therefore it is called the anchor of the ſoule both ſure and ſtedfaſt, which entreth into that which is within the vaile.
Heb. 6. 19. So that true hope and the certen aſſurance of ſaluation goe togither.

VIII. True praier and iuſtification by workes cannot ſtand togither. For hee which praieth truly muſt be touched inwardly with a liuely feeling of his owne miſerie, & of the want of that grace whereof he ſtands in neede. Now this cannot be in the heart of that man that looketh to merit the kingdome of heauen by his workes: for he that can doe this may iuſtly conceiue ſomewhat of his owne excellencie.

IX. Papiſts teach, that it is great boldnes to come immediately vnto God, without the interceſſion of Saints: and therefore they vſe to pray to [a] Marie, that ſhee would pray to Christ to helpe them: yet on the contrarie, when they haue ſo done, they pray to God immediately, that he would receiue the interceſſion of Marie for them. And thus they are become interceſſours betweene Marie and God. Yea when they offer vp Chriſt, praying God to accept their gifts & ſacrifices, the humble prieſt that will not pray to God but by the mediation of Saints, is then a mediatour betweene Chriſt Ieſus and God the father.

X. It holdeth, that in the maſſe the Prieſt offereth vp Chriſt to his father an vnbloodie ſacrifice. This is a thing impoſſible: for if Chriſt in the maſſe be ſacrificed for ſinne, then he muſt die and his blood muſt be ſhed, Heb. 9. 22. And in the Scriptures theſe two ſayings, [Chriſt is dead, Chriſt is offered vp in ſacrifice] are all one. So then, the Papiſt when he ſuppoſeth that there may be an vnbloodie ſacrifice, in effect he ſaith thus much: There is a ſacrifice, which is no ſacrifice. And it is not poſſible that a bloodie ſacrifice ſhould be offered in an vnbloodie manner.

XI. In the Canon of the maſſe, the Church of Rome praieth on this wiſe. Wee humbly beſeech thee moſt mercifull father, by Ieſus Chriſt thy ſonne and our Lord, that thou wouldeſt accept theſe gifts and oblations, and theſe holy Sacrifices, which thy Church offer to thee, &c. where firſt they offer vp Chriſt, to God the father in the name of Chriſt, and ſo they make Chriſt to be his owne mediatour.

Againe, they deſire God to bleſſe and to accept his owne Sonne: for they offer vp Chriſt. If they ſay he needeth now the bleſſing of his father, they make Chriſt a weake and imperfect Chriſt: if he neede not the bleſſing of his father, their praier is needeleſſe. Alſo they deſire God to accept not one gift or one ſacrifice, but in the plurall number, theſe gifts and ſacrifices: whereas they hold that Chriſts bodie is one onely, and therefore but one ſacrifice. And thus they are at variance with themſelues.

XII. Papiſts, in word they ſay, that they beleeue and put their truſt in GOD: yet wheras they looke to be ſaued by their workes, they ſet the confidence of their hearts intrueth vpon their owne doings.

XIII. They put ſuch holineſſe in matrimonie, that they make it one of their ſeauen ſacraments, which [a] conferre grace to the partakers of them: yet they forbid their Cleargie to marry, [b] becauſe to liue in marriage is to liue according to the fleſh, and the Councell of Trent oppoſeth marriage and chaſtitie.

XIV. It teacheth that ſoules kept in Purgatorie, may be redeemed by Sacrifices and Suffrages. Againſt this, is a Canon of their lawe taken out of S. Hierome. [c] we knowe that in this life we may helpe one another, either by praier, or by good counſell: but when we ſhall come before the iudgement ſeat of Chriſt, neither Iob, nor Daniel, nor Noe, may intreat for any: but euery man is to beare his own burde. And according to another Canon going vnder the name of Gelaſius Biſhop of Rome. Either there is no Purgatorie, or the ſoules which goe thither ſhall neuer returne.

XV. And to conclude, the moſt points of their religion are contrarie to their Canons, as by ſearching may appeare in theſe examples.

1 The dead cannot heare the praiers of them which call vpon him.

By this which hath beene ſaid, it doth in part appeare, that the religion of the Church of Rome is repugnant to it ſelfe, and it could not ſo be, if it were from the word of God.

A Corallarie gathered out of the former Aſſertion.

A man being indued with no more grace then that which he may obtaine by the religion of the Church of Rome, is ſtill in the ſtate of damnation.

A Dialogue containing the conflicts betweene Sathan and the Chriſtian.

Sathan.

Vile helhound, thou art my ſlaue and my vaſſall; why then ſhakeſt thou off my yoake?

Chriſtian. By nature I was thy vaſſal, but Chriſt hath redeemed me.

Sathan. Chriſt redeemeth no reprobats ſuch as thou art.

Chriſtian. I am no reprobate.

Sathan. Thou art a reprobate, for thou ſhalt be condemned.

Chriſtian. Lucifer, to pronounce damnation belongeth to God alone: thou art no iudge, it is ſufficient for thee to be an accuſer.

Sathan. Though I cannot condemne thee, yet I knowe God will condemne thee.

Chriſtian. Yea but God will not condemne me.

Sathan. Goe too let vs trie the matter. Is not God a Lord and a King ouer thee? & may he not therefore giue thee a lawe, to keepe, and puniſh thee with hel fire, if thou breake it?

Chriſtian. Yes.

Sathan. And haſt thou kept the Lawe of this thy Lord and King?

Chriſtian. No.

Sathan. Let vs proceed further: Is not the ſame Lord alſo a moſt righteous iudge? And therefore a moſt ſharpe reuenger of ſinne?

Chriſtian. Yes truely.

Sathan. Why then wilt thou flatter thy ſelfe thou hypocrite? God cannot winke at thy ſinnes, except he ſhould bee vniuſt. Wherefore there is no remedie, thou art ſure to be damned: hell was prouided for thee, and now it gapeth to deuoure thee.

Chriſtian. There is remedie enough to deliuer me from condemnation. For God is not onely (as thou affirmeſt) a Lord and a iudge, but alſo a ſauing, and a moſt mercifull father.

Sathan. But thou firebrand of hell fire, and and child of perdition, looke for no mercy at Gods hands, becauſe thou art a moſt grieuous ſinner: for,

1 Original ſin runneth wholly ouer thee, as a loathſome botch or leproſie.

2 Thy minde knoweth not the things that be of God.

3 In the lawe of God thou art ſtarke blinde, ſauing that thou haſt a fewe principles of it to make thee inexcuſable.

4 The Goſpell is fooliſhnes and madneſſe vnto thee: thou makeſt no better account of it then of thine owne dreame.

5 Thy conſcience is corrupt, becauſe it flattereth thee, and excuſeth thy ſinne.

6 Thy memorie keepeth and remembreth nothing, but that which is againſt Gods word: but things abominable and wicked, it keepeth long.

7 Thy will hath no inclination to that which is good, but onely to ſinne and wickedneſſe.

8 Thy affections are ſet onely on wickednes: they are mightie gyants and princes in thee, they haue thee at commandement. Remember, that for very anger thou haſt bin ſick: that the luſt of the fleſh hath driuen thee to madnes: forget not thy Atheiſme, thy contempt of Gods word, thy inward pride, thy enuie, hatred, malice, thy couetouſnes, and infinit other wicked deſires, which haue led thee captiue, & made thee outragious in all kind of naughtines.

9 Thy actuall ſinnes committed partly in ſecret, partly in publike, are moſt filthie and moſt infinit. Remember how in ſuch a place, at ſuch a time, thou diddeſt commit fornication: in another place thou diddeſt ſteale, &c. God ſaw this I warrant thee: yea, all thy ſinnes are written in his booke: wherefore thou courſed wretch, all hope of mercie is cut off from thee.

Iſa.1.18. Act.1.23. 38. 1 Tim.1.15 Pſal 103 11,12,13

Chriſtian. But Gods mercie farre exceedeth al theſe my ſinnes: & I cannot bee ſo infinite in ſinning, as God is infinite in mercie, and pardoning.

Sathan. Dareſt thou preſume to thinke of Gods mercie? Why, the leaſt of thy ſins deſerueth damnation.

Iſa.53.2.3. 4.5.

Chriſtian. None of my ſynnes can feare me, or diſmay me. Chriſt hath borne the full wrath and vengeance of his Father vpon the croſſe, euen for me, that I might bee deliuered from condemnation, which was due vnto me.

Sathan. If Gods purpoſe were not to condemne thee, perſwade thy ſelfe, hee would neuer lay ſo many afflictions and croſſes on thee, as he doth. What is this want of good name? this weakneſſe and ſickneſſe of thy body? theſe terrours of the minde? this dulneſſe and frowardneſſe of thy heart? what are all theſe (I ſay) and many other euils, but the beginnings and certaine flaſhings of the fire of hell?

Heb.12.6. 9,10. 1.Pet.2.21 Gen.42.21 1.Cor.11. 12. Rom 8.26

Chriſtian. Nay, rather my afflictions are liuely teſtimonies of my ſaluation. For God as a louing father, partly by them, as with ſcourges chaſteneth my diſobedience and bringeth me into order: partly conformeth me vnto my Sauiour Chriſt, and ſo by litle and litle, laieth open to me mine owne ſinnes, that I may diſlike my ſelfe & hate them: and maketh me to renounce the world, thy eldeſt ſonne, and ſtirreth me vp to call vpon him, and to pray earneſtly with grones and ſighes, which I am not able to expreſſe with any wordes as I feele them.

Sathan. Thy afflictions are heauy; and comfortleſſe, therefore they can not be arguments of Gods fauour.

Rom.5.2,3 Rom.8.28

Chriſtian, Indeede their nature is to bring griefe and heauines to the ſoule, but I haue had ioy in the midſt of my afflictions, and ſtrength ſufficient to beare them, and after them haue bene many waies bettered, which befalleth to none of the wicked: and for that cauſe, it is a great perſwaſion to me that I ſhall not be damned with the wicked world, but in ſpite of all thy power, paſſe from death to euerlaſting life.

Sathan. After theſe thy manifold afflictions, thou muſt ſuffer death, which is moſt terrible, and a very entrance to hell.

Chriſtian. Death hath loſt his ſting by Chriſts death; and vnto me it ſhal be nothing els but a paſſage vnto euerlaſting life

Sathan. Admit thou ſhalt be deliuered from hell by Chriſt, what will this auaile thee, conſydering that thou ſhalt neuer come to the kingdome of heauen? for Chriſts death onely deliuered thee from death eternall, it cannot aduance thee to euerlaſting life.

Chriſtian. I am nowe at this time a member of Chriſts kingdome, and after this life ſhall raigne with him for euer in his euerlaſting kingdome.

Sathan. Thou neuer didſt fulfill the law, therefore thou canſt not come into the kingdome of heauen.

Rom.8.3, 4,5.

Chriſtian. Chriſt hath perfectly fulfilled euery part of the law for me: and by this his obedience imputed vnto mee, I my ſelfe doe keepe the law.

Sathan

Sathan. Be it so, for all this, thou art farre enough from the kingdome of heauen, into which no vncleane thing shall euer enter: then, although that Christ hath suffered death, and fulfilled the law for thee; yet thou art in part vncleane: thy cursed nature and the seedes of sinne are yet remaining in thee.

Rom 2.3. Ioh.16.19 Christian. Christ in the virgins wombe was perfectly sanctified by the holy Ghost: and this perfect holines of his humane nature is imputed to me: euen as Iacob put on Esaus garments to get his fathers blessing: so I haue put on the righteousnes of Christ, as a long white robe couering my sinnes, and making me appeare perfectly righteous, euen before Gods iudgement seate.

Sathan. Indeede God hath made promise vnto mankind of al these mercies and benefits in Christ: but the condition of this promise is faith, which thou wantest, and therefore canst not make any account, that Christs sufferings, Christs fulfilling the Ioh.3.14. 15. law, Christs perfect holines, can doe thee any good.

Christian. I haue true saving faith.

The conflicts of Sathan with the strong Christian.

Sathan. THou saist thou hast true faith, but I shall sift thee and disproue thee.

Christian. The gats of hell shall neuer preuaile against my faith, doe what thou canst.

Sathan. Tell me then, dost thou thinke that all the world shall be saued?

Christian. No.

Sathan. What shall some be saued, and some condemned?

Christian. So saith the word of God.

Sathan. Thou then art perswaded that God is true euen in his mercifull promises, and that he will saue some men, as Peter & Paul, and Dauid, &c. and this is the onely beleefe, by which thou wilt be saued.

Christian. Nay, this I beleeue, and more too, that I particularly am in the number of those men which shall be saued by the merit of Christs death and passion: and this is the beleefe that saueth me.

Sathan. It may be thou art perswaded that God is able to saue thee: but that God will saue thee, that is, that he hath determined to aduance this thy body, and this thy soule into his kingdome, & that he is most willing to performe it in his good time; herein thou wauerest and doubtest.

Christian. Nay Sathan, I in mine own heart am fully perswaded, that I shal be saued, and that Christ is specially my redeemer: and (O Lord) for Christs sake, helpe thou my doubting and vnbeleefe. Ioh.1.12, 13. Ioh.6.35 54. Mark.9.23

Sathan. This thy full perswasion is onely a phantasie, and a strong imagination of thine owne head: it goeth not with thee as thou thinkest.

Christian. It is no imagination, but truth which I speake. For me thinks I am as certen of my saluation, as though my name were registred in the scriptures (as Dauids and Pauls are) to be an elect vessel of God: and this is the testimonie of the holy spirit of Iesus Christ, assuring me inwardly of my adoption, and making me with boldnes and confidence in Christ, to pray vnto God the Father. 2.Cor.1. 22. Eph.1.14. Rom.8.18.

Sathan. Still thou dreamest & imaginest, thou louest and likest thy selfe, and therefore thou thinkest the best of thy selfe.

Christian. Yea, but God of his goodnes hath brought forth such tokens of faith in me, that I cannot be deceiued. Act.13.9. 1.The.1.3

I. I am displeased with my selfe for my manifold sinnes, in which sometime I haue delighted and bathed my selfe. Rom,7.15. 24.

II. I purpose neuer to commit them againe, if God giue me strength, as I trust he will.

III. I haue a very great desire to bee doing those things which God commandeth.

IIII. Those that be the children of God: if I doe but heare of them, I loue them with my heart, & wish vnto them as to my selfe. 1.Ioh,3.14.

V. My heart leapeth for gladnes, when I heare of the preaching of the word.

VI. I long to see the comming of Christ Iesus, that an ende may be made of sinning and of displeasing God. Apoc.22. 20.

VII. I feele in my heart the fruites of the spirit, ioy, loue, peace, gentlenes, meeknes, patience, temperance: the works of the flesh I abhorre them, fornication, adultrie, vncleannes, wantonnes, idolatrie, strife, enuy, anger, drunkennes, bibbing and quaffing, & all such like. Gal.5.19,20.22.

All these cannot proceede from thee, Sathan, or from my flesh, but onely from faith which is wrought in me by Gods holy spirit.

Sathan. If this were so, God would neuer suffer thee to sinne as thou doest.

Christian,

Rom.7.15. Math.26. 65,72,74, 75.

Christian. I shall sinne as long as I liue in this world, I am sure of it; becauſe I am taught to aske remiſſion of my ſinnes continually. But the manner of my ſinning nowe is otherwayes then it hath beene in times paſt. I haue ſinned heretofore with full purpoſe and conſent of will: but now doubtleſſe, I doe not. Before I commit any ſinne, I doe not goe to the practiſing of it with deliberation, as the carnall man doth, who taketh care to fulfill the luſts of the fleſh: but if I doe it, it is ſtatte beſide my minde and purpoſe: in the doing of any ſinne, I would not do it, my heart is againſt it, and I hate it, and yet by the tyranny of my fleſh being ouercome I doe it: afterward, when it is committed, I am grieued and diſpleaſed at my ſelfe, and doe earneſtly with teares aske at Gods hand forgiueneſſe of the ſame ſinne.

Rom.13. 14.

Sathan. Indeede, this is very true in the children of God: but thou art ſold vnder ſinne and with great pleaſure doeſt commit ſinne, and loueſt it with thy whole heart: otherwiſe, thou wouldeſt not fall to ſinne again after repentance, & cõmit euen one and the ſame ſinne, ſo often as thou doeſt. Thou hypocrite, this thy behauiour turneth all the fauour of God from thee.

Chriſtian. Indeede it is dangerous to fall againe into the ſame ſinne after repentance: yet it is the order of the Prophets to call men to repentance which haue fallen from the feare of God, and from the repentance which they profeſſed: and God in thus calling them, putteth them in hope of obtaining mercie. And the law had ſacrifices offered euery day for the ſinnes of all the people, and for particular men, both for their ignorances, and their voluntarie ſinnes: which ſignifieth, that God is readie to forgiue the ſinnes of his childrē though they ſinne often. Abraham twiſe lyed and ſwore that Sara was not his wife. Ioſeph ſware twiſe by the life of Pharao. Dauid committed adulterie often, becauſe hee tooke vnto him Bathſheba, Vriahs wife, and alſo kept ſixe wiues, and tenne concubines. Gods will is, that men forgiue till ſeuentie ſeuen times: and therefore hee will haue much more mercie. And for my part, ſo oft as I ſhall fal into the ſame ſinne, ſo oft I ſhall haue Chriſt my aduocate and interceſſour to the Father for me, who will not damne me for the infirmitie which hee findeth in mee, I will abſtaine from externall iniquitie, and I will not make my mẽbers ſeruants vnto ſinne: and ſo long I truſt my imperfections ſhall haue no power to damne me: for Chriſts perfection is reputed to be mine by faith, which I haue in his blood: God is not diſpleaſed, if my bodie be ſicke and ſubiect to diſeaſes; no more is he diſpleaſed at the diſeaſe and ſicknes of the ſoule. A naturall father wil not ſlay the bodie of his childe, when he is ſicke, and abhorreth comfortable meates: and my heauenly father will not condemne my ſoule, although through the infirmitie of faith, and the weaknes of the ſpirit, I commit ſinne, and often loath his heauenly word, the foode of my ſoule. Nay, (which is a ſtrange thing) I know it by experience that God hath turned my filthie ſinnes to my great profit, and to the amendment of my life: like as the good Phyſitian, of rāke poiſon is able to make a ſoueraigne medecine to preſerue life.

1. Ioh. 21. Dan.9.6. Rom.8.28

Sathan. Well, be it ſo, that now thou art in the ſtate of grace, yet thou ſhalt not continue ſo: but ſhalt before death depart from Chriſt.

Chriſtian. I know I am a member of Chriſtes myſticall bodie: I feele in my ſelfe the heauenly power and vertue of my head Chriſt Ieſus: and for this cauſe I cannot periſh, but ſhall continue for euer, and raigne in heauen after this life with him.

Iſa.1.8. Ier.2.1.

Gen.12. 14.15. Gen 20.2. 3. Gen.42. 25.

The conflicts of Sathan with the weake Chriſtian.

Sathan. THy minde is full of ignorance and blindnes, thy heart is full of obſtinacie, rebellion, and frowardnes againſt God: thou that wholly vnfit for any good worke; wherfore thou haſt no faith, neither canſt thou bee iuſtified, and accepted before God.

Chriſtian. If I haue but one drop of the grace of God, and if my faith bee no more then a little graine of muſtard ſeede, it is ſufficient for me: God requireth not perfect faith, but true faith.

Math.17. 20.

Sathan. Yea, but thou haſt no faith at all.

Chriſt. I haue had faith.

Sathan. Thou neuer hadſt true faith: for in time paſt, when according to thine opinion thou didſt beleeue, then thou hadſt nothing but a ſhadow of faith and a fooliſh imagination, which all hypocrites haue.

Chriſtian. I will put my truſt in God for euer, and his former mercies ſhewed mee heretofore ſtrengthen mee now in this my weakneſſe.

Pſal.77.5.

1. He created me when I was nothing.

2. He created me a man, whē he might haue made me an vgly toad.

3. He made me of comely bodie, and of good discretion, whereas he might haue made me vgly, and deformed, franticke, and madde.

4. I was borne in the dayes of knowledge, when I might haue bin borne in the time of ignorance and superstition.

5. I was borne of Christian parents, but God might haue giuen me either Turkes or Iewes, or some other sauadge people for my parents.

6. I might haue perished in my mothers wombe, but he hath preserued me, and prouided for me by his prouidence euen vnto this houre.

7. Soone after my birth, God might haue cast me into hell, but contrariwise I was baptized, and so receiued the seale of his blessed couenant.

8. I haue had by Gods goodnesse some sorrow for my sinnes past, and haue called on him, in hope and confidence that he would heare me.

9. God might haue concealed his word from me, but I haue heard the plentifull preaching of it: I vnderstand it, and haue receiued comfort by it.

10. Lastly, at this time GOD might powre his full wrath on me: which he doth not, but mercifully maketh me to feele mine owne wantes, that I might be humbled & giue al glory vnto him for his blessings. Wherefore, there is no cause why I should be disquieted: but I will trust still in the Lord, and depend on him, as I haue done.

Sathan. Thou feelest no grace of the holy Ghost in thee, nor any true tokens of faith, but thou hast a liuely sense of the rebellion of thy heart, and of thy leude and wretched conuersation: therefore thou canst not put any confidence in Christs death and sufferings.

Phil. 3.1. 2. Cor. 5. 21. Christian. Yet I will hope against all hope: and although, according to mine owne sense and feeling, I want faith, yet I will beleeue in Iesus Christ, and trust to be saued by him.

Sathan. Though the children of God haue bin in many perplexities, yet neuer any of them haue bin in this case, in which thou art at this present.

Psal. 73. 22. 23. Christian. Herein thou proouest thy selfe to be a lying spirit: for the prophet Dauid saith of himself, that he was foolish, and as a beast before God: and yet he euen trusted in God. And Paul was so lead captiue of sinne, that he was not able to doe the good he would, but did the euill which he hated: and so in great pensiuenesse of heart, desired to be deliuered from this world, that he might be disburdened of his corrupt flesh. Rom 7. 22. 23.

Sathan. Thou miserable wretch, doest thou feele thy selfe graceles, and wilt thou beare the face of a Christian? and by thy hypocrisie offend God? as thou art, so shew thy selfe to the world.

Christian. Auoide Sathan, Christ hath vanquished, and ouercome thee for my cause, that I might also triumph ouer thee. I am no hypocrite: for whereas I haue had heretofore some testimonie of my faith, at this time I am lesse moued, though faith seeme to be absent: like as a man may seeme to be dead, both in his owne sense, and by the iudgement of the physitian, & yet may haue life in him: so faith may be, though alwaies it doe not appeare.

Sathan. But thou art a man starke dead in sinne, God hath now quite forsaken thee: he hath left thee vnto me to be ruled: he hath giuen me power ouer thee, to bring thee to damnation: he will not haue thee to trust in him any longer.

Christian. Strengthen me good Lord: remēber thy merciful promises, that thou wilt reuiue the humble, and giue life to thē that are of a contrite heart. Isa. 57. 15.

Sathan. These promises concerne not thee, which hast no humble and contrite, but a froward, and a rebellious heart.

Christian. Good Lord, forget not thy former mercies: giue an issue to these tēptations of mine enemie Sathan. And you my brethren, which know my estate, pray for me, that God would turne his fauourable countenance towards me: for this I know, that the prayer of the righteous auaileth much, if it be feruent. Iam. 5. 16.

How a man should applie aright the word of God to his owne soule.

I.

VEry Christian containeth in himself two natures, flat cōtrary one to the other, the flesh & the spirit: and that he may become a perfect man in Christ Iesus, his earnest indeauour indeauour muſt be, to tame & ſubdue the fleſh, & to ſtrengthē & confirme the ſpirit.

II.

Anſwerable to theſe two natures, are the two parts of Gods word. Firſt, the Lawe becauſe it is the miniſtery of death, it fitly ſerueth for the taming and maſtering of the rebellious fleſh: and the Goſpell containing the bountifull promiſes of God in Chriſt, is as oyle, to powre into our woūds, & as the water of life, to quench our thirſtie ſoules: and it fitly ſerueth for the ſtrēgthening of the ſpirit.

III.

Well then, art thou ſecure? Art thoū prone to euill? Feeleſt thou that thy rebellious fleſh carrieth thee captiue vnto ſinne? Looke now only vpon the Law of God, apply it to thy ſelfe, examine thy thoughts, thy words, thy deeds by it: pray vnto God, that he would giue thee the ſpirit of feare, that the law may in ſome meaſure humble and terrifie thee: for (as Salomon ſaith) bleſſed is the man that feareth alwaies, but curſed is he that hardeneth his heart.

Rom. 8. 16

IV.

In the Law, theſe are moſt effectuall meditations to humble & bridle the fleſh, which follow. Firſt, meditate on the greatnes of thy ſinnes, & of their infinite number: and if it may be, gather them into a catalogue, ſet it before thee: and looke vnto it, that thou thinke no ſinne to be a ſmall ſinne, no not the bare thoughts and motions of thy heart. Often with diligence cōſider the ſtrange iudgements of God vpon men, for their ſinnes, which thou ſhalt finde, partly in the Scriptures, partly by dayly experience. Doubtleſſe thou muſt thinke, that euery iudgement of God, is a ſermon of repentance. Thinke oft on the feareſull curſe of the law due vnto thee, if thou ſhouldeſt ſinne neuer but once in all thy life, and that neuer ſo little. Remember, that whenſoeuer thou committeſt a ſinne, God is preſent, and his holy Angels, and that he is an eie-witneſſe, that he taketh a note of thy ſinne, and regiſtreth it in a booke. Thinke daily of thy ende: and know that God may ſtrike thee with ſodaine death euery moment: and that, if then thou haue not repented before that time, there is no hope of ſaluation. Thinke on the ſodaine comming of our Sauiour Chriſt to iudgemēt, let it mooue thee continually to watch and pray. If theſe wil not mooue thee, thinke on this, that no creature in heauen or in earth, was able to pacifie the wrath of God for thy ſinnes: but his owne Sonne muſt come downe from heauen, out of his Fathers boſome, & muſt beare the curſe of the law, euen the full wrath of his Father, for thee.

V.

When by theſe meanes thou art feared, and thy minde is diſquieted in reſpect of Gods iudgement for thy ſinne: haue recourſe to the promiſes of mercie contained in the olde and newe Teſtament. Is thy conſcience ſtung with ſinne? And doth the law make thee feele it? With all ſpeede runne to the braſen ſerpent Chriſt Ieſus, looke on him with the eye of faith, and preſently thou ſhalt be healed of thy ſting or wound.

Ioh. 3. 14.

VI.

When thou doeſt meditate on the promiſes of the Goſpell, diligently conſider theſe benefits, which thou enioyeſt by Chriſt. Through Adam, thou art condemned to hell; by Chriſt thou art deliuered from it. Through Adam, thou haſt tranſgreſſed the whole law; in Chriſt thou haſt fulfilled it. Through Adam, thou art before God a vile, and a loathſome ſinner: through Chriſt thou doeſt appeare glorious in his eies. By Adam euery little croſſe is the puniſhment of thy ſinne, & a token of Gods wrath: by Chriſt, the greateſt croſſes are eaſie, profitable, and tokens of Gods mercy. By Adam, thou diddeſt leeſe all things: in Chriſt all things are reſtored to thee againe. By Adam thou art dead; by Chriſt thou art quickned, and made aliue againe. By Adam thou art a ſlaue of the deuill, & the child of wrath: but by Chriſt, thou art the child of God. In Adam, thou art worſe then a toad, and more deteſtable before God: but by Chriſt, thou art aboue the Angels. For thou art ioyned vnto him, and made bone of his bone, myſtically. Through Adam, ſinne and Sathan haue ruled in thee, and lead thee captiue: by Chriſt, the ſpirit of God dwelleth in thee plentiouſly. By Adam, came death to thee, & it is an entrance to hell: by Chriſt, though death remaine, yet it is only a paſſage vnto life. Laſtly, in Adam, thou art poore, and blinde, and miſerable: in Chriſt thou art rich and glorious, thou art a king of heauen and earth, fellowe-heire with him, & ſhalt as ſure be partaker of it, as he is euen now. Adam, when he muſt needes taſt of the fruit, which God had forbidden him, he hath made vs all to rue it, euen till this day: but here thou ſeeſt the fruits that grow, not in the earthly paradiſe, but Apoc.22.2 on the tree of life which is within the heauenly Ieruſalem. Feare no danger, be bold in Chriſt to eate of the fruit, as God hath commanded thee: it will quicken thee, and reuiue thee beeing dead thou canſt not do Sathan a worſe diſpleaſure, then to feede on the goodly fruit of this tree, and to ſmell on the ſweete leaues, which it beareth continually, that giue ſuch a refreſhing ſauour.

VII.

Moſt men now a daies, are ſecure and cold in the profeſſiō of the goſpel, though they haue the plentifull preaching of it. And the reaſon is becauſe they feele not in themſelues the vertue and mighty operation of Gods word to renew them: and they cannot feele it, becauſe they doe not apply the word aright vnto their owne ſoules. Plaiſters, except they be applied in order and time, and be laide vpon the wound, though they be neuer ſo good, yet they cannot heale: and ſo it is with the word of God, & the parts of it, which except they be vſed in order & time conuenient, will not humble and reuiue vs, as their vertue is.

VIII.

The common Chriſtian euery where is faulty in this thing. Whereas he loueth himſelfe, and wiſheth al good that may be to himſelfe, he doth vſually apply vnto his owne ſoule the Goſpel alone, neuer regarding the Lawe, or ſearching out his ſinnes by it. Tell him what ye wil, his ſong is this: God is mercifull, God is mercifull. By this meanes it commeth to paſſe, that he leadeth a ſecure life, and maketh no conſcience of couetouſnes, of vſury, of deceit in his trade, of lying, of ſwearing, of fornication, wantonneſſe, intemperancie in bibbing and quaffing, &c. But he plaieth the vnskilful Chirurgian, he vſeth healing plaiſters, before his poiſoned and cankered nature haue felt the power & paine of a corasiue. And it will neuer be well with him, vntill he take a new courſe.

IX.

On the contrarie part, many good chriſtians leaue to apply the comfort of the Goſpell to themſelues, and only haue regard to their owne ſinnes, and Gods infinite vengeance. And euen when Sathan accuſeth them, they will not ſticke to giue eare to Sathan, and alſo accuſe themſelues: and ſo they are brought into fearefull terrours, & often draw neere to deſperatiō.

X.

There is a third ſort called Sectaries, who addict themſelues to the opinion of ſome man. Theſe commonly neuer applie the law or the Goſpel to themſelues, but their whole meditation is chiefely in the opinions of him whome they followe. As they that follow Luther, few of them follow his Chriſtian life: they regard not that: but about conſubſtantiation and vbiquitie, about Images and ſuch like trumperie, they infinitely trouble themſelues and all Europe too.

And in England there is a ſchiſmaticall and vndiſcreete company, that would ſeeme to cry out for diſcipline, their whole talke is of it, and yet they neither know it, nor wil be reformed by it, and yet they are enemeis to it: as for the lawe of God, & the promiſes of the Goſpell, they little regard: they maintaine vile ſinnes in refuſing to heare the reading or the preaching of the word: and this is great contempt of Gods benefits and vnthankfulnes to him. They are ful of pride, thinking themſelues to be full, when they are empty: to haue all knowledge, when they are ignorant, and had neede to be catechized: the poiſon of Aſpes is vnder their lippes; they refuſe not to ſpeake euill of the bleſſed ſeruants of God. Well, doe they aboue all things ſeeke the kingdome of God? then let them bee ſincere ſeekers of it: which they ſhall doe, if in ſeeking Chriſts kingdome they ſeeke the righteouſnes thereof: vnto which they can neuer come but by the applying of the threatnings of the law, and the comforts of the Goſpel to their owne conſciences. But whereas they ſeeke the one and not the other, the giue all men to vnderſtand with what ſpirit they ſpeake.

Conſolations for the troubled conſciences of repentant ſinners.

Sinner.

GOod ſir, I know [a] the Lord hath giuen you the tongue of the learned, to be able to miniſter a word in time to him that is wearie: therefore I pray you helpe me in my miſery.

[a] Eſa.50.4

Miniſter. Ah my good brother, what is the matter with you? and what aile you?

Sinner. I liued a long time, the Lord hee knoweth it, after the manner of the world, in all the lusts of my filthie flesh, and then I was neuer troubled: but it hath pleased GOD of his mercie to touch my heart, and to send his owne sonne that good sheapheard Iesus Christ, to fetch me home to his owne fold, euen vpon his owne necke: and since that time it is a wonder to see howe my poore heart hath beene troubled: my corruption so boyles in mee and Sathan will neuer let mee alone.

Minister. Your case is a blessed case: for not to be troubled of Sathan, is to be possessed of him: that is, held captiue vnder [b] the power of darkenes, and to be a slaue and vassall of Sathan: [c] for as long as the strong man keepes the hold, all things are in peace. Contrariwise hee that hath receiued any sparkle of true faith, shall see [d] the gates of hell, that is, the deuill and his angels in their full strength to stand vp against him, and to fight with an endlesse hatred for his finall confusion.

[d] Math. 16. 18.

Sinner. But this my trouble of minde, hath made me oftentimes feare least God would reiect me, and vtterly depriue mee of the kingdome of heauen.

Minister. But there is no cause why it should so doe. For how should heauen be your resting place, if on earth you were not troubled? how could God wipe away your teares from your eyes in heauen, if on earth you shead them not? You would bee free from miseries, you looke for heauen vpon earth. But if you will goe to heauen, the right way is to saile by hell. If you will sit at Christs table in his kingdome, you must be with him in his temptations. You are as Gods corne, you must therefore goe vnder the flaile, the fanne, the millstone, and the ouen, before you can be Gods bread. You are one of Christs Lambes, looke therefore to be fleeced, and to haue the bloodie knife at your throat all the day long. If you were a market sheepe bought to be solde, you should bee stalled and kept in a fat pasture: but you are for Gods owne occupying, therefore you must pasture on the bare common, abiding stormes, tempests, Sathans snatches, the worlds woundes, contempt of conscience, and frettes of the flesh. But in this your miserie I will be a Simon vnto you, to helpe you to carrie your crosse, so be it you will reueale your minde vnto me.

Bradford

Christian. I will doe it willingly: my temptations are either against my faith in Christ, or against repentance for my sins.

Minister. What is your temptation as touching faith?

Christian. Ah woe is me, I am much afraid least I haue no faith in Christ my Sauiour.

Minister. What causeth this feare?

Christian. Diuers things.

Minister. What is one?

Christian. I am troubled with many doubtings of my saluation: and so it comes into my minde to thinke, that by my incredulitie I should quite cut off my selfe from the fauour of God.

Minister. But you must knowe this one thing, that he which neuer doubted of his saluation neuer beleeued, & that he which beleeued in truth, feeleth many doubtings and wauerings, euen as the sound man feeles many grudgings of diseases, which if he hath not health, he could not feele.

Christian. But you neuer knewe any that hauing true faith doubted of their saluation.

Minister. What will you then say of the man that said, [a] Lord I beleeue, Lord helpe my vnbeleefe? And of Dauid, who made his moane after this manner: Is his mercie cleane gone for euer? Doth his promise faile for euermore? Hath God forgotten to be mercifull? Hath he shut vp his tender mercie in displeasure? Yea, hee goeth on further, as a man in despaire, [b] And I said this is my death. Hereby it is manifest, that a man indued with true faith may haue not only assaults of doubting, but of desperation. This further appeareth in that hee saith in another place, [c] Why art thou cast downe my soule? Why art thou disquieted within me? Waite on God, for I will yet giue thankes, hee is my present helpe and my God. And in very truth you may perswade your selfe that they are but [d] vnreasonable men, that say they haue long beleeued in Christ without any doubting of their saluation.

Psal. 77. ver. 8, 9, 10
[b] v. 11.
[c] Psal. 42. 11.
[d] 2. Thess. 3. 2.

Christian. But Dauid had more in him then I haue, for me thinkes there is nothing in this wicked heart of mine, but rebellion against GOD, nothing but doubting of his mercie.

Minister. Let me know but one thing of you: these doubtings which you feele, doe you like them? or doe you take any pleasure in them? and doe you cherish them?

Christian. Nay, nay, they appeare very vile in mine eyes, and I doe abhorre them from my heart: and I would faine beleeue.

Minister. In man wee must consider his eſtate by nature, and his eſtate by grace. In the firſt, hee and his fleſh are all one, for they are as man and wife: therefore one is Rom.7.5. acceſſarie to the other. When the fleſh ſinneth the mā alſo ſinneth, that is in ſubiection to the fleſh; yea when the fleſh periſheth the man likewiſe periſheth, being in this eſtate, with the fleſh; a louing couple they are, they liue and die together. But in the eſtate of grace, though a man haue the Rom.7.17. fleſh in him, yet he and his fleſh are deuorced a ſunder. This diuorcement is made Rom.8.1. when a man begins to diſlike and to hate his fleſh, and the euil fruites of it: this ſeparation being made, they are no more one but twaine, and the one hath nothing to doe with the other. In this caſe though the fleſh beget ſinne, and periſh therefore, yet the Chriſtian man ſhall not incurre damnation for it. To come more neere the matter; you ſay the fleſh begets in you wauerings, doubtings and diſtruſtings: what then? it troubleth you, but feare not, remember your eſtate; you are diuorced frō the fleſh, and you are new married vnto Chriſt: if theſe ſinnes be laid at your doore, account them not as your children, but renounce them as Baſtards: ſay with Paul, I doubt indeede, but I hate my doubtings, and I am no cauſe of theſe, but the fleſh in me which ſhal periſh when I ſhal be ſaued by Chriſt.

Chriſtian. This which you haue ſaid doeth in part content me: one thing more I pray you ſhew me concerning this point: namely how I may be able to ouercome theſe doubtings.

Miniſt. For the ſuppreſſing of boubtings you are to vſe three meditations.

The firſt, that it is Gods commandement that you ſhould beleeue in Chriſt: So S. Iohn ſaith, This is his commandement
1.Ioh.3.23 that we beleeue in the name of his Sonne Ieſus Chriſt. Thou ſhalt not ſteale is Gods commandement, aud you are loath to breake it, leaſt you ſhould diſpiſe God and pull his curſe vpon your head. This alſo is gods cōmandement, thou ſhalt beleeue in Chriſt and therefore you muſt take heede of the breach of it: leaſt by doubting and wauering you bring the curſe vpon you. Secondly, you muſt conſider that the promiſes of ſaluation in Chriſt are generall, or at the leaſt indefinite excluding no particular man: as in one for all may appeare. God ſo loued the world that he gaue his only begotten ſonne, that whoſoeuer beleeueth in him ſhould not periſh but haue euerlaſting life. Now then, ſo often as you ſhall doubt of Gods mercie, you exclude your owne ſelfe from the promiſe of God, whereas he excludeth you not. And as when a prince giues a pardon to all theeues, euery one can apply the ſame vnto himſelfe, though his name be not ſet downe in the pardon: So the King of kings hath giuen a generall pardon for free remiſſion of ſinnes, to them that will receiue it. Beleeue therefore that God is true in his promiſe, doubt not of your own ſaluation, chalenge the pardon to your ſelfe. Indeede your name is not ſet downe, or written in the promiſe of grace; yet let not any illuſion of Sathan, or the conſideration of your owne vnworthines exclude you from this free mercy of God: which he alſo hath offred to you particularly, firſt in Baptiſme, then after in the Lords ſupper: and therefore you are not to wauer in the applying of it to your ſelfe. Thirdly, you are to conſider that by doubting and deſpairing you offend god as much almoſt as by any other ſinne. [a] You do not aboue hope beleeue vnder hope as you ſhould doe. Secondly, you rob God of his glorie, in that you make his infinite mercy to be leſſe thē your ſinnes. Thirdly, you make him a lier, who hath made ſuch a promiſe vnto you. And to theſe three meditations adde this practiſe. When your heart is toyled with vnbeleefe and doubtings, then in all haſte draw your ſelfe into ſome ſecret place, humble your ſelfe before God, poure out your heart before him: deſire him of his endleſſe mercy to worke faith, and to ſuppreſſe your vnbeleefe, and you ſhall ſee [b] that the Lord ouer all is rich vnto all that call vpon his name.

[b] Rom.10 32.

Chriſtian. The Lord reward you for your kindneſſe; I will hereafter doe my endeuour to practiſe this your counſell. Now I will make bold to ſhew another that makes me to feare leaſt I haue no faith. And it is, becauſe I doe not feele the aſſurance of the forgiueneſſe of my ſinnes.

Miniſter. Faith ſtandeth not in the feeling of Gods mercy, but in the appre- Heb. 11.1.
hending of it, which apprehēding may be Rom.8.23.
when there is no feelings; for faith is of inuiſible things, and when a man once commeth to inioy the thing beleeued, then hee ceaſeth to beleeue. And this appeareth in Iobs example, when he ſaith, (Lo, though he ſlay me, yet will I truſt in him, and I will reproone my waies in his ſight: he ſhal be my ſaluation alſo: for the hypocrite ſhall not come before him) he declareth his faith: yet whē he saith presently afterward, Wherefore hidest thou thy face, and takest me for thine enemie? he declareth the wāt of that feeling which you speake of.

Christian. Yet euery true beleeuer feeles the assurance of faith: otherwise Paul would not haue said, Proone your selues whether you are in the faith or not.

Minister. Indeede sometimes he doth, but at some other times he doth not: as namely at that same time when God first calleth him, and in the time of temptation.

Christian. What a case am I in then? I neuer felt this assurance: onely this I feele that I am a most rebellious wretch, abounding euen with a whole sea of iniquities: me thinks I am more vgly in the sight of God, then any toad can be in my sight. O then what shall I doe? let me heare some word of comfort from thy mouth thou man of God.

Minister Tell me one thing plainly: you say you feele no assurance of Gods mercie.

Christian. No indeede.

Minister. But doe you desire with all your heart to feele it?

Christian. I doe indeede.

Minister. Then doubt not, you shall feele it.

Christian. O blessed be the Lord, if this be true.

Minister. Why, it is most true. For the man that would haue any grace of God tending to saluation, if he doe truly desire it, he shall haue it: for so Christ hath promised, I wil giue to him that is a thirst of the well of the water of life freely. Whereby I gather, that if any want the water of life, hauing an appetite after it, he shall haue enough of it: and therefore feare you not; onely vse the meanes which God hath appointed to attaine faith by, as earnest prayer, reuerent hearing of Gods word, and receiuing of the Sacraments: and then you shall see this thing verified in your selfe.

The desire of grace, is grace it self. Reuel. 7.6

Christian. Al this which you say I finde in my selfe by the mercie of God: my heart longeth after that grace of God which I want. I know I do hunger after the kingdome of heauen and the righteousnesse thereof: and further though I want the feeling of Gods mercie, yet I can pray for it from the very roote of my heart.

Minister. Be carefull to giue honour to God for that you haue receiued alreadie. For these things are the motions of the spirit of God dwelling in you. [c] And I am perswaded of this same thing, that God which hath begun this good worke in you will perfect the same vnto the day of Iesus Christ. [c] Phil. 1.6.

Christian. The third thing that troubles me, is this: I haue long praied for many graces of God, and yet I haue not receiued them, whereby it comes oft to my minde, that God loues me not, that I am none of his child, & therefore that I haue no faith.

Minister. You are in no other case then Dauid himselfe, who made the same complaint: I am weary of crying, my throat is drie, mine eies faile whiles I waite for my God. Psal. 69.4.

Christian. But Dauid neuer praied so many yeares without receiuing an answer as I haue done.

Minister. Good Zacharie waited longer on the Lord, before he granted his request, then euer you did: it is like he praied for a child in his yonger yeares, yet his praier was not heard before he was olde. Luk. 1.7, 13 And further, you must note that the Lord may heare the praiers of his seruants, and yet they be altogether ignorant of it. For the manner that God vseth in graunting their requests is not alwaies knowne; as may appeare in the example of our Sauiour Christ, Who in the daies of his flesh, did offer vp praiers and supplications with strong crying and teares, vnto him that was able to saue him from death, & was also heard in that which he feared. Heb. 5.7. And yet we know that he was not freed from that cursed death, but must needes suffer it. How then was hee heard? On this manner: hee was strengthened to beare the death, he had an Angel to comfort him, he was afterward freed from the sorrowes of death. And so it is with the rest of Christs body, as it was with the head. Some beeing in want pray for temporall blessings: God keeps them in this want, and yet he heares their praiers, in giuing them patience to abide that want. Some beeing in wealth and aboundance pray for the continuing of it, if it be the will of God. The Lord flings them into a perpetuall miserie, and yet he heares their praiers, by giuing them blessednes in the life to come. You pray for the increase of faith and repentance, and such like graces: you feele no increase after long praier: yet the mercifull God hath no doubt heard your praier, in that by delaying to performe your request, he hath stirred vp in you the spirit of praier, he hath humbled you, & made you feele your owne wants, the better to depend on his mercie, for the begin-beginning and increasing of euery spirituall grace.

Christian. The fourth thing that troubles me, is that I cannot feele faith purifie my heart, and to worke by loue in bringing forth liuely fruites.

Minister. If this be so continually, that faith brings forth no fruit, it is very dangerous, and argueth a plaine want of faith; yet for a certaine time it may bee so: faith hath not onely a spring time and a summer season, but also a winter when it beareth no fruite. And there is many a true Christian like the bruised reede, that is ouer-turned with euery blast of winde: and like the flaxe that hath fire in it, which by reason of weaknes, giues neither heate nor light, but onely a smoke.

Cant. 2. 12
Esa. 42. 2.

Christian. Thus much shall suffice for my first temptation, wherein I take my selfe satisfied: now if you please, I will be glad to rehearse the second.

Minister. I am content, let vs heare it.

Christian. I am afraid least I haue not truly repented, and therefore that all my profession is onely in hypocrisie.

Minister. What mooueth you to thinke so?

Christian. Two causes especially the first is, they which repent leaue off to sinne: but I am a miserable sinner, I doe continually displease God by my euill thoughts, words and deedes.

Min. You need not feare, [a] For where sinne aboundeth (that is, the knowledge and feeling of sinne) there grace aboundeth much more.

[a] Rom. 5. 20.

Christian. I finde not this in my selfe.

Minister. But yet you feele thus much in your selfe: those corruptions which you feele, & those sinnes that you commit, you hate them, you are displeased with your selfe for them, and you indeauour your selfe to leaue them.

Christ. Yea, that I doe with all my heart.

Minister. Then howe miserable soeuer you feele your selfe by reason of the masse of your sinne, yet you are not subiect to condemnation, but shall most certainely escape the same. Take this for a most certaine trueth, that the man that hates and dislikes his sinnes, both before and after hee hath done them, shall neuer bee damned for them.

Rom. 8. 5.
cum. 8. 1.

Christian. I am euen heart sicke of my manifold sinnes and infirmities, and these good wordes which you speake are as flaggons of wine, to refresh my weary, laden, and weltring soule. I haue begun to flee sinne and to detest it long agoe. I haue beene oft displeased with mine infirmities and corruptions: when I offend God my heart is grieued, I desire to leaue sinne, I flee the occasions of sinne: I would faine fashion my life to Gods word: and I pray vnto God that he would giue me grace so to doe: and yet (which is my griefe) by the strength of the flesh, by the sleights & power of Sathan I am often ouertaken, & fall marueilously, both by speech & deede.

Cant. 2. 5.

Minister. Haue courage my good brother, for where as you haue an affection to doe the things that are acceptable vnto God, it argueth plainly that you are a mẽber of Christ: according to that of Paul: They which are of the spirit, sauour the things of the spirit. Well then, if Sathan euer obiect any of your sinnes to you, make answer thus, that you haue forsaken the first husband the flesh, and haue espoused your selfe to Christ Iesus, who as your head & husband hath taken vpon him to answer your debts, and therefore if he vrge you for them, refer re him ouer vnto Christ. For there is no suit in law against the wife the husband liuing: yea, I adde further, If you be ouercarried with Sathans temptations, and so fall into any sinne, you shall not answer for it but Sathan, it shal surely be reckoned on his score at the day of iudgemẽt, for he was the authour of it. If you fall by the frailtie of your flesh, it shall perish therefore: but you shall still haue Christ your aduocate.

Rom. 8. 5.

Christian. Indeede as you say, I have in me an affection to please God, but when I come to performe my obedience, there I faile.

Minister. Therefore marke this further. As long as the children of God are in this life, [a] God regardeth more the affectiõ to obey, then the obedience it selfe: And they shall be vnto me saith the Lord of hosts, in that day that I shall doe this, for a flocke, and I will spare them, as a man spares his own sonne that serueth him. The father when he shall set his child to doe any busines, though he doe it neuer so vntowardly, yet, if he shew his good will to doe the best hee can, his father will be pleased: and so it is with the Lord toward his children, you looke to haue some perfection in your selfe, but in this life you shall receiue no [b] more but the first fruites of the Spirit, which are but as a handfull of corne, in respect of the whole corne fielde: & as for the accomplishment of your redemption you must waite for it till after this life: you would be kissed with the kisses of Christs mouth, but here in this world you must be content, if you may with Mary Magdelen kisse his feete. For the perfection of a Christian mans life standes in the feeling and confession of his imperfections. And as Ambrose saith, obedience due to God standes more [c] in the affection then in the worke.

Ambrose. c Affectu magis quam effectu.

Christian. But why will God haue those whom hee hath sanctified labour still vnder their infirmities?

Minister. The causes are diuers. First, hereby he teacheth his seruants, to see in what great neede they stand of the righteousnesse of Christ, that they may more carefully seeke after it. Secondly, hee subdueth the pride of mens hearts, and humbleth them by counteruailing the graces which they haue receiued, with the like measure of infirmities. Thirdly, by this meanes the godly are exercised in a continuall fight against sinne, and are daily occupied in purifying themselues.

Christian. But to goe one forward in this matter: there is another cause that makes mee feare, least I haue no true repentance.

Minister. What is that?

Christian. I oftentimes find my selfe like a very timberlog, voide of all grace and goodnes, froward and rebellious to any good worke, so that I feare least Christ haue quite forsaken me.

Minister. As it is in the strait seas, the water ebs and flowes, so it is in the godly: in them as long as they liue in this world according to their owne feeling, there is an accesse and recesse of the spirit. Otherwhiles they be troubled with deadnes and dulnes of heart, as Dauid was, who prayed to the Lord, to quicken him according to his louing kindnes that he may keepe the testimonies of his mouth. And in another place hee saith, that Gods promises quickned him. Which could not bee, vnlesse he had been troubled with great dulnes of heart. Again, sometimes the spirit of God quite withdraweth it selfe to their feeling: as it was in Dauid. In the day of my trouble (saith he) I sought the Lord, and my soule refused comfort. I did thinke vpon God and was troubled, I prayed & my spirit was full of anguish. Againe, Will the Lord absent himselfe for euer? and will he shewe no more fauour? hath God forgotten to be mercifull? &c. The Church in the Canticles complaineth of this: In my bed I sought him by night whome my soule loued: I sought him, but I founde him not. And againe, My welbeloued put in his hand by the hole of the doore, and my heart was affectioned towards him: I rose vp to open to my welbeloued, and my hands did drop down mirrhe, my fingers pure mirrhe vpon the handles of the barre, I opened to my welbeloued: but my welbeloued was gone and past, mine heart was gone when hee did speake, I sought him, but I could not finde him, I called but hee answered me not. Contrariwise, God at some other times sheds abroad his loue most aboundantly in the hearts of the faithfull: & Christ lieth betweene the breasts of his Church, as a posie of myrrhe giuing a strong smell.

Christian. But how can he be a Christian that feeles no grace nor goodnesse in himselfe?

Minister. The child which as yet can vse no reason, is for all that a reasonable creature: and the man in a swowne feeles no power of life, and yet hee is not dead. The christian man hath many quames come ouer his heart, & he falles into many a swowne that none almost wou'd looke for any more of the life of Christ in him, yet for all that he may be a true Christian. This was the state of Peter when he denied our Sauiour Christ with cursing and banning, his faith onely fainted for a time, it failed not.

Luke. 22. 31.

Christian. I haue now opened vnto you the chiefe things that trouble me: & your comfortable answers haue much refreshed my troubled minde. The God of all mercie & consolation requite you accordingly.

Minister. I haue spoken that which God out of his holy word hath opened vnto mee, if you find any helpe thereby, giue God the praise therefore, and carrie this with you for euer, that by many afflictions both in the bodie and the minde you must enter into the kingdome of heauen. Raw flesh is noysome to the stomacke, & is no good nourishment before it be sodden: and vnmortified men and women be no creatures fit for God: and therefore they are to bee soaked and boyled in afflictions, that the fulsomenes & rankenes of their corruption may bee delayed, and that they may haue in them some relish acceptable vnto God. And to conclude, for the auoiding of all these temptations, vse this sweete prayer following which that godly Saint M. Bradford made.

Act. 14. 22 Hooper.

O Lord God and deare Father, what shall shal I say that feele all things to be (in māner) with me as in the wicked? Blind is my minde, crooked is my will, and peruerse concupiscence is in me, as a spring of stinking puddle. Oh how faint is faith in me? how little is my loue to thee or thy people? how great is my selfe-loue? howe hard is my heart? by reason whereof I am moued to doubt of thy goodnesse towards me, whether thou art my mercifull father, and whether I be thy child or no: indeed worthily might I doubt, if that the hauing of these were the cause, and not the fruite rather of thy children. The cause why thou art my father, is thy mercifull goodnesse, grace and trueth in Christ Iesus, which cānot but remaine for euer. In respect whereof thou hast borne me this good will to bring me into thy Church by baptisme, & to accept mee into the number of thy children, that I might be holy, faithfull, obedient and innocent: & to call me diuers times by the ministerie of thy word into thy kingdome: besides the innumerable other benefits alwaies hitherto powred vpon me. All which thou hast done of this thy good will which thou of thine owne mercie beарest to me in Christ before the world was made. The which thing as thou requirest straightly that I should beleeue without doubting, so wouldest thou that I in all my needs should come vnto thee as to a father, and make my mone without mistrust of beeing heard in thy good time, as most shall make to my comfort. Loe therefore to thee deare father I come through thy sonne our Lord, our Mediatour, and Aduocate Iesus Christ, who sitteth on thy right hand making intercession for me; I pray thee of thy great goodnesse & mercy in Christ to be merciful to me a sinner, that I may indeede feele thy sweete mercy as thy child: the time (oh deare father) I appoint not, but I pray thee that I may with hope still expect & looke for thy helpe. I hope that as for a little while thou hast left me, so thou wilt come and visit me, and that in thy great mercy, wherof I haue great need, by reason of my great misery. Thou art wont for a little season in thine anger, to hide thy face frō them whom thou louest: but surely (O Redeemer) in eternall mercies thou wilt shew thy compassions. For whē thou leauest vs, ô Lord, thou doest not leaue vs very long, neither doest thou leaue vs to our losse, but to our lucre and aduantage: euen that thy holy spirit with bigger portion of thy power and vertue may lighten and cheere vs: that the want of feeling of our sorrow may be recompenced plentifully with the liuely sent of hauing thee to our eternall ioy: and therefore thou sweарest that in thine euerlasting mercie thou wilt haue compassion on vs. Of which thing, to the end we might be most assured, thine oath is to be marked, for thou sayest: as I haue sworne, that I will neuer bring any more the waters to drowne the world: so haue I sworne, that I will neuer more be angrie with thee, nor reproue thee. The mountaines shall remoue, and the hils shall fall downe, but thy louing kindnesse shall not moue, and the bond of thy peace shall not faile thee: thus saiest thou the Lord our mercifull redeemer. Deare father therefore, I pray thee remember euen for thine owne trueth and mercies sake the promise and euerlasting couenant, which in thy good time I pray thee to write in my heart, that I may know thee to be the only true God, and Iesus Christ whome thou hast sent: that I may loue thee with all my heart for euer: that I may loue thy people for thy sake: that I may be holy in thy sight through Christ: that I may alwaies not onely striue against sinne, but also ouercome the same daily more and more as thy children doe: aboue all things desiring the sanctification of thy name, the cōming of thy kingdome, the doing of thy will on earth as it is in heauen, &c. through Iesus Christ our Redeemer, Mediatour, and Aduocate, Amen.

A DECLA-

A DECLARATION OF CERtaine ſpirituall Deſertions, ſeruing to terrifie all drowſie Proteſtants, and to comfort them which mourne for their ſinnes.

AMong all the workes of Gods eternall counſell, there is none more wonderful then is Deſertion: which is nothing elſe but an action of God forſaking his creature.

Furthermore, God forſakes his creature, not by withdrawing his eſſence or being from it: for that cannot be, conſidering God is infinite; and therefore muſt needes at all times be euery where: but by taking away the grace and operation of his Spirit from his creature.

Neither muſt any thinke it to be cruelty in God to forſake his creature which he hath made: for he is ſoueraigne Lord ouer all his workes: and for that cauſe he is not bound to any; and he may doe with his owne whatſoeuer he will. And this his will is not to be blamed: for men are not to imagine, that a thing muſt firſt be iuſt, and then afterward that God doth will it: but contrariwiſe, firſt God wils a thing, and therevpon it becomes iuſt.

Againe, ſinne is ſo wretched a thing in the eies of God, that he vtterly forſakes his creature for a puniſhment thereof. Now euery thing, ſo farre forth as it is a chaſtiſement or puniſhment, is good; conſidering that the inflicting thereof is the execution of iuſtice.

And God neuer forſakes the creature againſt the will thereof: but in the very time of Deſertion, it voluntarily forſaketh and refuſeth grace, & chooſeth to be forſaken: wherefore if any hurt or miſery inſue thereof, let the creature blame it ſelfe, and praiſe the Lord.

Deſertions thus deſcribed are of two ſorts eternall and temporarie.

Eternall deſertions are thoſe, whereby God vpon iuſt cauſes knowne to himſelfe forſakes his creature wholly and for euer. Thus the deuill with his angels, and that part of mankind which is prepared to deſtruction, is forſaken. For firſt, God before all worldes, did decree according to the purpoſe of his owne will to refuſe them without the graunt of any mercie. Secondly, after they are created and liue in the world, he giueth them no Sauiour. For Chriſt is onely the redeemer of the Elect, and of no more: which may thus appeare. For whome Chriſt makes no interceſſion, for them he hath wrought no Redemption. But for them onely which are elected and ſhall beleeue in him, he makes interceſſion. I pray (ſaith he) not for the world, but for them which thou haſt giuen me. And againe, I pray not for theſe alone, but for them alſo which ſhall beleeue in me through their word. Wherefore Chriſt is a redeemer to none but to the elect. Thirdly, he reſerueth them to eternall damnation for their ſinnes; which is a totall ſeparation from God, and the accompliſhment of all other Deſertions. Ioh. 17. 9, 20.

For the effecting of this, God exerciſeth wicked men & reprobates in this life with diuers particular Deſertions, and that after this manner. He beſtoweth all ſorts of benefits on them as on his owne ſeruants: but yet ſo, as that he withdraweth that part of his benefit, which hath the promiſe of life eternall annexed to it in the word. And in this matter he dealeth as a man that ſets many trees in his Orchard, but ſo as he takes away the heart or the pith thereof. And this the Lord doth eyther in temporall or ſpirituall benefits.

I. For temporall benefits, as wealth, honour, libertie, outward peace, the Lord dealeth very bountifully with them: He makes his ſunne to ſhine vpon the iuſt and vniuſt: he fils their bellies with his hid treaſures: And as Dauid ſaith, I fretted at the fooliſh, when I ſaw the proſperitie of the wicked: for there is no bondes in their death, but they are luſtie and ſtrong, they are not in trouble as other men, neither are they plagued as other men. But yet he holds backe that which is the principall thing, and the very glory of theſe benefits, that is, the right vſe of them. For that a man may purely vſe Gods creatures, two things are required. Firſt, his perſon muſt ſtand iuſt and ſanctified before God by faith in Chriſt. For vntill a mans perſon pleaſe God, his worke ſhall neuer pleaſe him. Secondly, hee muſt vſe the ſame creatures purely: which is done partly by inuocation of Gods name, and partly by referring them to their ſet and appointed endes; which are Gods glorie, a mans owne Mat. 5. 45. Pſa. 73. 4-5 Dat legitimum. Nego permiſſum, ſed non ſanctum vſum. Tit. 2. 15.

owne and his neighbours good. But all this is ſtatte contrarie in the vngodly man. For firſt, he is forth of Chriſt, ſo that his perſon ſtands vniuſt before God. And therefore all his actions (euen thoſe which otherwiſe are lawfull and good) in him are meere ſinnes. Secōdly, he vſeth Gods gifts and bleſſings with an euill conſcience. For by reaſon of his want of grace to beleeue, he cannot reſolue himſelfe, that God as his father doth beſtow his bleſſings on him as his beloued child in Chriſt; yet as a theeſe and an vſurper, againſt his conſcience hee vſeth them. Adde further, the creatures are vſed of him without inuocation: for ſuch an one can not pray; and therfore he doth but as the ſwine in the forreſt, which feedeth on the maſt, but neuer looketh vp to the tree whence it falleth. Thirdly, he vſeth Gods gifts to euill ends: becauſe either he makes an idoll of them by ſetting his heart on them, or els he imployeth them to riot, pride, and the oppreſſion of godly men. A maſter of muſicke hath his houſe furniſhed with muſicall inſtruments of all ſorts: and he teacheth his owne ſchollers artificially th vſe them, both in right tuning of them, as alſo in playng on them: there comes in ſtrangers, who admiring the ſaid inſtruments, haue leaue giuen them of the maſter to handle them, as the ſchollers doe: but when they come to practiſe, they neither tune them aright, neither are they able to ſtrike one ſtroke as they ought, ſo as they may pleaſe the maſter and haue his commendation. This world is as a large and ſumptuous pallace, into which are receiued, not onely the ſonnes and daughters of God, but alſo wicked and vngodly men: it is furniſhed with goodly creatures in vſe more excellent then all muſicall inſtruments: the vſe of them is common to al: but the godly man taught by Gods ſpirit, and directed by faith, ſo vſeth them, as that the vſe thereof is acceptable to God: as for the impure and vnbeleeuing, indeede they enioy the creatures and Gifts of God, but the pure vſe is wanting: for they cannot but abuſe them: and therefore the wicked and the reprobate, though they ſhoulde commit no other ſinnes in the world, yet for the vſe of their wealth and honour, for their very eating and drinking (which in themſelues are moſt lawfull) ſhall be damned.

II Concerning ſpirituall bleſſings, firſt God ceaſeth to graunt ſo much as an outward calling to many men. For howe many nations ſince the beginning of the world, much more particular men, haue there bin, are, and ſhall be, which neuer heard the preaching of the Goſpell; nay not ſo much as the name of Chriſt, God is knowne in Iurie (ſaith Dauid) and he hath not done ſo to any natiō. And often in Moſes and the Prophets it is mentioned that the couenant was in former times made peculiar to the Iewes. And Paul in the Acts ſaith, that God ſuffered the Gentiles in former times to walke in their owne waies: and of the Epheſians, before their calling he ſaith, that they were ſtrangers from the promiſes & without God in the world.

Act. 14. 16

Eph. 2. 2.

III. He graunts the outward meanes of ſaluation, namely the Word, Prayer, Sacraments, Diſcipline aboundantly: but yet he quite withdraweth the operation of his ſpirit, whereby a conuerſion might be wrought. For they neuer haue that piercing of the eare which Dauid mentioneth, nor the opening of the heart with Lydia, nor that teaching of God, when they are drawn of the father to Chriſt. And in ſo doing indeede, only he offereth grace, but doeth not exhibite and conferre it: not that he mocketh any, but that in ſo doing he may euery way conuince and bereaue them of excuſe. As the Lord ſpeaketh to Eſay, Goe and ſay to this people, ye ſhal heare indeed, but ye ſhall not vnderſtand: ye ſhall plainely ſee, but not perceiue: make the heart of this people fat, make their eares heauie, and ſhut their eyes, leaſt they ſee with their eies, and heare with their eares, and vnderſtand with their hearts, and conuert, and he heale them. If our Goſpell be hid (ſaith Paul) it is hid in them that periſh. Men that haue long liued vnder the preaching of the Goſpell, and yet ſtill remaine ignorant and impenitent, let them beware and take heede of this deſertion: and they are with trembling to lay to their hearts, that which the holy Ghoſt ſpeaketh of Hophni and Phinehas, They obeyed not the voice of their father, becauſe the Lord would deſtroy them. IV. To goe further, he beſtoweth on them many worthy properties of faith. As firſt, a knowledge of the diuine trueth in the Law and the Goſpell. Secondly, an aſſent to the ſaid trueth. Thirdly, a ioyfull reioycing and boaſting in ſpeaking and hearing of it. Fourthly, an outward profeſſion of it for a time. But he doeth not beſtowe that qualitie & vertue of faith, which is, as it were, the very ſoule of it: without which faith is dead and ſaueth none, namely, the inwarde assurance & certificate of his loue and fauour in Christ, with a sense and feeling of the same in heart. Neither are the former duties of faith perpetuall and sound in thē, for the reprobate is not induced to them by any assurance of Gods mercy, but by other siniſter occasions, as are: Firſt, desire of knowledge in diuine mysteries. Secondly, a delight in it. Thirdly, praise and commendation among men. Fourthly, the maintaining of wealth & honour. Fifthly, the getting of wealth or honour. Sixtly, a desire to be at vnitie and concord with the nation or people where the Gospell is preached. Therefore when these ends and occasions of their beleeuing cease, then also their faith and profession cease. In this kind of desertion, it is to be feared, that most men are. All in our Church will professe faith in Christ: yet seeing the sound conuersion to God, and the sincerities of life and doctrine is very rare, we may presume, that that maine propertie of faith, which is the receiuing and apprehension of Christ, is wanting in most: therefore let euery man looke to himselfe & betime labour to turne his temporarie faith (if hee finde it in himselfe) into a true sauing faith, wherefore he must striue first to feele his extreame neede of Christ and his merits. Secondly, to hunger and thirst after him, as after meate and drinke. Thirdly, to be nothing in himselfe, that he may be all in all out of himselfe in Christ. Fourthly, to be able to say that he liueth not, but Christ liueth in him by faith. Fiftly, to loath his owne sinnes with a most vehemēt hatred, and to prize and value Christ & the least droppe of his bloode aboue a thousand worlds.

V. Againe in repentance he bestoweth, first, a sight of sinne: secondly, a kind of sorrowe for it: thirdly, a confession of it: fourthly, a resolution for a time to sinne no more. But that part of repentance, which hath the promise of mercie annexed, that is a conuersion of the whole man to God, he neuer giueth it.

Dat spiritum reprimentem, non renouantem.

VI. Lastly, God giueth to the reprobate his spirit, but so farre forth as it shall not any whit regenerate or renewe his nature: but onely in the outward action represse the act of sinne: so as thereby without any inward change he shal be as ciuilly iust & vpright in outward conuersatiō, as any in the world.

Thus much of those desertions which befall the deuill and his angels and all Reprobats: now follow those wherewith god exerciseth euen his owne elect childrē: for the blessings that God bestoweth on them are of two sorts, either positiue or priuatiue: positiue, are reall graces wrought in the heart, by the spirit of God: priuatiue are such meanes whereby God preserues men from falling into sinne: as crosses, desertions. And these in number exceed the first, as long as men liue in this world.

Priuatiuæ gratiæ sunt plures quā positiuæ.

Before it can be declared what these desertions are, this conclusion is to bee laid downe: He which is once in the estate of grace shall be in the same for euer. This appeareth in the 8. of the Rom. 30. where Paul sets downe the golden chaine of the causes of saluation that can neuer be broken; so that he which is predestinate shall be called, iustified, glorified. And a little after he saith, Who shall lay any thing to the charge of Gods elect? and, Who shall seuer vs from the loue of Christ? and, I am perswaded that no creature shall be able to seuer vs frō the loue of Christ: which he would not haue saide, if men beeing in the estate of grace, might fall quite from grace. And howe should they which are iustified haue peace with God, if they were not sure to perseuere righteous before God to the ende? And how shall it be said, that hope maketh not ashamed, because the loue of God (wherewith God loues his elect) is shed abroad in their hearts, by the holy Ghost which is giuē them, if any may vtterly fall from that loue? Howe should the testimonie of the spirit, which testifieth to the elect, that they are the children of God, be true and certen, if it may be quite extinguished? Lastly, howe shall that of Iohn be true, They went out of vs, because they were not of vs, if they had beene of vs, they should haue remained with vs, if a mā may wholly fall from Christ which hath once beene made a true member of him? Our Sauiour Christ saith, My sheepe heare my voice: and I know them, and they follow me: and I giue life eternall to them, and no man shall take the out of my hand, or out of my fathers hand, and whatsoeuer my father giueth me shall come vnto me, and whosoeuer commeth to me, I will not cast out. And if any of the elect beeing effectually called might wholy fall from grace, then there must be a second insition or ingrafting into the mysticall bodie of Christ, and therefore a second Baptisme: nay for euery fal a new insition, and a new Baptisme; which must in no wise be granted: wherfore they which are predestinate to be in the state of grace, are also predesti-

nate to perseuere in the same to the end.

Hereupon it followeth that the desertions of Gods elect, are first of all partiall, that is, such as wherin God doth not wholly forsake them but in some part. Secōdly, temporarie, that is for some space of time, & neuer beyond the compasse of this pre-
Isa.54.10. sent life. For a moment (saith the Lord in Esay) in mine anger I hid my face from thee for a little season, but with euerlasting mercie haue I had compassion on thee, saith the Lord Psa.119.8. thy Redeemer. And to this purpose Dauid well acquainted with this matter prayeth, forsake me not ouer long.

This sort of desertions, though it be but for a time, yet no part of a Christian mans life is free from them, & very often taking deepe place in the heart of man, they are of long continuance. Dauid continued in this dangerous fall about the space of an whole yeare before he was recouered. Luther confesseth of himselfe, that after his conuersion he lay three yeares in desperation. And common experience in such like cases can make record of longer time.

The manner, God vseth in forsaking his owne seruants, is of two sorts; the first is by taking away one grace and putting another in the roome: the second, by hiding his grace as it were in a corner of the heart.

God takes away his grace, & puts another in the roome, diuers waies.

I. First, he bereaueth his owne children of outward prosperitie, yea he will loade them with crosses; and yet he will make a good supplie by giuing patience. Dauid is driuen out of his kingdome by his owne sonne: a heauie crosse: yet the Lord ministred an humble and patient spirit, so as he e 2.Sam. 15.26. was content to speake, [e] If the Lord thus say, I haue no delight in thee: behold here I am, let him doe to me as seemeth good in his eyes. So likewise Christian Martyrs are bereaued of all outward safetie, and laid open to the violence & persecution of tyrants; yet inwardly they are stablished by the power of the might of God, when they are most weake they are most strong, & when they are most foiled, then they obtaine victorie.

II. Secondly, the Lord cuts off the daies of this life, and for recompence to his owne elect giues life eternall, [d] The righte- d Esa.57.1 ous is taken away for the euill to come. This is manifest in Iosias of whome it is said, [e] e 2.Reg.22. 20. Behold, I will gather thee to thy fathers, and thou shalt be put in thy graue in peace; and thine eyes shall not see all the euill which I will bring vpon this place.

III. Thirdly, God takes away the feeling of his loue, & the ioy of the holy ghost for a season: and then in the roome thereof he kindles an earnest desire & thirsting with grones and cryings vnto heauen, to be in the former fauour of God againe. This was Dauids case when hee complai-f Psal.77.1 2,3. ned and saide, [f] My voice came to God when I cryed, my voice came to God and hee heard me: in the day of my trouble I sought the Lord, my sore ranne and ceased not in the night: my soule refused comfort. I did thinke vpon God and was troubled: I prayed and my spirit was full of anguish. Selah. The like was the estate of the Church making her mone vnto God in Esay, [g] O Lord, why hast thou g Esa.63. 17. made vs to erre from thy wayes? and hardened our hearts from thy feare? Returne for thy seruants sake, and for the tribes of thine inheritance.

IV. God graunts his seruants the holy meanes of saluation namely preaching, prayer, Sacraments, and holdes backe the efficacie of his spirit for a time. In this case they are like the corne field that is plowed and sowed with good corne: but yet for a time, it neuer giues rooting beneath, nor so much as a shewe of any blade appeares aboue. Thus the spouse of Christ, when h Cant.3. 4,5. shee comes into his wine-seller, shee falles into a swowne; so as shee must [h] bee stayed with flaggons, and comforted with Apples, because she is sicke of loue.

V. Fiftly, God giueth his children a strong affection, to obey his will, but hee lets them faile in the act of obedience it selfe, like as the prisoner who hath escaped the hand of his gayler, hath an affection to runne a thousand miles euery houre; but hauing happily his bolts on his legges, hee cannot for his life but goe very softly, gauling and chafing his flesh; and with much griefe falling again into the hands of his keeper. This is it, that Paul complai-i Rom.7. 22,23,24 neth of when he saith, [i] I delight in the law of God, concerning the inner man: but I see another law in my members, rebelling against the law of my minde, and leading me captiue to the law of my sinne, which is in my members. O wretched man that I am, who shal deliuer me from this bodie of death?

The second manner of Gods forsaking his Elect is, when he hides his graces for a time: not by taking them quite away, but by conuerting them and by remouing all sense and feeling of them. And in this caſe they are like the trees in the winter ſeaſon, that are beaten with wind & wether, bearing neither leafe nor fruite, but looke as though they were rotten and dead, becauſe the ſap doth not ſpread it ſelfe, but lies hid in the roote. Dauid often was in this caſe, as namely when ſaith, [k] Will the Lord abſent himſelfe for euer? And will he ſhew no more fauour? is his mercie cleane gone for euer? doth his promiſe faile for euermore? Hath God forgotten to bee mercifull? Hath he ſhut vp his tender mercie in diſpleaſure? Selah.

k Pſal. 77. 78.

Cuncta Dei opera ſunt in medijs contrarijs.

This comes to paſſe, becauſe the Lord very often in and by one contrarie, works another. Clay & ſpittle tempered togither in reaſon ſhould put out a mans eyes; but Chriſt vſed it as a meanes to giue ſight to the blinde. Water in reaſon ſhould put out fire: but Elias when he would ſhewe that Iehoua was the true God, poures water on his ſacrifice, and fils a trench therewith to make the ſacrifice burne. The like appeareth in the worke of grace to ſaluation. A man that hath liued in ſecuritie, by Gods goodnes hath his eyes opened to ſee his ſins, & his heart touched to feele the huge & loathſome burthen of them, & therfore to bewaile his wretched eſtate, with bitterneſſe of heart. Hereupon hee preſently thinks that God wil make him a firebrand of hell: whereas indeede the Lord is nowe about to worke and frame in his heart ſanctification and ſound repentance neuer to be repented off. The man which hath had ſome good perſwaſions of Gods fauour in Chriſt, comes afterward vpon many occaſions to be troubled & to be ouerwhelmed with diſtruſtfulnes and grieuous doubtings of his ſaluation, ſo as he iudgeth himſelfe to haue beene but an hypocrite in former times, & for the time preſent a caſtaway. But indeed hereby the Lord exerciſeth, faſhioneth, & increaſeth his weake faith. In one word marke this point, That the graces of God peculiar to the elect, are begunne, increaſed, and made manifeſt in or by their contraries.

A man in this deſertion can diſcerne no difference betweene himſelfe and a caſtaway: and the rather if with this deſertion bee ioyned a feeling of Gods anger: for then ariſeth the bittereſt temptation that euer befell the poore ſoule of a Chriſtian man, and that is a wraſtling and ſtrugling in ſpirit and conſcience, not with the motions of a rebelling fleſh, nor the accuſations of the deuill, which are often times very irkſome & terrible, but againſt the wrath of a reuenging God. This hidden ſpirituall temptation more tormenteth the ſpirit of man, then all the rackes or gibbets in the world can doe. And it hath his fittes after the manner of an ague, in which euen Gods own ſeruants ouercarried with ſorrowe may blaſpheme God, and crie out that they are damned. Iob was in this eſtate: as hee teſtifieth, [a] Oh that my griefe were waied (ſaith he) and my miſeries were laid togither in the ballance! for it would be heauier then the ſand of the ſea: therefore my words are ſwallowed vp; for the arrowes of the Almightie are in me: the venome thereof doth drinke vp my ſpirite, and the terrours of God fight againſt me. And further he complains that the Lord is [b] his enemie, that he writes bitter things againſt him, and that he [c] ſets him as a Butt to ſhoote at. This was Dauids temptation when he ſaid, [d] O Lord rebuke me not in thine anger, neither chaſtiſe me in thy wrath, haue mercie vpon me O Lord, for I am weake: O Lord heale mee, for my bones are vexed, my ſoule is alſo ſore troubled: but lord how long wilt thou delay? Returne ô Lord, deliuer my ſoule, ſaue me for thy mercies ſake.

d Pſal. 6. 1, 2, 3, 4.

Hence it followes, that when any that hath beene a profeſſour of the Goſpel ſhal deſpaire at his ende; that men are to leaue ſecret iudgements to God, and charitably to iudge the beſt of them. For example one Maſter Chambers at Leiceſter of late, in his ſickneſſe grieuouſly deſpaired, and cryed out that he was damned, and after died: yet it is not for any to note him with the black marke of a reprobate. One thing which hee ſpake in his extremitie (O that I had but one drop of faith!) muſt mooue all men to conceiue well of him. For by this it ſeemeth that he had an heart which deſired to repent & beleeue; and therefore a repentant and beleeuing heart indeed. For God at all times, but eſpecially in temptation, of his great mercie accepts the will for the deed. Neither is it to bee regarded that he ſaid hee was damned; for men in ſuch caſes ſpeak not as they are, but as they feele themſelues to be.

See the booke written of his death.

Yea, to goe further, when a profeſſour of the Goſpel ſhall make away himſelfe, though it be a fearefull caſe, yet ſtill the ſame opinion muſt be carryed. Firſt, Gods iudgements are very ſecret. Secondly, they may repet in the very agony for any thing we know. Thirdly, none is able to comprehend the bottomleſſe depth of the graces and mercies which are in Chriſt.

Thus

Thus much of the manner which God vſeth in forſaking his elect; Nowe followe the kindes of deſertion, which are two: deſertion in puniſhment; deſertion in ſinne.

Deſertion in puniſhment is, when God deferreth either to mitigate or to remooue the croſſe and chaſtiſement which he hath laid vpon his children. This befell Chriſt on the croſſe, f My God (ſaith he) my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? This was the complaint of Gedeon, Did not the Lord bring vs out of Egypt? But now the Lord hath forſaken vs, and deliuered vs into the hands of the Midianites. Iudg.6.13. g Maſter Robert Glouer Martyr at couentrie, after he was condemned by the Biſhop, and was nowe at the point to be deliuered out of the worlde, it ſo happened, that two or three daies before his death, his heart beeing lumpiſh and deſolate of all ſpirituall conſolation, felt in himſelfe no aptneſſe nor willingneſſe, but rather a heauineſſe and dulneſſe of ſpirit, full of much diſcomfort to beare the bitter croſſe of martyrdome ready now to be laid vpon him: whereupon he fearing in himſelfe, leaſt the Lord had withdrawne his wonted fauour from him, made his mone to one Auſtine his friend, ſignifying vnto him howe earneſtly he had prayed day and night vnto the Lord, and yet could receiue no motion nor ſenſe of any comfort from him, vnto whom the ſaid Auſtine anſwered againe, willing him patiently to waite the Lords pleaſure, and howſoeuer his preſent feeling was, yet ſeeing his cauſe was iuſt and true, he exhorted him conſtantly to ſticke to the ſame, & to play the man, nothing doubting but the Lord in his good time would viſit him, and ſatisfie his deſire with plenty of conſolation, &c. The next day when the time came of the martyrdome, as he was going to the place, and was now come to the ſight of the ſtake, although all the night before praying for ſtrength and courage: he could feele none, ſuddenly he was ſo repleniſhed with the holy Ghoſt, that he cried out clapping with his hands to Auſtine, and ſaying with theſe words; Auſtine, he is come, he is come, &c. and that with ſuch ioy and alacritie, as one ſeeming rather to bee riſen from ſome deadly danger to libertie of life then as one paſſing out of the world by any paines of death.

Deſertion in ſinne, is when God withdrawing the aſſiſtance of his ſpirit, a man is left to fall into ſome actual and grieuous ſinne. And for all this no man is to thinke that God is the author of ſinne, but onely man that falleth, and Satan. A reſemblance of this trueth we may ſee in a ſtaffe: which, if a man ſhall take and ſet vpright vpō the ground, ſo long as he holds it with his hand, it ſtands vpright; but ſo ſoone as he withdrawes his hand though he neuer puſh it downe, it falls of it ſelfe. In this deſertion was the good king Hezechiah, of whome the holy Ghoſt ſpeaketh thus, Hezechiah proſpered in all his waies, therefore dealing with the Ambaſſadours of the Princes of Babel which ſent to him to inquire of the wonder which was done in the land, God left him (namely, to the pride of his heart to exalt himſelfe) in tempting him, that hee might trie out all that was in his heart. To this place appertaine, Noes drunkennes, Dauids adulterie, Peters deniall of Chriſt. The reaſon of ſuch deſertions may be this. If a patient ſhall be grieuouſly ſicke, the phyſition will vſe all manner of meanes that can be deuiſed to recouer him, and if hee once come to a deſperate caſe, the phiſitiō rather then he will not reſtore him, wil imploie all his skill; he will take poiſon, and ſo temper it, and againſt the nature thereof he will make a ſoueraigne remedie to recouer health. The Elect childrē of God, are diſeaſed with an inward, hidden, and ſpirituall pride; whereby they affect themſelues, and deſire to be ſomthing in themſelues forth of Chriſt: and this ſinne is very dangerous: firſt becauſe when other ſinns die in a man, this ſecret pride gets ſtrength: for Gods grace is the matter of pride, in ſuch wiſe, that a man will be proud, becauſe he is not proud: for example: if any ſhal be tempted of the deuil to ſome proud behauiour, and by Gods grace get the victorie, then the heart thus thinketh. Oh thou haſt done wel, thou haſt foiled the enemy, neither pride nor any other ſinne can preuaile againſt thee, ſuch and ſuch could neuer haue done ſo: and a very good man ſhall hardly be free from ſuch kinde of motions in this life. Secondly, there is no greater enemie to faith then pride: for it poiſoneth the heart & maketh it vncapable of that grace ſo long as it beareth any ſway: for he that will beleeue in Chriſt muſt be annihilated, that is he muſt be bruiſed and battered to a flat nothing, in regard of any liking or affection to himſelfe, that he may in ſpirit mount vp to heauen, where Chriſt ſits at the right hand of the father, and as it were with both the handes of faith graſpe him with all his bleſſed merits, that he may bee wiſdome, righteouſnes, ſanctification, redemption, life, good works, and whatſoeuer good thing he is, neither in, nor by, nor for himſelfe; but euery way forth of himſelfe in Christ. Now, this bleſſed condition of a beleeuing heart, by natural ſelfloue and ſelfe-liking is greatly hindered. God therefore in great mercie to remedy this dangerous corruption, lets his elect ſeruants fall into trouble of mind and conſcience, and if they happily be of greater hardnes of heart, into ſome actual ſinne: and ſo declaring his wonderfull mercy in ſauing them, he is faine againſt his mercie to bring them to his mercy, and by ſinne to ſaue them from ſinne. By this meanes the Lord, who can bring light out of darknes, makes a remedie of ſinne to ſlay pride, that inuincible monſter of many heads, which would ſlay the ſoule.

1. Cor. 1. 30. Ioh. 15. 2. Gal. 2. 20.

Though this be ſo, yet none muſt hereupon venter to commit any ſinne againſt Gods commandements, leaſt in ſo doing they caſt away their ſoules. For the godly man though he fall into ſinne, yet it is againſt his purpoſe, and it makes his heart to bleede: and the courſe of this life ſhall be alwaies vpright & pleaſing vnto God: becauſe he is lead by the ſpirit of God.

The ends for which God vſeth deſertions are three, the firſt is the chaſtiſment of ſinnes paſt in the former part of mans life, that he may ſearch them out, conſider them, and be hartily ſorrowfull for them: for this ende was Iobs triall. thou wryteſt (ſaith he) bitter things againſt mee, and makeſt me to poſſeſſe the ſinnes of my youth.

Iob. 13. 26

The ſecond end is, that God may make triall of the preſent eſtate of his ſeruants: not that he is ignorant what is in man, but becauſe he would haue all men know themſelues. To this effect ſaith Moſes. And thou ſhalt remember all the way which the Lord thy God led thee in the wilderneſſe for to humble thee, and to prooue thee, to know what was in thine heart, whether thou wouldeſt keepe his commandements or no. This alſo was the end why the Lord left Ezechias to prooue and trie what was in his heart.

Deut. 8. 2. and 13. 3.

This triall by deſertion ſerueth for two purpoſes: for otherwhiles the Lord vſeth it for the manifeſtation of ſome hidden ſin, that the godly may be deeplier humbled, and craue more earneſtly pardon of that and other ſinnes. For as the begger is alwaies mending and peecing his garment, where he findes a breach: ſo the penitent and beleeuing heart muſt alwaies be exerciſed in reparing it ſelfe where it findes a want.

Againe, oftentimes this triall ſerues to quicken and reuiue the hidden graces of the heart that men may be thankfull for them, and feele an increaſe of them in the heart. The good husbandman cuttes the branches of the Vine, not that he hath a purpoſe to deſtroy them, but to make them beare more fruit. In the Canticles when Christ left his ſpouſe, then ſhe riſeth out of her bed, ſhe opens the doore, her hands drop mirrhe on the barre of the doore: then further ſhee ſeekes and calls for him, and praiſeth him more then euer before. Dauid teſtifieth the like of himſelfe: In my proſperity I ſaid I ſhal neuer be mooued, &c. but thou didſt hide thy face, and I was troubled. Then cried I to thee, O Lord, and prayed to my Lord. Laſtly, men that liue in the Church, beeing for a time left of God, become ſo impenitēt as that they muſt be giuen vp to Sathan; yet for no other cauſe, but that the fleſh may be killed, and the ſpirit made aliue in the day of the Lord.

Ioh. 15. 2. Cant. 5. Pſal 30. 6. 1. Cor. 5. 5

The third ende is the preuenting of ſin to come, This appeareth in Paul; Leaſt (ſaith he) I ſhould be exalted out of meaſure through the abundance of reuelations, there was giuen vnto me a pricke in the fleſh, the meſſenger of Sathan to buffet mee becauſe I ſhould not be exalted out of meaſure. In the former times when the Lord among many others had ſet out Cranmer for the maintenance of his bleſſed trueth againſt his & Gods enemies, he left him for a while to fall from his religion, and to make a dangerous recantation: but ſo as thereby he preuented many ſinnes, and prepared him to a glorious martirdom. As ſome of his owne words may teſtifie which he ſpake a little before his ende: And now (ſaith hee) I come to the great thing that ſo much troubleth my conſcience more then any thing that euer I did or ſaid in all my life, and that is the ſetting abroad of a writing contrarie to the trueth, which now here I renounce as thinges written with my hand contrarie to the trueth which I thought in my heart, & that for feare of death and to ſaue my life, &c. and for as much as my hand offended writing contrary to my heart, my hand ſhall be firſt puniſhed therfore: for may I come to the fire it ſhall be firſt burned. Anſwerably, whē he was at the fire, firſt he burnt his right hand which ſubſcribed; his his body ſuffered the flame with ſuch conſtancy and ſteadfaſtneſſe as he neuer almoſt mooued: his eies lift vp to heauen often he repeated his vnworthy right hand. Thus, death which he moſt feared, he moſt deſired, that he might take reuenge of himſelfe for his ſinne.

The uſe that all good Chriſtian hearts are to make of theſe their deſertions, is manifold. Firſt if they haue outward reſt and Act.9.31. walke in the feare of God, and be filled with Rom.11.20. the ioy of the holy Ghoſt, let them not be high minded but feare, leaſt a forſaking followe. Secondly, if in any temptation they iudge themſelues forſaken, let them conſider this wonderfull worke of ſpirituall deſertions which God exerciſeth upon his own children uery vſually: and then it may pleaſe the Lord, they ſhall finde it to be a reſtoratiue againſt many a quame and ſwoune of ſpirit and conſcience into which otherwiſe they would certainly fall. Thirdly, ſeeing God for their triall doeth often withdrawe himſelfe from them, let them againe draw neere to God and preſſe vnto him; euen as a man that ſhieuers of an ague is alwaies creeping to the fire. If it be demanded how a man ſhould come neere God, the anſwer is, by the vſe of his word and praier. For by his word he ſpeaks to thee, and by praier thou ſpeakeſt to him. Laſtly, ſeeing by deſertions God wil take experience of his ſeruants, let euery man trie and ſearch his waies, and euer be turning his feete to the waies Iam.3.10 of Gods commandements: let him endeauour to keepe a good conſcience before God and before all men, that ſo he may with David ſay, Iudge me O Lord, for I haue walked in mine Pſal.119.50. innocencie: my truſt hath beene alwaies in Act.24.16. the Lord: I ſhall not ſlide: prooue, O Lord, Pſal.26.1.2 and trie me, examine my raines and my heart.

Giue all diligence to make your Election sure, for if ye doe these things ye shall neuer fall.

Printed by IOHN LEGAT, Printer to the Vniuersitie of CAMBRIDGE. 1605.

To the godly Reader.

IN Gods Church commonly they who are touched by the ſpirit, and beginne to come on in Religion, are much troubled with feare that they are not Gods children; and none ſo much as they. Therefore they often thinke on this point: and are not quiet till they finde ſome reſolution.

The ſpirit of God, (as beſt knowing the eſtate of Gods children) hath penned two parcels of holy ſcripture, for the full reſoluing of this caſe; namely the 55. Pſalme, and the firſt Epiſtle of S. Iohn.

And for the helping of the ſimple and vnlearned, who deſire to be informed concerning their Eſtate, I haue propounded theſe two parts of Scripture, in the forme of a Dialogue: and haue ioyned therevnto a little diſcourſe concerning the ſame matter, penned in Latin by H. Zanchius, a learned Diuine, and now engliſhed.

Vſe this labour of mine for thy benefit and comfort: and the Lord increaſe the number of them which may reioyce that their names are written in heauen.

THE FIRST EPISTLE OF IOHN
in forme of a Dialogue.

The Speakers. Iohn. Church.

CHAP. I.

Church.

Any among vs denie the Godhead, and many the manhood of Christ.

verſ.1. Iohn. That which was from the beginning [& therfore true God] which we haue heard [namely ſpeaking] which we haue ſeene with theſe our eyes, which we haue looked vpon, and theſe hands of ours haue handled of that word [not the ſounding but the eſſential word of the Father,] of life [liuing of himſelfe, and giuing life vnto all other.]

Ch. Before you go any further, this word of life is inuiſible, how then could it be ſeene?

verſ.2. Ioh [Yes] for that life was made manifeſt [to wit, in the fleſh] and wee [I with many others] haue ſeene it, and beare witneſſe, and publiſh vnto you that eternall life, which was with the Father [eternally before this manifeſtation] and was made manifeſt vnto vs.

Ch. Menander, Ebion, and Cerinthus, hauing beene teachers among vs, confidently deuie theſe things which you ſay: and they beare vs in hand, that they ſeeke our good.

verſ.3. Ioh. That [which I will repeat againe for more certainties ſake] which we haue ſeene & heard, declare we vnto you, that ye may haue fellowſhip with vs, and that our fellowſhip alſo may be with the father, and with his ſonne Ieſus Chriſt.

verſ.4. And theſe things write we vnto you, that your ioy might be full, [i. might haue ſound conſolation in your conſciences.

Ch. Well then lay vs downe ſome ground, whereby we may come to bee aſſured that wee haue fellowſhip one with another, and with Chriſt.

verſ.5. Ioh. This then is the meſſage which wee haue heard of him, & declare vnto you that God is light [i. pureneſſe it ſelfe and bleſſednes, whereas men and Angels are neither, but by participation] and in him is no darknes.

Ch. Some that make profeſſion among vs, continue ſtill in their old courſe and converſation, and yet they ſay they haue fellowſhip with God.

Ioh. If we ſay that we haue fellowſhippe with him, and walke [lead the courſe of our liues] in darkeneſſe, [ignorance, errour, impietie,] we lie, [diſſemble,] and doe not truly [deale not ſincerely.] verſ.6. Profeſſion without practiſe, a note of an hypocrite.

Ch. What then is the true marke of one which hath fellowſhip with God?

Ioh. If we walke in the light, [lead the courſe of our liues in ſincerity of life and doctrine] we haue felloſhip one with another. verſ.7. Sincerity of life and religion, a note of communion with God.

Ch. We are ſo defiled with ſinne, that we often doubt, leaſt we haue no fellowſhippe with God.

Ioh. The blood of Ieſus Chriſt his ſonne cleanſeth vs from all ſinne.

Ch. Some among vs are come to that paſſe, that they ſay they haue no ſinne: and that this eſtate is a ſigne of fellowſhip with God.

Ioh. If we ſay we haue no ſinne, we deceiue our ſelues, [imagining that to be true which is otherwiſe] and the trueth is not in vs. verſ.8. To profeſſe perfect ſanctification in this life, a note of an hypocrite.

Ch. How then may we know that our ſinnes are waſhed away by Chriſt?

Ioh. If we confeſſe our ſinnes [namely with an humbled heart deſiring pardon] he is faithfull and iuſt [in keeping his promiſe,] to forgiue vs our ſinnes, and to cleanſe vs from all vnrighteouſnes. verſ.9. Humble confeſſion of ſinne to God, is a note of remiſſion of ſinne.

If we ſay [as they before named doe] we haue not ſinned, we make him a liar [whoſe word ſpeakes the contrary,] and his word is not in vs [his doctrine hath no place in our hearts.] verſ.10.

CHAP. II.

Ch. IF this be true which hath bin ſaid, that the blood of Chriſt, doeth cleanſe from al ſinne, and that if we do confeſſe them they ſhall be pardoned; our corruption teels vs that wee may ſinne freely.

Ioh. My little children, theſe things I write vnto you that ye ſinne not. Verſ.1.

Ch. Alas, we fall oft by infirmity: what ſhall we then doe?

Ioh. If any man ſinne, we haue an aduocate [who in his own name & by his owne merits pleads our cauſe] to the Father, Ieſus Chriſt the iuſt [and therefore fit to make interceſſion.]

Ch. But how may euery one of vs in particular knowe that Chriſt is his aduocate?

Ioh. He is the propitiation [i. a couering of ſinne or reconciliation, as the propitiatorie of the Arke couered the Law,] and not for verſ.2.

our sinnes onely, but also for the sinnes of the whole world [not onely Iewes but also Gentiles of all sorts.]

Ch. Be it that I know him to bee my aduocate, may I not be deceiued? how may I know that this my knowledge is effectuall to saluation?

verſ.3. An endeuour to keepe the Commandements, a signe of faith.

Ioh. Hereby are we sure that we know him, [here that knowledge is meant, whereby a man applies Christ and all his benefits to his owne soule.] if we keepe [to keepe is not to fulfil, but to haue a care and desire to doe it: for God of his mercie, in his seruants accepts the will for the deede] his commandements.

Ch. Many among vs professe that they know Christ, but their liues be not according.

verſ.4. Faith without obedience, a note of an hypocrite.

Ioh. He that saith, I know him, & keepes not his commandements, is a lier, and the truth is not in him.

Ch. How may it be proued, that the endeauour to keepe gods commandements is a marke of faith and fellowship with Christ?

Ioh. [He in whom the loue of God is perfect, may hereby know that hee is in Christ.] verſ.5. But he that keepeth his word, in him is the loue of God: [1. not that loue wherwith God loueth him, but that whereby he loueth God] perfect indeed: [1. sincere and sound: perfection beeing opposed not to imperfection, but to hypocrisie:] hereby [therefore] wee know that we are in him.

verſ.6. He that saith he remaineth in him, ought to walke euen so, as he hath walked: [and therefore he must needes endeauour himselfe in the commandements.] verſ.7. Ioh. Brethren, I write no new commandement vnto you: but an old commandement which yee haue heard from the beginning: this olde commandement is the word which yee haue heard from the beginning.

verſ.8. Againe, a new commandement I write vnto you, that which is true [to wit, that the commandement is new which he wil not write] in him [who renueth the commandement of old giuen to Moses] and also in you, for the darknes is past [i. the hardening of the minds of men vnder the old testament, whereby they did but in a small measure vnderstand the word [and that true light] a greater measure of illumination, as also the writing of Gods lawes, not in tables of stone, but in the fleshie hearts; so as they be transformed into the obedience thereof] now shineth.

Ch. Well, set downe this commaundement which is so auncient, and is now renued.

Ioh. He that saith [as many among you do] that he is in that light [that is, that he is both plentifully enlightened and borne anew] and hates his brother, is in darkenes [vnder the estate of damnation, not yet truely regenerate] vntill this time. verſ.9. Profession ioined with hatred and malice, a note of an hypocrite.

He that loueth his brother abideth in that light; [is truely enlightened and regenerate:] and there is no offence, [i. he will giue no occasion of euill] in him. verſ.10. Loue of our brother, a signe of regeneration.

But [on the contrarie] he that hateth his brother is in darkenesse, and walketh in darkenesse [leadeth his life in ignorance and vngodlinesse] and knoweth not whither he goeth because that darknesse hath blinded his eyes.

Ch. What meaneth you to deliuer vnto vs all these notes and signes of our newe birth, and communion with Christ?

Ioh. Little children I write vnto you be- verſ.12. cause your sinnes are forgiuen you; for his verſ.12. names sake [i. by Christ and his merits; that ye may be certified to your comfort of this.]

[And that no kind of men among you might doubt of this,] I write vnto you Fathers be- verſ.13. cause ye [delighting to tell and heare of auncient matters] haue knowne him [that is Christ] that is from the beginning. I write vnto you young men, because ye] delighting to shewe your valour and strength] haue ouercome the euill one, [that is, Sathan] I write vnto you little children, [who delight alwayes to be vnder the fathers wing,] because yee haue knowne the father.

[And againe, because we are dull to marke verſ.14. and remember that which is good for vs:] I haue written vnto you fathers, because ye haue knowne him that is from the beginning: I haue written vnto you young men, because ye are strong, & the word of God abideth in you: and ye haue ouercome that wicked one.

Ch. If we be in the estate of grace vnder Gods fauour in Christ; how may we abide in it?

Ioh. Loue not this world [the corrupt e- verſ.15. state of mankind out of Christ,] neither the things that are in the world [for first of all; to giue reasons,] if any man loue this world, the loue of the father [wherewith he loued the Father] is not in him.

[Secondly] for all that is in this world, as verſ.16. the lust of the flesh [the corruption of nature, which chiefly breaketh out in euill concupiscence] the lusts of the eyes [the fruit of the former, stirred vp by outward prouocations, especially in the eye, as it is manifest in adulterie or couetousnesse] and the pride of life [i. Arrogancie rogancie and ambition among men in common conuersation of life,] is not of the father, but of the world.

verſ. 17. And [thirdly] this world paſſeth away and the luſt thereof: but he that fulfilleth the will of God, abideth for euer.

Ch. What other things are we to doe, that we may continue?

Ioh. Little children, it is the laſt time; verſ. 18. and as ye haue heard that Antichriſt ſhall come [a ſpeciall Antichriſt, the chiefe of all other; who is now manifeſt to be the Pope of Rome] euen now are there many Antichriſts [heretikes, denying either the natures of Chriſt, or his offices: or the vnion and the diſtinction of his natures] whereby we know that it is the laſt time.

Ch. Thoſe whom you call Antichriſts, were of our companie, and profeſſed as we doe.

Ioh. They went out from vs, but they verſ. 19. were not of vs: for if they had beene of vs they ſhould haue continued with vs. But this commeth to paſſe, that it might appeare that they are not all of vs.

Ch. Howe can we be aſſured of our continuance in grace: for we may fall as well as they doe?

verſ. 20. Gods ſpirit dwelling in the heart, a ſigne of perſeuerance. Ioh. But ye haue annointment, [the grace of Gods holy ſpirit, reſembled by the annointings in the old Teſtament] frō that holy one [Chriſt, Luke 1.15.] and know all things.

Ch. If we know al things, then you neede not write vnto vs of theſe matters, verſ. 21. verſ. 22. Papiſts denie Ieſus to be Chriſt: for though in word they magnifie him, yet in their doctrine by neceſſarie conſequent they deny him to be a king, a prieſt, a propher. Ioh. I haue not writtē vnto you, becauſe ye know not the truth: but becauſe you know it, and that no lie is of the truth [i. ye can diſtinguiſh betweene the ſound doctrine of the Goſpel, and errours.]

Ch. What is this lie which you ſpeake of?

verſ. 23. Ioh. Who is a lyer [a deceiuer, a ſeducer,] but he that denieth that Ieſus is Chriſt? [the Meſſias or ſauiour of mankind] The ſame is that Antichriſt, that denieth the Father and the Sonne.

Ch. Theſe whome you meane (ſay they) defend the doctrine of God as well as we; and they vſe to call him Father.

Ioh. Who ſo denieth the Sonne, hath not the Father.

Ch. What doe you inferre vpon this, if it bee the Laſt time as you haue ſaid?

verſ. 24. Ioh. Let therefore abide in you, that ſame [doctrine concerning Chriſt] which ye haue heard from the beginning: [which the Apoſtles preached, and before them the Prophets ſince the beginning of the world.] If that which yee haue heard from the beginning remaine [ye beleeuing and obeying it] in you, ye alſo ſhall continue in the ſame, and in the father.

verſ. 25. Perſeuerance in the knowledge and obedience of the goſpel, a ſigne of commu-nion with Chriſt. And this is the promiſe which he hath promiſed vs, euen life eternall.

Ch. We cannot perſwade our ſelues of perſeuerance, ſeeing men ſo commonly fall away from Chriſt among vs.

verſ. 26. verſ. 27. Ioh. Theſe things haue I written vnto you, concerning them that deceiue you; [not meaning them of you, as you ſeeme to take it.] But that annointing [the ſpirit which yee haue receiued of Chriſt, and which hath leddie you into all trueth] which ye haue receiued of him, dwelleth in you [abideth in you, and will ſo continue:] and ye need not that any man teach you, [any other doctrine beſide this which ye haue learned alreadie:] but as the ſame Annointing teacheth you all things, and is true and not lying, and as it taught you, ye ſhall abide in him.

verſ. 28. And now, little children abide in him, that when he ſhall appeare, we [being iuſtified in Chriſt,] may haue boldneſſe, and not be aſhamed, [neither Sathan nor our conſciences accuſing vs for ſinne,] before him at his comming.

Ch. We are ſtill in doubt to returne backe to that which you ſaid before, how an endeauour to keepe the commandements, ſhould be a ſigne of fellowſhip with Chriſt.

verſ. 29. Ioh. If we know that he [God] is righteous, know ye that he which worketh righteouſneſſe is borne of him [as a child is knowne to haue ſuch a man for his father, becauſe he reſembleth him.]

CHAP. II.

Ch. Are not we then borne of God?

verſ. 1. Ioh. Behold what loue the Father hath giuen to vs, that we ſhould be called the ſonnes of God.

Ch. The world doeth not report vs as the ſonnes and daughters of God, but for the refuſe and offſcouring of the world.

Ioh. For this cauſe the world knoweth not you, becauſe it knoweth not him.

Ch. Can Gods children be ſubiect to ſuch infirmities and miſeries as we are?

verſ. 2. Ioh. Dearely beloued now are we the ſonnes of God, but yet it is not made manifeſt what we ſhall be: and we know that when he ſhall be manifeſt, we ſhall be like him, [hauing no equalitie, but likeneſſe of holineſſe and glory,] for we ſhall ſee him as he is; [for now we ſee him as it were through ſpectacles in the word and Sacraments.]

Ch.

Ch. Alas poore wretches, we are not not like Gods children: for wee are euen sold vnder sinne, and dayly carrie a masse of corruption about vs.

verſ.3. A desire, & an endeauour to vse good meanes to cleanse our selues of our corruptions & priuy sins, is a marke of adoptiō.

Ioh. Euery one that hath this hope [to see him as he is] purifieth [though he be subiect to sinne, yet he desireth and vseth the meanes to cleanse himselfe from sinne] euen as he is pure. [setting before him Christ as a patterne to follow]

Ch. How proone you that an endeauour to purifie our selues, is a note of adoption?

verſ.4. Ioh. [By the contrary] whosoeuer committeth sinne [practiseth sinne with full consent of will, not endeauouring himselfe in holines of life,] transgresseth also the law: [and for that cause, beeing vnder the curse of the law, cannot be Gods child] [for sinne is the transgression of the Law, [vnderstand, by Law, not morall law, but any commandement of God, whether it be in the law or Gospel.

verſ.5. And [againe] ye know that he was made manifest [tooke our nature on him] that hee might take away our sinnes [the guilt and punishment at once, and the corruption by litle and litle,] and in him is no sinne.

verſ.6. [Thirdly] whosoeuer abideth in him sinneth not: [he doth not giue himselfe to sin, so as it should raigne in him] whosoeuer sinneth hath not seene him, nor knowne him: [to wit, effectually, so as he can applie Christ and all his benefits to himselfe.]

Ch. But some teach, that faith is sufficient, and they embolden vs to liue as we will.

verſ.7. Ioh. Little children, let no man deceiue you; he that worketh righteousnes, is righteous, as he is righteous.

verſ.8. He that committeth sinne, [though he say he doth beleeue, and therefore thinks himselfe iustified before God,] is of the deuill, [i. resembleth the deuill, as the child doth the father; and is gouerned by his spirit] for the deuill sinneth from the beginning [of the world] [which appeareth that] for this purpose was made manifest the sonne of God; that he might dissolue the workes [for the beginning and continuance of all rebellion and disobedience to God,] of the deuill.

ver.9. Looseneſſe of life or the practise of sinne, a note of the child of the deuill for the present time.

[And further to display these seducers] whosoeuer is borne of God sinneth not [i. doth not keepe a course to sinne, howsoeuer he fall by infirmitie] for his seede [i. Gods word cast into the heart by the operation of the Spirit, making a man to spring vp into a new creature,] remaineth in him: neither can he sin because he is borne of God.

Ch. Briefely to come to the point: how may it be knowne, who is Gods child, and who (is to be reputed) the child of the deuill?

verſ.10. Ioh. In this are the children of God known and the children of the deuil: whosoeuer worketh not righteousnesse, is not of God; neither [to giue you a plain example] he that loueth not his brother.

verſ.11. For, this is the message which ye haue heard from the beginning, that we should loue one another.

verſ.12. Not as Caine: he was of that euill one [Sathan,] he slew his brother: and wherefore slew he him? because his owne works were euill, and his brothers good.

Ch. Yet if we loue those which be our brethrē, according to the flesh neuer so much, they cease not to hate and persecute vs.

verſ.13. Ioh. Maruaile not my brethren, though this world hate you.

verſ.14. Ch. If not to loue, be a note of the child of the deuill, what is the note of Gods childe?

To loue a Christian because he is a Christian, or godly man, is a note of Gods child.

Ioh. We know that we are translated frō death to life, because we loue the brethren, [i such as be Christiās, because they are Christians.] [as on the contrary] he that loueth not his brother, abideth in death: [is vnder the state of damnation.] verſ.15. Whosoeuer hateth his brother, is a manslaier, and ye know that no manslaier hath eternall life abiding in him.

Ch. You haue shewed vs fully, that loue is a worke of adoption: Now shew vs howe we may knowe whether wee loue our brethren or not?

verſ.16. Ioh. Hereby we haue perceiued loue, that he laid downe his life for vs: therefore we ought [carried with the like affection of loue] to lay downe our liues for the brethren.

Ch. Many in speech doe pretend loue, but we finde not this willing affection & readinesse to shew loue.

verſ.17. Compassion stirring in the heart a note of loue.

Ioh. Whosoeuer hath this worlds good, [wherewith this life is sustained] & seeth his brother haue neede, and shutteth vp his bowels [i. hath no compassion, because it sheweth it selfe by the rolling of the intralls] from him, howe dwelleth the loue of God in him?

verſ.18. Ch. What other note is there of true loue?

workes of mercie, signes of loue,

Ioh. My little children, let vs not loue in word, nor in tongue onely, but in deed & in trueth [sincerely.] verſ.19. Sincere loue, a note of sincere profession.

1. For thereby we know that we are of the trueth, [sound professors of the Gospell of Christ,] and shal before him appease our hearts [in regard of any accusation that our conscience shall lay vnto vs before Gods iudgment seate.] verſ. 20. If our heart condemne vs, [an euill conſcience accuſe vs] God is greater then our heart [namely in iudging of vs] and knoweth all things.

Ch. How may wee know that our conſciences will not condemne vs?

verſ. 21. Boldnes in prayer a ſigne of a pacified conſcience

Ioh. Beloued, if our hearts condemne vs not, then haue wee boldnes towarder God, [to come vnto him by prayer.]

Ch. Whats other ſigne is there of true loue?

verſ. 22. Ioh. Whatſoeuer we aske, we receiue of him; becauſe wee keepe his commaundements, and do thoſe things which are pleaſant in his ſight.

Ch. What are theſe commaundements?

verſ. 23. Ioh. This then is his commaundement, that we beleeue in the name of his Sonne Ieſus Chriſt, and loue one another as hee gaue commaundement.

Ch. Haue they which keepe theſe commaundements their prayers graunted? proue this.

verſ. 24. Ioh. [Yeſ] For he that keepeth his commaundements dwelleth in him, and he in him.

Ch. How may we know that God dwelleth in vs, and we in him?

verſ. 25. The operation of Gods ſpirit in ſanctifying vs, a ſigne of communion with God. Ioh. Hereby we know that he abideth in vs, by that ſpirit [of ſanctification, whereby we are renued] which he hath giuen vs.

CHAP. IV.

Ch. To returne againe to that which was before mentioned: ſhall we beleeue all that ſay they haue the ſpirit?

verſe. 1. Ioh. Dearely beloued, beleeue not euery ſpirit [1. doctrines, which men bragging of the ſpirit doe teach;] but trie the ſpirits whether they be of God: for many falſe prophets are gone out into the world.

Ch. How may we diſcerne of ſpirits?

verſ. 2. Ioh. Hereby ſhall yee know the ſpirit of God; euery ſpirit [doctrine] which confeſſeth that Ieſus Chriſt [the Meſſias] is come in the fleſh] is made true man, this beeing the ſubſtance of the Goſpel,] is of God.

verſ. 3. And euery ſpirit that confeſſeth not that Ieſus Chriſt is come in the fleſh, is not of God: but this is the ſpirit of Antichriſt, of whome ye haue heard, that he ſhall come, and now already he is in the world.

Ch. We feare: becauſe the falſe ſpirits are of great power, to perſwade and ſeduce many.

verſ. 4. Ioh. Little children, yee are of God, and haue ouercome them; for greater is he that is in you [Gods ſpirit.] then he that is in the world [the ſpirit of Sathan.]

Ch. But the doctrine of theſe men is of great account, and hath many followers in the world, euen the beſt ſort: how then can we verſ. 5. Ioh. They are of this world, therefore ſpeake they of this world, and this world [i. ignorant and vngodly men] heareth them.

verſ. 6. Worldlie men heare which knoweth God, heareth vs: he which is not of God heareth vs not. Hereby know we the ſpirit of truth, and the ſpirit of errour [namely by the liking and applauſe of the world.]

Ch. How may we aſſure our ſelues againſt theſe ſeducers?

verſ. 7. Ioh. Beloued, let vs loue one another, for loue commeth of God: and euery one that loueth is borne of God, and knoweth God [by a ſpeciall knowledge, whereby they are aſſured that God the father of Chriſt is their father Chriſt their Redeemer the holy Ghoſt their ſanctifier.] verſ. 8. He that loueth not, knoweth not God, for God is loue, [i. wholly bent to ſhew his loue and compaſſion to his people.] verſ. 9. [For the proofe of this;] herein was that loue of God made manifeſt among vs, becauſe God ſent that his onely begotten Son into the world, that we might liue through him.

verſ. 10. Herein is that loue, not that wee loued God, but that he loued vs: and ſent his Son to be a reconciliation for our ſinnes.

Ch. What of all this?

verſ. 11. Ioh. Beloued, if God ſo loued vs, we ought alſo one to loue another.

Ch. How can God manifeſt his loue to vs, he being a ſpirit inuiſible?

verſ. 12. Ioh. No man hath ſeene God at any time [neuertheles] if we loue one another, [that is a ſigne that] God dwelleth in vs, and his loue is perfect in vs: [i. that loue wherewith he loueth vs is throughly made manifeſt towards vs by our loue; as the light of the moone ſhining on vs, argueth the light of the ſunne ſhining vpon the moone, of whome (as from the fountaine) the moone takes her light.]

Ch. How doe we know that God dwelleth in vs?

verſ. 13. Ioh. Hereby doe we know, that we dwell in him, and he in vs: becauſe he hath giuen vs of his ſpirit.

Ch. What other ſigne haue you of Gods dwelling in vs:

verſ. 14. verſ. 15. A ſincere confeſſion of the Goſpel, a note of communion with Chriſt.

Ioh. We haue ſeene and doe teſtifie, that the Father ſent that Sonne to be the Sauiour of the world:

Whoſoeuer confeſſeth [in faith and loue] that Ieſus is the Son of God; in him dwelleth God, and he in God.

Ch. The deuill wil confesse Christ.

Ioh. And we [which is more] haue known and beleeued the loue which God hath in vs.

Ch. Declare how our loue should be a signe of Gods dwelling in vs?

verſ. 16. Ioh. God is loue, and [therefore] hee that dwelleth in loue, dwelleth in God and God in him.

Ch. God is loue we grant, but how may wee know, that God is loue to vs?

verſ 17. To be like God in holines of life, is a signe of his loue to vs particularly.

Ioh. Hereby is that loue perfect. [i. fully made manifeſt in vs] that we might haue boldnes [to ſtand before him without feare,] in the day of iudgement: for euen as he is, euen ſo are we in the world [not in equalitie, but in conformity of holines.] verſ. 18. [As may appeare by the contrary] there is no feare in loue [i. when a man is aſſured of Gods loue to him, he doth not diſtruſt nor ſeruilely feare him in reſpect of his ſinnes] but perfect loue caſteth out feare: for feare hath painfulnes [checking and tormenting conſcience;] and he that feareth is not perfect in loue.

Ch. What other ſigne is there that God is loue to vs?

verſ. 19. Our loue of God, a ſigne that he loueth vs particularly.

Ioh. We loue him becauſe he loued vs firſt [as when a man warmes him, the heat of his bodie is becauſe the fire is firſt hote.]

Ch. If this be ſo, then they which loue not their brethren, are loued of God in Chriſt: ſeeing all generally ſay they loue God.

verſ. 20. Ioh. If any man ſay, I loue God, and hate his brother, he is a lyer: for howe can he that loueth not his brother whome hee hath ſeene, loue God whome he hath not ſeene.

verſ. 21. And this commandement haue we of him that he that loueth God, ſhould loue his brother alſo.

verſ. 1. WHoſoeuer beleeueth that Ieſus is that Chriſt, [true Meſſias] is borne of God: and euery one that loueth him which did beget, [i. God the father,] loueth him alſo which is begotten of him [the child of God a true Chriſtian.]

Ch. This beeing manifeſt that they are hypocrites which ſay they loue God, yet ſhew no loue to their brethren; teach vs how we may knowe that we loue our brethren.

verſ. 2. An endeauour to obey the cõmandements, a ſigne of loue of our brethren.

Ioh. In this we knowe that we loue the children of God, when wee loue God and keepe his commandements, [that is, endeauour to keepe; the beginning of the action beeing put for the whole.]

For this is the loue of God [the dutie of loue to God] that we keepe his commandements.

Ch. But no man can keepe the law.

verſ. 3. Ioh. His commandements are not burdenous [to them that are in Chriſt, and are freed from the curſe of the law, which makes the law grieuous, & are alſo guided by his holy ſpirit.]

verſ. 4. [And this is apparant] for all that is borne of God ouercommeth the world, [Sathan with all corruptions and workes of darkneſſe.]

Ch. By what meanes?

Ioh. And this is the victorie which hath ouercome the world, euen our faith [which is the inſtrument and hand whereby wee lay hold on him, that he in vs, and we by him might ouercome the world.] verſ. 5. Who is that ouercommeth this world, but hee which beleeueth that Ieſus is that ſonne of God?

Ch. How may we be reſolued that Ieſus of Nazareth the ſonne of Marie, [was the ſonne of God and the Meſſias] hee came but lately into the world.

verſ. 6. Ioh. This is that Ieſus Chriſt, which came by water, [ſanctification ſignified by the legal waſhings,] and blood [imputation of Chriſts righteouſneſſe, or the ſprinkling of his blood.] not by water only, but by water & blood [becauſe Chriſt worketh both Iuſtification & ſanctification together: and it is that ſpirit [a mans owne conſcience inwardly purified] that beareth witneſſe: for that ſpirit is truth: [that is, that the teſtimonie of the ſpirit of adoptiõ, certifying vs that we are the ſonnes of God, is true.

Proofes inuincible that Ieſus of Nazaret the ſon of Marie, was the ſonne of God againſt the Iewes.

verſ. 7. For [that I may ſpeake yet more plainely] there are three which beare record in heauen, the Father, the word, [the Sonne] and the holy Ghoſt: and theſe three are one, [namely in teſtimonie.] verſe. 8. And there are three which beare record in earth, the ſpirit, and the water, & blood; and theſe three agree in one.

Ch. How ſhew you that theſe witneſſes bee authenticall, and to be beleeued?

verſe. 9. Ioh. If we receiue the witnes of men, the witnes of God is greater: for this is the witnes of God, [i. that was ſaid to come frõ heauen;] which he teſtifieth of his ſonne.

verſ. 10. [Againe] he that beleeueth in that Son of God, hath the witnes in himſelfe, [the peace of conſcience which he may feele in himſelfe: [And further,] he that beleeueth not God, maketh him a lyar: becauſe he beleeued not the record, that God witneſſed of his ſonne.

Ch. What

Ch, What is the effect of that which these witnesses testifie?

vers. 11. Ioh. And this is that record, to wit, that God hath giuen vnto vs eternall life, and this life in his sonne.

vers. 12. He which hath the sonne, hath life: and he which hath not the Sonne of God, hath not life.

vers. 13. [And to conclude] these things haue I written vnto you that beleeue in the name of the Sonne of God, that yee may knowe that ye haue life eternall, and that ye may beleeue [increase of faith] in the name of that sonne of God.

Ch. How can we haue life eternall now that we are so miserable, and so full of wants?

vers. 14. Ioh. And this is that assurance that wee haue in him, that if we aske any thing according to his will he heareth vs, Ch. How may we knowe that God granteth our prayers, made according to his will?

vers. 15. A signe of our prayers granted vs, if God doe but heare them. Ioh. If we know that he heareth [that is (as it were) to giue an eare to our praiers] whatsoeuer we aske, we know that we haue the petitions which we haue desired of him [though the things which we asked, be not giuen vs in measure, and manner, and time, in which we asked them.]

Ch. Let vs heare an example of those things which God will graunt, when we pray?

vers. 16. Ioh. If a man see his brother sinne a sinne that is not vnto death; [that is, which may be pardoned,] let him aske [pardon in his behalfe,] and he shall giue him life for them that sinne not vnto death; there is a sinne vnto death [after which necessarily damnation followeth, as the sinne against the holy Ghost:] I say not that thou shouldest pray for it.

Ch. But is not euery sinne a sinne to death?

vers. 17. Ioh. All vnrighteousnes is sinne [& therefore deserueth death:] but there is a sinne not vnto death; [namely, that which is pardoned in Christ.]

Ch. We feare least we haue committed this sinne which is to death.

vers. 18. Ioh. We know that whosoeuer is borne of God, sinneth not: but he that is begotten of God, keepeth himselfe, and that wicked one [Sathan] toucheth him not [i. doth him no violence, or he cannot giue him a deadly wound.]

We know that we are of God, and this whole world lyeth in euill: [that is, in seruitude vnder Sathan and sinne.] vers. 19.

Ch. Howe shew you that you are of God?

Ioh. We knowe that the sonne of God is come and hath giuen vs a minde to knowe him that is true, and we are in him that is true: that is, in his Sonne Iesus Christ: this same is that very God, and that eternall life. vers. 20.

Ch, How may we keepe our selues in God, & neuer commit the sinne to death?

Ioh. Little children, keepe your selues from Images, [whether they be of false gods, or of the true God.] vers. 21.

PSALME XV.

Iehouah, Dauid.

O Iehoua! who shall dwell [as Pilgrimes dwell in tents] in thy tabernacle, [the Church militant?] who shall rest in thy holy mountaine, [the kingdome of heauen?] verse. 1.

Iehe. He that walketh perfectly, [that is, he which leadeth the course of his life vprightly.]

Dau. Who is the vpright man? vers. 2. Sincerity of life in righteousnes & holines, a note of Gods child.

Iehe. He that worketh righteousnes [according to the commandements of the second table,] and speaketh the trueth in his heart [as he thinketh, his heart and tongue agreeing.]

Dau. By what notes may this vpright man be knowne, and who is he?

Iehe. I. He that slandereth not with his tongue: II. nor doth hurt to his neighbour: III. nor receiueth a false report against his neighbour. vers. 3. Seuē notes of an vpright man.

IV. In whose eies a vile person, [an vngodly and vnrighteous man] is contemned, but he honoureth them that feare God: V. He that hauing sworne to his owne hinderance, changeth not. vers. 4.

VI. He that giueth not his money to vsury: VII. neither taketh reward of the innocent. vers. 5.

Dau. Are these notes infallible?

Iehe. He that doth these things, shall neuer be mooued, [shall abide in Gods fauour for euer.] vers. 6.

A briefe discourse, taken out of the writings of Hier. Zanchius. Wherein the afore-said case of Conscience is disputed and resolued.

Assertion I.

Onely the elect, and all of them, not onely truely may be, but also are in that time which God hath appointed them in this life, indeed assured of their election to eternall life in Christ: and this is done not one way, but many waies.

WE say that the Elect alone may be, and indeede are made sure of their election: that so we may exclude the reprobate hypocrites: for considering they are not elected, they can neuer be truely perswaded that they are elected. I say truely: because it may come to passe that many in their owne thinking shall bee predestinate: yet in truth they are not perswaded so: for they are deceiued. We haue an example in temporary Christians, who think of themselues
1. Cor. 2. 10 that they beleeue in Christ, but truely do not
Mat. 12. 27 beleeue: for their faith is in hypocrisie, & for a time onely. Wherefore a true and certaine perswasion of election can neuer befall any of the reprobates: because the true perswasion of heauenly matters, commeth of the holy Ghost; which neuer perswadeth any false matter. Wherefore howe can reprobates be perswaded that they are elected? This considered, it is not amisse, that we attribute this perswasion (of which we nowe speake) to the elect alone. We adde further, that all the Elect, not onely may be, but are indeed made sure of their Election: which must bee demonstratiuely confirmed against Schoolemen, and other our aduersaries. We say, this is done in the time appointed; because the elect, before they bee called to Christ, are neuer sure of their election: nay they neuer thinke of it; as appeareth in Paul before he was called, and in others. Againe in like manner after they haue beene called; yet not presently are made sure of their election: but some sooner, some later. Lastly we adde, that it is done many waies, what they are, (if not perfectly, yet in part) I will afterward shewe. Nowe let vs come to the matter.

The Schoolemen demaund whether a man may be made sure of his Election. And they determine that a man cannot, except it be by diuine reuelation: because Predestination is in God, and not in vs. And no man knoweth the things of God, but the spirit of God: as no man knoweth the things of man, but the spirit of man which is in him. Againe, who knoweth the minde of the Lord? therefore (say they) some speciall reuelation is needefull. If any desire to bee certified, either of his owne or of any other mans predestination, their sayings are not simply to be disliked but in that meaning, in which they vnderstand them, they are no way to bee approued. For they take a speciall reuelation to be this, if God shall signifie and say expressely to any, either by some angell outwardly, or by his spirit inwardly, that he is predestinate to life: after which sort they hold, that Paul & a fewe other saints had their predestinatiō reuealed to thē. So they conclude, that because euery man hath not his election reuealed to him after this manner, that al men cannot be assured of their election. But they are deceiued: for God, not only by this one māner which they speake of, doth reueale his will and his counsels, but by many: for God reuealeth things, either by the inward inspiration of his spirit, or outwardly by his word: or both inwardly and outwardly by inward and outward effects. By his spirit he did inspire his Prophets, and open many things to come. And Christ said to his Apostles, as concerning the holy Ghost: He shall lead you into all trueth. By his word hee spake vnto the Prophets, and in like manner, by his word he teacheth vs his will. Also by diuers effects, he declareth either his mercie or his iustice: as it is knowne. The same must be thought of the reuealing of his election: to wit, that God reuealeth the same to his elect, by the holie Ghost, by the word, & by the most certaine effects of predestination.

1. Cor. 2. 16
Rō. 12. 34.
The elect by the testimonie of the holy Ghost are made sure of their election.

Ioh. 16. 13

The first testimonie, by which God assureth vs of our election, is the inward testimonie of the spirit, of which the Apostle saith: The spirit (of God) testifieth vnto our spirits, that we are the children of God. Now what is it to be the sonne of God, but first of all to bee predestinated to bee the child of God by adoption: and then to be made actually the sonne of God by faith: and lastly by the same spirit also to be regenerate as Gods children are, and to put on the

the nature of the ſonne of God, or rather the ſonne of God himſelfe, as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh. Therefore the holy Ghoſt, whilſt he inwardly beareth record vnto our ſpirits, that is, to our minds being inlightened by his light, that we are the ſons of God, moſt plainely reuealeth that we were predeſtinate from all eternitie to adoption: for men are not made the ſonnes of God by faith, nor regenerate to be the ſonnes of God, nor put on Chriſt except they be firſt of all predeſtinated to adoptiō. And there can be nothing more certaine then this teſtimonie: for who better knoweth the things of God, his counſels and decrees, then the ſpirit of God, which ſearcheth all things yea the deepe things of God? therefore he can moſt certenly reueale vnto euery one of vs the certaintie of our election. And he cannot deceiue vs in reuealing it: for he is the ſpirit of trueth which can neither deceiue nor be deceiued. If an angel from heauen ſhould be ſent to thee, as he was ſent to Marie, and as he ſpake vnto the fathers, and ſhould tell thee, in the name of God, that thou wert elected to life euerlaſting: wouldeſt not thou ſay that thou couldeſt not then doubt any longer of thy election? But ſo much the more certaine is the teſtimonie of the ſpirit, which beareth record to our ſpirit, that we are the ſonnes of God: by how much the holy Ghoſt doth more know the things of God then any angel: and can leſſe deceiue then an angel. And ſo much the more ſure is this teſtimony, conſidering it is not kept in the bodily eares, where it might ſoone vaniſh away, but in our minde and ſpirit: becauſe the ſpirit beareth record to our ſpirit. And further, that the holy Ghoſt neuer departeth from our ſpirit, but dwelleth in vs, abideth in vs, ſpeaketh in vs, ſheweth forth his power in vs, prayeth in vs. Therefore the Apoſtle ſaith, that we haue receiued the ſpirit of adoption, by which we crie Abba, father: as though he ſhould ſay, this teſtimonie of the ſpirit is altogither ſo ſure, by which he beareth vs record that we are ſonnes of God; that preſently without doubting we can call vpon God, and crie, Abba, Father. And all the elect haue this teſtimonie, being made the ſons of God by faith, & being renued by the holy Ghoſt, and ingraffed into Chriſt. For ſo the Apoſtle ſpeaketh, If any man haue not the ſpirit of Chriſt, he is not his: therefore, whoſoeuer is Chriſts, & is ingraffed into Chriſt, it is neceſſarie he ſhould haue the ſpirit of God. And whoſoeuer haue receiued and doe inioy the ſpirit of Chriſt into their mindes the ſame ſpirit beareth record, that they are the ſonnes of God, and maketh them to crie Abba, Father. And it is certaine, that no man is renued by the holy Ghoſt, which is not perſwaded that God is his moſt mercifull and moſt louing father: and therefore can call vpon him as a father. Therefore although all mē in that they are aſſured by the certainty of faith, that God is their father, and they are his ſonnes, doe not thereby argue and conclude that they are elected to eternall life; yet all men indeede haue thereby a ſure teſtimonie of their election to glory: becauſe if they be the ſonnes of God, they are alſo heires of eternall life. This teſtimony I will briefely compriſe within this demonſtration: Whoſoeuer call vpon God, and in their hearts crie Abba, Father, they are the ſonnes of God, and it is certaine that they thus crie by the ſpirit of God. And they which are the ſonnes of God, are alſo heires of eternall life, and they haue beene predeſtinate to adoption: therefore it muſt needs be, that all they which are perſwaded, that they are the ſonnes of God by the holy Ghoſt, are predeſtinate to eternall life, and muſt be perſwaded, of it. This is the firſt teſtimonie and the firſt way, by which God reuealeth to euery Elect man his predeſtination: namely, by the holy Ghoſt within our hearts, bearing record vnto vs, that we are the ſonnes of God in Chriſt, and by Chriſt. And let this be the firſt argument: alſo ſeruing to confirme our aſſertion.

1. Cor. 2. 10.

Iob. 16. 13

Rom. 8. 15 Gal. 4. 6.

Rom. 8. 9.

The ſecond way, by which God reuealeth to euery man his predeſtination, is by his word. I meane not any particular word, by which he doth declare to any outwardly in priuate and ſpeciall manner, and that in expreſſe words, his election: but the generall word of the Goſpell, by which Chriſt calleth all them which beleeue in him, elect, both by himſelfe and by his Apoſtles, as in the newe Teſtament euery where is moſt manifeſt. For although in particuler propoſitions hee ſay not to thee, or to him particularly. Thou art elect to eternall life: yet by meanes of generall propoſitions, he doth as well conclude in the heart of euery one that beleeueth, that he is elected, as any man ſhall be able to conclude vnto particular men, that euery one of them is a liuing creature indued with reaſon by this generall propoſition position: Euery man is a reasonable creature indued with reason: the assumption beeing suppressed. Therefore after this manner dealeth God; Hee hath chosen all and euery seuerall man whome hee was to indue with faith, to haue the euerlasting inheritance.

Furthermore, hee published it to all the Elect by the Apostles in this generall proposition, that all the faithfull are elect to eternall life: [a] the assumption is concealed in the word of God. But when he giueth vs faith, he maketh euery one of vs to make an assumption by himselfe in his mind: But I am of the faithfull: for I finde in my selfe that I truely beeleeue in Christ. Therefore who is it that maketh this conclusion for thee, that thou art predestinate to eternall life? euen God himselfe: the proposition beeing taken forth of the Gospell, and the assumption proceedeth of the gift of faith. But that indeede by which wee properly attaine to the knowledge of the matter contained in the conclusion, is the middle tearme, as they call it. Wherefore it is manifest, that God by the word of his gospell, where hee saith; that all the faithfull are elect: doeth reueale to euery faithfull man his owne predestination. Onely this one thing is to be required, that the faithfull man hearing the vniuersall propositions, in his minde should make an assumption: But I am faithfull by the gift and grace of God. And is not God saide to haue reuealed to euery man his speciall malediction in this generall proposition, Cursed is euery one that doth not continue in all things that are written in this booke: although hee say to no man specially, thou art accursed? for euery one doeth make this assumption, that hee is accursed: because he knoweth most certainely that he doth not continue in all things that are written in the booke of the lawe. Therefore the Schoolemen are deceiued, when they say, it may be that euery man may be sure of his election: namely, if GOD which is able, will reueale it to him: yet, that hee doth onely reueale it to a very fewe, as the Apostles: for God (as hath beene prooued and declared) euen by his word, in generall propositions doth reueale to euery man his predestination: for what can bee more certaine then this demonstration? Whosoeuer doe truly beleeue in Christ, they are elect to eternall life in Christ: but I truly beleeue in Christ: therefore I am elected. But some make an exception and say, that this were a demonstration, and that most certain and euident, if a man might be able to knowe that hee were indued with true faith in Christ: but here lieth all the difficultie. For many think that they truely beleeue in Christ, whereas neuertheles their faith is hypocriticall and tẽporarie: as appeareth by the Euangelists.

[a] That whereby a man applies the generall promise to himselfe.

Deut. 27. 26.

Answere. Wee graunt that they which beleeue by such a faith, which is in hypocrisie and onely lasteth for a time; that they are deceiued whilst they thinke that they doe truely beleeue and yet doe not indeede: for they are like them which dreame that they are kinges, when as they are very beggers: but wee say, that they which beleeue by a true faith, doe knowe whether they truly beleeue or no: and they are not deceiued when they say and thinke that they truly beleeue. For they are like vnto them, which handling a pretious stone, by reason that they are indued with sense, know and say, that they handle it. And if no man might certenly know, whether he beleeued truly or not: why doth the Apostle say, Trie your selues whether yee bee in the Faith? And if it bee so, no man can euer certenly know, whether he bee iustified: considering that they onely which truly beleeue, can be iustified. And if a man giuing credit to another mans wordes, doth certenly knowe, that he beleeueth him: how much more doth he know it, which beeing indued with true faith by the holy Ghost, beleeueth the Gospel? in a word, Godly writers haue prooued against Schoolemen, that they which are indued with true faith in Christ cannot be ignorant of it. But (say they) no man is certain of his perseuerance in faith: and therefore out of this vniuersall proposition; Hee which beleeueth, namely, with a true and constant faith, is elected to life, no man can conclude that he is elected, by reason that albeit he may know, that he is indued with true faith, yet he cannot tell whether it shall bee perpetuall. This collection is absurd, and the learned haue fully prooued, that true faith is perpetuall. And therefore they which certenly know, that they beleeue in a true faith, are also certaine, that the same their true faith shall neuer perish. In this world: partly for the promise of God, I will put my feare into their hearts, that they may neuer depart from mee: and partly for the praier of Christ, I haue prayed for thee Peter, that thy faith doe not faile. Seeing it is so, it is very certaine, that god by his word, in which generally he faith faith that all the faithfull are elect, doeth reueale to euery man his election: cõsidering that the propoſition take out of the Goſpel is moſt certaine, and euery faithful may certainly aſſume to himſelfe, that hee is indued with true faith in Chriſt.

They which doe truly beleeue, knowe that they beleeue.

By the effects of predeſtination a man may gather his predeſtination.

The third way by which God reuealeth to euery one of vs his predeſtinaton, is by the effects of predeſtination, as well inward in vs, as outward: by which, as by certaine markes imprinted in vs, he doeth ſeale vs to himſelfe in Chriſt: and doth ſo ſeale vs, that if we ſhall giue diligent heede, we may thereby euidently perceiue, that we are ſet apart from the common ſort of men, which is often called by the name of the worlde: that we are foreknowne for his ſonnes, and loued in Chriſt, and predeſtinated to eternal life; yea, and that we appertaine no longer to the world, but to that citty which is aboue, that hath his foundation as the Apoſtle ſaith. And we haue a twofold reaſon of this argument: one, becauſe theſe effects (of which we ſpeake, and which wee will afterwarde handle) God worketh not in any, but in his elect, as alſo afterward wee will ſhewe. Therefore by right a man may, by a true feeling and experience of theſe effects in himſelfe, be aſſured of his particular election and predeſtination, to haue fellowſhip with Chriſt in all his graces. For if predeſtination (as Auguſtine witneſſeth) be a preparation to the bleſſings of God, by which moſt certainly they are made free, whoſoeuer are made free; therefore whoſoeuer feeleth himſelfe freed through theſe graces of God, may be aſſured and certified of his predeſtination. The other reaſon is, that theſe effects are not onely the effects ſimply of predeſtination, but alſo ſuch effects they are, that may alſo bee ſeales of it: namely, in printing in vs a liuely forme and image of GOD, foreknowing vs, louing vs, electing vs. And therefore, albeit we cannot ſee the purpoſe, the foreknowledge, the election and predeſtination of God as concerning our ſelues, in God himſelfe foreknowing, willing and electing vs: yet we may beholde in our ſelues ſome ſure repreſentations of all theſe imprinted, and euen ſtamped in vs by the worde: and ſo by the beholding of theſe formes and impreſſions in our ſelues, we ſhall eaſily be brought to the knowledge of thoſe patternes, (as it were) which lie in the Lord himſelfe. The matter (by reaſon it is very good and comfortable) may be declared by a ſimilitude: GOD is like vnto the ſunne in regard of vs: the ſunne when it ſhineth vpon vs, and after a ſort looketh vs in the face, it doeth after ſuch a ſort imprint an image of his light in our eyes, that we alſo in like manner beeing made partakers of his light, may looke againe vpon the ſunne it ſelfe, and vpon his light: for the light of the Sunne and his beames beeing ſent downe vpon vs, are beaten backe and reflected againe towards the ſunne. So in like manner the foreknowledge of God by which he hath & would acknowledge for his from all eternitie, it alwayes reſteth in God and cannot of it ſelfe be perceiued of vs. But yet whileſt God doeth acknowledge vs for his, hee doeth portrait in vs his elect, a certaine forme and image of his foreknowledge: by which hee maketh vs, renouncing all other gods, to acknowledge him for our onely true God. Thus it commeth to paſſe, through this true knowledge of God, which he vouchſafeth vs, and by which we doe acknowledge God for our God and father: wee may after a ſort beholde in God himſelfe his foreknowledge, by which he hath foreknowne vs for his ſonnes. For firſt of all God doeth acknowledge vs for his, and then the elect beeing made partakers of this his light and knowledge, he cauſeth vs in like manner to acknowledge him. To this purpoſe ſerueth that which our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith: firſt, (ſaith he) I know my ſheepe, after he addeth, and againe, I am knowne of mine. As though he ſhould ſay, whiles I acknowledge them for my ſheep, I make them by meanes of this my light and knowledge, that they alſo can acknowledge mee for their Paſtor. So the Apoſtle ſaith to the Galathians: when yee ſhall know God, or rather are knowne of him: he teacheth therefore, that God knew the Galathians, becauſe hee had firſt acknowledged them for his, in his eternall predeſtination: & by giuing vnto them this his wiſedome, he made them acknowledge the true God for their God. The ſame may be ſaid of the loue of God, by which he loued vs in Chriſt to euerlaſting life before the foundatiõ of the world: god by louing vs doth print in our hearts the image of his loue, by which wee may loue him againe from our hearts: and as it were by the reflection of the ſunne beames ſent downe into your hearts, we may be prouoked to loue againe. For the loue of God to vs beeing eternall, and cauſing eternall life, begetteth in the time appointed a certaine loue in vs, seruing for his eternall glory. And to this purpose is that of Saints 1.Ioh.4.10 1.Ioh.4.7 Rom.5.10. Iohn: not that we first loued God, but because he first loued vs. As though he had said, therfore we loue GOD; because he first, that is, before the foundation of the world louing vs in Christ, by the ingrauing of his loue in our hearts, causeth vs to loue him againe as a father. So loue is said, (to wit, that loue by which we loue God) to be of God: that is, to proceed of the loue of GOD towards vs. And Paul writeth that the loue of God, (namely, that loue by which he loued vs) to be shed in our hearts by the holy Ghost which is giuen vs: and by this shedding of the loue of God in our hearts, it cōmeth to passe that loue is also wrought in our hearts towards God. And therefore by that sound loue by which we feele our selues to loue God, we are made to knowe how great the loue of God is, by which he loued vs from all eternitie in Christ. And what is that loue els but predestination?

In like manner, election by which he singled vs from the rest of the world in Christ, that we might be holy before him, begettes in vs a certaine image euen of God himselfe, that is, another election, by which we renouncing all other Gods, which are worshipped in the world, make our choice of this our true GOD Iehouah, to be our God, that he may be alwaies before our eies, he which sanctifieth vs, and the author of our whole saluation. Wherefore through this constant election which is in vs, we perceiue, that the election which is in God, as concerning vs, is firme and sure: not only as we gather the cause by the effect, but also as we gather the patterne by the picture: like as by the similitude of the forme of a seale fashioned in waxe, we doe easily vnderstand what is the very forme and fashion of the seale. Therefore it is manifest, that it is the manner of God by the effects of his election and predestination imprinted in vs, to reueale to euery one of vs his own election & predestination: And that two waies, both because there are certaine effects of predestination, and by the effects, the causes are knowne: and also because there are certain liuely types of Gods foreknowledge and election, by which we are sealed vp vnto God.

Now by the imprinting of these formes and types in vs, as the seale is in waxe; the very first patterns themselues are knowne what they are.

Furthermore, that there is no man elected to eternall life, which shal not be sealed vp in the time appointed with these markes of Gods election: It is manifest out of these places of scripture, which treat of election and predestination. The Apostle teacheth, that we were elected, that we might be holy and without blame. Also he teacheth, Eph.1.4. Rom.8.29 that all they whom God hath predestinated, are likewise called and iustified, & by consequent indued with faith and knowledge of God, by which they take him for their father: with loue also, wherwith they loue him as a father: Also with a good will and constant purpose, by which they desire constantly his glorie. Againe, he saith in another place, the foundation standeth sure hauing this seale (in respect of GOD) the Lord knoweth who are his. Nowe in respect of vs, he putteth down another seale, saying: let him depart from iniquitie, which calleth vpon the name of the Lord: for with this marke, all the elect are branded. They call vpon the name of the Lorde, and depart from iniquitie: seeking after holinesse & a good conscience. And this is that sealing which is so often mentioned in the scriptures: As when in the Apocalyps it is saide, that an innumerable multitude was sealed to the Lord. For like as the father sealed Iesus Christ as he was man and mediatour, so also the rest of his children hee hath sealed, and doth daily seale with sure notes and seales to distinguish them from other men, and the children of this age. For God is said to haue annointed vs, & sealed vs, and giuen vs the earnest of his spirit in our hearts. And againe to haue sealed vs with the holy spirit of promise, and that to the day of redemption. As it is easie to discerne a right seale from a counterfeit, to the true soules of God (by the sealing of the spirit) are distinguished frō hypocrits, and lawfull children from bastards.

2.Tim.2.19. Apoc.2.3. Ioh.6.27. 2.Cor.1.21. Eph.1.13. & 4.30.

It remaineth, that wee should declare some effects of predestination: by which, as by markes and seales, the Elect may be discerned from Reprobates. The first effect of Predestination, is Christ himselfe, as he is a Mediatour and a Sauiour, dwelling in our hearts by his holy spirit. For as we are elected in him, & by him redeemed; so by the sprinckling of his blood, we are clēsed and sealed: and by his dwelling in vs quickened, (for he is our life, and that eternall) and therefore wee are seuered from Reprobates which alwayes remaine in in death, as in the holy Scriptures we are taught. Wee say that this is the first effect of predestination, because wee can inioy none of the gifts of God, either of election, vocation, or iustification, except in Christ, and by Christ: For hee hath poured out all the effects of predestination into vs. In that therefore euery elect faithfull man feeleth Christ to dwell in him, and to quicken him, he hath a seale in himselfe, by which he may know that he was elected to euerlasting life in the same Christ: A part and beginning of which life, is this spirituall life, by which we nowe liue to God. And as euery man knoweth himselfe to be the sonne of God in Christ, because hee calleth vpon God from his heart as a father, hee may conclude, that he is predestinated to be the sonne of God for Christs cause. And that by this first note the faithfull may know that they are elect to eternall life: the Apostle sheweth, Know yee not (saith he) your selues that Iesus Christ is in you except yee bee Reprobates? And no doubt a Type of this kind of sealing, was that sealing which was done in Egypt, by the blood of the Lambe: namely, when the houses of the Israelites were sprinkled with this blood, that they might be discerned from the houses of the Egyptians: and so bee passed ouer vntouched of the Angel. And by Christ, as by the chiefe effect: yea and the cause too of all the effects which follow: all other effects of predestination are put into vs, and we are sealed with them. The Apostle nameth three principles, our calling, (to wit effectuall) our iustification, and glorification. This third effect, wee shall obtaine in the life to come, the two first in this life. And to these two may verie well be referred all other, which we receiue in this life by Christ: with the effectuall, we ioyne a sound hearing of the word of God, and the vnderstanding of it, accompanied with great and constant delight & ioy: faith also and a true knowledge of the deitie, humanitie, and office of Christ. Vnto iustification, wee referre a perswasion of the remission of our sinns by Christ (for by this wee are iustified:) and regeneration too, or sanctification, and renouation of life, a good conscience, loue not faigned, a pure heart & cleane, patience in aduersitie, & boasting in tribulation, al good workes & fruits of the spirit: adde hereunto the crosse it selfe, which we beare for the trueth of the gospell: wherefore, whosoeuer feeleth that he is effectually called, that he doth willingly heare the word, that he doth beleeue the gospel, that he is sure of the remission of his sinnes, that he burneth with true loue to his neighbor, that he is bent to euery good worke; hee cannot but must needes bee perswaded of his election: for God onely doeth communicate these vnto the elect. Therefore it is plaine, that the elect are confirmed in the assurãce of their election, by the effects of Predestination, & that there is a threefold waie, by which God reuealeth to euery man his Predestination.

2. Cor. 13. 5.

Rom. 8. 30.

III. The weakenes of our faith as touching our eternall election, by what staies it may bee held vp. Ioh. 10. 28. Eph. 1. 5.

But if any shall take an occasion the rather of doubting of his election, then of confirming himselfe in it, of that which hath been spoken as concerning the fruits of the spirit, and the effects of predestination: and that peraduenture because he can feele in himselfe few & very weake fruits of regeneration and election: yet let him not be discouraged, neither let him doubt of his election: but let him vnderset himselfe with these proppes. First of all, if euer he truely felt in himselfe that testimonie of the spirit (which before I mentioned) namely that he is the son of GOD: let him know vndoubtedly, that he is such a one, and therefore elected to eternall life. For the holy Ghost neuer beareth record, or perswadeth a man of that which is false, for hee is the spirit of truth. And they are not the sonnes of god, except they haue beene predestinate (as the Apostle saith) to adoption by Christ: and none that is the Sonne of God and a man elected, can bee made a reprobate, and the childe of the deuill. Therefore albeit hee feele in himselfe both few & feeble effects of regeneration, yet let him not doubt of his election: otherwise hee shall disgrace the testimonie which hee hath receiued of the holy Ghost, yea and that too which as yet he enioyeth: although peraduenture by reason that his minde is troubled by euil affections, that testimonie of the holy spirit can scarce be heard in him. For the testimonie of our adoption by the holy Ghost, beeing once giuen vnto our spirit, lasteth for euer: although it is otherwhiles heard more plainely, and at other times is more slenderly and scarce perceiued. But howe (say you) may I knowe whether the testimonie doeth proceede from the holy Ghost, and therefore whether it bee a true and certaine testimonie? I answer first by the perswasion: secondly, condly, by the manner of the perſwaſion laſtly, by the effects of this teſtimonie and perſwation. For the firſt, the holy Ghoſt doeth not ſimply ſay it, but doth perſwade with vs, that wee are the ſonnes of God; and no fleſh can doe this. Againe he perſwades vs by reaſons drawne not from our workes or from any worthines in vs; but from the alone goodneſſe of God the Father, and grace of Chriſt. In this manner the deuil wil neuer perſwade any. Laſtly, the perſwaſion of the holy Ghoſt is full of power, for they which are perſwaded that they are the ſonnes of God, cannot but needes muſt call him Abba, Father: and in regard of loue to him, doe hate ſinne, and whatſoeuer is diſagreeing to his will: and on the contrarie, they haue a ſound and a hearty deſire to doe his will. If at any time thou haſt felt in thy ſelfe any ſuch teſtimony, perſwade thy ſelfe it was the teſtimony of the holy Ghoſt: and that very true and certain too: and therfore that thou art the child of God, and predeſtinate to eternall life. This is the prop by which wee muſt vnderſet that weake beleefe wee haue of our certaine electio to eternal life. Againe, hold this without wauering whatſoeuer thou art, that art tempted to doubt of thy election: euen as nothing is required at our hands to worke our election, (for God choſe vs of his onely meere goodnes) ſo, that we may truely know whether we bee elect or not: this one thing ſhall be ſufficient, namely if we ſhal attain to the certaine knowledge of this, that wee are in Chriſt, and partakers of him: for, he that is now ingrafted in Chriſt, and is iuſtified, it cannot be, but that hee was elected in Chriſt before the foundation of the world. And that we may be in Chriſt, faith is both required, and is ſufficient: not perfect faith, but true faith, though it bee ſo little as a graine of muſtard ſeede, and feeble like a young borne babe, and that ſore diſeaſed too. Now that faith, which is a liuely and a true faith, laſteth alwayes, as hath been before declared, neither can it at any time altogether faile. And ſo it commeth to paſſe, that they which once haue beene truly ingrafted into Chriſt, remaine alwayes and continue in him, according to that ſaying; All that my Father giueth mee ſhall come to me: and he which commeth vnto mee I will not caſt forth. That is true no doubt, that looke how much the faith is more perfect, ſo much the greater power it hath, to knit vs more and more to Chriſt: and therefore wee muſt alwayes endeauour to encreaſe in faith. Yet for all that, this is moſt certaine; one little ſparkle of true faith is ſufficient to engraft vs into Chriſt. And for that cauſe, wee muſt in no wiſe doubt of our engrafting into Chriſt, and of our election too by reaſon of the weakneſſe of faith, & the ſmal and ſlender fruits it bringeth out.

Howe a man may know whether the testimonie which is giuen of the spirit, be of the spirit or not.

VVhereby a man may know whether his faith be true faith, or not.

But how ſhal I certenly know (ſay you) whether my faith bee a true and liuely faith, or not? Out of the ſame groundes, from whence the teſtimonie of our adoption is perceiued. Firſt of all, if you ſhall truely feele, that you are perſwaded of the truth of the Goſpell, yea and that all your ſinnes are pardoned you for Chriſt, and you receiued to fauour. Againe, if you ſee that this perſwaſion is grounded not vpon any merits of yours, but on the ſole goodnes of God, and grace of Chriſt.

Laſtly, if you feele ſuch a confidence to approach vnto, and call vpon the Father, & ſuch a loue towards him and his Sonne Ieſus Chriſt, that yee doe hate and deteſt whatſoeuer is againſt his glory (as al ſinne is) and on the contrarie, bee carried away with a deſire to doe thoſe things which ſerue for the aduancing of his glorie: and therefore that you loue all thoſe, which deſire and ſeeke the ſame, as the brethren and friendes of Chriſt. For theſe bee the effects which can neuer bee ſeuered from true faith. And this is the diſpoſition of true faith: therefore as long as thou feeleſt theſe effects in thy ſelf, albeit very ſlender & greatly languiſhing, yet aſſure thy ſelfe thou art indued with true faith, although it be weake: & therefore thou art in Chriſt yea and in Chriſt elected too. Wherefore thou muſt not doubt of thy ſaluation and election, by reaſon of thy daily ſlippes proceeding from thy weaknes of faith, no, not for hainous crimes: like as neither Dauid for his adulterie and murder, not Peter for his threefold deniall, did diſpaire of their election: which appeareth, in that beeing plunged in the very gulfes of their temptations, they held faſt their faith as an anker, and called vpon God. This is the ſecond prop. Laſtly in no wiſe wee muſt forget, namely that our election is certen and immutable: and therefore, as it is done without reſpect of any works of ours, ſo in like ſort it can neuer be changed by any of our euill deſerts. For as it firſt proceeded fro the onely free purpoſe of God; ſo it is grounded thereon. True it is, we prouoke

God;

Gods wrath against vs by our sinnes, and neither will God let them escape vnpunished, but he chastiseth vs by diuers both inward and outward scourges, as may appeare in Dauid aboue all other. Yet for all that, it is his good pleasure, that for his goodnesse sake & truth, for the obedience of Christ, that his purpose should remaine sure, and our election. So it commeth to passe, that he giueth vs repentance anew, to raise vs vp, and to receiue vs to fauour. Therefore, although for the present, thou feelest thy selfe to be of weake faith, and to haue fallen to diuers sinnes, yet where as heretofore thou hast had manyfold and euident testimonies of thy election, as the testimony of the holy Ghost, and the testimonie taken from faith, and the effects of faith: at this present assuredly thou canst not doubt of thy election, for thy sinnes committed, but thou shalt much derogate frō the free election and also from the testimonies of thy election heretofore enioyed, yea and those which yet thou enioyest, for if thy sinnes displease thee, and thou desirest to liue without blame, only for that thy sinnes displease thee, why now thou hast a new testimonie of thy election, for such repentance as this is, is only proper vnto the elect: therefore, by these three props we must vphold our faith, as touching euery ones particular election. And thus much as concerning the certentie, with the which euery man must be perswaded that he is elected in Christ to eternall life, before the foundation of the world.

The end of our predestination

Assertion. II.

Whosoeuer are predestinated to the ende, they are also predestinate to the meanes, without which they cannot attaine to the end: & therefore as the elect necessarily at length doe come vnto the end, by reason of the certainty of their election; so also by reason of the same certentie, it is necessarie that they should be traced thorough those meanes which tend to the same end.

We must marke the end to which we are predestinate, and to which we say that one day we shall be brought: for there is a double end of our election: the one concerneth the elect themselues, namly their glorification, or their eternall life & glorie in heauē; of which is spoken, Rom. 8. The other cōcerneth god himself which chooseth, namly, the glory of God: that is, that the glorie of his grace may be knowne, and eternally made manifest, of which is mention made, Eph. 1. Both of them are so coupled together, that whosoeuer are preselected to the first, are also predestinate to the latter, and the latter followeth of the former. For the more we shall be made partakers of the graces of God and the heauenly glories, so much also more and more shall the glorie of God be made manifest in vs. But because the ende which concerneth God, is almost all one in the reprobation of the wicked, and in the predestination of the saints namely, that by the saluation of these which procedeth of his mere goodnesse, the glorie of his grace is made manifest: so also by the self damnation of the other, the glorie of his diuine iustice may be made knowne to all. Neuertheless, notwithstanding that the ende, to which the elect shall attaine, is farre diuers from that of the eternall life, vnto which the reprobates are appointed (for that is eternall death) therefore the ende of which we treat in this assertion is our eternall glorification and euerlasting life in heauen.

The meanes to which wee are predestinate, how many they be, and which.

Let vs now see in the second place, what are those meanes, by which the elect are brought vnto this end: and therefore so which meanes we hold, that all are predestinate whosoeuer are predestinate to the end. Both they are of them selues some of them are so necessarie vnto all, that without them no man simply can attaine vnto eternall life and glories and they are Christ, as he is Mediatour and high Priest, and his obedience and iustice (for without Christ no man can bee saued:) also our effectuall calling to Christ by the holy Ghost: and that which followeth this, is our iustification, yea and our regeneration too. For these foure, predestination, vocation, iustification, and glorification, are so linked togither, that it is not possible to seuer the one from the other. And therefore no man can be glorified, which is not iustified, and no man can bee iustified, which is not effectually called, as also no man can be effectually called which is not predestinate? therfore without these not so much as children & infants can be brought to this ende of eternall glorie. And therefore euen all the elect infants are inwardly, in a certaine peculiar manner, by the holy Ghost, called, and iustified, and glorified. Nowe there are some certaine meanes annexed vnto these, which albeit they haue no place in infants, by reason of their age, yet they belong to all other elect, howsoeuer they are found in some more plenteous and liuely, and in other some more slender and weake. As namely, a liuely faith, the hea-hearing of the word, a detestation of sinne, the loue of righteousnesse, patience in aduersitie, a care to doe good workes (& such like) all which the Apostle comprehendeth vnder the name of good workes; when he Eph.2.10. saith, We are created, that is borne anew in Christ, vnto good workes, which God hath prepared, that we might walke in them, that is, that we might lead our liues in them, and so walking at length might come to eternall life: for without them we cannot come to eternall glorie; but by them God traieth vs thither. Therefore we say, that all which are elect to that ende, are also predestinate to the same meanes. For predestination is not onely of the end, but also of the meanes which concerne the ende and all, as well the ende as the meanes are the effects of predestination. And therefore it is very true, which Augustine saith: Predestination (saith he) is a preparation to the graces of God, by which they indeed are freed, whosoeuer are freed.

The first effects of God, are disposing vs in Christ.

Therefore, the first gift of God (that we may briefly consider the effects of predestination) prepared for all the elect, without which they can in no wise come to the end, is Christ: and therefore the first effect of predestination is to giue our Lord Iesus, with his obedience, merits, death, resurrection, glorie: namely, in that respect he is made Mediator betweene God the Father and vs, and the head of all the elect. And therefore, in as much as he is such a one, he is also the cause of all other graces and benefits, which come vnto vs by the free predestination of God. For the effects of predestination are so ordered among themselues, that the first, which goe before, are the causes efficient, or (if we will so speake) the material causes of the latter, and those that follow. Therefore, seeing Christ is the first effect of predestination, he is also the cause of all other effects, by whome we are made partakers of them. The Apo-

Eph. 1.4.&c stle therefore saith very well to the Ephesians: In the first place (saith he) we are elected in Christ, namely as in the heade, to be his members. Secondly, he writeth that we are predestinate to adoption by Christ, namely to obtaine it: for we are adopted into the sonnes of God in Christ, the first begotten sonne of God, and by making vs partakers of his sonne-ship, we are reallie made the sonnes of God, yea, and we are also indued with his spirit too, that we might be borne anewe. Thirdly (saith he)

Gal. 4.6. we are made acceptable and beloued vnto the Father, and his beloued sonne, namely Christ. Fourthly, that wee haue our redemption in the same Christ, by his blood, and haue obtained remission of sinnes, and all wisdome & vnderstanding, as well in heauen, as in earth. In a word, the Apostle sheweth there (as also els where) that whatsoeuer benefits we doe, or shall hereafter obtaine, proceeding from our eternall election, euen vnto our glorification: all those wee now doe, and shall obtaine hereafter, in Christ, and by Christ. Therefore whosoeuer are elected to eternall life, besides this that they are elected in Christ, they are also predestinate to Christ, that is to haue fellowship with him, that they may by him enioy all other benefits. The second benefit 2. Tim. 1. 9. of God, and effect of our predestination, is our effectuall calling to Christ, and to his Gospel, in Rom. 8.30 which the elect are onely called: because it is by the purpose & grace of God, which is giuen vs in Christ. And an effectuall calling is knowen by the effects, two of which proceede directly from it: a hearty kinde of hearing the word, and the conceiuing of it with a very great constant & continuall delight, and a true and sure beleefe of the word of the Gospell. Thence it is that Christ saith, who is of God (saith he) namely, Ioh. 8.47.
by election and effectuall calling, heareth the words of God, very willingly, and from his heart, & that continually: but ye heare not, because ye are not of God. And this calling is wrought not onely of the preaching of the worde (as it is in all that be of yeares) but also (and that cheifly) with the inward inspiration of the holy Ghost, whiles that the Father draweth them by his spirit, whome he will haue to come to Christ. Which also was said to bee done in infants. For this calling is the beginning of saluation euen in this life: and therefore it is the Apostles manner, in the beginning of his Epistles, to make mention of this calling, naming all the faithfull, The saints called: Therefore it must needes bee, that all Rom. 1.7. 1. Cor. 1.2. 2. Tit. 1.1.
they which are elected in Christ, must also at length effectually be called & drawn to Christ. After an effectuall calling followeth Faith, the effect of predestination, which is said to be peculiar vnto the Elect. And without which (as the Apostle saith) it is not possible to please God. For by it we are in- Heb. 11.6.
grafted into Christ, and are made the members of Christ, and without faith no man can be saued.

And that this is an effect of predestination the Apostle plainely sheweth, when 1. Cor. 7. 25.
he saith, that hee had obtained mercie, namely in Gods eternall predestination) that he might beleeue. Wherefore, whosoeuer are predestinate to obtaine eternall life in Christ and by Christ, they are also elect to haue the very gift of faith. Therefore it must needes bee, that at length they shall beleeue in Christ. The fourth benefit is Iustification, that is, a free pardoning of our sinnes, and the imputation of the righteousnes of Christ, for it followeth Faith: because whosoeuer are indued with true faith in Christ, are also iustified. And that iustification is an effect of predestination; the Apostle sheweth when he putteth it after calling, before which he setteth predestination. And whē he saith, that we are elect in Christ, that we might be holy and without spot or blame in the presence of God: and that this is not done while wee are in this world, but by the pardoning of all our faults, and by the imputation of his perfect obedience. Wherefore it must needes be, that all the elect shall be iustified, & be taken for most pure & without blame in Gods presence. With iustification is ioyned regeneration, and sanctification by the holy Ghost: namely, whiles we are made new creatures by him, and the sonnes of God too: not onely by adoption, but also by regeneration. For when Christ iustifieth vs, he doth not onely forgiue vs our vnrighteousnes, and impute his righteousnes to vs, but also hee taketh from vs our stonie heart, and giueth vs a fleshie heart of his owne: and he strippes vs of our old man, and puts on his new man. Lastly, hee taketh away the corruption of nature, and makes vs partakers of his diuine nature: and so indeede of the sonnes of men, hee makes vs the sonnes of God, and his brethren too. Therefore it is saide, that we are predestinated to adoption by Iesus Christ and elect that wee may bee holy without blame, and that which is borne of the spirit is called spirit. Therefore the elected to eternall life, must needes bee begotten anew to be the sonnes of God, and be made partakers of the diuine nature, and bee a new creature in Christ. Hēce issueth the fixt effect of predestination, which is heedfully to be regarded: the loue of righteousnes, and the detestation of sinne. For in regeneration, the affections are principally chaunged. Namely, the affections of the corrupt nature and flesh, into the affections of the diuine nature & spirit. Hence it is that the Apostle saith, that they which are borne anew, doe walke according to the spirit, and not after the flesh; and not to sauour the things of the flesh, but the things of the spirit. And the chiefe affections of the flesh, are the loue of sinne, that is, the concupiscence of the flesh and contrariwise the hatred of righteousnes, and the law of God, which are not of the father, but of the world. Therefore the chiefe affections of regeneration and the spirit are the loue of righteousnesse & of the law of God, and the hatred of sinne. For that which is spoken chiefly of Christ: Thou hast loued righteousnes and hated iniquity; is to be vnderstood of all the members of Christ, endued with his spirit, because it is truely accomplished in them. Hence it is that Dauid who in himselfe did represent the disposition of all the regenerate, said of himselfe, I haue loued thy law, thy law is in the middle of my heart, I haue hated all the workers of iniquitie, I will not sitte with the wicked. Also Paul, I am delighted, saith he, in the law of God, according to the inner man: that is, in as much as I am borne a newe. And no man doubteth, but that both these affections are the effects of predestinatiō except he be ignorant that all these are the gifts of God: which as in time he bestoweth on his, so also he hath decreede to bestow them on them before the foundation of the world. And from these two affections, beeing the first fruites of regeneration, ariseth a care and indeauour to doe good workes, that is, to flie sinne, and to fulfill the lawe of God: which is the seauenth effect of Predestination. For he which hateth any thing from his heart, he taketh heede of it as much as he can, and he flieth from it, and eschewth it: and on the contrary, he which loueth any thing from his heart, that also he seeketh after, and endeauoureth himselfe to the compassing of it. Therefore the Apostle Iohn, maketh this a chiefe difference betweene the sonnes of God, and the children of the Deuill, that is, betweene them that are borne a new, and them that are not borne a new: that the children of God both loue and doe righteousnesse, & the children of the deuill loue sinne and doe it: as also the deuill sinned from the beginning: and Christ came to dissolue the workes of the deuill, namely, in his elect; for in the reprobate he leaueth them vntouched, because they are not giuen him of the father to be purged, borne a newe, & saued. Therefore seeing Christ was before ordained & predestinate to the doing of all these workes, and that there is no good wrought in vs, which was not pro-nided for vs in Christ from all eternitie: it is a cleare case, that the care also of doing good workes, is an effect of predestination. And the Apostle plainely teacheth it Eph. 2.10. when hee saith, that wee were created in Christ to good workes, which God hath prepared that we might walk in them. To this purpose serueth that which the A-

Eph. 1.4. 2.Tim.1. 19. postle deliuereth of loue vnfained, to which he sheweth, that wee were elect; and of a
Tit. 1.15. good conscience: which he makes the inseperable companion of the faith of the elect. Lastly, of a pure heart, which hee ascribeth to the elect, considering the vnfaithfull haue nothing cleane in them, and that their minde and conscience is defiled. Now that this care to doe good workes, is 2.Pet. 1.10 necessarie in all the elect, Peter sheweth it, when hee bids vs endeauour to make our election and calling sure by good workes, as some copies haue it. But to whome shall we make it sure? not vnto God, (for it was sure vnto him before the foundation of the world) but vnto our selues; and to our neighbours. And this is one of the chiefest vses of good workes, that by them, not as by causes, but as by effects of predestination and faith, both wee, and also our neighbors are certified of our electiō, and of our saluation too. Furthermore, considering whiles we haue a care to glorifie God, to doe good workes, and wee will not be conformable to the world in the wickednes of it, neither submit our selues to our flesh and Sathan: the flesh, the world and Sathan, doe perpetually warre against vs; and therewithall it commeth to passe, they beeing most valiant enemies, that either we are ouercome, or at the least in fight are foiled.

And therfore we are constrained to flie vnto the Lord, and to craue his assistance:
8 therefore the eight effect of our predestination is the calling vpon God, that in this fight he would giue vs ayd against the Deuill, the worlde, and the flesh. For this is the propertie of the spirit, which the elect haue to stir them vp to praier: for the spirit it selfe maketh request for vs, with gronings that can-

For this is a thing proper to the elect of God euen nowe borne anew: as we may see in the Apostle, who speketh thus in the name of all the regenerate: O miserable Rom. 7.24

Rom. 5.3. and 8.28. the Apostle describeth it. And therefore a certaine taking vp of courage and recouery of strength against his enemies: whereby it commeth to passe, that all things turne to the saluation of the elect. For the elect, albeit they be often beaten downe in fight, yet because Christ speedily sendeth ayde from heauen vnto them, they rise vp couragiously, and begin againe the fight against sinne and the deuill, and all other the enemies of Christ: and they fight so long, till

Rom. 8.31 to all the elect. For what (saith the Apostle) shall wee say to these things? If God bee on our side, who can bee against vs? Therefore our Lord Iesus teacheth, that the elect can not be seduced, and so perish, no not by the cunning of Antichrist, and his miracles. And lastly, hence appeareth
Mat. 24.24 13. that last effect of predestination, which we can obtaine in this life, the gift of perseuerance, vnto the ende in faith; & a true confessiō of Christ, ioyned with a manifold care to liue a godly life, and a desire to glorifie him. For this gift is bestowed vpon all the elect, as the Lord promised by Ie-
Ier. 32.40 remie: I will put my feare into their hearts, that they may not depart from me.

And

And when they ſhall come to the ende of their liues, they ſhall bee receiued into the heauenly glory, vntill ſuch time, as their bodyes alſo beeing raiſed vp, they may take full poſſeſſion of eternall life. Thus wee ſee that it is very certaine, that thoſe which are elected to eternall life, are alſo predeſtinate to vſe thoſe meanes, by which as by certaine ſteps & ſtaiers, they climbe into that heauenly dwelling place. And therefore that wee were predeſtinate to theſe meanes, namely Faith, Iuſtification, and good workes, becauſe we were elected to eternall life, according to the purpoſe and grace of God.

III. The vſe of this doctrine,

Wherefore by this meanes the doctrine alſo of the Pelagians is confuted as touching predeſtination to life, by our faith and workes, which God foreſaw wee ſhould doe. Whereas on the contrarie, therefore God did predeſtinate vs to faith and good workes, becauſe hee did chooſe vs to eternall life. For the Apoſtle ſaith not, I obtained mercy, becauſe I was faithful, or becauſe I ſhould be faithful, but that I might be faithfull. 2. Cor. 7. 25. Neither, ſaith he, that wee are elected in Chriſt, becauſe wee ſhould bee holy and without blame, but that we might be holy and without blame. Eph. 1. 4. & 2. Tit. 2. 11. Neither doth hee ſay, that we were created in Chriſt, becauſe we did or ſhould doe good works: but we were created to good workes: which God prepared that we might walke in them, Laſtly, he ſaith not, that the grace of Chriſt appeared, becauſe wee were to liue ſoberly, iuſtly, and godly, but that it therefore appeared, that we denying all vngodlines, & the luſts of this world, might liue ſoberly, iuſtly, and Godly in this preſent world. Wee ſee therefore, that by this doctrine, that wicked opinion is ouerthrowne, which teacheth that we doe preuent the grace of God by our merites which God foreſawe. And on the contrary, here wee ſee, howe foully the bellygods of this world are deceiued, which reaſon thus: if wee bee predeſtinate to eternall life, and our predeſtination be certaine & vnchangeable, what neede we endeauour our ſelues, beleeue, or doe good workes? for howſoeuer it fall out, and howſoeuer the elect doe liue, vndoubtedly they cannot periſh, becauſe they are predeſtinate to eternall life. Alas poore wretches, they ſee not, that they ſeuer thoſe things that are to be conioyned, namely the ende and the meanes of the ende: and that they breake the chaine, which in no wiſe either cā or muſt be looſed, whilſt that they ſeuer their calling & iuſtification: yea, and Faith too & good workes, from predeſtination and glorification. As though God did glorifie them whom hee did predeſtinate, before he called and iuſtified them: yea, and before they can beleeue, and ſhewe their quicke and liuely faith by workes. Contrariwiſe, let vs learne what our dutie is. If any be elect to eternall life, they alſo are predeſtinate to the meanes by which they come vnto it. And we beleeue (as wee are bound to doe) that wee are predeſtinate to eternall life: and therefore we muſt alſo beleeue, that wee haue beene elected to faith and good workes, that by them, as by certaine ſteps, we might be brought to eternall life. And therefore ſo farre muſt wee bee from neglecting Faith, and the meanes of good workes: and of a holy life; that contrariwiſe, it is rather our dutie, to keepe faith in a good conſcience, & to be conuerſant in good works, which God hath prepared, that wee might walke in them. And becauſe we can neither attaine to the ende, nor the meanes that bring vs therevnto of our ſelues: Therefore it is our part to craue them at Gods hands by prayer, that he would giue vs faith, and a care to doe goods workes, and increaſe them in vs. Neither muſt we onely aske them, but alſo certainely truſt that we ſhall obtaine them for Chriſt his cauſe. For if for all them which are predeſtinated to eternall life, God hath prepared faith, by which they may beleeue, and good works to walke in: therefore if wee beleeue (as by Gods commandement we are bound) that wee are in Chriſt elected to eternall glorie: we muſt alſo be perſwaded, that before wee depart hence, hee will giue vs true repentance, encreaſe true faith, inflame vs with Ioue: laſtly, that he will miniſter vnto vs aboundantly all things in Chriſt, to obtaine the ende. Yea, this confidence alſo and prayer, it is one effect of predeſtination, by which wee get the reſt. Therefore this doctrine wee muſt holde, that predeſtination to eternall life doth not take away the meanes of obtaning it, but rather eſtabliſh them. And therefore both theſe principles are true, namely, that the elect to life cannot periſh: & vnleſſe a man beleeue in Chriſt, & perſeuere vnto the ende in this faith working by loue, he ſhal periſh The reaſon is, becauſe in predeſtinatiō, the meanes & the end of it are ſo ioyned togither, that the one cānot be ſeuered frō the Ioh. 3. 36.

other. Wherefore whosoeuer holdeth not the meanes vnto the ende (amongst which faith is one) it is manifest, that hee was neuer predestinate & therefore must needs perish: as on the cõtrarie, he which holdeth faith, must needs be saued. So the truth of these propositions is euident: Hee which beleeueth in the son hath life eternall: contrariwise, hee which beleeueth not in the sonne, the anger of God remaineth vpon him, because as a constant faith is a signe of election: so obstinate infidelitie is a token of reprobation.

To the Reader.

CHristian Reader, lamentable and fearefull is the abuse of the tongue among all sortes and degrees of men every where. Hence daily arise manifold sinnes against God, innumerable scandals and grievances to our brethren, It would make a mans heart to bleede, to heare and consider howe Swearing, Blaspheming, Cursed speaking, Railing, Backbiting, Slandering, Chiding, Quarrelling, Contending, Iesting, Mocking, Flattering, Lying, Dissembling, Vaine and idle talking overflow in all places, so as men which feare God had better be any where then in the companie of most men. Well then, art thou a man which hast made little conscience of thy speech and talke? repent seriously of this sinne, and amend thy life least for the abusing of thy tongue thou crie with Dives in hel. Send Lazarus that he may dippe the tip of his finger in water and coole my tongue. And if thou be one which hast care to order thy selfe in speech and silence according to Gods word, oh, doe it more. For what a shame is it, that men with the same tongue wherwith they confesse the faith and religion of Christ, should by vaine and ungodly speech vtterly denie the power thereof? And for thy better helpe herein, I have penned these few lines following, concerning the Government of the Tongue. Vse them for thy benefit, and finding profit thereby, give glorie to God.

OF THE GOVERNMENT OF THE TONGVE.

CHAP. I.

Of the generall meanes of ruling the Tongue.

THE gouernment of the tongue is a vertue pertaining to the holy vſage of the tongue according to GODS word.

And for the well ordring of it, two things are requiſite: a pure heart, & skill in the language of Canaan.

The pure heart is moſt neceſſarie, becauſe it is the fountaine of ſpeech & if the fountaine be defiled, the ſtreames that iſſue thence can not be cleane.

Math.25.29. And becauſe the heart of man by nature is a bottomles gulfe of iniquitie, two things are to be knowne: firſt, how it muſt be made pure: and then how it is alwaies afterward to be kept pure.

The way to get a pure heart is this. Firſt, thou muſt ſeriouſly examine thy life and thy conſcience, for all thy ſinnes paſt: then with a heauie & bleeding heart confeſſe them to God, vtterly condemning thy ſelfe. Thirdly, with deepe ſighes and groanes of ſpirit crie vnto heauen to God the father, in the name of Chriſt for pardon, I ſay, for pardon of the ſinnes, as it were for life and death, and that, day and night till the Lord ſend downe from heauen a ſweete certificate into thy perplexed conſcience by his holy ſpirit, that al thy ſinnes are done away. Now at the ſame inſtant in which pardon ſhall be graunted, God likewiſe will once againe ſtretch forth that mightie hand of his, wherby he made thee when thou waſt not, to make thee a new creature, to create a new heart in thee, to renue a right ſpirit in the, and to ſtabliſh thee by his free ſpirit. For whome he iuſtifieth, them alſo at the ſame time he ſanctifieth.

The purified heart appeareth by theſe ſignes. I. If thou feele thy ſelfe to be diſpleaſed at thine owne infirmities and corruptions, and to droope vnder them as men doe vnder bodily ſickeneſſe. II. If thou begin to hate and to flie thine owne perſonall ſinnes. III. If thou feele a greefe & ſorrow after thou haſt offended god. IV. If thou heartily deſire to abſtaine from all manner of ſinne. V. If thou be carefull to auoide all occaſions and entiſements to euill. VI. If thou trauel and doe thine endeauour in euery good thing. VII. If thou deſire and pray to God to waſh and rinſe thine heart in the blood of Chriſt.

When the heart is pure, to keepe it ſo is the ſpeciall worke of faith, which purifieth the heart. Act.15.9.

Faith purifieth the heart by a particular applying of Chriſt crucified with all his merits. Eliſha when he went vp and lay vpon the dead child, and put his mouth to his mouth, 2.king.4.34. and his eies vpon his eies, and his hands vpon his hands, and ſtretched himſelfe vpon him, the fleſh of the child waxed warme: Afterward Eliſha roſe and ſpread himſelfe vpon Verſ.35. him the ſecond time: then the child neezed ſeuen times & opened his eies. So muſt a man by faith euen ſpread himſelfe vpon the croſſe of Chriſt, applying hands and feete to his peirced hands and feete, & his wretched heart to Chriſts bleeding heart, and then he ſhal feele himſelfe warmed by the heat of Gods ſpirit, and ſinne from day to day crucified with Chriſt, and his dead heart quickned and reuiued. And this applying which faith maketh is done by a kind of reaſoning which faith makes thus. Hath God of his mercie giuen his owne ſonne to be my Sauiour, to ſhed his blood for me: and hath he of his mercie granted vnto me the pardon of all my ſinnes? I will therefore endeauour to keepe my heart & and my life vnblameable that I doe not offend him heereafter in word or deede, as I haue done heretofore.

The language of Canaan is, whereby a Iſa.19.18. Rom.15.6. man endued with the ſpirit of adoption, vnfainedly calleth vpon the name of God in Chriſt, and ſo conſequently doth as it were, familiarly talke and ſpeake with God. This language muſt needs be learned, that the tongue may be well grounded. For man muſt firſt be able to talke with God, before he can be able wiſely to talke with man. For this cauſe when men are to haue communication one with another, they are firſt of all to be carefull that they often make their praiers to God that he would giue and bleſſe them in Pſal.141.3. their ſpeeches, as Dauid did, Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth, and keepe the dore Pſal.51.17. of my lippes. And againe O Lord open thou my lippes and my mouth ſhall ſhew forth thy praiſe. Where we may ſee, that the mouth is as it were locked vp from speaking any good thing, vntill the Lord open it. And Paul hauing the gift of ordering his tongue in wonderfull measure, yet desireth the Ephesians to pray for him, that vtterance might be giuen him, and good reason, because God ruleth the tongue. Eph.6.19. Prou.16.1.

CHAP. II.

Of the matter of our speech.

THe gouernment of the tongue containeth two parts: holy speech, and holy silence. In holy speech must be considered the matter of our speech, and the manner.

The matter is commonly one of these three: either God, our neighbour, or our selues.

As concerning God, this caueat must be remembred, that the honourable titles of his glorious Maiestie be neuer taken into our mouthes, vnlesse it bee vpon a weightie and iust occasion, so as we may plainely see that glorie will redound to him thereby: and for this cause the third commandement was giuen, that men might not take vp the name of God in vaine, that is, rashly and lightly. Exod.20.7.

And therefore lamentable and fearefull is the practise euerie where. For it is a common thing with men to begin their speech, and to place titles of Gods most high Maiestie in the fore-front almost of euery sentence by saying, O Lord! O God! O good God! O mercifull God! O Iesus! O Christ, &c. If a man be to say any thing, he will not say, Yea, or Nay; but, O Lord yea: or, O Lord nay. If a man be to reproue his inferiour, he will presently say, O Lord haue mercy on vs, what a slow backe art thou? what a lie is this? &c. An earthly Prince, if hee should haue his name so tossed in our mouthes at euery worde, would neuer beare it, and how shall the euerliuing God suffer it? nay how can he suffer it? I say no more, but thou with thy selfe thinke how: for in the third commandement the punishment is set downe, That he wil not hold him guiltlesse that taketh his name in vaine. And the Angels in reuerence to Gods Maiestie couer their faces, Isai.6.2.

Concerning our neighbour, we are to consider whether the thing, which we are about to speake, be good or euill.

This being weighed, if it be good, and so commendable, then we are readily and cheerefully, and that vpon euerie occasion to vtter it, especially in his absence, whether he be a freind or a foe: as Saint Iohn writeth of Demetrius. Demetrius (saith he) hath good report of all men, and of the trueth it selfe: yea, and we our selues beare record, and ye know that our testimonie is true. 1 Iohn.3.12.

As for the euill which any shall know by his neighbour, he is in no wise to speak of it, whether it be an infirmitie or a grosse sin, vnlesse in his conscience he shall find himselfe called of God to speake.

A man is called to speake in three cases: First, when he is called before a Magistrate and is lawfully required to testifie the euill which he knoweth by another. II. When any is to admonish his brother of any fault for his amendment. III. When the hurt or danger that may arise of the euill is to be preuented in others. As a man may say to one well disposed, Take heed of such a mans company: for he is giuen to such or such a vice.

To this ende, they of the house of Cloe doe certifie Paul of the disorders in Corinth. 1.Cor.1.11. And Ioseph certified his father of his brethrens slander, In this case all treasons are to be reuealed as tending to the ruine of the whole commō wealth. Thus Elisha reuealeth the secret of the king of Syria. Gen.37.2. 2.King.6.8.

And if it shal be thought conuenient to mention the euill which we know by any man, it must bee done only in generall manner: the person and all circumstances, which will descrie the person concealed.

Concerning things which are secret in our neighbour, we are not to be suspitious, but to suspend both speech and iudgment. Loue suspecteth no euill. Iudge nothing (saith Paul) before the time, vntill the Lord come, who will lighten things that are hid in darkenes, and make the councels of the heart manifest. Augustine hath a good and speciall rule to this purpose, that ther bee three things of which we must giue no iudgement: Gods predestination, the Scriptures, and the estate of mē vncalled. 2.Cor.13. 1.Cor.4.5. Aug.lib.10. confess.3.

As touching a mans selfe, he is neither to praise nor dispraise himselfe. As Salomō saith, Let another praise the, and not thine owne mouth: a stranger, and not thine owne lippes. Yet otherwhiles the times doe fall out that a mā may vse an holy kind of boasting, especially when the disgrace of the person is the disgrace also of the gospell, and of religion, and of God himselfe: as Paul did. but wherein (saith he) any will vse boldnesse (I speake foolishly) I will vse boldnes. They are Hebrewes so am I, &c. Prou.27.2. 2.Cor.11.21.

CHAP. III.

Of the manner of our ſpeech, and what muſt be done before we ſpeake.

THus much of the matter of our ſpeech. Now followeth the maner. In the maner of our ſpeaking three things are to be pondered: what muſt bee done before we ſpeake; what in ſpeaking: what after we haue ſpoken.

Before wee ſpeake, conſideration muſt be vſed of the thing to be ſpoken, and of the ende. Iames requireth that men ſhould Iam.1.19. be ſlowe to ſpeake, and ſwift to heare. Salomō ſaith, He that anſwereth a matter before Prou.18.13. he heare it, it is folly & ſhame to him. The minde is the guid of the tongue: therefore men muſt conſider before they ſpeake. The tongue is the meſſenger of the heart and therefore as oft as we ſpeake without meditation going before, ſo oft the meſſenger runneth without his errand. The tongue is placed in the middle of the mouth [a]and it is compaſſed in with lips & teeth as with a double trench, to ſhew vs, how we are to vſe heede and preconſideration before we ſpeake: and therefore it is good aduiſe, to keepe the key of the mouth not in the mouth but in the cupbord of the mouth. Auguſtine ſaith well, that as in eating and drinking men make choice of meates: ſo in manifold ſpeeches we ſhould make choice of talke.

a. Chryſ. hom. 22. ad pop. Antioch.

Lib. de na: & grat.

Here are condemned idle words, that is, ſuch wordes as are ſpoken to little or no ende or purpoſe. And they are not to bee eſteemed as little ſinnes, when as men Mat.12.36. are to giue account of euery idle word.

CHAP. IV.

What is to be done in ſpeaking; and of wiſedome.

WHen wee are in ſpeaking, two things are to bee practiſed: firſt, care muſt be had of the ſpeech, that it be gratious: ſeondly, it is to bee vttered with conuenient bonds of truth.

The ſpeech is gratious when it is ſo vttered, that the graces of God wrought in Coloſſ.4.6. the heart by the holy Ghoſt, are as it were pictured and painted forth in the ſame: for ſpeech is the very image of the heart.

Contrary to this is rotten ſpeech, that is, Eph.4.29. ἀσαπρος. all ſuch talke as is void of grace which is the heart and pith of our ſpeech.

And by this it appeareth, that no voice can be named but with diſliking: & herevpon in Scriptures when by occaſion a Eph.5.3. Pſal.16.4. vice ſhould bee named, in token of a loathing thereof, the name of the vice is omitted, and the name of the contrarie vertue vſed in the roome thereof, as in theſe wordes: for Iob thought, It may bee that my ſonns haue ſinned and bleſſed, that is, Iob.1.5. blaſphemed God. This beeing true, then by proportion the viſible repreſentation of the vices of men in the world, which is the ſubſtance and matter whereof playes and 1.Kin.21.10. enterludes are made, as much more to be auoided.

Gods graces, which wee are to ſhew forth in our communication are theſe: 1,2,3,4,5, 6,7,8,9, Wiſdome, Truth, Reuerence, Modeſtie, Meekenes, Sobrietie in iudgement, Vrbanitie, Fidelitie, Care of others good name: and let vs conſider of them in order.

Wiſdome in our ſpeech is a goodly ornament. The Apoſtles when they waited for the holy Ghoſt in Ieruſalem, it deſcended vpon them in the forme of fierie tongues: and then it is ſaide that they ſpake as the holy Ghoſt gaue them vtterance in Apophthegmes orwiſe ſentences. And he that Act.2.4. ἀποφθέγγεται. gouerns his tongue wiſely addeth doctrine λογίας. to the lips, that is, ſo ſpeaketh, as that others Prou.6.23. be made wiſe thereby.

This wiſdome is then ſhewed, when a man can in iudgement apply his talke, & as it were in good manner make it fit to all the circumſtances of perſons, times, places, things. A foole powreth out all his minde, but a wiſe man keepeth in till afterward. A word Pro.15.11 ſpoken in his place, is like apples of gould with pictures of ſiluer.

Now he that would haue his ſpeech to be wiſe, muſt firſt of all himſelfe become a wiſe man. And the wiſe man of whome the holy ſcriptures ſpeake, is a godly man, and ſuch an one as ſerueth God: becauſe this feare of God is the beginning and head Prou.1.7. Eccl.12.13 of wiſdome: as one the contrarie, the foole, Pſal.14.1. and 38.5. whereof the Scripture often ſpeaketh, is Gen 34.7. the vngodly perſon, that maketh no conſcience of any ſinne. And indeede ſuch an one is the moſt ſenſles foole of all. Hee that ſhall euer and anon bee caſting himſelfe into the fire and water, and runne vpon dangerous places to breake his legges, armes, necke: and further ſhall take pleaſure in doing all this, is either a foole or a mad man. Now the vngodly man as oft as he ſinneth, hee endeuoureth as much as in him lieth to pitch his ſoule into hell, and whereas hee taketh pleaſure in ſinne, hee ſports himſelfe with his own deſtruction.

Furthermore the man fearing God muſt haue two things in his heart: a perſwaſion ſwaſion of gods preſence; and Awe.

The perſwaſion of Gods preſence is, whereby a man is continually reſolued, that whereſoeuer he is, he ſtandeth before God, who doth ſee euen into the ſecrets of his heart. This was in Cornelius: Nowe therefore ( ſaith he ) we are in Gods preſence to heare al things that are commanded thee of God. Act.10.33

Awe in regard of God, is that whereby a man behaueth himſelfe reuerently, becauſe he is in Gods preſence.

Awe is either in regard of ſinne, or of chaſtiſements.

Awe in reſpect of ſinne, is when one is afraide to ſinne, fearing not ſo much the puniſhment, as ſinne it ſelfe, becauſe it is ſinne. For he feareth God indeede which is of this mind, that if there were no Iudge to condemne him; no hell to torment him; no deuil nor conſcience to accuſe him; yet he would not ſinne becauſe Gods bleſſed Maieſtie is by it offended and diſpleaſed: and if he had it in his choiſe, whether he would ſinne or looſe his life, hee had rather die then willingly & wittingly ſinne againſt God. This awe beeing in Ioſeph, was the cauſe that mooued him not to cõmit folly with Putiphars wife. Howe then (ſaith he) can I doe this great wickednes, and ſinne againſt God? Gen.39.9.

Awe in chaſtiſments is, when one humbleth himſelfe vnder the mightie hand of God with all meekenes and patience, when God laieth his hand on him more or leſſe. When Shemi came foorth and curſed Dauid, & flung ſtones at him, what did hee? truely hee ſtood in awe of God, and therefore ſaid, What haue I to doe with you, yee ſonnes of Zeruiah? for hee curſeth, euen becauſe the Lord hath bidden him curſe Dauid, who dare then ſay, Wherefore haſt thou done ſo? 2.Sa.16.10.

When a man is thus made wiſe, that is, righteous, and fearing God, hee is ſo guided by the ſpirit of feare, that he can not but ſpeake wiſely. Salomon ſaith, The lippes of the righteous know what is acceptable: but the mouth of the wicked ſpeake froward things. And againe. The heart of the wiſe guideth the mouth wiſely. Pro.10,31.

Contrarie to this is fonde and fooliſh talke: an example hereof we haue in Luke where Pilate wanting the feare of God, ſaith, I finde no fault in Chriſt: let vs therefore chaſtiſe him, & ſend him away. Whereas he ought to haue reaſoned thus: I finde no fault in him: therefore let vs ſend him away without chaſtiſement. Luk.23.14

CHAP. V.

Of truth, and of Reuerence in ſpeech.

TRuth of ſpeech is a vertue whereby a man ſpeaketh as he thinketh: and ſo conſequently, hee ſpeaketh as euery thing is, ſo farre forth as poſſibly hee can. It is made a note of a righteous man, to ſpeake the truth from the heart: and they that deale truly are Gods delight. Pſal.15.2. Pro.12.22

This is alwaies required in al our doctrines, accuſations, defences, teſtimonies, promiſes, bargaines, councels: but eſpecially in Iudges and Magiſtrates ſitting on iudgement ſeat, becauſe then they ſtand in Gods ſtead, who is truth it ſelfe. Prou.17.7.

To this place belongeth Apologie, which is, when a Chriſtian called before a Magiſtrate, and ſtraightly examined of his religion, confeſſeth Chriſt boldly, and denieth not the truth. Mat.20,31

Contrarie to this, is lying, cogging, gloſing, ſmoothing, diſſembling: as for example, Gehazi, after he had receiued money and garments of Naaman the Syrian againſt Eliſhas will, he went and ſtood before his maſter, who ſaide vnto him, Whence commeſt thou, Gehazi? who making it nothing to lie for a vantage, ſmoothed it ouer finely, and ſaide, Thy ſeruant went no whither. To the like effect and purpoſe, report is made of a rich man that had two cheſts: the one whereof hee calleth all the world, the other his friend. In the firſt he putteth nothing: in the ſecond hee putteth all his ſubſtance. When his neighbour came to borrowe mõnie, hee vſeth to anſwer, truly I haue neuer a pennie in all the world, meaning his emptie cheſt, but I will ſee (ſaith hee) what my friend can doe, looking thereby for intereſt by the money out of his other cheſt. 1.king.5.25.

This vice is very common, and it is a rare thing to finde a man that maketh a conſcience of a lie.

Lying is, when a man ſpeaketh otherwiſe then the truth is, with a purpoſe to deceiue. Here note that there is great difference betweene theſe two ſpeeches, It is an vntruth, and It is a lie. The firſt may bee vſed when a man ſpeaketh falſhoods. But in vſing the ſecond, wee muſt be heedie & ſparing: for when a man is chalenged for a lie, three things are laid to his charge. I. That he ſpeaketh falſly. II. That hee is willing to doe ſo. III. That he hath a deſire and purpoſe to deceiue.

Queſt. Whether may not a man lie, if it be for the procuring of ſome great good to

to our neighbour, or to the whole countrey, where we are?

Anſ. No: Reaſons are theſe. I. Lying [a] Iam.3.12 is forbiddē, [a] as an abomination to the Lord.
Pro.12.22
[b] Rom.3.8 II. [b] Secondly we are not to doe any euil that good may come thereof. III. He which lyeth, in ſo doing cōformeth himſelfe to the [c] Ioh.8.44 deuil, who [c] is a lier and the father thereof.

Obiect. I. Such lying is for our neighbours good and not againſt charitie.

[d] 1.Cor.13 6 Anſ. No: for [d] charitie reioyceth in the truth.

Obiect. II. The holy Scriptures haue mentioned the lies of the Patriarkes Anſ. We muſt not liue by examples againſt rules of Gods word.

Obiect. III. Rahab and the midwiues of Egypt in ſauing the ſpies, and in preſeruing the Iſraelites infants vſed lying, & are commended for their facts.

Anſ. They are commended for their, faith, not for their lying. The workes which they did, were excellent works of mercie, and therefore to be allowed: and the doers failed onely in the manner of performing them.

As truth is required in ſpeech, ſo alſo reuerence to God and man.

Reuerence to God is, when we ſo ſpeak of God and vſe his titles, that we ſhewe reuerence our ſelues, & mooue reuerence in others. If thou will not keepe: (ſaith the Deut.28. 58. Lord) and doe all the words of this law (that are written in this booke) and feare the glorious and fearefull name, THE LORD THY GOD, then the Lord will make thy plagues wounderfull.

Here take heede of all manner of blaſpheming, which is, when men vſe ſuch ſpeeches of God, as doe either detract any thing from his Maieſtie, or aſcribe any thing to him, not beſeeming him: a ſinne of all other to be deteſted. Reaſons. I. A blaſphemer is viler then the reſt of the creatures: for they praiſe god in their kind and ſhew forth his power, goodneſſe, and wiſdome: but he diſhonoureth God in his wretched ſpeech. II. He is as the madde dogge that flieth in his maſters face, who keepeth him and giueth him bread. III. thirdly Cuſtome in blaſphemies ſheweth a man to be the child of the deuill, and no child of GOD as yet. A father lying on his death bedde, called the three children to him which he kept, and told them that one onely of them was his owne ſonne, and that the reſt were onely brought vp by him: therefore vnto him he gaue all his goods: but which of theſe was his naturall ſonne he would not in any wiſe declare. Whē he was dead, euery one of the three children pleaded that he was the ſonne, & therefore that the goods were his. The matter being brought before a Iudge could not be ended: but the Iudge was conſtrained to take this courſe: he cauſed the dead corpes of the father to be ſet vp againſt a tree, and commanded the three ſonnes to take bowes and arrowes, and to ſhoote againſt their father and to ſee who could come neereſt the heart. The firſt & ſecond did ſhoote at their father and did hitte him, the third was angry with both the other through naturall affection of a child to a father, and refuſed to ſhoote. This done, the Iudge gaue ſentence that the two firſt were no ſonnes, but the third onely, and that he ſhould haue the goods. The like triall may be vſed to knowe who be Gods children. Such perſons with whome blaſpheming is rife, are very deuils incarnate, and the children of the deuill, who rende God in peeces, and ſhoote him through with their dartes, as it is ſaid of the Egyptian when he blaſphemed, that he ſmote or pierced through Gods Name. Leu.24.11 vaikkobh. Magiſtrates and rulers ſeuerally puniſh ſuch as abuſe their names, and they doe it iuſtly: howe much leſſe then ſhould blaſphemers of Gods name eſcape without great puniſhment?

Againe here we muſt be warned to take heede of that cuſtomable ſwearing, and alſo of periury. It is a very ſtraunge ſinne: for the periuried perſon doth not onely ſinne himſelfe but withall he endeauoureth to intangle God in the ſame ſin with himſelfe.

Further, take heede leaſt thou doeſt either make or recite the ieſts which are contriued out of the phraſes of Scripture: which are very many and very vſually re- Ex.30.31. hearſed in companie. The Oyle where with the tabernacle and the Arke of the Teſtament and the Prieſts were annointed, was holy: and therefore no man might put it to any other vſe, as to annoint his owne fleſh therewith, or to make the like vnto it. [a] Pilate a poore Painym when hee [a] Ioh.19.8 heard the name of the ſonne of God, was afraid: and wee much more ought to tremble at the word of God, not to make our ſelues merie with it. And therefore the ſcoffing of Iulian the Apoſtata is very fearefull, who was wont to reach Chriſtians boxes on the eare, and withall, bidde them turne the other, and obey their maſters commaundement, Whoſoeuer ſhall ſmite thee on the right cheeke, turne to him the other alſo. And hee denied pay and like reward to his ſouldiers that were Chriſtians, becauſe he ſaide hee would make them fit for the kingdome of heauen, conſidering that Chriſt had ſaid, Bleſſed are the poore in ſpirit: for theirs is the kingdome of heauen.

Mat. 5. 39.

Here alſo men muſt learne to take heede of all manner of charmes and enchantments, which cõmonly are nothing els but wordes of ſcripture or ſuch like, vſed for the curing of paines and diſeaſes both in men and beaſts. As for example, the firſt wordes of Saint Iohns Goſpel, In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God &c. are vſed to be written in a paper, and hung about mens necks to cure agues. But the truth is, ſuch kind of practiſes are deuilliſh. Patrons of charmes hold that in ſuch words as are either diuine or barbarous, is much efficacie. But whence is this efficacie from GOD? from men? or from the deuill? If it ſhall bee ſaid from God? we muſt know that the word vſed in holy manner, is the inſtrument of God to conuey vnto vs ſpirituall bleſſings, as faith, regeneratiõ, repentance: but it doth not ſerue to bring vnto vs corporall health. Well then, belike words take vertue from the ſpeaker, and are made powerfull by the ſtrength of his imagination. Indeede of this opinion are ſome Phyſitians as Auicenna and Paracelſus, who thinke that phantaſie is like to the ſunne, which worketh on all things to which his beames doe come, and the latter that by imagination miracles might bee wrought. But this opinion is fond, and the reaſons alledged for it are without weight. For imaginations are nothings but ſhadows of things. And as an image of a man in a glaſſe hath no power in it, but only ſerues to reſemble and repreſent the bodie of a man: ſo it is with the phantaſie and conceit of the mind, and no otherwiſe.

Paracl lib. de Tartaro

And if imagination haue any force, it is only within the ſpirits and humours of a mans owne bodie: but to giue force to worke in the bodies of other it can not; no more then the ſhadow of one bodie can ordinarily cure the bodie of an other on which it lighteth.

Wherfore words vſed in the way of bodily cure, be they in themſelues neuer ſo good, are no better then the deuills ſacraments: and when they are vſed to blind people, he it is, that comming vnder hand, worketh the cure, and by turning himſelfe into an angel of light, deludes them. But it were better for a man to die a thouſand times then to vſe ſuch remedies, which in curing the bodie, deſtroy the ſoule.

Laſtly auoide all imprecations and curſings, either againſt men or other creatures: for GOD in iudgement to puniſh ſuch curſed ſpeaking often, brings to paſſe ſuch imprecations: as may appeare in the Iewes, who at the arraignment of Chriſt, cried, ſaying, His blood be vpon vs and our children: which imprecation is verified vpon thẽ vnto this day. At Newburge in Germanie a certaine mother curſed her ſonne, ſaying, Get thee away, I would thou mighteſt neuer come againe aliue: the very ſame day he went into the water and was drowned. Againe, a mother brought her child to the Vniuerſitie of Wittenberge, by reaſon hee was poſſeſſed with an vncleane ſpirit: beeing demãded how it came to paſſe, ſhee anſwered in the hearing of many, that in her anger ſhe ſaid The deuill take thee, & thereupon preſently the child was poſſeſſed. And in our country men often wiſh the plague, the poxe, the peſtilence to their children, their ſeruants, their cattell: and often it falls out accordingly.

In the daies of king Edward, certaine Engliſh ſouldiers (as I am certenly informed by a witneſſe then preſent) being by a tempeſt caſt vpon the ſands on the coaſt of France, gaue themſelues to praiers, and commended their ſoules to God, as in ſo greate danger it was meete: but one among the reſt, deſperatly minded went apart & cried out ſaying, O gallowſe claime thy right, gallowſe claime thy right. Now the ſaid partie among the reſt (as God would haue it) eſcaped ſafe to land; & afterward liuing ſome ſpace of time in France: returned againe to England, where he was hanged for ſtealing of horſes: and thus according to his deſire the gallowſe claimed her right.

Reuerence to man is in two reſpects, either becauſe he is created after the image of God, or becauſe he is aboue vs in age, gifts, authoritie.

In the firſt conſideration, men muſt haue care to giue ſuch names to children as are proper and fit, vſuall, and knowne: the ſignification whereof may admoniſh them of the promiſes of God, of godlines, or of ſome good dutie. And there be foure allowed

allowed ends of giuing names. I. To preſerue the memorie of ſome thing by the name giuen, as Adam, Iſrael, Iſaac. II. To ſignifie ſomething to come, as Euah, Abraham, Iohn, Peter. III. To preſerue the name and memorie of parents & kinred, which was vſed in the birth of Iohn Baptiſt. This cuſtome may ſtill be retained, if there be a good example in the anceſtours that the child may follow. IV. That the life and profeſſion of good men may be reuiued in the tenuing of their names.

Here we muſt take heede, in no wiſe to giue to children, the proper names or titles of God, as Ieſus; Immanuel, &c.

Neither are the profeſſours of the Goſpel to be intituled by the names of ſuch as haue beene famous inſtruments in the Church, as to be called Caluiniſts, Lutherans, &c. 1. Cor. 12. 13. Now this I ſay, that euery one of you ſaith, I am Pauls, & I am Apollos, I am Cephas, and I am Chriſts. Is Chriſt deuided? was Paul crucified for you? either were ye baptized in the name of Paul?

And it is a bold parte of the peſtilent generation of Papiſts, who take to themſelues the name of Ieſuites, where as the like name of Chriſtian was giuen to the diſciples at Antioch not by the deuiſe of man, but by diuine oracle. Act. 11. 26. χρηματίσαι. ſic Ro. 11. 4.

As the changing of the name giuen in Baptiſme is not to be allowed; ſo the varying of it according to the varietie of language, (if neither hurt nor fraud to any be intended there by) is not vnlawfull. Vpon this ground Saul is called Paul: and Chriſt cals Simon his diſciple otherwhiles Cephas, otherwhiles Peter. And very worthy Diuines in this age, that their writings might be read of the aduerſaries, haue in like ſort without offence varied their names. Melanthon calls himſelfe Dydimus Faventinus, and Melangæus. Bucer intitles himſelfe Aretius Felinus: and Theodore Beze once writ himſelfe Nathaniel Nezechius.

Reuerence to a man as he is ſuperiour, is in vſing fit titles of reuerence. Sara is commended in Scriptures for obeying her huſband, and for calling him Syr. But exceſſe muſt here be auoided, whē titles of honour proper to God are giuen to men, as head of the Catholike church to the Pope, Ladie and Queene of heauen to the mother of Chriſt. This fault Chriſt reproueth in the yong man, ſaying, Why calleſt thou me good? there is none good but God. 1. Pet. 3. 6. Mat. 19. 18.

CHAP. VI.

Of Modeſtie and of Meekeneſſe.

MOdeſtie in ſpeech hath divers cauēats: firſt, if a man ſpeake any thing of himſelfe, that is, in his owne commendation, let him alter the perſon and ſpeake of himſelfe as of another: I knew a man (ſaith Paul, ſpeaking of himſelfe) in Chriſt aboue fourteene yeares agoe, &c. which was taken vp into Paradiſe, & heard wordes which can not be ſpoken. 2 Cor. 12. 2. And Iohn ſaith of himſelfe: When Ieſus ſaw his mother, and the diſciple whom he loued, ſtanding by, &c. Ioh. 19. 26. Here take heed of boaſting, wherby men imitate the deuill who ſaid, All this power will I giue thee, and the glorie of thoſe kingdomes: for that is deliuered vnto me, and to whomſoeuer I will giue it. Luc. 4. 6.

Againe, when a man ſhall haue occaſion to ſpeake of his owne faults and corruptions, let him ſpeake the vttermoſt againſt himſelfe, as Paul called himſelfe the firſt of all ſinners. But if he be to mention any thing of himſelfe, that may miniſter matter of commendation, let his ſpeech rather incline to the defect, then to the exceſſe as Paul ſaith, I am the leaſt of the Apoſtles, which am not meete to be called an Apoſtle, becauſe I perſecuted the Church of God. 1. Tim. 1. 13. 15. 1. Cor. 15. 9.

Secōdly, in mentioning of things which mooue bluſhing, we are to vſe as ſeemely wordes as may be choſen. Gen. 4. 1. Afterward Adam knew Hevah his wife, which conceiued and bare Cain. 1. Sam. 24. 4. And when he came to the ſheepcoates by the way where there was a caue, Saul went in to couer his feete, that is, to doe his eaſement.

Meekeneſſe alſo is required in communication, which is, when a man vſeth courteous and faire ſpeech. Put them in remembrance, &c. that they be courteous ſhewing all meekenes to all men, for we our ſelues alſo were in times paſt vnwiſe, diſobedient. &c. Tit. 3. 2. 3.

Meekeneſſe and gentlenes ſhewes it ſelfe in Salutations, Anſwers, and Reproofes.

For the firſt, daily experience ſheweth, that it maketh much for the maintaining of loue, to call men by their proper names or ſurnames. And this was a ſigne of ſpeciall fauour that God called Moſes by his proper name. Yet more conuenient it is to ſalute our betters by names of honour or office. Thus the diſciples call our Sauiour Chriſt Rabbi: and it was the vſuall manner among the Iewes, to call their betters Adon, that is, Lord, or Sir.

The formes of ſalutations are to be after the order practiſed in ſcripture. An Angel ſaluted Gedeon thus; The Lord be with thee thou valiant man. And Boaz came to Bethlehem, and ſaid to the reapers, The Lord be with you: and they anſwered, The Lord bleſſe thee. And the Angel ſaluted Marie, Hayle, freely beloued, the Lord is with thee, &c. Chriſt comming among his diſciples, ſaid, Peace be among you: and he taught them comming to any houſe to ſay, Peace be to this houſe.

Iud.6.12.

Ruth.2.4.

By this it appeareth, that our common formes of ſalutations are commendable: which are of diuers ſorts; as when one meets another, God ſaue you: when one goes away, God be with you: in the morning, God giue you a good morning: after noone, God giue you a good euening: when one is going on his iourney, God ſpeede your iourney: when one is working, God ſpeede you: in eating, much good doe it you: when one hath a new office, God giue you ioy of your office: when one is ſicke, God comfort you, &c.

And when children ſalute their fathers and mothers after this manner: I pray you father bleſſe me: I pray you mother bleſſe me: it is a ſeemely thing. For God hath made parents to be the inſtruments of bleſſing to their children, in nurturing them and praying for them: as the fifth commandement ſaith, Honour thy father and thy mother, that they may prolong thy daies. Now they prolong the childrens daies by praying to God for bleſſings on them, and by ſuch like duties.

It is an vſe in all places, when a man neeſeth to ſalute him by ſaying, Chriſt help you: But there is no cauſe why the wordes ſhould then be vſed more then at another time. The reaſons are, I. it is an olde cuſtome fetched from the Gentiles before Chriſt, and hath no ground at all: for they vſed with the like words to wiſh men health, becauſe they thought neeſing to be a ſacred and holy thing: and becauſe ſome take it to be a ſigne of vnhappie and euill ſucceſſe, which indeede is otherwiſe. II. If there be any danger in the brain before neeſing, when a man hath neeſed the danger is paſt, as learned phyſitians teach: therefore there is no cauſe of the vſing ſuch words then, more then at coughing.

Againſt the practiſe of ſaluating each other, ſome things may be obiected. I. Ioh. epiſt. 2. verſ. 10. If there come any vnto you, and bring not this doctrine, receiue him not to houſe, neither bidde him, God ſpeede. Anſ. This place doth not forbid common ciuilitie and curteſie of man to man: but onely familiaritie and acquaintance with heretickes: yea ſuch acquaintance and familiaritie as may ſeeeme to giue approbation and applauſe to their badde proceedings. II. Eliſha ſending Gehazi his ſeruant to lay his ſtaffe on the dead child of the Shunamite, bad him if he met any not to ſalute them, and if they ſpake to him not to anſwer them. 2. King. 4. 29. And when our Sauiour Chriſt ſent his Diſciples to preach in Iudea, he badde them to ſalute no man by the way, Luk. the 10.4. Anſw. The intent of theſe two places is not to forbid men to ſalute others, but rather to inioyne Gehazi and the Diſciples of Chriſt onely to omit for that time the practiſe of the duties of common courteſie, ſo farre forth as they might hinder or delay the performance of weightier affaires.

Our anſwers muſt be ſoft, that anger be neither kindled nor increaſed. A ſoft anſwer puteth away wrath, but grieuous words ſtirre vp anger. Nabal by churliſh language prouoked Dauid to wrath, but Abigail by the contrarie appeaſed him. Gedeon ſpake gently to the men of Ephraim, when they were angrie againſt him, and appeaſed them, For the text ſaith, When he had thus ſpoken, then their ſpirits abated towardes him. Therefore Salomon ſaith well, A ioy commeth to a man by the anſwer of his mouth, but how good is a word in due ſeaſon?

Now if any ſhall raile on vs, our dutie is not to raile againe. Bleſſe them that perſecute you, bleſſe, I ſay, and curſe not. Be courteous, not rendering euill for euill, neither rebuke for rebuke, but contrariwiſe bleſſe, knowing that ye be thereunto called, that you ſhould be heyres of bleſſing. This thing was notably practiſed by Dauid, Pſal. 109.4. For my friendſhip they were my aduerſaries, but I gaue my ſelfe to praier. And therefore in this caſe, either ſilence is to be vſed, or at the moſt, onely a iuſt and manifeſt defence of our innocencie to be made. Ezechias commaunded the people to be ſilent, and not to ſay any thing to the ſpeech of Rabſachai, now flattering, now threatning. When Eli ſpake hardly of Anna, & bad her put away her drunkennes, ſhe anſwered, Nay my Lord I am a woman troubled in ſpirit, I haue neither drunke wine nor ſtrong drinke, but haue powred out my ſoule before

Meekenesse in reproofe is, when any shal admonish his brother of any fault for his amendment, with the like moderatiō that Chirurgiōs vse, who being to set the arme or legge that is forth of ioynt, handle it so tenderly, that the patient shall skant feele when the bone falls in againe. This counsell Paul giueth, Brethren, if any man bee
Gal.6.1. fallen by occasion into any fault, yee which are spirituall, restore such a one (or set him in ioynt againe,) with the spirit of meekenesse. This was practised by Abraham towards Lot, when their heardmen were at variāce, saying, Let there be, I pray thee, no strife betweene thee and me, neither betweene mine
Gen.13.8 9. heardmen and thine: for we are brethren.

And this is done foure waies. First, when we reproue a man generally, as Nathan Secondly, when in the roome of a reproofe wee put an exhortation: in the exhortation insinuating an oblique reproofe, as when a man shall sweare in his talke, I shal not need alwaies to say, Ye doe very ill to sweare, and so to dishonour god: but I will lap it vp in the forme of an exhortation, as pills are lapt in sugar,

CHAP. VII.

Of Sobriety, Vrbanitie, Fidelitie, and care of others good name.

SObriety in iudgement is, when a man either suspendeth his opinion of his neighbours sayings or doings, or els speaketh as charitably as he can, by saying as little as may bee, if the things be euil: or by interpreting all in better part, if the speech or action bee doubtfull. Therefore doe thus: despise not thy neighbour, but think thy selfe as bad a sinner, and that the like defects may befall thee. If thou canst not excuse his doing, excuse his intent, which may bee good: or if the deede bee euill, thinke it was done of ignorance: if thou canst no way excuse him, thinke some great temptation befell him, and that thou shouldst be worse, if the like temptatiō befell thee: & giue God thanks that the like as yet hath not befallen thee. Despise not a man being a sinner, for though he be euill to day, he may turne to morrow.

Despise not a man being a sinner, for though he be euill to day, he may turne to morrow.

Here is condemned al headdy and rash
Math.7.1. iudgement, whereby men make thinges either worse then they are, or els they take & turne all things to the worse part. Thus the deuill dealt with Iob, saying, Doth Iob

Iob 1.9.11 feare god for nought? &c. but stretch out thine hand nowe and touch all that he hath, to see if he will not blaspheme thee to thy face. Such was the dealing of Doeg with Dauid, I saw the sonne of Ishai (saith he) when he came 1. Sam. 22. 9. to Abimelech the sonne of Ahitub, who asked counsell of the Lord for him, and gaue him victuals, and he gaue him also the sworde of Goliah the Philistim. Here the backebiter concealeth the necessarie circumstances, whereby Abimelech might haue bene excused, as that Dauid asked bread beeing hungrie, and that hee told not Abimelech that he was out of Sauls fauour: but he turneth all his speech to this end, to bring the Priest into suspition with Saul.

Thus the Pharises dealt. Iohn came neither eating nor drinking, Math. 11. 19. & they say, hee hath a deuill. The Sonne of man came eating and drinking, and they say, Behold a glutton, and a drinker of wine, and a friend of Publicans and sinners.

Contrarie to this Sobrietie is Flatterie, wherby for hope either of fauour or gain, men, & especially such as are of dignity & place, are soothed vp in their sinnes, & extolled aboue measure, euen to their faces. As when Herod arraied in royal apparell, & sate on the iudgement seat, & made an oration, the people gaue a shout, saying, Act. 12. 22 The voice of God, and not of man. But marke what Salomon saith, Hee that praiseth his Prou. 27. 14. friend with aloud voice rising earely in the morning, it shall be counted to him for a curse. One beeing asked which was the worst of all beasts, answered, Of wild beasts, the tyrant: of tame beasts, the flatterer. And another saide, that flatterers were worse then crowes: for they eate onely dead carrion, these feede on liuing men.

And of all kinds of Flatterie, that is the worst, when a man shall speake faire to his neighbours face & praise him; but behind his backe speake his pleasure, and euen cut his throat. Dauid complaineth of his fami- Psal. 54. 11 liar friend, that the words of his mouth were softer then butter, yet warre was in his heart: that his words were more gentle then oyle, yet they were swordes. The Pharises behinde Christs backe tooke counsell howe they might intangle him in talke; but before his face they say, Master, we know that thou art Math. 22. 16. true, and teachest the way of God truly, neither carest thou for any man: for thou considerest not the person of men.

Vrbanitie, is a grace of speech, whereby men in seemely manner vse pleasantnesse in talke for recreation, or for such delight as is ioyned with profit to themselues and others. The Preacher saith, There is a Eccl. 3. 4. time to laugh, and a time to weepe. When the Lord brought againe the captiuitie of Sion, we were like them that dreame. Then was Psal. 126. 1. 2. our mouth filled with laughter, & our tongue with ioy.

Now this mirth must be ioyned with the feare of God, otherwise Salomon saith well, I haue said to laughter, thou art madde: Eccl. 2. 2. and of ioy, what is that thou doest? And Christ saith, Woe to you that now laugh, for Luk. 6. 25. ye shall weepe. Secondly with compassion and sorrow for Gods people in affliction and miserie. They drinke wine in bowles, and Amos. 6. 6 annoint themselues with chiefe ointments, but no man is sorrie for the affliction of Ioseph. Thirdly, it must be sparing and moderate. Paul condemneth such as are louers 2. Tim. 3. of pleasures, more then of GOD. Fourthly, it must be voide of the practise of sinne. Mo- Heb. 11. ses is commended that he refused the pleasures of sinne.

The vsuall time of mirth is at meates. And here Samsons practise may be fol- Iudg. 14. 12. lowed, who at his mariage feast propunded a riddle or hard question to his frieds. And Ambrose thinketh that he did this to stoppe the mouthes of talkers, and to occupie their wits.

Withall it must be remembred to be a Christian dutie, euen at the table to maintaine talke of religion, & of duties of godlines, after the practise of our Sauiour Luk. 11. 37. & 14. 1 & 22. 15. Christ: though many vpon little ground thinke otherwise. Tertullian recordeth of Apol. c. 39 the Christians of his time, that they vsed in their loue-feasts to talke togither, as considering with themselues that they had God himselfe as an eare-witnesse to them. Chrysostome of this point saith well: I Hom. 2. in 2 would to God (saith he) that in tauernes and Thess. 2. c. feasts, and at baths, men would talke and dispute of hell: for the remembring of hell, would hinder a man from falling to hell. And it was the manner of the primitiue Church at dinner and supper, to vse the reading of the Scriptures. When ye come to the table (saith Augustine) heare that which is read Aug. epist. according to custome, without any stirre or 109. striuing: that your mouthes may not onely receiue the meate, but your eares may hunger after the word of God. And this auncient custome is to this day retained in the Colledges of the Vniuersitie of Cambridge.

And this holy reioycing at meates, is specially to be vsed with such as are godly. As Salomon saith, that hee which eateth

Anſwere. That ieſting which ſtandeth in quippes, taunts, and girds, which ſerueth onely for the offence of ſome, with the delight of others, is not tollerable: becauſe all ſpeach muſt edifie, & minister grace
Eph.4.25. to the hearers: neither doth it agree with Chriſtian grauitie and modeſtie. But two 1 kindes of ieſting are tollerable: the one is moderate and ſparing mirth, in the vſe of things indifferent, in ſeaſon conuenient, without the leaſt ſcandall of any man, and
2 with profit to the hearers. The ſecond is that which the prophets vſed, when they ieſted againſt wicked perſons, yet ſo, as withal they ſharpely reprooued their ſins.

As for laughter, it may be vſed: otherwiſe God would neuer haue giuen that power and facultie vnto man: but the vſe of it muſt be both moderate and ſeldom, as ſorrow for our ſinnes is to bee plentifull and often. This wee may learne in Chriſts Luk.19. Ioh.11. Heb.5.7. example, of whom we reade that he wept three times, at the deſtructiō of Ieruſalem, at the raiſing of Lazarus, and in his agonie: but wee neuer read that he laughed. And ſpecially remember the ſaying of Chryſoſtome; Si riſus in Eccleſia, diaboli opus eſt, that is to mooue laughter in the Church, is the worke of the deuill.

Fidelitie is conſtancie in all our lawfull ſaying and promiſes.

A promiſe is to be made with this con-
Iam.1.15. 1.Ch.13.2 2.Cor.1. 17,23. dition (if God will) and then if a man bee preuented by death, or by any like meanes he is not to be blamed: otherwiſe a mans lawefull word and promiſe bindeth him according to the will & pleaſure of him to whom it is made.

Nowe if afterward it bee hurtfull to him that made it, he may craue to be free from his promiſe: and libertie being graunted, take it. But a promiſe bound with an oath Pſal.15.4 is to bee kept, though priuate hinderance followe, yet ſo as the Magiſtrate may order the matter, and proceede in equitie, that the damage may be the leſſe.

The laſt grace which is to be vſed in ſpeech, is care of our neighbours good name, which is farre better to him then great Prou.22. riches.

Here is condemned the tale-beater, which of an euill minde telleth a thing of an other, to bring him into hatred, or to reuenge himſelfe, or to get ſomething, which otherwiſe he could not obtaine.

This tale-bearing is of diuers ſortes. Rom 1.30 One is, when men whiſper abroad ſecretly the fault of another, whereas they Gen.9. ſhould rather admoniſh the partie, as Cham when hee had ſeene his fathers nakednes, ran ſtraight and told his brethren. The ſecond, when they adde to or change the thing ſaid or done, as it ſerueth for their purpoſe. Some of the witneſſes which came againſt Chriſt, charged him to ſay, I will deſtroy this temple which is made with hands, and in three dayes build another with- Math.26. out handes. Where firſt they change his 60,61. meaning: for Chriſt ſpake of the temple of his bodie. Secondly, they adde to the wordes, For Chriſt ſayd not, I will deſtroy this temple: but deſtroy ye this temple. Therefore the holy Ghoſt noteth them with the name of falſe Witnes bearers. The third, when men ſurmiſe, and tell that which was neuer done. When Ieremie was going out of Ieruſalem to the land of Beniamin, and was in the gate of Beniamin, Iriah tooke him & ſaid, Thou flieſt to the Chal-
Ier.37.13. deans. Then ſaid Ieremie, that is falſe, I flie not to the Chaldeans, but hee would not heare him. The fourth is the coloured talebearing, when one ſpeaketh euill of another with fine prefaces and preambles, fayning that he is very ſory that his neighbour hath done ſuch or ſuch a thing: that he ſpeaketh it not of malice, but of a good mind: that he is conſtrained to ſpeake: that he ſpeaketh not all he could ſpeake: that the party to whom the tale is told muſt keepe it ſecret. Luther writeth of this fault very well: This vice (ſaith he) whereby we tell abroad the things which we heare of others, vpon Pſal. and take them in worſe part is very rife, and 15.3. of great force to ſowe diſcords: the rather, becauſe it often ſhewes it ſelfe vnder the pretence and name of counſell and good aduiſe. And it is a notable vizard for a talebearer to transforme himſelfe into an angel of light, and vnder zeale for Gods glorie to backebite and accuſe his neighbour of hereſie, errour, and wicked life.

Therefore the Prophets meaning is, that we ſhould conceale the euils that bee in our neighbour, and not ſpeake them to others, though he be an enemie and deserue it at our hands, and onely speake of those good things, in him which seeme to preserue concord: for this wee would that men should doe vnto vs. Yea, and let vs take heede that wee iudge not or condemne any mans saying or doing rashly.

Cõfes.li.9. Augustine saith, that this was the care which his mother had toward her enemies. To doe this is a notable point of iust dealing, but indeede there is no man vtterly without this fault in this life: such is our wretched state in this world. For though some are of this minde that they desire not to haue other mens wantes told them, and will not take all in worse part, yet if they be told and taken in worse part of others, they can willingly heare them, neither will they checke the teller, but suffer bad surmises to take place with them. But Gedaliah

Ierem. 40. the sonne of Ahicham excelled in the contrary vertue, who chose rather to hazard his life, then to suspect euill by Ismael.

This tale-bearing is the common table talke in England: & it is wonderfull to see howe those, who are otherwise godly, are ouertaken with it: but men must learne to stand more in awe of Gods cõmandement, & also to consider that the same thing a mã speaketh of another, commeth home againe by his owne doore. Such as vse tale-bearing and backbiting, are by Gods iust iudgement paid home in the same kinde: and hereupon Christ saith, Iudge not that ye be not iudged, for with what iudgemẽt ye iudge, ye shall be iudged. Wherfore when men shal enter an euill communication of others, we are to interrupt it by other talke, as not regarding it.

Here remember, that when gouernours and Magistrates shall vse hard wordes, not in the way of defamation, but for the reprooving of a vice, it is not to slander: as,

Gal.3. O foolish Galathians: O generation of vipers,

Matth.3. And Christ tearmeth Herod, Foxe,

CHAP. VIII.

Of the bondes of truth.

THus much of grace in speech. Nowe followeth bondes of truth, whereby the truth of our talke is testified and confirmed.

There are three: A simple assertion, and an asseueration, and oath.

A simple assertion, is either a simple affirmation, as yea, yea: or a simple negation, as nay, nay. And they are to be vsed onely

Math.5. in our familiar and common talke. Let your communication be yea, yea: nay, nay, and whatsoeuer is more, commeth of euill.

If the truth which we affirme or denie bee doubtfull or contingent, then such clauses as these [It is so, or it is not so as I thinke, as I remember, as I take it] are to be added. If one shall say, It is so, and afterwards it prooue otherwise, hee receiueth discredit, because he speaketh an vntruth. But if he shall say I thinke it is so, though it fall out otherwise, yet he saueth his credit, because he deceiueth not, but onely is deceiued.

An asseueration in a forme of speech, whereby one doth vehemently affirme or denie any thing: as when a man shall say: Verily, in truth, in very trueth, without all doubt, &c. These and such like are not to bee vsed at euery word; but then onely when a truth of great importance is to be confirmed. When the false Prophets among the Iewes and the Priests would not beleeue that Ieremie was sent of God: what saith he? not simply, The Lord hath sent me: but, in truth the Lord hath sent mee. Our Sauiour Christ, when hee vsed to speake any weighty matter, vsed to say Amen, Amen, Verily, verily, which is a plaine asseueration: for Amen, is more then a simple affirmation, and it is lesse then an oath, as the very sense of the word doth import: which is no more, but truly, certely.

The third is an oath, which must not be made by any thing in heauen or earth, but onely by the name of God alone.

It must be vsed as the last refuge & remedie of all. For when any trueth of great importance is to bee confirmed, and all signes, euidences, prooues, witnesses, faile among men on earth: then we may lawfully fetch the Lord as a witnesse frõ heauen, who is the knower of all truth.

And in this case an oath may be taken; either publikely before a Magistrate, or priuately among priuate persons, if it bee done with reuerence & consideration, as it was betweene Iacob and Laban. Gẽ.31.53

CHAP. IX.

What is to be donẽ when we haue spoken.

AFter a man hath spoken his mind, very fewe words more are to be added. He that hath knowledge spareth his words. In Pro.17.25 many wordes there cannot want iniquitie: but he that refraineth his lips, is wise.

He that speaketh many wordes, speaketh either false things or superfluous, or both: as when a riuer ouerflowes, the water gathereth much slime: so manie words many faults. When a vessel beeing smitten makes makes a great noiſe, it is a token that it is empty: and ſo the ſound of many wordes ſhewes a vaine heart. The Gentiles haue ſaid, that God gaue a man one tongue and two eares, that he might heare more and ſpeake leſſe. Valerius Maximus reporteth of Xenocrates, that beeing in the companie of ſome that vſed railing ſpeeches, held his tongue and beeing asked why he did ſo, anſwered That it had repented him that he had ſpoken, but it neuer repented him that he had held his peace. And the prouerb is, He that will ſpeake what he wil, ſhall heare what he would not. To the framing of our ſpeech, Ambroſe requireth three things: a yoke, a ballance, and a metwand; a yoke, to keepe it in ſtaied grauitie; a ballance, to giue it weight of reaſon; a metwand, to keepe it in meaſure and moderation. Offic. lib. 1

This rule muſt be practiſed carefully, for the auoiding of chiding, brawling, and contention. Let nothing be done by contention, Phil. 2. 3. Let ſtudents and ſchollers learne to practiſe this; for what ſhall an other mans opinion hurt thee? though in reaſoning he be not of thy minde in euery point?

Here take heed of the ſpirit of contradiction, whereby ſome by thwarting and contradicting euery man, at length prooue either obſtinate heretickes, or lewd Atheiſts, and make no bones to contradict the holy Ghoſt, and to call the ſcriptures in queſtion, & diſpute that there is no God.

Now if a man ſpeake neceſſarie things, though he continue his ſpeech till midnight, as Paul did, it can not be called immoderate or ſuperfluous talke. Act. 20. 7.

CHAP. X.

Of writing.

ALL this which is ſet downe concerning ſpeech muſt as well be practiſed in writing as is ſpeaking. Whereby are condemned ballads, bookes of loue, idle diſcourſes and hiſtories, being nothing els but enticements and baites vnto manifold ſinnes, fitter for Sodome and Gomorrah, then for Gods Church. And it muſt be followed as well in ſpeaking of latine or any good tongue, as Engliſh, which ſtudents haue not marked; for whereas they will not ſweare in Engliſh, yet in Latine they make no bones of it, ſaying Mehercule, medius fidius, edepol, per deos immortales. And whereas they hold but one God in iudgement, yet in their Latine exerciſes they ſpeake of Iupiter and of the immortall Gods, after the manner of the heathen. What a ſhame is this, that a Chriſtian, & that in Chriſtian ſchooles, ſhould either be aſhamed, or not vſe to ſpeake as a Chriſtian; but as Atheiſts doe? If thou haue many tongues and knoweſt not howe to vſe them well: he which hath but his mother tongue ordering it aright, is a better linguiſt then thou.

CHAP. XI. Of ſilence.

WIſe and Godly ſilence is as excellent a vertue as holy ſpeech; for he knoweth not how to ſpeake which knoweth not how to hold his tongue: the rule of our ſilence muſt bee the law of God. By meanes of which, wiſe conſideration muſt be had, whether the thing which we haue in minde be for Gods glorie, & our neighbours good: which done, wee are anſwerably to ſpeake or to be ſilent.

Here muſt be conſidered the thinges of which ſilence muſt bee vſed, and the perſons before whome. The things are many. Firſt, if any truth bee to the hinderance of Gods glorie, or of the good of our neighbour, it muſt be concealed.

The concealing of truth is either in whole, or in part. In whole, when the ſpeaking of the leaſt word is hurtfull: As for example, the father & the ſonne are both ſicke at once; the ſonne dieth firſt, the father asketh whether his ſonne be dead or not; if it bee ſaid no, an vntruth is told; if yea, then the fathers griefe is increaſed, & his death haſtened: therefore ſilence is the beſt. In daies of perſecution holy Martyrs haue choſen rather to ſuffer death, then to reueale their brethren, that haue beene of their priuate aſſembles with them. Aug. lib. ad Conſer.

The concealing of a thing in part is, when a man ſpeaketh a little of the truth, and concealeth the reſt. Which is warranted in all good and lawfull proceedings, which manifeſtly tend to the glory of god. When Samuel is ſent to annoint Dauid, he anſwereth the Lord & ſaith, How can I goe? for if Saul heare of it hee will kill mee. Then the Lorde anſwered, Take an heyfer with thee and ſay, I am come to doe ſacrifice to the Lord: and call for Iſhai to ſacrifice, and I will ſhew thee what thou ſhalt doe, and thou ſhalt annoint vnto me him whom I ſhall name vnto thee. When Ieremie had ſhewd king Zedekiah how he might eſcape death then the king ſaid vnto him, Let no man know of theſe words, &c. but if the princes vnderſtand that I haue talked with thee, & they 1. Sam. 16. 1, 2, 3. Iere. 38. 24 25, 26.

come vnto thee & say vnto thee, Declare vnto vs what the king hath said vnto thee, &c. thē shalt thou say vnto them, I hūbly besought the king that he would not cause me to returne to Iehonathans house to die there. And afterward he so answered, and the matter was not perceiued. The like was practised by Paul. Acts 23.6.

Secondly thou art to conceale thine owne secrets Sampson reuealing his owne secret, Iudge. 14. ouerthrew himselfe. If thou desire ease by reuealing them, tell them but to fewe, and to such as are faithfull.

That which thou wouldest not haue knowne, tell no man: for howe shall another keepe thy councell, when thou canst not do it? Keep thy friends secret likewise, if it bee not hurtfull; and let ministers conceale the sinnes and wants that trouble the conscience of such as are dying. Let magistrates conceale things done in the Senate, especially concerning warre, least they be reuealed to the enemie.

If god bring any strange thing to passe, speake not boldly of it, but rather in silēce wonder. Iob at the consideration of Gods Iob.36.37. maiestie in his workes, saith Behold, I am vile, what shall I answer thee? I will lay my hand vpon my mouth. Nadab and Abihu for offering incense with strange fire, before the Lord, were both destroyed with fire, which beeing done, Moses told Aaron that God would be sanctified in them that come nere him, and be glorified be-Leuit 10.3 fore all the people: and then the text saith, but Aaron held his peace. When Peter had taught the Gentiles, and after returned to Hierusalem, they of the circumcision contended with him: he then rendereth a rea-Act.11.18 son of his fact, which beeing made, they were silent. For so the text is, When they heard these things, they held their peace, and glorified God. When Gods iudgements befall men among vs, if we speake any thing Psal.14.1. we must iudge charitably. Blessed is he that iudgeth wisely of the poore, the Lord shal deliuer him in the day of trouble.

Thirdly, the infirmities and sinnes of our neighbour are alwaies to be cōcealed, vnlesse it be in the case before named, that we find our selues called of god to speake.
Prou 17.4. He that couereth a transgression seeketh loue. If God in mercie couer his sinnes, why shouldest thou reueale them? Salomon Pro.19.11 saith, It is the glorie of a man to passe by an infirmitie.

Fourthly, all vnseemely matters, all things vnknowne, things which concerne vs not, thinges aboue our reach, are in silence to be buried.

The persons, before whome silence must bee vsed, are these. I. Malitious enemies of religion: Giue not that which is holy vnto dogs: neither cast your pearles before swine. This was among the rest one cause of the silence of Christ before Caiphas & Pilate. II. Before Magistrates in their open courtes: where such as come before them are not to speake till they be bidden. Then Paul after that the gouerner had beckened vnto him that he should speake, answered. III. In the presence of our elders and betters, who must haue leaue and libertie to speake first, & must of others be heard with silence. The practise of this was in Elihu to Eliphaz and Bildad. A company of men (as some say) is like to the Alphabet, in which are vowels, halfe vowels and mutes; vowels are old men, learned, wise, expert: halfe vowels, are yong men and women, who are then only to speake when they are asked: mutes, are the same parties, who being not occasioned, are in silence to heare their betters. And here all Tit.2.9. seruants and children must remember when they are iustly reproued, to be silēt and not to answer any thing againe. IV. Fooles & pratlers are not to be answered. vnlesse it be to let them see their folly.

An exhortation to keepe the tongue

THus haue I in part set down how the tongue is to be gouerned: & I hartily desire, that all Christians would put these rules in practise. Reasons. I If a Iam.1.26. man seeme to bee religious, and refraine not his tongue, he deceiueth himself, and his religion is in vaine. II. The man of an euill tongue, is a beast in the forme of a man; for his tongue is the tongue of a serpent, Psal.140.3. vnder which lieth nothing but venim and poison: nay he is worse then a serpent: for it cannot hurte, vnlesse it be present to see a man, or to bite him, or to strike him with his taile: but he which hath not the rule of his tongue, hurteth men as well absent as present; neither sea nor land, nor any thing can hinder him. And againe, his throate is like a graue that hath a vent in some part, and therefore sendeth forth nothing but stinke and corruption. III. As the holy men of god, whē they preached, had their Isa.6.6. tongues as it were, touched with a coale from the altar of God: and as godly men Mat.3.11 when

when they ſpeake graciouſly, haue their tongues inflamed with the fire of Gods ſpirit: ſo contrariwiſe, when thou ſpeakeſt euill, thy tongue is kindled by the fire of hell and Sathan comes from thence with a cole to touch thy lippes, & to ſet them on fire to all manner of miſcheife. Chryſoſtome ſaith, that when men ſpeake good things, their tongue is the tongue of Chriſt: but all manner of vngodly & curſed ſpeaking is the deuils language. IV. The moderating of the tongue is a matter of great difficultie. S. Iames ſaith, The whole nature of beaſts and of birds, and of creeping things, &c. but the tongue can no man tame: it is an vnruly euill. Pambus, one without learning, came to a certaine man to be taught a Pſalme: who when he had heard the firſt verſe of the 38. pſalme, I ſaid, I will keepe my wayes that I offend not in my tongue, would not ſuffer the next verſe to be read, ſaying, this verſe is enough, If I could practiſe it. And when his teacher blamed him, becauſe he ſaw him not in ſixe moneths after, he anſwered, that hee had not yet done the verſe. And one that knew him many yeeres after, asked him whether he had yet learned the verſe. I am fourty yeeres olde (ſaith hee) & haue not yet learned to fulfill it. Now then, the harder it is to rule the tongue, the more care is to be had therein. V. The ſtrange iudgements of God for the abuſe of the tongue, eſpecially in blaſphemies and periuries are many & fearefull. Three men conſpired togither againſt Narciſſus biſhop of Ieruſalem, a man that lead a godly and blameleſſe life, and they charged him with a moſt hainous crime: al three confirme their accuſation by oath. The firſt wiſheth, if it were not ſo, that he were burnt. The ſecond, that he might die of the iaundiſe. The third, that he might looſe his eies. Afterward in proceſſe of time, the firſt had his houſe ſet on fire in the night: and hee with all his familie was burnt. The ſecond had the iaundiſe from the head to the ſole of the foote, and died thereof. The third ſeeing what was befallē theſe twaine, repented, and confeſſed the conſpiracie againſt Narciſſus, and yet for all that he loſt his eies.

Againe in the daies of Q. Marie, as Iames Abbes was lead by the Shieriffe to execution, diuers poore people ſtood in the way, and asked their almes: he then not hauing any money to giue them, did put off all his apparell, ſaue his ſhirt, and gaue it vnto them, to ſome one thing, to ſome another in the giuing, whereof hee exhorted them to be ſtrong in the Lord, and to ſtand ſteadfaſt in the truth of the goſpell. While he was thus inſtructing the people, a ſeruant of the Shieriffes going by, cried out aloud, and blaſphemouſly ſaid: Beleeue him not good people, he is an hereticke, and a mad man out of his wit: beleeue him not, for it is hereſie that he ſaith. And as the other continued in his godly admonitions, ſo did this wicked wretch blow forth his blaſphemous exclamations: vntill they came vnto the ſtake where he ſhould ſuffer. But immediately after this martyr was bound to the ſtake and fire put to him, ſuch was the fearefull ſtroke of Gods iuſtice vpon this blaſphemous railer, that hee was there preſently in the ſight of all the people ſtricken with a frācie, wherewith he had before railingly charged that good martyr of GOD: who in his furious rage and madneſſe, caſting off his ſhooes and the reſt of his cloathes, cryed out vnto the people, and ſaid, thus did Iames Abbes the true ſeruant of God, who is ſaued, but I am damned: and thus ranne he about the towne of Buric, ſtill crying, that Iames Abbes was a good man and ſaued, but I am damned:

Againe, children ſitting in companie togither, fell into communication of God, and to reaſon what God was. And ſome ſaide one thing, ſome another: among the reſt, on ſaide, He is a good olde father: to which another, named Dennis Benfield, replyed with a moſt outragious blaſphemie: What? he (ſaid ſhee) is an olde doting foole. But ſhortly after this young girle was ſo ſtricken, that all the one ſide of her was black, and ſhee became ſpeechleſſe and died.

Againe, one Leuer a plough man, railing, ſaide that he ſawe the euill fauoured knaue Latimer when he was burned: and alſo in diſpite, ſaid, that he had teeth like an horſe. At which time and houre, as neere as could be gathered, the ſonne of the ſaid Leuer moſt wickedly hanged himſelfe.

Againe, in the time of K. Edward, a yong gentleman of Cornwall beeing in companie with other moe gentlemen togither with their ſeruants, being about the number of twentie horſemen, among whome this luſtie younger entred into talke, and began withall to ſweare, and vſe ribauld ſpeech, beeing gently reproued, the young gentleman tooke ſnuffe, and ſaid to the reproouer, Why takeſt thou thought for me? take thou thought for thy winding ſheete: well, quoth the other, amend, for death giueth no warning: for as ſoone commeth a lambes skinne to the market, as an old ſheepe skinne. Gods wounds (ſaid he) care not thou for me: raging ſtill in this manner worſe and worſe in wordes, till at length paſſing on their iourney, they came riding ouer a great bridge, ſtanding ouer a peece of an arme of the ſea, vpon which bridge this gentleman-ſwearer ſpurred his horſe in ſuch ſort, as he ſprang cleane ouer with the man on his backe, who as hee was going, cried, ſaying, Horſe and man and all to the deuill.

Peter Stubbes booke printed 1581.

Againe, there was a ſeruing man in Lincolnſhiere, who had ſtill in his mouth an vſe to ſweare Gods precious blood, and that for very trifles: beeing often warned by his friends to leaue the taking the Lords blood in vaine, did notwithſtanding ſtill perſiſt in his wickednesſe, vntill at the laſt it pleaſed God to viſite him firſt with ſickneſſe, and then with death: during which time of the Lords viſitation, no perſwaſion could moone him to repent his foreſaid blaſpheming, but hearing the bell to toll, did moſt hardly in the very anguiſh of his death, ſtart vp in his bed, and ſware by Gods blood this bell tolled for me. Whereupon immediately the blood aboundantly from all the ioynts of his bodie, as it were in ſtreames, did iſſue out moſt fearefully frō mouth, noſe, wreſts, knees, heeles, and toes, withall other ioynts, not one left free, and ſo died.

These and ſuch like iudgements muſt be as warnings from heauen to admoniſh vs, and to make vs afraide of the abuſe of the tongue: eſpecially when it tendeth to the diſhonour of God. And we are to imitate the example of Policarpe the Martyr, who when he was bidden to take his oath, and curſe Chriſt, anſwered, Foureſcore & ſixe yeares haue I beene his ſeruant yet in all this time hath he not ſo much as once hurt me: howe then may I ſpeake euill of my King & ſouereigne Lord, which hath thus preſerued me? VI. Laſtly, God hath honoured thy Tongue with the gift of ſpeech and vtterance: and the great excellencie of this gift thou ſhouldeſt perceiue, if thou wereſt ſtricken dumbe for a time. Therefore let thy Tongue bee applied to the honouring of God, and to the good of thy neighbour.

TO THE READER VVHOSOEVER.

GOd hath bestowed on vs great prosperitie and peace, with plentie of all temporall blessings that heart can wish for manie yeares in this Land. Prosperitie abused hath beene the occasion of many grieuous sinnes against the first and second table: specially of Atheisme neglect of gods worship, contempt of thy word, prophanatie of the Sabboth, abuse of the Sacraments, &c.

These and such like sinnes haue long called downe for iudgements from heauen vpon vs: & the rather, because the preaching of the word hath little preuailed to bring vs to any amendment of life.

Whereupon God hath now begun to cause his iudgement to seaze vpon vs specially by plague and pestilence: and that euen in the very principall part of this land: whereby he himselfe doth (as Iob saith) round vs in the eare, and preach repentance to vs. Iob, 36, 19

Wherefore it stands vs now in hand, if euer to looke about vs: and if we haue not repented, to begin to repent: if we haue in former time repented, to do it more earnestly.

If so be that we should harden our hearts both against his word and iudgements, and put farre from vs the euill day; vndoubtedly we must needes looke for iudgements farre more terrible then euer we felt as yet: if not eternall destruction. Let vs be aduised by the olde world, who made light of Noah warning, and were drowned in the floode; by Lots sonnes in lawe, who tooke their fathers counsell for mockage, and were burnt with fire and brimstone from heauen; by the foolish virgines, who were sleeping when they should haue beene furnishing their lampes, and were shut from the marriage of the lambe.

And to direct thee somewhat in the practise of repentance, I haue penned this small treatise; vse it for thy benefit, and see thou be a doer of it: vnlesse thou wilt be a wilfull murderer, and shed the blood of thine owne soule.

And whereas there haue beene published heretofore in English two sermons of Repentance, one by M. Bradford Martyr, the other by M. Arthur Dent. Sermons indeede which haue doone much good, my meaning is not to adde thereunto, or to teach another doctrine, but onely to renew and reuiue the memorie of that which they haue taught.

Neither let it trouble thee that the principall Diuines of this age, whome in this treatise I follow, may seeme to be at difference in treating of repentance. For some make it a fruit of faith containing two parts, Mortification and Viuification: a some make faith apart of it, by deuiding it into contrition, faith, new obedience: b some make it all one with regeneration. The difference is not in the substance of doctrine, but in the logical manner of handling it. And the difference of handling ariseth of the diuers acception of repentance. It is taken two waies; generally and particularly. Generallie for the whole conuersion of a sinner, and so it may containe contrition, faith, new obedience vnder it, and be confounded with regeneration. It is taken particularly for the renouation of the life and behauiour: and so it is a fruit of faith. And this onely sense do I follow in this treatise.

b Calu. inst. lib. 3, cap. 3, par. 9.

I haue added hereto a few lines of the combate betweene the flesh and the spirit; because repentance and this combat are ioined together, and the one is not practised without the other, as appeares by resoluing Psalme 51.

Spirit. Haue mercie on me, O God, according to thy louing kindnesse. verse, 1

Flesh, Yea, but thine adulterie comprehends infinite sinnes; therefore looke for no pardon.

Spirit. According to the multitude of thy compassions put away mine iniquities.
Flesh. This sinne hath taken such deepe place in thee, that it will be hardly pardoned.
Verſ. 2. Spirit. Waſh me throughly from mine iniquities, and cleanſe me from my ſinne.
Flesh. Thy ſpeciall treſpaſſe is against man.
Spirit. Against thee, against thee, onely haue I ſinned.
Verſ 4. Flesh. Except this one ſinne thy life is vnblameable.
Spirit. Behold I was borne in iniquitie, &c.
Verſ. 5. Yea, the beſt man that is in the practiſe of godlineſſe, often appeares to be vnlike himſelf: & the cauſe is this ſpirituall combate. The fleſh otherwhiles makes him waile and mourne and goe drooping: preſently after the ſpirite puts into him (as we ſay) the hart of greſſe, and makes him triumph againſt the fleſh, the deuill, the world. Moſes was couragious at the red ſea, but he failed at the waters of ſtrife. Iob firſt praiſeth God, and afterward blaſphemeth. Dauid is often fainting in miſerie, yet by and by reuiued. Wherefore there is good cauſe why the conſideration of repentance and the combat ſhould goe together: that no man after he hath begunne to repent might dreame of eaſe to his fleſh: as though we ſhould goe to heauen in beds of downe: but rather that we might be reſolued, that when we beginne to doe any thing pleaſing vnto God, then we muſt looke for nothing but continuall moleſtation from our vile and wicked natures.

CHAP. I.
What Repentance is.

REpentance is a worke of grace, arising of a godly sorow; whereby a man turnes from al his sins vnto God, & brings forth fruits worthy amendment of life.

I call Repentance a worke, because it seemes not to be a qualitie or vertue, or habit, but an action of a repentant sinner. Which appeares by the sermons of the Prophets and Apostles, which runne in this tenour, Repent, turne to God, amende your lines, &c, Whereby they imitate, that Repentance is a worke to be done

Againe, Repentance is not euerie kind of worke, but a worke of grace; because it cannot be practised of any, but of such as be in the estate of grace. Reasons are these. I. No man can repent, vnlesse hee first hate sinne, and loue righteousnesse; and none can hate sinne, vnlesse he bee sanctified; and he that is sanctified, is iustified: and he that is iustified, must needs haue that faith which vnites him to Christ and makes him bone of his bone, & flesh of his flesh. Wherefore he that repents, is iustified and sanctified, and made a member of Christ by faith, II. He that turnes to God, must first of al be turned of god, and after that we are turned, then we repent. Surely after I was conuerted, I repented, and after that I was instructed, I smote vpon my thigh: I was ashamed, yea euen confounded because I did beare the reproch of my youth. Ier. 31. 19.

Some may obiect, that repentance goes before all grace, because it is first preached. The first sermon that euer was made, was of repentance, preached of God him selfe in paradise to our first parents. And euer since the sermons of all the Prophets and Apostles, and of all faithfull ministers haue had repentance for their beginning and scope. The answere hereto may bee this: if wee respect the order of nature, there be other graces of God which goe before Repentance: because a mans conscience must in some sort be setled touching his reconciliation with God in Christ before he can beginne to repent. Wherefore iustification and sanctification in order of nature goe before repentance. But if we respect time, grace and repentance are both togither. So soone as there is fire, so soone is it hotte: and so soone as a man is regenerate, so soone he repents. If we respect the outward manifestation of these twaine, repentance goes before all other graces: because it first of al appeares outwardly. Regeneration is like the sappe of the tree that lies hid within the barke; repentance is like the budde that speedily shewes it selfe, before either blossome, leafe, or fruite appeare: yea, all other graces of the heart which are needfull to saluation, are made manifest by repentance. And for this cause, Repentance (as I take it) is first preached.

I adde further that repentance riseth of a godly sorrow in the heart, as Paul teacheth. Godly sorrowe causeth repentance vnto saluation neuer to be repented of. It is called a godly sorrow, or a sorrow according to God, that it may bee distinguished from worldly sorrow: which is a griefe arising of the apprehension of the wrath of God, & other miseries: as feare of men, losse of good name, calamities in goods & other things, which in this life follow as punishments of sinne: wheras the godly sorrow causeth griefe for sinne, because it is sinne. And it makes any man, in whome it is, to be of this disposition and minde, that if there were no conscience to accuse, no deuill to terrifie, no iudge to arraigne and condemne, no hel to torment, yet he wold bee humbled and brought on his knees for his sinnes, because he hath offended a louing, mercifull, and long-sufferinge God. 2. Cor. 7. 10.

Further I say, that repentance standes in turning againe to God: Man at the first was made a goodly creature in the image of God, hauing fellowshippe with him, whereby he dwelt in God, and God in him. By sin there is a partition made betweene God and man; who is alienated & estranged from God, and is become the child of wrath, a firebrand of hel, the prodigall child going from his father into a farre countrie, the straying, nay the lost sheepe. Now, when men haue grace to repent, then they begin to renew this fellowship, & turne againe to God. And the very essence or nature of repentāce consists in this turning. Which Paul doth seeme to intimate, whē he saith, That he shewed both to Iew and Gentile, that they should repēt & turne to God, and doe workes worthie amend- Isa. 59. 2. Eph. 4. 18. Act. 26. 20.

ment of life. In which words he sets down vnto vs a full description of repentance.

Againe I say, that repentance is a turning from sinne, because it doth not abolish or change the substance of bodie or soule, or any of the faculties thereof either in whole or part: but only rectifie and amend them by remouing the corruption. It turnes the sadnes of melancholy to godly sorrow, choller to good zeale, softnesse of nature to meekenesse of spirite, madnes and lightnes to Christian mirth; it reformes euerie man according to his naturall constitution, not abolishing it, but redressing the fault of it.

Further I put downe, that repentance is a turning from all sin to God, that I may exclude many false turnings. The first, when a man turnes from God to sinne, as when one of a Protestant becomes a Papist, an Arrian a Familist. The seconde, when a man turnes from one sinne to another. As when the riotous person leaues his prodigalitie, and giues himselfe to the practise of couetousnesse: this can be no repentāce: because it is a going from one extreame to another, whereas repentance is to leaue the extreames and keepe the meane: The third is, not whē a man turns from sinne, but sinne turnes from him and leaues him. As when the drunkard leaues drunkennesse, because his stomacke is decaied: the fornicator his vncleannesse, because the strength of nature faileshim: the quarreller his fighting, because he is maimed on legge or arme. The last is, when men turne from many sinnes, but will not turne from all. As Herod did many things at the aduertisement of Iohn Baptist, but could not be brought to leaue incest; in hauing his brother Phillips wife; This repentance is nothing. For as hee which is truly regenerate, is wholly in body, soule and spirit regenerate: so hee which truely repents, turnes from all sinne, and turnes wholly to God, Neither is this to trouble any, that they cannot know al their sinnes; for sound repentance for one speciall sin, brings with it repentance of all sinne. And as God requires particular repentance for knowne sinnes, so he accepts a general repentance for such as be vnknowne.

To proceede further; the conuersion of a sinner in repentance, hath three partes; The first a purpose; and resolution in the minde: the second, an inclination in the will & affections: the third, an indeauour in life and conuersation, to abandon and leaue all his former sinnes, and to imploie himselfe in obedience to Gods commandements:

Lastly, this repētance must bring forth fruits worthy amendment of life: because it cannot be knowne to be sincere, vnlesse it bring forth fruit: Repentant sinners are trees of righteousnesse of Gods owne planting: and they growe by the waters that flow out of the sanctuarie, and therefore they must beare fruite that may serue for meate, and leafe for medicine; otherwise the axe of Gods iudgement is laide to their rootes to stocke them vp. Isa. 61, 3. Ezech. 47. 12. Math. 3. 10.

CHAP. II.

Of the causes of Repentance.

THe principall cause to repentance, is the spirit of God, as Paul saith, Instructing them with meekenesse that are contrarie minded, prouing if God at any time will giue them repentance. And Ieremie, conuert thou me, and I shall be conuerted. 2. Tim. 2, 25. Ier. 31, 18.

The instrument of the Holy Ghost in working repentance, is the ministerie of the Gospell onely, and not the lawe: Reasons hereof are these, I: Faith is engendred by the preaching not of the Lawe, but of the Gospell, as Paul saith, The Gospel is the power of God to saluation to all that beleeue from faith to faith; therefore repentance, which follows faith as a fruit therof, must needes come by the preaching of the gospell onely II: The law is the ministerie of death and damnation, because it shewes a man his wretched estate, but shews him no remedie: therefore it cannot be an instrumēticall cause of that repentāce which is effectual to saluation: III. The doctrine of repentance is a part of the Gospell, which appeares in this, that the preaching of repentance, and the preaching of the Gospell are put one for another. And our Sauiour Christ deuides the gospell into two parts: the preaching of repentāce, & remission of sinnes in his name, IV; That part of the word which workes repentance, must reueale the nature of it, & set out the promise of life which belongs vnto it, But the law neither reueals faith nor repentance; this is a proper worke of the Gospel. If it be saide, that the Lawe is a schoolemaster to bring vs to Christ, the answer is, to bring men to Christ not by teaching the way, or by alluring them; but by forcing and vrging them. 2. Cor. 3, 7. Luk. 9. 6. cum Math. 4. 23. Luk. 24. 47. Vrgendo non alliciendo.

Neither doe we abolish the lawe, in ascribing the work of repentāce to the gospel pel only: for though it be no cause, yet it is an occasion of true repentãce. Because it represents vnto the eye of the soule our damnable estate, and smites the cõscience with doubtfull terrours and feares, which though they be no tokens of grace (for they are in their owne nature the verye gates & the downfall to the pitte of hell) yet they are certaine occasiõs of receiuing grace: The physitian is otherwhiles constrained to recouer the health of his patient by casting him into some fits of an ague: so man because he is deadly sicke of the disease of sinne, must be cast in some fits of Legal terrors by the ministerie of the lawe, that he may recouer his former estate, and come to life euerlasting:

Repentance also is furthered by calamities, which in this case often come in the roome and stead of the law. Iosephs brethren, when they were in distresse in Egypt, said one to another, We haue verely sinned against our brother, in that wee saw the Gen.42.21 anguish of his soule when he besought vs, and wee would not heare him: therefore is this trouble come vpon vs. And the Lord saith in Oseah, I will goe and returne to my place, till they acknowledge their fault and seek me; Ose.5.15. in their affliction wil they seeke me diligently. And the Israelites say, My soule had them Lam.3.20 (many afflictions) in remembraunce, and is humbled in me. Example of Manasses, And 2.Chr.33.12 when he was in tribulation, he prayed to the Lord his God, and humbled himselfe greatly. And Dauid saith. It is good for me that Psal.119.71 I haue been afflicted, that I might learne thy statutes:

CHAP. III.

How repentance is wrought.

REpentance is wrought in the heart by certaine stepes & degrees. First of all, a man must haue knowledge of foure things, namely of the law of God, of sin against the lawe, of the guilt of sinne, and of the iudgement of God against sinne, which is the eternall wrath of God.

Then in the second place must follow the Application of the former knowledge to a mans owne person, by the worke of the conscience assisted by the holy Ghost, which for that cause is called the spirit of bondage: and this application is made in a Rom.8.15 forme of reasoning, called a practicall syllogisme, on this manner:

The breaker of the Lawe is guiltie of eternall death, saith the mind.

But I am a breaker of the law of God, saith the cõscience, as a witnesse & an accuser.

Therefore I am guiltie of eternall death, saith the same conscience, as a iudge.

Thirdly from this application thus made ariseth feare and sorrow in respect of Gods iudgements against sinne, commonly called the sting of the conscience, or Act.2.38. penitence and the compunction of heart.

Now this compunction, vnlesse it be delaied by the comforts of the Gospell, brings men to desperation, and to eternal damnation. Therefore he that wil repent to life euerlasting must goe foure steps further: First hee must haue knowledge of the gospell, and enter into a serious consideration of the mercie of God therein reuealed. Then must follow the application of the former knowledge by the conscience, renewed and assisted by the spirit of adoption, on this manner.

He that is guiltie of eternall death, if hee denie himselfe, & put his affiance in the death of Christ shall haue righteousnesse and life eternall, saith the minde enlightned by the knowledge of the Gospell.

But I being guiltie of eternall death, denie my selfe, and put my affiance in the death of Christ, saith the conscience renued by the spirit of adoption:

Therefore I shall haue righteousnesse and life euerlasting by Christ.

Thirdly after this application there followes ioy and sorrow: ioy, because a mans sinnes are pardoned in Christ: sorrow because a mans sinnes hath displeased him, which hath beene so louing and mercifull a God vnto him.

Lastly, after this godly sorrow followes Repentance, called a Transmentation or turning of the minde, whereby a man determines and resolues with himself to sin no more as he hath done, but to liue in newnesse of life.

CHAP. IIII.

Of the parts of Repentance.

REpentance hath two parts, Mortification and Rising to newnes of life.

Mortification is the first part of repentance, which concernes turning from sin. Men turne from sinne when they doe not only abstaine from actuall sinne, but also vse al meanes whereby they may both weaken and suppresse the corruption of nature; Chirurgions when they must cut off anie part of the bodie, vse to lay plaisters to it, to mortifie it, that being without sence & feeling it may be cut off with lesse pain. In the same maner, we are to vse all helps & remedies prescribed in the word which serue to weaken or kill sinne, that in death it may be abolished.

And it must not seeme straunge, that I say we must use meanes to mortifie our owne sins. For, howsoeuer by nature we cannot doe any thing acceptable to God, yet being quickened and mooued by the holy Ghost, we stirre & mooue our selues to doe that which is truly good. And therfore repentant sinners haue grace in them whereby they mortifie their own sinnes.

Agimus. Paule saith, I beat downe my bodie, and bring it in subiection. And, they which are Christs haue crucified the flesh with the affections & lusts thereof: And, mortifie therefore your earthly members, fornication, vncleannesse, the inordinate affection, euilconcupiscence, & couetousnesse. And, If any man purge himselfe from these, he shall be a vessell vnto honour. And S. Iohn saith, Euerie one which hath this hope in him, purgeth himselfe, euē as he is pure. And, he which is begotten of god preserueth himselfe, and the wicked one toucheth him not.

2.Cor.9.27. Gal.5.24. Col.3.5. 2.Tim.2.21. 1.Ioh.3.3 Cap.5.18.

Mortification hath three parts. A purpose in minde, an inclination in will, and an indeauour in life and conuersation to leaue all sinne.

Rising to newnesse of life, is the second part of repentance conceruing sincere obedience to God.

And it hath also three parts. The two first are a resolution in the minde, and inclination or lust in the wil to obey God in all things. Barnabas exhorts them of Antiochia, that with purpose of heart they will cleaue vnto the Lord. Examples of both these are many in Scriptures, Of Iosh̄ua, If it seeme euill vnto you to serue the Lorde, choose you this day whom you will serue, whether the Gods which your fathers serued, or the gods of the Amorites, &c: but I and my household will serue the Lord. Of Dauid, O lord, thou art my portiō, I haue determined to keepe thy commaundements. And, I haue sworne, and will performe it, that I will keepe thy righteous iudgements. And, When thou saidst, seeke my face, mine heart answered vnto thee, O Lord I will seeke thy face. And, I haue applied mine hart to fulfil thy statutes alwaies euen to the ende.

Act.11.23. Iosh.24.15. Psal.119.57. Vers.106. Psal.27.8. Psal.119.112.

The third part, is an indeauour in life and conuersation to obey God. Example of Paul, And herein I take paines to haue alwaies a cleare conscience towards God and towards men: Of Dauid, I haue a respect to all thy commaundements. And, I haue chose the way of truth, and thy iudgement haue I laid before me. And, I haue cleaued to thy testimonies; And, direct mee in the path of thy commaundements; for therein is my delight.

Act.24.16. Psal.119.6. Vers.30. 31. 35.

No man must here thinke, that a repentant sinner fulfils the law in his obedience; for their best workes are faultie before God: And whereas the faithfull in Scriptures are said to be perfect; we must know that there be two degrees in perfection: perfection in substance, and perfection in the highest degree. Perfection in substāce is, when a man doeth sincerely endeauour to performe perfect obedience to God, not in some, but in all his commaundements; And this is the onely perfection that any man can haue in this life. A Christian mans perfection is to bewaile his imperfection; his obedience more consists in the good will, then in the worke, and is more to be measured by the affection, then by the effect.

CHAP. V.

Of the degrees of Repentance:

REpentance hath two degrees. It is either ordinarie, or extraordinary.

Ordinarie repentance is that which euerie Christian is to performe euerie day: For as men fall daily either more or lesse; so the graces of God are proportionally weakened day by day. Wherfore the continuall reparation thereof must be made by a dayly renuing of repentance. A christian man is the temple & house of gods spirit: he must therefore once a day sweep it, that it may be fit to entertain so worthy a guest.

Extraordinarie repentance is the same in nature with the former, it defers onely from it in degree and measure of grace.

And this is to be put in practise, when men fall into any enormous, capitall, or grieuous offences: wherby they doe very grieuously wound their owne consciences, and giue great offence to the Church. Of this sort was the repentance of Peter, when he went forth and wept bitterly: & Dauids repentance, after he had committed adulterie, and murdered Vriah.

CHAP. VI.

Of the persons which must repent.

MEn be of two sorts; the naturall man and the regenerate: Repentance is needefull for both: For the naturall man that he may be brought from his sinnes, & the image of God renued in him. Some may say, that many naturall men liue ciuilly, abstaining from all outragious behauiour, hauiour, and therefore neede no repentance. I grant indeede they doe so: yet repentance must goe with all. For ciuill life without grace in Christ, is nothing els in Gods sight, but a beautifull abhomination. The Phariſes were ciuill, yet Christ ſaith of them, Except your righteouſnes exceede the righteouſneſſe of the Scribes and Phariſes, ye ſhall not ſee the kingdome of heauen. Repentance is alſo required in the regenerate: becauſe they may haue vnknown and hidden corruptions in them, which muſt be mortified: and otherwhiles they fall grieuouſly: & therfore that they may riſe againe, they muſt be daily practiſed in the ſpirituall exerciſes of repentance.

CHAP. VII.

Of the practiſe of Repentance.

IN the practiſe of Repentance foure ſpeciall duties are required: The firſt is a diligent and ſerious examination of the cõſcience by the lawes & commandements of God, for all maner of ſinnes, both originall and actual. Example of the childrẽ of Iſraell. Wherefore the liuing man ſorrowfull? man ſuffereth for his ſinne: let vs ſearch and trie our waies, and turne againe to the Lord. Of Dauid, I conſidered my wayes, and turned my feete to thy teſtimonies.

Lam. 3. 39. 40

Pſal. 119. 59.

Touching Originall ſinne, this muſt be well remembred, that one man hath not one part onely of original ſinne, and another man another: one man this corruption, another that: but euerie man, as hee receiued from Adam the whole nature of man, ſo alſo he receiued originall ſinne wholly. And therefore euerie man, (no one excepted, ſauing Chriſt, who was extraordinarily ſanctified by the holy ghoſt in the wombe of the Virgin) hath in him from his parents the corruption & ſeede of all ſinne, which is a naturall diſpoſition and prone nes to commit any ſinne whatſoeuer. Take a view and conſider all the horrible ſinnes that be practiſed in anie part of the world, either againſt the firſt or ſecond table: whatſoeuer they are, the ſpawne and ſeede of them all is euen in that man that is thought to be beſt diſpoſed by nature. Some may ſay, that experience ſhewes the contrarie, becauſe among men that want all manner of religion ſome are more ciuill and orderly: ſome againe more lewdly diſpoſed. I anſwer, that this comes to paſſe, not becauſe ſome men are by nature leſſe wicked thẽ others: but becauſe God by his prouidence doth limit and reſtraine mens corruption more or leſſe, which he doth for the good of mankinde. For if men may be wholly left to themſelues, corruption would ſo exceedingly breake out into all manner of ſinnes, that there ſhould be no liuing in the world.

In examination of actuall ſinnes, three rules muſt be followed. The firſt, that wee muſt ſearch out not only our groſſe ſinns, but euen the very thoughts of our harts: For repentance is not onely a change of the ſpeech, apparell, and outward behauiour, but alſo of the inwarde and ſecret thoughts of the heart. Therfore the prophet Ioel bids the Iewes rend their hearts and not their garments: and Paul telles the Epheſians, that they muſt be renued in the ſpirit of their minds: and Peter bids Simon Magus to repent and praie God, that the thought of his hart may be forgiuen him. The ſecond, that the verie circumſtances of ſinnes done muſt bee conſidered, as the time when, the place where, and the manner how; as namely, whether they were done of ignorãce, or knowledge of weakneſs, or preſumption, or obſtinate malice. Thirdly, in examination it is verie meete and conuenient, that we paſſe through al the commandements of the mortall law, laying them as moſt abſolute rules to our hearts and liues: and by thit meanes we ſhall be able to make large bils and Cataſogues of al our ſins, euen from the very cradle to any part of our age following, as the ſeruants of god haue alwaies done. Thus it will come to paſſe, that wee ſhall plainely ſee our wretched eſtate, and acknowledge that our ſinnes be in number as the haires of our head, and as the ſands by the ſea ſhore.

X. COMMAN.

Thou ſhalt not luſt:

He breakes this commandement.

THat thinkes an euill thought againſt his neighbours, though he meane not to do it:
That conceiues ſome inward delight in ſome euill motion, though he giue not conſent to practiſe it.

SINNES DIRECTLY A-gainſt the Goſpell.

He ſins againſt the Goſpell,

THat denies either directly or by conſequent that Chriſt is come in the fleſh. 1, Ioh, 4, 3, 8,
That treades vnder foote the bloode of Chriſt, Heb, 10, 29.
That beleeues not the remiſſion of his owne ſinnes, and acceptable to life euerlaſting, 1, Ioh, 3, 23.
That repents not, but hardens himſelfe in his all bad waies, Rom, 2, 4, 5, Ier, 8, 5, 6.

THus much of examination: nowe followes the ſecond dutie, which is confeſſion of ſinne vnto God, which is very neceſſarie. For the right way to haue our ſinnes couered before God is, to vncouer and acknowledge them vnto him. For he will iuſtifie vs, if we condemne our ſelues, he will pardon vs, if we, as being our own enemies, accuſe our ſelues; he forgets our ſinnes if we remember them: when we are vile in our owne eyes, we are pretious in his: and when wee are loſt to our ſelues, we are found of him:

That confeſſion may be rightly performed, a notable dutie is to be put in practiſe in it: namely, the arraignment of a repentant ſinner, whereby he iudges himſelfe, that he may not be iudged of the Lord.

This arraignment hath three ſpeciall points in it. Firſt of all, he muſt bring himſelfe foorth to the barre of Gods iudgement; which thing he doth when he ſets himſelfe in the preſence of God, as though euen now the day of iudgement were. As S. Hierom did, who alwaies thought with himſelf that he heard this voice ſounding in his eares, Riſe ye dead and come to iudgement.

Secondly, hee muſt put vp an indite, ment againſt himſelfe; by accuſing himſelfe before God, by acknowledging his knowne sinnes particularly, and his vnknowne generally, without any excuse or extenuation, or defence, or hiding or the least of them. Example of Dauid. I know mine iniquitie and my sinne is euer before me against thee, against thee only haue I sinned, and done this euill in thy sight, &c. behold, I was borne in iniquitie, and in sinne hath my mother conceiued me. And I haue sinned greatly, because I haue done this thing: but now I beseech thee remoone the iniquitie of thy seruant: for I haue done verie foolishly. Of Ezra, O my God I am ashamed and confounded to lift vp mine eyes vnto thee, my God, for our iniquities are increased ouer our heads, and our trespasse is growne vpp vnto heauen.

Ezra 9, 6,

Thirdly, hee must with heauinesse of heart as a iudge vpon the bench giue sentence against himself, acknowledging that he is worthie of euerlasting hell, death, & damnation. As the prodigall child, Father I haue sinned against heauen, and against thee, & am not worthie to be called thy child. And Daniel We haue sinned and committed iniquitie, and haue done wickedly: yea, we haue rebelled, and haue departed from thy precepts, and from thy iudgements, &c. O Lord, righteousnesse belongeth vnto thee, and vnto vs open shame. Of Iob. Behold I am vile, what shall I answer thee? I will lay my hand vpon my mouth. And, I abhorre my selfe, and I repent in dust and ashes. Of the Publicane, Who standing afarre off, would not lift vp so much as his eyes to heauen, but smote his breast saying, Lord be mercifull to me a sinner.

Dan. 9, 7,
Iob. 39, 36
and 42, 6,
Luk. 18, 13,

As for confession of sinne to men, it is not to be vsed but in two cases. First, whē some offence is done to our neighbour: secondly, when ease & comfort is sought for in trouble of conscience.

Mat. 5,
Lam. 3, 39,

The third dutie in the practise of repentance is Deprecation, whereby wee pray to God for the pardon of the sinnes which haue beene confessed with contrition of heart, with earnestnes and constancie, as for the weightiest matter in the world. And here we must remember to behaue our selues to God as the poore prisoner doth at the barre, who when the iudge is about to giue sentence, cries vnto him for fauour, as for life and death. And we must doe as the cripple or lazar man in the waie: sit downe, vnlappe our legges & armes and shew the sores of our sinnes; crying to God continually as they doe (Looke with your eye, and pitie with your heart:) that we may finde mercie at Gods hands, as they get almes at the hands of the passengers. Thus Oseah instructeth the people, O Israel, returne vnto the Lord thy God: for thou hast fallen by thine iniquitie take vnto you wordes, and turne vnto the Lord, and say vnto him. Take away all iniquitie and receiue vs graciously: so we will render the calues of our lippes. Of Daniel, We do not present our supplications before thee for our owne righteousnes, but for thy great tender mercies. O Lord heare, O Lord forgiue, O Lord consider and doe it: defer not for thine owne names sake, O my God. Of Dauid, Haue mercie vpon me, O God according to thy louing kindnes: according to the multitude of thy compassions put away mine iniquities.

Hos. 14, 2,
Dan. 9, 18, 19
Psal. 51, 1, 2

The last dutie is, to praie to God for grace and strength, whereby we may be inabled to walke in newnesse of life: Of Dauid, Behold, I desire thy commandements, quicken me in thy righteousnesse. And, Teach me to doe thy will, for thou art my God, let thy good spirit lead me into the land of righteousnesse.

Psal. 119, 40
and 143, 10

CHAP. VIII.

Of legall motiues to Repentance.

MOtiues to Repentance are either Legall, or Euangelicall. Legall are such as are borrowed from the lawe: and they are three especially.

The first is, the miserie and cursed estate of euerie impenitent sinner in this life by reason of his sinnes.

His miserie (that I may expresse it to the conceit of the simple) is fourefold.

1: within him.
2, before him.
3, behind him.
4, on his right hand.
6, ouer his head.
7, vnder his feete.

His miserie within is twofold. The first is a guiltie conscience: which is a very hell vnto the vngodly man. For he is like a fillie prisoner, and the conscience like a iayler which followes him at the heeles, and dogges him whether soeuer he goes, to the end he may see and obserue all his sayings and doings. It is like a register, that sits alwaies with the pen in his hand, to record and inroll all his wickednes for euerlasting memorie. It is a little iudge, that sits in the middle of a mans euerie in his very heart, to arraigne him in this life for his his finnes, so he shall be arraigned at the last iudgement. Therefore the panges, terrours, & feares of all impenitent persons are as it were certaine flashinges of the flames of hell fire. The guiltie conscience makes a man like him which lies on a bedd that is too straight, and the couering too short; who would wish all his heart sleepe, but cannot. Belshazzar when hee Nu.28.10. Dan,5.6. was in the midst of his mirth, seeing the hand writing on the wall, was smitte with great feare, so as his countenance chaunged, and his knees smote together. The second euill within a man, is the fearful slauerie and bondage vnder the power of Satan the prince of darkenesse: in that his minde, will, and affections are so knit and glued to the will of the deuill, that he can doe nothing but obey him, and rebel against God. And hence Satan is called 2.Cor.4.14 the prince of this world, which keepes the hole of the heart as an armed captaine keeps a house or castle with watch and ward.

The miserie before man, is a daungerous snare which the deuill layes for the destruction of the soule. I say it is dangerous because hee is in setting of it twentie or fourtie yeares, before he strikes: when as (God knowes) men do little thinke of it. It is made of three cords: with the first, he brings men into his snare: & that he doth by couering the miserie & the poyson of sinne: & by painting out to the eye of the minde the deceitful profits and pleasures thereof. With the second, he hopples and insnares the, for after that a man is drawn into this or that sinne, the deuill hath so sugered it ouer with fine delights, that he cannot but needs must liue & lie in it. By the third, he drawes his snare, and indeauours with all his might to breake the necke of the soule. For when he seeth a fit opportunitie, especially in grieuous calamities; and in the houre of death, he takes away the vizar of sin, and shewes the face of it in the true form, as ougly as himself: then withall he beginnes (as wee say) to shewe his hornes; then he rageth in terrifying and accusing, that the soule of man may be swallowed vp of the gulfe of finall despaire.

The miserie behind him, is the sinnes past. The Lord saith to Caine, If thou dost Gen.4.7. not well, sinne lyeth at the doore. Where sin is compared to a wild beast, which followes a man whither soeuer hee goeth, & lieth lurking at his heeles. And though for a time it may seeme to be hurtlesse, because it lyes a sleepe yet at length, vnlesse men repent, it will rise vp, seaze on them, rend out the verie throats of their soules. Iob in his affliction saith, Thou writtest bit- Iob.13. ter things against me, and makest me possesse the sinnes of my youth. And Dauid praieth, Psal.25. Forgiue me the sinnes of my youth. If the memorie of sinnes past bee a trouble to the godly man, oh what a racke, what a gybbet will it be to the heart of him that wants grace.

The miserie on the right hand is prosperitie and ease: which by reason of mans sinnes is an occasion of many iudgments. In it men practised the horrible sinnes of Ezec.16.49. Sodome: it puffes vp the heart with deuilish pride, so as men shall thinke themselues to be as God himself, as Senacherib, Nebuchadnezzar, Antiochus, Alexander, Herod, Domitian did: It steales away mans heart from God, and quenches the sparkes of grace. As the Lord com- Ier.22.21. plaineth of the Israelites, I spoke vnto thee when thou wast in prosperitie, but thou saidst I will not heare: this hath beene thy manner from thy youth. It is like the iuie that embraceth the tree, & winds round about it, but yet drawes out the iuice and life of it. Hence it is, that many turne it to an occasion of their destruction. Salomon saith, Prou.1.32. Prosperitie of fooles destroy them. When the milt swelles, the rest of the bodie pines away; & when the heart is puft with pride, the whole man is in danger of destruction. The sheep that goes in the best pasture, Rom.9.22. soonest comes to the slaughter house: and the vngodly man fattes himself with continuall prosperitie, that hee may the sooner come to his owne damnation.

The miserie on the left hand is aduersitie, which standes in all manner of losses and calamities; in goods, friends, good name, and such like. Of this read at large, Deut.28.

The miserie ouer his head, is the wrath of God, which he testifies of al manner of iudgements from heauen, in daunger of which euerie impenitent sinner is euerie houre. And the danger is verie great. The Heb.10.31. Scripture saith. It is a fearefull thing to fall into the hāds of the liuing god. He hath store- Deut.32.34. houses full of all manner of iudgements, & they watch for secure sinners that they can Ezc.7.6. not scape. Gods wrath is a fire makinge hauocke and bringing to naught whatsoeuer it lights on: yea, because he is slow to Nah.1.4. 5.6. anger, therefore more terrible: as a man therfore ſtaies his hand for a time, that he

Nah. 1.4.5.6 Pſal. 97. may lift it higher and fetch a deeper blow.
VVhen the dumbe creatures melte as waxe, and vaniſh away at his preſence, when he is angrie; as the huge mountains and rockes doe: fraile man muſt neuer looke to ſtand. If the roaring of a lyon make men afraid, & the voice of thunder be terrible; oh, howe exceedingly ſhould al be aſtoniſhed at the threatnings of god?

The miſerie vnder his feete, is hell fire:
for euerie man till he repent, is in as great danger of damnation as the traytour apprehended of hanging, drawing & quartering. A man walking in his way falles into a deepe dungeon that is ful of ougly ſerpents and noyſome beaſts: in his fal he catches hold of a twig of a tree that grows at the mouth of the dungeon, and hangs by it: afterward there comes a beaſt both leane and hunger-bitten; which hauinge cropt the whole tree, is euer & anon knap ping at the twig on which he hangs; now what is the danger of this man? ſurely he is like to fall into the pit, ouer which hee hangs; Well, this man is euerie impenitet ſinner: the pit is hel, prepared for the de-uil & his angels; the twig is the brickle & fraile life of man: the hungerbitten beaſt death, that is readie euery houre to knap our life a ſunder: the daunger is fearefull:
for a man hanging as it were ouer the mouth of hell, when life is ended, vnleſſe he vſe good meanes before he die, he thē falls to the verie bottome of it.

If this be the miſery wherwith the careleſſe are beſieged and compaſſed about euerie way, and that for his ſinnes, why doe men lie in the dead ſleep of ſecurity?
Oh! it ſtands them in hand to take vp the voyce of bitter lamentation, and for their offences to howle after the maner of dragons. If men could weepe nothing but teares of blood for their ſins, if they could die a thouſand times in one day for verie griefe, they cold neuer be grieued inough for their ſinnes.

The ſecond motiue to draw men to re-pentāce is, the conſideratiō of the wretch ed eſtate of an impenitent ſinner in his death, which is nothing but the [a] wages [a] ὀψώνια. Rom. 6.23 & allowance that he receiues for his ſins:
and it is the verie ſuburbes, or rather the 2. Cor. 15.55.56 gates of hell. S. Paul compares death to a Scorpion, who carries a ſting in his taile, which is ſinne. Nowe then when impenitent & prophane perſons dye, thē comes this ſcorpion & gripes thē with her legs, and ſtabs them at the heart with her ſting.
Wherefore the beſt thing is before death come, to vſe meanes to pull out the ſting of death, and nothing will doe it, but the blood of Chriſt; let men therefore breake off their ſinnes by repentance: let them come to the throne of grace, and crie; yea let them fill Heauen and earth with cries for mercy. Oh! pray, pray, pray, for the pardon of thine owne perſonall and particular ſins. If thou obtaine but one drop of Gods ſpeciall mercy in Chriſt, all danger is paſt. For death hath loſt his ſting; & then a man without danger may put an ougly Serpent in his boſome.

The third motiue is the conſideration of his eſtate after death. When the day of the laſt iudgment ſhall bee, hee muſt bee brought & ſet before the tribunall ſeat of Chriſt; he ſhall not bee able to eſcape or hide himſelfe: then the booke ſhall bee brought out, and all his ſins ſhall be diſcouered before Gods Saints and Angels:
the deuill and his owne conſcience ſhall accuſe him: none ſhal be aduocat to plead his cauſe; he himſelfe ſhall be ſpeechleſſe;
he ſhall at length heare the dreadfull ſentence of damnation, Goe ye curſed into hell, prepared for the deuill and his angels.
This thing might mooue the vileſt Atheiſt in the World to leaue his wicked waies, and come to amendment of life. We ſee the ſtrongeſt theeſe that is, when hee is led in the way from the priſon to the bar, leaues his theeuing & behaues himſelfe orderly. And indeed if he would then cut a purſe, it were high time that he were hāged. Al men by nature are traitours and malefactours againſt God:
whiles we liue in this world, wee are in the way going to the bar of Gods iudge-ment. The wheele of the heauens turnes one bout euery day, and winds vp ſomewhat of the threed of our life: whether we ſleepe or wake, we are alwaies comming nearer our ende: wherefore let all men daily humble themſelues for their ſinnes, and pray vnto God that he would bee reconciled vnto them in Chriſt: & let them endeauour themſelues in obedience to al Gods cōmandements, both in their liues and callings.

Againe after the laſt iudgment there remains death eternal appointed for him which ſtands in theſe three things. I. A ſeparation from all ioy and comfort of the preſence of God. II. Eternall fellowſhip with the deuill and all his angels.

III.

III. The feeling of the horrible wrath of God, which shall seaze vpon bodie, soule and conscience, and shal tende on them as fire doth on pitch and brimstone: and torment them as a worme crawling in the bodie, and gnawing on the heart: they shall alwaies be dying, and neuer dead: alwaies in woe, and neuer in ease. And this death is the more grieuous, because it is euerlasting: Suppose the whole world to be a mountaine of sand, and that a bird must carrie from it but one mouthfull of sand euerie thousand yeares: many innumerable thousands of yeares will bee expired, fore she wil haue caried away the whole mountaine: well, if a man should stay in torments so long, & then haue an ende of his woe, it were some comfort: but when the bird shal haue carried away the mountaine a thousand times: alas, alas, a man shall be as farre frō the end of his anguish and torment as euer he was. This consideration may serue as an yrōn scourge to driue men from their wicked liues. Chrysostome would haue men in their meetings in tauerns and feasts, to talke of hel, that by often thinking on it, they might auoid it. A graue and chast matron, being mooued to commit folly with a lewd ruffian, after long discourse, she called for a panne of coales, requesting him for her sake to holde his finger in them but one houre: he answered, that it was an vnkind request: to whom she replied, that seeing he would not hold so much as one finger in a few coales for one small houre, shee cold not yeild to doe the thing for which shee should be tormented bodie & soule in hell fire for euer. And so should al men reason with themselues, when they are about to sinne: None will be brought to doe a thing, that may make so much as their finger or toth to ake: if a man be but to snuffe a candle, he will first spit on his finger: because he cannot abide the heat of a small and tender flame. Therefore we ought to haue great care to leaue our sinnes, whereby wee bring endlesse torment to bodie and soule in hell fire, to which our fire is but yce in comparison.

CHAP. IX.

Of motiues Euangelicall.

EVangelicall motiues, are two especially. The first is taken from the consideration of mans redemptiō. He that redeemed mankind is God himselfe: as Paul saith, that was in Christ, reconciling the world to himselfe. Mans sin is so vile and 2.Cor.5.19.
haynous in the eies of God, that no angel nor creature whatsoeuer was able to appease the wrath of God for the least offence, But the sonne of God himself must come downe from heauen, and take mans nature on him: and not onely that, but he must also suffer the most accursed death of the crosse, and shed his most pretious hart blood to satisfie the iustice of his father in our behalfe. If a father should be sicke of such a disease, that nothing wold heale him but the heart blood of his own child, he would presently iudge his own case to be dangerous; and wold also vow if euer he recouered, to vse all meanes whereby he might auoide that disease. So likewise, seeing nothing could cure the deadly wound of our sinne: but a plaster made of the heart blood of Christ; it must make vs acknowledge our pitiful case, & the hainousnes of the least of our sinnes; and stirre vs vp to newnes of life.

Againe, considering the ende of the redemption wrought by Christ, was to deliuer vs from our euill conuersation in sinne and vnrighteousnes, we are not to continue, and as it were, lie bathing our selues in sinne; for that were as if a prisoner, after that he had beene ransomed & had his bolts taken off, and were put out of the prison to goe whither he would, should returne againe, and desire to lie in the dungeon still.

The second motiue is, that God hath made a promise to such as truely repent, I. Of remission of sinnes: Wash you, make you cleane, take away the euill of your works from before mine eyes: cease to doe euill, &c. Though your sinnes were as crimson, they shall be made as white as snow: though they were red like scarlet, they shall be as woll. And, Seeke the Lord while he may bee found, call vpon him while hee is neare. Let the wicked forsake his waies, and the vnrighteous his owne imaginations, and returne vnto the lord, and he will haue mercie on him, for he is very plentifull in forgiuing. II. Of life euerlasting. I will not the death of a sinner, but rather that he repent and liue. And, Thus saith the Lord vnto the house of Israel, Seeke ye me and ye shall liue. III. Of mitigating or remooving tēporall calamities. Stand in the court of the Lord. house and speake vnto all the cities of Iudah, &c. If so be they wil hearken and turne euerie man from his euill way, that I may repent me of the plague which I haue determined to bring vpon thē, because of the wickednes of their works. And, If we wold Isa.1.16.18. Isa.55.6.7. Ezech.18. Amos.5.4. Ier.26.3. 1.Cor.11.31.

iudge our ſelues, we ſhould not be iudged, that is, afflicted with temporall puniſhments.

I ioyne with the remooving of temporall calamities the mitigating of them: becauſe they are not alwaies take away whē the partie repenteth. After Dauids repen-

As God hath made theſe mercifull promiſes to penitent ſinners, ſo he hath faithfully performed them, ſo ſoone as they haue but begun to repent. Example of Hauing ſuch notable promiſes made to Repentance, no man is to draw back from the practiſe of it, becauſe of the multitude of his ſinnes, but rather to doe it. The Phariſes ſaid to Chriſts diſciples, Why eats your maſter with Publicans & ſinners? When Ieſus heard it, he ſaide vnto them, the whole neede not the phyſitian, but they that are ſicke: And, I came not to call the righteous: but ſin-

CHAP. X.

Of the time of Repentance.

THe time of repentance is the time preſent, without any delay at all: as Heb.3.7.13. the holy Ghoſt ſaith, To day if ye will heare his voice. And, Exhort one another dayly, while it is called to day: leaſt any of you bee hardned through the deceitfulneſſe of ſinne. Reaſons hereof are theſe. I. Life is vncertē; for no man knowes at what houre or moment, and after what manner he ſhall goe forth of this world. Be ye alſo prepared Luk.12.40 therefore, for the ſonne of man will come at an houre when ye thinke not. This one thing ſhould make a man to haſten this repentance: and the rather, becauſe many are dead; who purpoſed with themſelues to repent in time to come: but were preuented by death, and ſhall neuer repent. II. The longer a man liues in any ſinne, the greater danger: becauſe by practiſe ſin gets heart & ſtrength. Cuſtome is of ſuch force, that that which men vſe to doe in their life time, the ſame they doe & ſpeak when they are dying. One had 3. pounds owing him to be paid three ſeuerall yeres, when he was dying nothing could be got of him but three yeares, three pounds. Againe, by deferringe repentance, men Rom.2.5. treaſure vp wrath againſt the day of wrath. If a malefactour for his puniſhment, ſhould be appointed euerie day to carrie a ſticke of wood to an heape to burne him twentie yeares after: it muſt needes be an exceeding great puniſhment and miſery, and this is the caſe of euerie ſinner: who neglecting repentance from day to day, doth thereby imploy himſelfe in heaping vp the coles of Gods wrath to burne his ſoule in hel, whē the day of death comes: III. The more the time is prolonged, the harder it is to repent: the longer a man goes in ſickeneſſe without phyſicke, the harder is the recouerie: And where the deuil dwels long, he wil hardly be remoued: The beſt way to kill a ſerpent is, to cruſh it in the head when it is young. IV. It is as meat and drinke to the deuil to ſee men liue in their ſinnes, deferring repentāce: as on the contrarie, there is great ioy among the angels of God in heauen, whē a ſinner doth repent. V. Late repentance is ſeldome or neuer true repentance. For if a man repent when hee cannot ſinne as in former time, as namely in death: then he leaues not ſinne, but ſinne leaues him; wherefore the repentance which men frame to themſelues when they are dying it is to be feared leaſt it die with them; & it is verie iuſt, that he ſhould be contemned of God in his death, who contemned God in his life. Chryſoſtome ſaith, that the wicked man hath this puniſhment on him, that in dying he ſhould forget himſelfe, who when he was liuing did forget God. VI. We are with Abel to giue vnto God in ſacrifice euen the fat of our flock:

now they which defer repentance to the ende doe the contrarie, Late repenters offer the flower of their youth to the deuill: and they bring the lame and broken sacrifice of their old age to God.

CHAP. XI.
OF CERTAINE CASES in Repentance.

I. Case of a Reuolt.

WHether a man that hath profeſſed Chriſt and his religion, yet afterward in perſecution denies Chriſt, & forſweares the Religion, may repent & be ſaued? Anſ. It is a grieuous eſtate, yet a man may come to repentance afterward: Manaſſes fel away to Idolatrie and witchcraft; and yet was receiued to mercy. So did wiſe Solomon: and yet no doubt recouered, and is receiued to life euerlaſting. My reaſon is, becauſe God vouchſafed him to be a pen-man of ſome parts of holy Scripture, & the ſcriptures were written not by ſuch as were men of God only, but by ſuch as were holy men of God. Peter denied Chriſt of knowledge a-gainſt his owne conſcience, & that with curſing and banning: & yet came to repentance afterwards: as appeares by the teſtimonie of Chriſt, I haue prayed for thee, that thy faith faile not; therefore when thou art conuerted ſtrengthen thy brethren.

2. Chron. 33.

2. Pet. 2. 21.

Luk. 22. 32.

Obiect. 1. Mat. 10. 33. Whoſoeuer ſhall denie me before men, him will I denie before my father which is in heauen. Anſ. The place is only to bee vnderſtood of ſuch a deniall of Chriſt which is finall.

Obiect. II. Heb. 6. 4. It is impoſſible that they which were once lightned, and haue taſted of the heauenly gift, &c. If they fall away ſhould be renued by repentance; And Heb. 10. 26. If wee ſinne willingly after that wee haue receiued the knowledge of the trueth, their remaines no more ſacrifice for ſinne. Anſ. Theſe places muſt be vnderſtood of the ſinne which is to death, in which men of deſperate malice againſt Chriſt, vniuerſally and wholy fall away frō religion. For the hole Ghoſt ſaith not, If they fall, but if they fall away. And it is added, that they crucifie the ſonne of God and make a mocke of him, that they trample vnder foote the ſonne of God, that they account the blood of the new teſtament an vnholy thing: that they deſpiſe the ſpirit of god. And the words tranſlated willingly, imports ſomewhat more, namly, to ſin becauſe a man wil, that is, wilfully. The like anſwere is to be giuē to the queſtion, whereby it is demanded whether man ouertaken with the vnnaturall ſinnes mentioned, Rom. 1, 24, 25, 26: may come to repentance afterward or no namely that although the ſinnes bee hainous and capitall, yet the grace of repentance is not denied: as appeares in the example of the Corinthians 1. Cor. 6. 9, 10, 11.

II. Case of Recidiuation.

WHether the childe of GOD after Repentance for ſome grieuous ſin doe fall into the ſame againe, & come to repentance the ſecond time? An. The cauſe is dangerous, as we may ſee by compariſon in the bodie. If one fall into the relapſe of an ague or any other ſtrong diſeaſe, it may coſt him his life: and the recouerie will be very hard. Chriſt ſaid to the man that had bin ſicke eight and thirtie yeares, after that he had healed him, Behold thou art whole, ſin no more leaſt a worſe thing befall thee. And the vncleane ſpirit returning takes to him other ſeuen ſpirits worſe then himſelfe. Indeede wee finde no particular example of recouerie after a relapſe, in the ſcriptures; yet no doubt a recouerie may be. Reaſons are theſe. I. Promiſe is made of remiſſion of ſinnes in Chriſt, without any tearme of time; without any limitation to any number or kinds of ſinne: ſaue onely the blaſphemy againſt the Holye Ghoſt. Therefore there may bee a Repentance and ſaluation after a relapſe: II, Chriſt telles Peter that he muſt forgiue, not til ſeuē times only (which peraduenture he thought to be verie much) but ſeuentie ſeuen times, and that in one day, if one returne ſeuentie times and ſay; it repents me. Now if we muſt doe this, which haue not ſo much as a drop of mercie in vs in compariſon of God: he wil no doubt often forgiue, euen for one ſinne, if men wil returne and ſay, it repēts me; cōſidering that with him is plentiful redemptiō & he is much in ſparing

III. Case of Reſtitution.

WHether he that repents is to make reſtitution if hee haue taken anye thing wrongfully from his neighbour? An. Yea, Zacheus, when he repented and receiued Chriſt, gaue halfe of his goods to the poore, and if he had taken any thing by forged cauillation, he reſtored it foure folde. It is but a bad practiſe when a man on his death bed will very deuoutly bequeath his ſoule to god, and his goods euill gotten (as his conſcience will often crie in his eare) to his children & friends, without either restitutiõ or amends making, Quest. But what if a man be not able to restore? Anſ. Let him acknowledge the fault, and god will receiue the wil for the deede: As Paul ſaith in the like caſe. If therebe a willing minde, it is accepted ac-

1.Cor.8.12 cording to that which a man hath, and not according to that which a man hath not. Queſt. When a man by reſtoring ſhall diſcredit himſelfe: how ſhall he reſtore and keepe his credit? Anſ. Let him (if the thing to be reſtored be of ſmal moment) make choice of ſome faithfull or honeſt friende, who may deliuer the thing in the behalf of the partie, concealing his name, Queſt. How if the partie be dead? Anſ. Let him reſtore to the heires and ſucceſſors; if there bee none let him reſtore to God, that is, the Church & the poore.

IV. Caſe of teares,

WHether doth repentãce alwaies goe with teares or not? Anſwer. No: For verie pride and hypocriſie will drawe foorth teares. And ſome there are, that can weepe for their ſins in the preſence of others, where as being alone, they neither wil nor can. Some again are of that conſtitution of body, that they haue teares at commaund. And a godly man with drye cheekes may mourne to God for his ſinnes, & intreate for pardon and receiue it. Yet in all occaſions of deeper griefe for ſin, teares will follow: vnles men haue ſtonie and flintie hearts. And yet againe though the greateſt cauſe of ſorrowe be offered, the ſofteſt heart that is ſheds not teares at the firſt, but afterwads it will. When the bodie receiues a deep wound, at the firſt ye ſhal ſe nothing but a white line or dint made in the fleſh, without any blood; ſtaie but a while, then comes blood from the wounde in great aboundance. So at the firſt the mind is aſtoniſhed, and giues no teares: but after ſome reſpite or conſideration, teares follow.

V. Caſe of death.

WHether the repentant ſinner can alwaies ſhew himſelf comfortable on his death bed, Anſ. Though the comfort of Gods ſpirit ſhal neuer be aboliſhed from his heart: yet hee cannot alwaies teſtifie it. For hee may die of a burning ague: and by reaſon of the extremity of his fits, be troubled with idleneſſe of head, and breake out into raging ſpeeches and blaſphemies. Likewiſe he may die of a ſickneſſe in the braine, and be troubled with grieuous convulſiõs, ſoas his mouth ſhall be writhen to his eares, his neck turned behind him, & the verie place where he lies ſhal ſhake through his trembling, as daily experience will teſtifie: Neither is any to thinke this ſtraunge: for Salomon ſaith, All things (in outward matters) come alike to all; and the ſame condition is to the iuſt and to the wicked; to the good and to the pure, and to the polluted, and to him that ſacrificeth, and to him that ſacrificeth not;

CHAH. XII.

Of the contrarie to Repentance.

COntrarie to repentance is Impenitencie; whereby men continue in one eſtate, neither ſorrowing for ſinne, nor turning from it.

It is one of the moſt grieuous iudgements that is, if it be finall; For as a ſicke man, then is moſt ſicne, when he feeles the leaſt ſicknes, and ſaith he is well; ſo miſerable man is in moſt miſerie when hee feeles no miſerie, and thinkes himſelfe in good eſtate.

This ſinne befalls them that iudge themſelues righteous, needing no repentance: As the Phariſes in the dayes of Chriſt, the Cathariſts in the primitiue Church, & the Anabaptiſts in our age; Adde vnto theſe ſuch as haue hardened their hearts; ſo as they cannot diſcerne betweene good and euil, nor tremble at Gods iudgments, but rather fret and rage againſt them; til God in his wrath either deſtroy them, or caſt them to finall deſpaire. As it befell Iulian the Apoſtata, who died blaſpheming and caſting his owne blood into the aire;

Betweene the two extreames, Repentance and Impenitencie, is placed counterfeit repentance; For the wicked nature of man can deſemble & counterfeit gods grace, as the Lorde complaines of the Iewes; Her rebellious ſiſter Iudah hath not returned vnto me with their whole heart, but fainedly ſaith the Lord, Ier. 3, 10;

Counterfeit repentance, is either ceremoniall, or deſperate;

Ceremoniall, when men repent in outward ſhew, but not in the truth of heart; As Saul, Then ſaid Saul to Samuel, I haue ſinned: for I haue tranſgreſſed the commandements of the Lord, and thy words; becauſe I feared the people and obeyed their voice. Now therefore I pray thee take away my ſin, & turn againe with me, that I may worſhip the Lord, &c. Againe, I haue ſinned, but honour me, I pray thee, before the elders of my people. Of 3. Kin. 21 27. 29 fasted, and went softly. And the word of the Lord came to Eliah, saying, Seest thou howe Ahab is humbled before me?

Ahab;

Dissembled repentance may be discerned, because men after a time returne to their old byas againe, Pharao king of E-

Exod. 8. 15 that he had rest giuen him, hee hardened his heart and hearkened not vnto them as the Lord had saide. This is the ordinarie and common repentance that most men practise in the world.

Desperate repentance commonly called Penitencie, is when a man hauing only Gods iudgements before his eies, is smitte with horror of conscience; and wāting assurance of Gods mercie despaires final-

CHAP. XIII.

Of corruptions in the doctrine of Repentance:

THe Church of Rome at this day hath corrupted the ancient doctrine of repentance, being one of the special points of religion. The corruptions are specially fixe.

The first, that they make repentance or penance to be a sacrament, which can not be: because it wants an outward signe. And though some say, that the wordes, which the priest rehearseth in absolutions are the signe: yet that cannot be: because the signe must be not only audible, but also visible.

The seconde, that a sinner hath in him a natural disposition, which being stirred vp by Gods preuenting grace, he may & can worke together with Gods spirite in
Eph. 2. 1. his owne repentance: But indeede all our repentāce is to be ascribed to gods grace wholly. The soule of man is not weake, but starke dead in sinne, and therefore it can no more prepare it selfe to repētance then the bodie beeing dead in the graue can dispose it selfe to the last resurrection.

The third corruption: that contrition n repentance must be sufficient. A thinge impossible. For sin doth so greatly offend Gods maiestie, that no man can euer mourne inough for it.

The fourth, that contrition doth merit remission of sinne. An opinion that doth derogate much from all sufficient merits of Christ.

The fifth, that he that repents must cōfesse al the sinnes that hee can remember; with all their circumstances to his owne priest, or one in his stead, if he wil receiue pardon. This kind of confession is a meere forgerie of mans braine. I. There is neither precept nor example of it in the Psal. 32. 3. Scriptures. II: Dauid and others haue re- 2. Sam. 12. 13. pented & haue receiued remission of their sinnes without confessing of their sins in particular to any man.

The last, that the sinner by his workes and sufferings must make satisfaction to God for the temporal punishment of his 1. Ioh. 1, 7, & 2. 12 sinnes. A flat Blasphemie: The Scriptures mention no other satisfaction but Christ, and if his be sufficient, ours is needlesse: if ours needfull, his imperfect. Papists write that both may stand togither: Christs satisfaction (they say) is a plaister in a boxe vnapplyed: mās sanctificatiō as a meanes to apply it: because it prepares vs to receiue it: Ah, good diuinitie: for euen in common sense the satisfaction of Christ must first be applied to the persō of man that it may please God, before the works (which they tearme satisfaction) can any way be acceptable to God:

To conclude, the romish doctrine of repentāce is, the right way to hell: For whē a sinner shall be taught that he must haue sufficient sorrowe for his sinnes: and with al, that he must not beleeue the remission of his own sins particularly: when sorrow comes vpon him, and he wants sound cōfort in Gods mercie, he must needs fal into desperation without recouerie. Therefore the Papists in the houre of death, (as we haue experience) are glad to leaue the trumperie of humane satisfactions, and to rest only for their iustification, on the obedience of Christ:

LAVS DEO.

THE COMBAT OF THE FLESH AND SPIRIT.

Gal; 5.17.

For the flesh lusteth against the spirit, and the spirit against the flesh; and these are contrarie one to another. so that ye cannot doe the things which yee would.

THe Apostle Paul from the beginning of this chapter to the 13, verse exhorts the Galathians to maintaine their Christian libertie: & from thence to the end of the chapter he perswades them to other special duties of godlines. In the 13. verse he stirs them vp to be seruiceable one to another by loue: in the 15. verse hee dissuades them from contentions & doing of iniuries. In the 16. verse he shewes the remedie of the former sinnes. which is to walke according to the spirit, In this 17. verse he renders a reason of the remedie, the force whereof is this. The flesh & the spirit are contrarie; wherefore if we walke according to the spirit, it will hinder the flesh; that it shall not carrie you forward to doe iniuries and liue in contentions, as otherwise it would.

In this verse wee haue to obserue fiue points. The first, that there is a combate betweene the flesh and the spirit, in these wordes, The flesh lusteth against the spirite, and the spirit against the flesh. The second is, the matter of this combate, which stands in the contrary lusting of the flesh and the spirit. The third, is the cause of the combate in these words, and these are contrarie. The fourth, is the subiect or person in whome this combate is, noted in these wordes, So that yee, the Galathians. The last is the effect of the combate, in the last words; that ye cannot doe, &c.

Touching the combate it selfe diuerse points are to be cõsidered. The first, what these two, which make combate, namely, the flesh and the spirit are. They haue diuers significations: first of all, the spirite is taken for the soule,, and the flesh for the bodie. But so they are not taken in this place: For there is no such combate betweene the body & the soule: both which agree togither to make the persõ of one man: Secondly, the spirit signifies naturall reason, and the flesh the natural apetite or concupiscence. But they cannot so bee vnderstood in this place: For the spirite here mentioned doth fight euen against naturall reason: which though it serue to make a man without excuse, yet it is an enemy to the spirit: Thirdly, the spirit signifies the Godhead of Christ, & the flesh the manhood; but it must not be so take here: For then euerie man regenerate should be defiled: Lastly, the spirit signifies a created qualitie of holinesse, which by the holy ghost is wrought in the mind will, and affections of man; and the flesh, the naturall corruption or inclination of the minde, will, and affections to that which is against the lawe: In this sense these twaine are taken in this place:

Secondly, it is to be considered howe these twaine, the flesh and the spirit, can fight togither, being but meere qualities. And we must know that they are not seuered a sunder, as though the flesh were placed in one part of the soule, & the spirit in another; but they are ioyned & mingled together in all the faculties of the soule: The mind or vnderstanding part, is not one part flesh, and another spirit; but the whole mind is flesh, and the whole mind is spirit; partly one; and partly the other: The whole will is partly flesh and partly the flesh and the spirit, that is, grace and corruption: and seuered in place, but only in reason to be distinguished: As the aire in the dawning of the day is not wholy light or wholy darke as at midnight and at none day, neither is it in one parte light, & another part dark: but the whole aire is partly light, & partly dark through out. In a vessell of luke-warme water, the water it selfe is not only hote or only cold, or in one part hote and another part cold; but heate and colde are mixt togither in euerie part of the water. So is the flesh and the spirit mingled together in the soule of man: and this is the cause why these two contrarie qualities fight togither:

Thirdly, in this combate we are to consider what equality there is between these two combaters, the flesh & the spirit: and we must know, that the flesh visually, is more in measure then the spirit: The flesh is like the mightie gyant Goliah, & the spirit is little and small, like young Dauid; Hence it is, that Paul cals the Corinthians, which were men iustified and sanctified, sanctified, carnall. I could not (saith he) brethren speake vnto you, as vnto spirituall, but

2. Cor. 3.1. as vnto carnall, as vnto babes in Christ. And none can come to be tal men in Christ according to the age of the fulnes of Christ till after this life. And the speech which is vsed of some diuines, that the man regenerat hath but the reliques of sinne in him,
Eph. 4.13. must be vnderstood warily, else it may admit an vntruth. As for the measure of grace it can be but small in respect, where as we doe receiue but the first fruites of the spirit in this life, and must waite for the ac-
Rom. 8.23 complishment of our redemption till the life to come. For all this, the power and efficacie of the spirit is such, that it is able to preuaile ordinarily against the flesh. For the flesh receiues his deadly wound at the first instant of a mans conuersiō, & continually dyeth after by little and little: and therefore it fights but as a maimed souldiour. And the spirit is continually confirmed and increased by the Holy Ghost: also it is liuely and stirring: and the vertue of it is like muske, one graine whereof will giue a stronger smell, then many ounces of other perfumes. Some may say, that the Godly man doeth more feele the flesh then the spirit: and therfore that the flesh is euerie way more then the spirit. I answer, that we must not measure our estate by feeling, which may easily deceiue vs. A man shall feele a paine which is but in the top of his finger more sensibly the the health of his whole bodie: yet the health of the bodie is more then the paine of a finger. Secondly wee feele corruption not by corruption, but by grace; and therefore men, the more they feele their inward corruptions, the more grace they haue.

Thus much of the combate it selfe: nowe let vs come to the manner of this fight.

It is fought by Lusting. To lust in this place signifies to bring forth and to stirre vp motions and inclinations in the heart, either to good or euill:

Lusting is two-fold: the lusting of the flesh, and the lusting of the spirit:

The lusting of the flesh hath two actions: the first is to engender euill motions & inclinations of selfe-loue, enuie, pride, vnbeleefe, anger, &c. Sai. Iames saith, that men are entised and drawne away by their own concupiscence. Now this entising is only by the suggestion of badde cogitations
Iam. 1.14. and desires. This action of the flesh made Paul say, that he was carnall sold vnder sin,
Rom. 7.14. The seconde action of the flesh is, to hinder, and quench, and ouerwhelme all the good motions of the spirit. Paul founde this in himselfe when he said, I see another lawe in my members rebelling against the law of the mind, & leading me captiue to the law
Rom. 7.23 of sin. By reason of this action of the flesh the man regenerate is like to one in a slūber troubled with the disease called Ephialtes or the mare: who thinkes that hee feeles something lyinge on his breast as heauie as a mountaine: and would faine haue it away, whereupon hee striues and labours by hands and voice to remooue it, but for his life cannot doe it:

On the contrarie, the lusting of the spirit containes two other actions: The first is to beget good meditatiōs, motions, inclinations, and desires in the minde, will, and affections. Of this Dauid speaketh:
My reynes teach me in the night season: that Psal. 16.8. is, my minde, affection, and will, and my whole soule being sanctified and guided by the spirit of God, doe minister vnto me considerations of the waye in which I ought to walke: Isaias prophesying of the Isa. 30.21. Church of the new testament, saith, When a man goeth to the right hande or to the left, he shall heare a voice saying: Here is the way, walke ye in it. Which voice is not onely the outward preaching of the ministers; but also the inward voice of the spirit:

The seconde action of the spirit is to hinder and suppresse the bad de motions and suggestions of the flesh. S. Iohn saith, he that is borne of God sinneth not, because his
1. Ioh. 3.9. seed remaineth in him: that is, grace wrought in the heart by the holy Ghost, which resisteth the rebellious desires of the flesh.

That the manner of this fight may more clearely appeare, wee must examine it more particularly. In the soule of man there be two speciall parts, the mind and the will.

In the mind there is a double combate. The first is betweene knowledge of the word of God, and naturall ignorance or blindnesse: For seeing we doe in this life know but in part: therfore knowledge of the trueth must needs be ioyned with ignorance in al that are enlightened; & one of these beeing contrarie to another, they striue to ouershaddowe and outcast each other.

Hence wee may learne the cause why excellent diuines do varie in diuers points of religion: and it is, because in this combate, bate, naturall blindneſſe yet remaininge, preuailes more or leſſe. Men that are dim ſighted and cannot diſcerne without ſpectacles, if they be ſet to diſcrie a thing afarre off, the moſt of them would bee of diuers opiniõs of it. And men enlightned and regenerate in this life, doe but ſee as 1.Cor.13. in a glaſſe darkely. Again, this muſt teach al ſtudents of diuinitie often to ſuſpect thẽ ſelues in their opinions and defences: ſeing in thẽ that are of ſoundeſt iudgment the light of their vnderſtanding is mixed with darkenes of ignorãce. And they can in many points ſee but as the man in the Goſpell, who when our Sauiour Chriſt had in part opened his eyes, ſaw men walking, not as men, but in the forme of trees: Alſo this muſt teach al that read the ſcriptures to inuocate and call vpon the name of God, that he would enlighten them by his ſpirit, and aboliſh the miſt of natural blindnes. The prophet Dauid was wõthily inlightned with the knowledge of Gods word, ſo as he excelled the auncient and his own teachers in wiſedome; yet being priuie to himſelfe touching his owne blindneſſe, often prayeth in the Pſalmes, Inlighten mine eyes that I may vnderſtand the wonders of thy Lawe.

By reaſon of this fight, when naturall blindnes preuailes, the child of God truly inlightned with knowledge to life euerlaſting, may er not only in lighter points, but euen in the verie foundation of religion, as the Corinthians & the Galathians did. And as one may erre, ſo an hundred men may alſo; yea a whole particular Church; and as one Church may erre, ſo an hundred more may. For in reſpect of this combate, the eſtate and condition of all men is alike. Whence it appeares that the Church militant vpon earth is ſubiect to error. But yet as the diſeaſes of the bodie be of two ſorts; ſome curable, & ſome incurable which are to death: ſo likewiſe errours are. And the Church though it be ſubiect to ſundry falls, yet it cannot erre in foundation to death: the errors of gods children be curable. Some may here ſay, If all men and Churches be ſubiect to error, then it ſhall not be good to ioyne with any of them, but to ſeparate from them all. I anſwere, though they may and do erre, yet wee muſt not ſeparate from them, ſo long as they doe not ſeparate from Chriſt.

The ſecond combate in the minde, is betweene faith and vnbeleefe. For faith is imperfect, and mixt with the contrarie, vnbeleefe, preſuming, doubting, &c. As the man in the goſpel ſaith, Lord, I beleeue, helpe mine vnbeleefe.

By reaſon of this fight, when vnbeleefe preuailes, the verie child of God may fal into fits and pangs of deſpaire: as Iob & Dauid in their temptations did. For Dauid once conſidering the proſperitie of the wicked, brake out into this ſpeech. Certainly I haue clenſed mine hart in vaine, and waſhed mine hands in innocencie. Yea, Pſal.73.13 this deſpaire may be ſo extreame, that it ſhall weaken the bodie and conſume it more then any ſickeneſſe. No man is to thinke this ſtraung in the childe of God. For though he deſpaire of his election and ſaluation in Chriſt, yet his deſperatiõ is neither total nor final. It is not totall, becauſe he doth not deſpaire with his whole heart, faith euen at that inſtant luſting againſt deſpaire. It was not finall, becauſe he ſhall recouer before the laſt ende of his life.

To proceede, the combate in the will is this. The wil partly willeth and partly nilleth that which is good at the ſame inſtãt and ſo likewiſe it willeth and nilleth that which is euill, becauſe it is partly regenerate and partly vnregenerate. The affectiõs likewiſe, which are placed in the will, partly imbrace and partly eſchewe their obiects: as loue partly loueth, and partly, doeth not loue God and things to be loued: feare is mixed & not pure (as ſcooleמen haue dreamed) but partly filiall, partly ſeruile, cauſing the child of god to ſtãd in awe of God, not onely for his mercies, but alſo for his iudgements and puniſhments. The wil of a man regenerate is like him that hath one legge ſound, the other lame: who in euery ſtep, which he makes, doth not wholly halt, or wholly goe vpright, but partly goe vpright and partly halt. Or like a man in a boat on the water: who goeth vpward; becauſe he is carried vpward in the veſſel, & at the ſame time goes downward, becauſe he walks downward in the ſame veſſell at the ſame inſtant. If any ſhal ſay, that contraries cannot be in the ſame ſubiect: the anſwere is, they cannot, if one of them be in his full ſtrength a in the higheſt degree; but if the force of them booth be delaied and weakened, they may be ioyned togither:

a In gradibus remiſſionem in ſuis.

By reaſon of this combate, when corruption preuailes againſt grace in the wil and affections, there ariſeth in the godly a cerreceiue deadnesse or hardnesse of heart which is nothing else but a want of sense or feeling. Some may say, that this is a fearefull iudgement: but the answere is, that there be two kindes of hardnesse of heart: one which possesseth the heart, and is neuer felt: this is in those, who haue their

Eph. 4. 19. conscience seared with hote yron: who by reason of custome of sinne are past all feeling, who like wise despise the meanes of softening their hearts. And in deede this is a fearefull iudgement. There is an Zech. 7. 11. other hardnesse of heart which is felt: and this is not so dangerous as the former: for as soone as we feele our sickenes by contrarie life and health: so hardnesse of heart when it is felt, argues quicknesse of grace, and softnes of heart. Of this Dauid often complained in the Psalmes: of this the children of Israell speake when they say, Why hast thou hardened our hearts from thy feare?

Thus much of the manner of the com-
Esa. 63. 17. bat in particular: before we proceed any further: let vs marke the issue of it, which is to preuaile against the flesh.

The spirit preuailes against the flesh at two times: in the course of a mans life, and at his ende; but yet with some foiles receiued.

I say the spirit preuailes not in one instant, but in the whole course of mans life
1. Iohn. 5. 19 so S. Iohn saith, He that is begotten of God sinneth not: for he preserueth himselfe: the grace of God in his heart ordinarily preuaileth in him. And Paul makes it the properie of the regenerate man to walke according to the spirit, which is not now and
Rom. 8. 1. then to make a steppe forwarde, but to keepe his ordinarie course in the way of godlinesse. As in going from Barwicke to London, it may be a man nowe and then will goe amisse: but he speedilie returnes to the way again, and his course generally shall be right.

Againe, the spirit preuailes in the ende of a mans life. For then the flesh is vtterly abolished, & sanctification accomplished because no vncleane thing can enter into the kingdome of heauen.

This further must bee conceiued; that where the spirit preuailes it is not without resistance and striuing: as Paul testifieth, I do not the good which I would, but the euill which I would not, that do I. Which place is not to be vnderstood only of thoughts and inward motions (as some would haue it) nor of particular offences: but of the generall practise of the duties or calling, through the whole course of his life. And it is like the practise of a sicke man, who hauing recouered of some grieuous disease, walkes a turne or twoyne about his chamber, saying, ah, I would faine walke vp & downe but I cannot; meaning not that he cannot walke at all, but signifying that he cannot walke as he would, beeing soone wearied through faintnesse.

I added further, that this preuayling is with foyles. A foyle is, when the flesh for a time vanquisheth & subdueth the spirit. In this case, the man regenerate is like a souldier, that with a blow hath his braine pan cracked, so as he lies groueling astonished not able to fight: or like him that hath a fit of the falling sickne, who for a time lies like a dead man. Hence the question must be moued, whether the flesh preuailing, doth not extinguish the spirit: and so cut off a man from Christ: till such time as he be ingrafted again. The answer is this. There bee two sorts of Christians: one who doth only in shew & name professe Christ: and such an one is no otherwise a member of Christs mystical body, then a woodden legg set to the body is a member of the bodie. The second is hee that in name and deede is a liuely part and member of Christ. If the first fall, hee can not be saide to be cut off, because hee was neuer ingrafted. If the second fall, he may be and is cut off from Christ. But marke how he is not wholly cut off, but in some part, namely in respect of the inward fellowship and communion with Christ, but not in respect of coniunction with him. A mans arme taken with the dead palsie, hangs by and receiues no heate, life, or sence from the members, or from the head; yet for all this, it remaines still vnited and coupled to the bodie, and may againe bee recouered by plaisters and physicke: so after a grieuous fall the child of God feeles no inward peace and comfort, but is smitten in conscience with the trembling of a spirituall palsie for his offence: and yet indeede still remaines before God a member of Christ in respect of coniunction with him, and shall be restored to his former estate after serious repentance.

And God permittes these foyles for weightie causes: first that men might be abashed & confounded in themselues with the consideration of their vile natures, & learne not to swell with pride; because of Gods grace. Paul saith, that after hee had had beene rapt into the third heauen, the angel Sathan was sent to buffet him and (as 2.Cor.12.7. we say) to beate him blacke & blew, that he might not be exalted out of measure. The second, that we may learne to denie our selues and cleaue vnto the Lord from the bottom of our hearts. Paul saith that 2.Cor.1.9. he was sick to death, that he might not trust in himselfe, but in God who raiseth the dead.

Thus much of the manner of the combat: now followes the cause of it.

The cause is the contrarietie that is be-Rom.8.5. tweene the flesh and the spirit. As Paul saith, The wisedome of the flesh is enmitie to God.

Hence we are taught, that since the fall there is no free-will in man in spirituall matters concerning either the worship of God or life euerlasting. For flesh is nothing else but our naturall disposition: & a man is nothing else but flesh by nature: for the spirit comes afterward by grace: & the flesh is flatte contrarie to the spirite, which makes vs do that which is pleasing vnto God. Wherefore the will naturally is a flat bondslaue vnto sinne.

Againe, hence we may learne, that it is not an easie matter to practise religion, which is to liue according to the spirit, to which our naturall disposition is as cõtrarious fire to water: wherefore if wee will obey God, wee must learne to force our natures to the duties of Godlinesse; yea, euen sweate and take paines therein.

Lastly, here we may learne the nature of sinne. The spirit is not a substance but a qualitie: and therefore the flesh which is nothing else but originall sinne, and is cõtrarie to the spirit, must also be a qualitie; for such as the nature of one contrarie is, such is the other. There is in euerie man, the substance of the bodie and soule, this can not bee sinne, for then the spirit also should be the substance of man. There is also in the substance the faculties of the bodie and soule: & they can not be sinne, for then euerie man should haue lost the faculties of his soule by Adams fall. Lastly in the faculties there is a contagion or corruption which carieth them against the law: and that is properly sin, and the flesh, which is contrarie to the spirit.

The fourth point is, touching the persons in whome this combat is, Paul shewes who they are, when he saith, So that ye can not, &c. where it appeares, that such as haue this combate in them must be as the Galatians, men iustified & sanctified; and yet not all such, but onely they that be of yeares: for the infantes of the faithfull, howsoeuer we must repute them to belong to the kingdome of heauen, & therefore to be iustified and sanctified: yet because they doe not commit actuall sinne, they want this combate of the flesh and spirit, which stands in action. As for those which bee vnregenerate, they neuer felt this fight. If any say that the vilest man in the world, when he is about to commit any sinne, hath a strife and fight in him: it is true indeede: but that is an other kind of combate, which is betweene the conscience and the heart: The conscience on the one part terrifying the man from sin: the will and the affections hailing & pulling him thereunto: the will and the affections wishing and desiring that sin were no sinne, and Gods commandement abolished: whereas contrariwise the conscience with a shrill voice proclaimes sinne to be sinne. This fight was in Pilate, who by the force of his conscience feared to condemne Christ; and yet was willing, & yeelded to condemne him that he might please the people.

Furthermore this combate is in the regenerate but during the time of this life: For they which are perfectly sanctified feele no strife. If any shall say, that this combate was in Christ, when he said, Father if it be thy will, let this cuppe passe from me, yet not my will, but thine be done; indeed here is a combat, but of an other sort; namly the fight of two diuerse desires: the one was a desire to doe his fathers will in suffering the death of the crosse, the other a natural desire (which was no sinne but a mere infirmitie of humane nature) wherby he in his manhood desires (as the manner of nature is to seeke the preseruation of it selfe) to haue the cursed death of the crosse remooued from him.

The fift point is the effect of this combat, which is to make the man regenerate that he cannot do the things which he would, and this must bee vnderstood in thinges both good and euill.

And first he cannot doe the euill which he would for two causes. First, because he can not commit sinne at what time soeuer he would. Saint Iohn saith, He that is borne of God, sinneth not, neither can hee sinne, because he is borne of God, that is he cannot sinne at his pleasure or when he will: Ioseph whe he was assaulted with Putiphars wife to adulterie, because the grace of god

abounded in him, whereby he answered her, saying, Shall I doe this, and sinne against God? he could not then sinne. Lot because his righteous heart was grieued in seeing and hearing the abominations of Sodom, could not then sinne as they of Sodom did. Hence it appeares, that such persons as liue in the daily practise of sinne against their owne consciences, (though they bee professours of the true religion of Christ), haue no soundnesse of grace in them.

Secondly, the man regenerate can not sinne in what manner he would: and there be two reasons thereof. First hee can not sinne, with full consent of will, or with all his heart: because the will so farre forth as it is regenerate, resisteth & draweth backe yea, euen then whe a man is carried headlong by the passion of the flesh, hee feeles some contrary motions of a regenerate conscience. It is a rule that sinne doth not raigne in the regenerate. For so much grace as is wrought in the minde, will, affections, so much is abated proportionally of the strength of the flesh. Wherefore when he commits any sin, he doth it partly willingly, and partly against his will. As the marriners in the tempest, cast Ionas into the sea willingly: for otherwise they had not done it: and yet against their wills too: which appeares because they prayed, and cast their goods out of the shippe, and laboured in the rowing against the tempest, and that verie longe before they cast him out. And herein lies the difference betweene two men committing one and the same sinne, the one of them beeing regenerate, the other vnregenerate. For the latter sinnes with all his heart and with full consent, and so doth not the first. Secondly, though he fall into any sinne, yet he doth not lie long in it, but speedily recouers himselfe, by reason of grace in his heart.

Hence it is manyfest that sinnes of infirmitie are committed only of such as are regenerate. As for the man vnregenerate he can not sinne of infirmitie whatsoeuer some falsly thinke. For he is not weak but starke dead in sinne. And sinnes of infirmitie are such only as arise of constraint, feare, hastinesse, and such like sudden passions in the regenerate. And though they sinne of weakenes often by reason of this spirituall combat, yet they doe not alwaies; for they may sinne against knowledge and conscience of presumption.

To come to the second point; the regenerate man can not doe the good which he would; because he can not doe it perfitlye and soundly according to Gods wil as he would. Paul saith, To will is present with me, but I finde not meanes, perfitly to doe that which I would. In this pointe the godly man is like a prisoner that is gotten forth of the gayle, and that he might escape the hand of the keeper, desires and striues with all his heart to runne an hundred miles in a day, but because hee hath straight and waighty bolts on his legges cannot for his life creepe past a mile or twaine, and that with chafing his flesh and tormenting himselfe; So the seruantes of God doe heartily desire, and indeauour to obey God in all his commandements: as it is sayd of King Iosias, That he turned to God with all his heart, with all his soule, with all his might, according to all the lawes of Moses, &c. yet because they are clogged with the bolts of the flesh, they performe obedience both slowly and weakely, with diuers slippes and falls; Rom. 7. 18. 2 King. 23. 25

Thus much of the combat: now let vs see what vse may be made of it,

First of al, by it wee learne what is the estate of a Christian man in this life. A Christian is not one that is free from all euill cogitations, from rebellious inclinations and motions of will and affections, from all manner of slippes in his life and conuersation: for such an one is a meere deuise of mans braine, and not tobe found vpon earth. But indeede he is the sounde Christian that feeling himselfe laden with the corruptions of his vile and rebellious nature, bewailes them from his heart, and with might & mayne fights against them by the grace of Gods spirit. Againe here is ouerthrowne the Popish opinion of merit and iustification by workes of grace, on this manner, Such as the cause of works is, such are workes themselues. The cause of workes in man, is the minde, will, and affections sanctified: in which, the flesh and the spirit are mixt togither, as hath beene shewed before. Therfore works of grace, euen the best of them; are mixt workes, partly holy, and partly sinnefull. Whereby it is euident to a man that hath but common sense that they are not answerable to the righteousnesse of the lawe; and that therefore they can neither merit life, or any way iustifie a man before God. If any reply, that goods works are the works of gods spirit, & for that cause perfectly righteous. I answer, it is true indeed, they come from the H: Ghost that cannot sinne, but not onely or immediately. For they come also from the corrupt minde and will of man, and in that respect become sinneful, as sweete water issuing out of a pure soũtaine, is by a filthy channel made corrupt.

Thirdly, we doe hence learne that concupiscence or originall sinne is properlie and indeed sinne after baptisme, though it please the Council of Trent to decree otherwise. For after baptisme it is flat cõtrarie to the spirit, and rebels against it. Papistes obiect, that it is taken away by baptisme. Anſ. Original sinne or the flesh is taken away in the regenerate thus, In it there be three things; the guilt, the punishment, the corruption: the first two are quite abolished by the merite of Christes death in baptisme: the third, that is, the corruption, remaines still: but marke in what manner: it remaines weakened, it remaines not imputed to the person of the beleeuer.

Lastly, hereby wee are taught to bee watchful in prayer. Watch and pray (saith Christ) &c. for the spirit is readie, but the flesh is weake. Rebecca, when two twinnes stroue in her womb was troubled & said; Why am I so? wherefore shee went to aske the Lord, namely by some prophet. So when we feele this inward fight, the best thing is to haue recourse to God by prayer, and to his word, that the spirite may be strengthened against the flesh. As the children of Israel by compassing the cittie of Ierico seuen daies, and by sounding rammes hornes ouerturned the wals therof: so by serious inuocation of Gods name the spirit is confirmed, and the turrets and towers of the rebellious flesh battered.

HOW TO LIVE,

AND THAT WELL:

in all estates and times,

SPECIALLY

when helpes and comforts faile.

Printed by IOHN LEGAT, Printer to the Vniuersitie of CAMBRIDGE. 1605.

TO THE READER.

GOod Reader, if thou wouldest be saued by faith in Christ after death: thou must here liue by it before death, And faith for the time of this life, hath two great vses. The first is to cut off wordly sorrowes and cares. It is the common fashion of men, to multiplie their cares out of measure, and therby to make their liues most miserable. For first of all, beside necessarie labours, they take vpon them many needlesse and superfluous businesses. Secondly their manner is, to care not onely for the labours to be done, but also for the euent and successe of their labours, that they may alwaies prosper and neuer be crossed: but this care belongs to God alone. Thirdly, they content not themselues with their lot and condition, but seeke by all meanes to increase their estate, and to make themselues rich. Lastly, they exercise themselues not onely in disposing of things present, but they forecast many matters in their heads and plot the successe of things to come. Now faith, whē we haue done the works of our callings according to the prescript of the word of God, faith (I say) maketh vs commend to God the blessing, successe, and event thereof by prayer and affiance in his promises, not doubting but he will giue vs all things necessarie. And if we want the blessing and successe we looke for, yet faith makes vs to renounce our owne desires, and in silence to quiet our hearts in the good pleasure of God. And thus many wordldly cares are cut off.

Secondly, when a man at his wits ende, knowes not what in the world to doe, beeing (as it were) plunged into a sea of miseries, faith giues direction and staies the minde. For when all temporall thinges faile vs euen to the very skinne and life, faith preserues within vs an affiance of the grace & mercie of God, & the hope of life euerlasting. Faith shewes vs hidde things not to be discerned by sence and reason. Life euerlasting is promised to vs, but we die for all that we heare of the resurrection, but in the meane season we rotte in our graues: we are pronounced blessed, But yet wee are euery where helmed with infinite miseries: abundance of all things is promised but for all this we often hunger and thirst: God promiseth to heare vs and to be present with vs, but he seemes oft times to be deafe (as it weare) at our cries. Now then comes faith, which is the substance of things hoped for, and makes vs lift our mindes aboue the whole world, to apprehend the inuincible and vnspeakable things of God which he hath reuealed and promised vnto vs. These things I shew more at large in this smal treatise following: read it at thy leisure, vse it for thy good, and see thou be a doer of them.

Hab. 2, 4. The iuſt man ſhall liue by his faith.

IN the former chapter the prophet cõplains and expoſtulates the mater with God, why the Iewes the people of god, ſhold be oppreſſed by the Chaldeans, the enimies of God. in the beginning of the 2. chapter, the Lord maks anſwer to the Prophet & the effect of the anſwer is this: they ſhall certainly be deliuered in the time appointed, but they ſhal not yet be deliuered. Vpõ this anſwer the Prophet might happily obiect on this maner: How then ſhal the afflicted Iewes be able to liue in the meane ſeaſon? the Lord anſwers by a diſtinction thus; The vniuſt man puffes vp himſelfe with vaine confidence, but the iuſt man ſhall liue by his faith.

For the better vnderſtanding of the words, fiue things are in order to be expla ned. The firſt; what is meant by the iuſt man. Iuſtice mẽtioned in the word is two fold: the iuſtice of the lawe, and the iuſtice of the Goſpel. The iuſtice of the law, hath in it all the points and parts of iuſtice, and all the perfection of all parts: & it was neuer found in any vpon earth, except Adã & Chriſt. The iuſtice of the Goſpell hath all the parts of true iuſtice, but it wãts the full perfection of parts: as a child hath all the parts of a man in the infancie, though it want perfection of ſtature and talnes. And this kind of iuſtice is nothing els, but the conuerſion of a ſinner, with a purpoſe will, and indeauour to pleaſe God, according to al the commandemẽts of the law Thus was Noe iuſt, Iob, Zacharie, & Elizabeth: and thus muſt the iuſt man be taken in this place for one, that turnes to God, and by grace indeauours to pleaſe God, according to the whole law of God in his place & calling. Ioh. 1. 6. Ioh. 1 8

The ſecond poine to be conſidered is, what life is here meant? As death is here two fold: the firſt and the ſecond: ſo is life The firſt is the coniũction of the bodie & the ſoule; the ſecond is the coniunction of the whole man with God. The firſt is called naturall, the ſecond ſpirituall or eternall life: and both are ment in this place. For Paul brings this verie text to proue the iuſtification of a ſinner by faith and iuſtification is a part of ſpirituall life; becauſe it is the acceptation of a ſinner to eternall life. And for this cauſe the prophet ſaith, the iuſt man ſhall liue, hauing relation not onely to the time of affliction then to come, but alſo to eternall life. Rom. 1. 17 Gal. 3. 11.

The third point to bee conſidered is, what is the faith here meant: And that is iuſtifying or ſauing faith; becauſe we muſt liue by the ſame faith, whereby we are ſaued. And faith hath his effect not onely after this life, but alſo in this life. We muſt liue firſt by it, before we can be ſaued by it. Paul therfore in his owne example expounding this text, ſaith, And in that I liue in the fleſh, I liue by the faith of the ſonne of God, who hath loued me, and giuen himſelfe for me. Gal. 2. 20.

The fourth point is the conſtruction of the words; and that is two waies. The firſt is thus, The iuſt by faith ſhal liue: the words by faith being ioined vpon the word Iuſt. And then the ſenſe is this: He that is iuſt by his faith ſhal liue & haue eternall life. The ſecond is thus; The iuſt ſhall liue by his faith; the worde by faith, being ioined to the words ſhall liue: and then the ſenſe is this: The iuſt whiles he liues in this world, he ſhall liue by his faith. This latter conſtruction and ſenſe, I rather chooſe and imbrace, becauſe Paul, euen in this ſenſe brings this text to prooue that life eternal & cõſequently iuſtification comes not by working according to the law, but by beleeuing, and he makes an oppoſition betweene liuing by faith, & liuing by workes. Gal. 3. 11. 12

The fifth and laſt point to be conſidered is, how a man ſhould liue by faith? becauſe this laſt point is of great moment, I wil ſpend ſome time in the explaining of it. That a man then may liue by his faith, two things required; the firſt, that faith be rightly conceiued & grounded in the heart; the ſecond, that after it once conceined, it Raigne & rule in the hart. That faith may rightly be cõceiued, two things are required. The firſt is the knowledge of the word of God, for faith ſtands in relation to the word, and the word alone is the foundation of our faith. Herupon the word is called the foũdatiõ of the Prophets & Apoſtles. By light of natural reaſon we vnderſtãd, that the world had a begining & was made of God. Yet cannot reaſon breed in vs a certaine perſwaſion of this point, but only the teſtimony of the word Eph. 2. 20.

of God: & therefore it is said, By faith wee Heb. 11 3. vnderstand that the world was ordained by God. And this made Dauid say, In god I wil
Psal. 56. 4. praise his word. Furthermore, in the Word three things are to be knowne, precepts or commandements, because they teach obe dience: threatnings, because they restraine disobedience: promises, because they serue to confirme vs in our obedience. Againe, promises are either principall, or lesseprincipall. The maine or principall promise is that, in which God offereth and re uealeth righteousnes & life euerlasting by Christ. Within this promise is contained the grant of remission of our sinnes, of necessarie patience, of the assistance of the spirit of God, & of al giftes that are inseperablie ioyned with faith. promises lesse principall, are concerning deliuerances in tẽptations, saftie in dãgers, helth, wealth, libertie, peace, &c. And these must all bee vnderstood, with an exceptiõ of the crosse and correction: & they shal so farre forth be accomplished as they serue for Gods glorie & the good of al thẽ that beleeue.
Now al these heads & points of the word of God must be known, and that in some particular sort; that a man may liue by his faith.

The secõd thing required for the right conceiuinge of faith is, after the word of God is once known. To trust God vpon his word: yea to depend vpon it, and to build vppon it. This is the first and principall Rom. 1. 5. worke of true faith: & it is called by Paul the obedience of faith: & it is made the end and scope of the preaching of the gospel; and not without cause. For this is the first and principall honour of God to beleeue him vpon his bare word; and thereby to make a confessiõ of the truth of god. This the deuill knew right well: & therfore the first thing that he sought to ouerthrow in Adam, was his faith in the word of God;
& the scope of the first temptation wher-by he assaulted our Sauiour Christ, was to ouerthrow that faith, & confidence he had in his father: saying, If thou be the sonne of Math. 4. 3. God, cõmand that these stones be made bread but this thou canst not do: therfore thou art not the sonne of God.

That this obedience, which we giue to God by trusting his very word, may bee right obedience, it must haue sixe conditi ons. First of al, it must be absolute: for we must (as it were) shut vp our owne eies, & simply without any more adoe trust God vpon his bare and naked word, and suffer our selues to be ledde by it. In naturall things experience is first, and then faith comes afterwarde. And Thomas following nature desired first to feele, before he would beleeue. But God must be trusted, thought that which he saith be against reason and experience. Thus Abraham beleeued god against al humane hope. Rom. 4. 24
The second condition is, that this obedience must be sincere. For wee must trust Gods word for it selfe, because it is Gods word: al by respects set a part. They which are as the stonie grounde receiue Gods word and reioyce in it; and yet afterward, in time of temptation goe awrie. The reason is, because they receiue the word, and reioyce in it, not properly for it selfe, but in respect of honour, profit, or pleasure, which they looke to reape thereby: Luk. 8. 13.
Iohn the Baptist was a burninge candle; Iob. 5. 3. and the Iewes reioyced in his light, onely in respect of the noueltie of it: and therefore the holy Ghost saith; They reioyced in it but for a season. The third condition is, that we must trust God not in part, but in his whole worde; and therefore many faile in their faith, that are content to trust him in his promises of mercie and saluation, but list not to beleeue him in his commandements and threats. The fourth condition is, that wee must trust God in Iam. 1. 21.
his word, with all our hearts, that it may take deepe roote and bee an ingafted word. It is not sufficient for vs to haue a tast of the good worde of God, and to receiue it with ioy, vnlesse we through-ly and soundly build and relie our selues vpon it. The fift condition is, that this trusting of God must bee with an honest heart, that is, with an heart in which there is a distinct purpose not to sinne, but in all things to doe the will of God.
The good hearers are they which receiue the worde with an honest and good heart. Without this can noe man pos- Luk. 8. 15; sibly liue by faith. Hee that puts away 1. Tim. 1. 19 his good conscience, makes shippewracke of his faith; It is godlinesse alone that hath the promises of this life and the life to come. And none can liue the life of faith, but he that is a iust mã. After that men haue made some good proceedings, and doe know the word, receiue it, rejoyce in it, and bring forth some fruite: if the heart for all this be euill; it Heb. 3. 12 will cause them at length to depart from God,

God, by distrusting or by denying credence to the worde. The sixth condition is, that the obedience of faith must bee stable and constant. The Lorde saith, My Heb.10,38. soule hath no pleasure in them that withdraw themselues, that is, which for a time beleeue in God, and afterward pul backe their foote and goe backe from their faith.

Seeing this is the right way to conceiue faith; to know the word of God, and to trust him vppon the same worde, all such as woulde liue by faith, must haue their heartes kindled with a desire to doe the thinges before named, specially to giue credence to euerie worde of God. Wee may not forsake GOD for any creature: now we forsake him, when we distrust him in his word. Againe, not to beleeue God, is verie Atheisme. For by this meanes God is made a lyar, and his glorie and Maiestie is abolished. It Ioh.3.33. is the greatest parte of our glorie to beleeue God: as Christ saith, Hee that receiues his testimonie, puts to his seale that God is true; that is, giues vnto God, as it were, a testimoniall of his truth, and thereto puts to his hand and seale. And what greater honour can there bee then this, that the creature should giue testimonie to the Creator?

Thus much of the conceiuing of faith: nowe followes the Raigne of faith. The raigne of faith is, when it beares rule and sway in heart and life. For where faith is, there neither thought, will, affection, nor lust raigns, but faith alon. It raigns by two actions. First of all it mooues & makes vs to attend on the calling of God, and yeild subiectiō to him in all his cōmandements. Paul saith, that faith establisheth the law: & Rom.3,31. one reason is, because it maks vs doe that which the law prescribes. Againe, Paule saith, that his weapons are spirituall and mightie, bringing euerie thought in subiection to god. Now these mightie weapons 2.Cor.10. are the word of God, preached and beleeued. He that is borne of God cānot sinne, 1.Ioh.3,9. because the seede of God remaines in him, that is, the word mingled with faith. Noah his faith made him build an arke at Gods Heb.11,7. commandement: after it was made, to enter into it, and not to dare to come out of Gen.12,16. it, till he had warrant from god. Abrahams faith made him forsake his countrie and kinred at gods commandement, and goe, he knew not whether. And that good obedience may be performed to euerie cōmandement of God, faith works 2. things in vs, memorie, attention. Memorie, Whereby Pſal.119.11; Act.16,32. Gods word is laide vp in the heart, that it may be drawne out to vse when occasion shall be offered. Attention is, when faith makes vs seriously to consider and to beleeue that the commandement of god is a cōmandement not for forme but in truth, and that it doth indeede pertaine to vs. An example of both these actions of faith we haue in Ioseph, who whē he was tempted to folly of Potiphars wife, answered, Shall I doe this wickednes. AND SINNE Gen.39. AGAINST GOD? Mark here how his minde was filled and possessed with a thought & consideration of Gods commandement.

The second action of faith, whereby it raignes in the heart is, to establish and confirme them that beleeue in their obedience, and subiection to God. And this it doth, by presenting Gods promises to the minde. For by meanes of them it worketh foure actions in the heart. First of all it makes vs flie vnto the true God alone, whose the promises are. Secondly it maks vs to beleeue that God both can and will helpe vs according to our neede. Thirdly it makes vs to hope for his helpe, that is, for good succesſe in prosperitie and deliuerance, or some mitigation of our euils in aduersitie, according to the tenour of his promises. Lastly, though temporall blessing failes, it makes vs still to rest on God for mercie and for life euerlastinge. And thus at all times it makes God to bee our Refuge, our Castle, our Rocke, and Tower of defence. Thus we see generally how faith raignes.

To proceede further, the iust man liues a double life, namely a spirituall life, and a temporall, and both of them are lead by faith; as I will plainely manifest; Spirituall life, which is the beginning of eternall life, stands specially in foure thinges, Reconciliation with God, peace of conscience, ioy of the holy ghost; and newnesse of life. Touchinge reconciliation with God in Christ, it is reuealed, offered, and giuen vnto vs in the maine promises of the gospel, and in the Sacraments; and it is no way in this worlde made ours and holden of vs, but by our faith. And in the case of our reconciliation with god, faith hath two actions, on to receiue it, the other to assure vs of it.

Touching

Touching the first, faith apprehends and receiues reconciliation on this manner; First of all the spirit of God workes in man a generall faith of the law, and the threatning thereof, and it is called the spirit of bondage to feare. Because it causeth in vs a sight of our sinnes, an apprehension of Gods anger, feare of due and deserued condemnation, despaire of our selues in respect of our selues. This being done, the same spirit worketh in vs another faith called sauing or iustifying faith: and it apprehendeth or receiueth Christ with his benefits, by certaine steepes and degrees, and they are specially three. For first of all vpon a through touch and liuely sense of our miserie, there ariseth in the minde an earnest and serious meditation of the promise of mercie and the benefits therein offered: and it is called the opening or piercing of the eare. Then in the second place there followes a purpose, will, desire, and indeauour to beleeue vpon consideration of the commandement of God that bids vs to beleeue and applie the promise to our selues. And further this will and desire shewes it selfe by instant and serious inuocation, which is nothing els but a flying from the condemning sentence of the law to the throne of graee for mercie. Thirdly after this, there followes in processe of time, a setling and quieting of the minde touching Christ and his benefites vpon some assurance thereof, wrought and conceiued in the minde by the spirite of God. And this third degree is called a stablished thought. On this manner come we by degrees to receiue Christ for our full reconciliation with God. For, when vpon the commandement to beleeue, we doe in any measure beleeue Christ to bee our Christ, hee is our Christ indeede according to the tenour of the Euangelicall couenant. Thus faith apprehending Christ for our reconciliation with God. becomes a victorious conquetour & preuailes against the Law, Satan, hell, death, condemnation, and all our spirituall enemies; and thus euerie beleeuer is aboue the Law, sin, hell, death, euen in this life.

Rom. 8. 15.

Psal. 40. 6.

1. Ioh. 3. 23.

Heb. 4. 16.

Ps. 26. 3.

2. Ioh. 5. 4.

The second action of faith in the case of our reconciliation with God, is to certifie & assure vs in conscience therof: and that is done by a practicall syllogisme, which faith frames in the minde on this manner:

He that beleeues the Gospel, shall haue all the benefits and blessings of God promised therein:

But I beleeue the Gospell, and I beleeue in Christ;

Therefore the benefits promised therein are mine.

The maior or first part of this reasō, is the voice of the Gospell: the minor or the second part is the voice of the beleeuing heart, which subiecteth it selfe in will and affection to the commandement which bids vs beleeue in Christ: and this is the act of special faith. And we may not think that this voice of the beleeuing heart is a false alarum. For hee that truely beleeues hath his minde and conscience supernaturally inlightned to discerne that he beleeues, The third part, or the conclusion is the foundation of all our ioy and spirituall comfort. For it containes in it the chiefest certentie of our adoption and saluation that can be had in this life, namely the certentie of faith, whence follows in a lower degree in the second place, the certenty that is by workes: And thus doth faith certifie all such as truly beleeue that they are the children of God.

Out of the former conclusion, or out of the certainty which is by faith, followes a full and liuely certentie of the doctrine of the Gospel, worthy consideration; on this manner. There is a threefold certenty: the first is certentie of reason or of generall faith, when a man by force of argument is conuicted of the certenty of the doctrine of the Bible. This may bee in the wicked & vngodly without faith in Christ. After this, in the elect by a more speciall worke of Gods spirit, followes a faith in Christ, and the certentie of iustifying or special faith expressed in the conclusion of the former syllogisme. Thirdly, after this certentie of speciall faith followes another experimental certentie of the truth of the Bible, which also faith concludes on this manner.

The doctrine which assures vs to bee Gods children, is certenly of God;

But the doctrine of the gospell, beleeued or mingled with our faith, assures vs to bee Gods children:

Therefore it is of God.

The maior is granted of all: the minor is in effect the conclusion of the former syllogisme, and it is knowne by an experience of that spiritual comfort which the gody feele in their hearts. The conclusion sets downe the certentie of the Bible vpon a further ground, then any wit or learning of man can attaine vnto without the ſpirit of grace, namely vpō an inward aſſurance of our reconcilation with God. Of this certentie of our Sauiour Chriſt ſpeaks notably, If any man will doe my fathers will, that is, beleeue it, and ſubiect himſelfe to it, he ſhall know [namely by that comfort which he ſhall feele vpon his ſubiection] of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I ſpeake of my ſelfe. And Paul ſaith, that the ſpirituall man, that is, one regenerate by the ſpirit of God, iudgeth all things. Hence it followes, that ſuch as deſire to be ſetled for their religion, and ſuch as deſire to be good and profitable ſtudents in Diuinitie, muſt firſt of all humble themſelues, and indeuour in their hearts truly to beleeue in Chriſt. Becauſe hence flowes the beſt experience of the certentie and conſequently of the vnſpeakable excellencie of the Bible.

Ioh.9.17.

1.Cor.2.15.

Thus then we ſee, how we are to receiue, hold, and inioy our reconcilation with God in Chriſt, by no other thing within vs, but by the meanes of our faith alone. And therefore we muſt haue ſpeciall care that we may by the vſe of Gods meanes attaine to a liuely faith. And for this cauſe we muſt doe two things: firſt we are to labour to be conuicted in conſcience of the certentie of the word. This done, we muſt then ſubiect our wils to the commandement of God that bids vs beleeue in Chriſt: we muſt bewaile our vnbeliefe: we muſt ſtriue againſt the ſame, & pray vnto God to confirme and increaſe our faith, by eſtabliſhing our hearts in his loue.

The ſecond part of ſpirituall life, is Peace of conſcience; which is nothing elſe but a conſtant and ſtable tranquillitie of minde, when the conſcience doth not accuſe but excuſe: and when neither hell, death, condemnation, nor any daunger is feared ouermuch. This peace was in Dauid, when he ſaid, I laid me downe and ſlept, and roſe againe, in the middeſt of manifold dangers. This peace is of great excellencie. For it is the peace of God: it is one part of the kingdome of God: it paſſeth all vnderſtanding: it is in ſtead of a guard to keepe our hearts and minds in Chriſt. Now this excellent peace ſpringes out of our faith, whereby we beleeue our reconciliation with God. Rom. 5.1. Being iuſtified by faith, we haue peace with God. 1.Chr.20.20. Truſt in the Lord, and ye ſhalbe ſecure. Yea as our faith is, ſo is our peace: liuely faith, liuely peace; conſtant faith, conſtant peace; faith in life, peace in life; faith in death, peace in death: ſo as we may ſay with Simeon; Lord, now letteſt thou thy ſeruant depart in peace.

Pſal.3.5.

Phil.4.7.

Rom.14.17.

The third part of ſpirituall life is, the ioy of the holy Ghoſt: and that is, to reioyce in God becauſe he is our God, and in Chriſt becauſe he is our Chriſt. And this kind of ioy is not taken from vs, or abated in afflictions, but rather increaſed. Rom. 5. 3. We reioyce in tribulations, And, Heb. 10.34. Ye endured the ſpoiling of your goods with ioy. Now, our faith in the promiſe of life is the mother and breeder of this ioy, which ariſeth of that happie and bleſſed concluſion that faith frames in the minde; I beleeue: therefore the bleſſings of God promiſed in the Goſpell, are mine. Thus ſaith Saint Peter. Beleeuing ye reioyce with ioy vnſpeakable and glorious. Againe the continuance & increaſe of our faith, is the increaſe of this ioy.

Phil.3.1.

The laſt part of ſpirituall life is, newneſſe of life and conuerſation, whereby we are borne anew, and made new creatures: not becauſe the ſubſtance of bodie and ſoule is changed, but becauſe the image of God is reſtored. Now this change both for the whole & for the parts thereof, is by faith. Touching the whole: Men as they are new creatures haue their beginning from the word of promiſe, or from Chriſt crucified, who is propounded in the promiſe, and that as the ſaid word, or Chriſt is apprehended by faith. Act. 15.9. Your hearts beeing purified by faith. 1.Ioh.3.3. He which hath this hope purifieth himſelfe. 1.Pet.1.22. Your ſoules are purified in obeying the truth. And againe, Being borne anew of the immortall ſeede of the word.

The parts of newneſſe of life are ſpecially three. True wiſdome, good affections, good works. True wiſdome is to abuſe of good things & to vſe good meanes for the execution thereof. This wiſdome ariſeth of our faith in the word of God. Dauid ſaith, he was wiſer then his teachers, and wiſer then the ancients: and he renders the cauſe thereof from the worke of his faith. For thy teſtimonies are euer with me, and they are my meditations. Out of the ſame fountaine ſpring all good affections. The loue whereby we loue God, comes of our faith, beleeuing the loue wherewith God loueth vs. The perſwaſion of the forgiuenes of many ſinnes in the woman that waſhed Chriſts feete with her teares, cauſed, her to shew much loue to Christ. Godly sorow, when the heart is greiued properly for the offence of God, ariseth of faith apprehending and beleeuing the mercie of God in Christ. And in euery good worke, there is a threefold action required. First there is required an acte of generall faith, which is to beleeue that the worke to be done in his kinde pleaseth God. Rom. 14.23 Whatsoeuer is not of faith is sinne. The second is an acte of iustifying faith, which is to purge the heart, and to cause it to bring forth the good worke to be done. Psal. 116.10. I beleeued, therefore I spake. The third is also an acte of iustifying faith that is, when the worke is done, to apprehend Christ who by his merit is to couer the defect of the worke: because no worke of ours can please God without remission of sinne.

Thus newnesse of life with all parts thereof, hath his offspring of our faith. Yea after that a man is once made a newe creature, faith giues him his life and sence: faith is the eye of the minde, whereby we behold Christ in the word and sacraments. By this faith Abraham saw the day of Christ and reioyced. With this eie we may sufficiently behold Christ; & bodily sight in this case is not necessarie for the time of this life: therefore Christ saith, Blessed are they which haue not seene and haue beleeued. Againe, faith is the hand of the soule, whereby we lay hold on Christ and receiue him with all his benefits. It is the mouth of the heart, whereby we feede on Christ, eating his bodie and drinking his blood to eternall life. It is the feete of the soule, that makes vs walke with God. Lastly it is a meanes to bring vs into familiaritie with God. For it is an eare whereby we heare God speake to us in his word; and it is as it were the tongue of the soule, wherby we speake to God by inuocation of his holy name.

Ioh. 8.56.

Ioh. 20.25.

Gen. 5.22.

To goe yet further, Spirituall life is most of all manifest in afflictions and tẽptations, in the bearing whereof faith raignes: and that by a threefold action. First of all it makes vs to depend on gods promises, and to trust God without limitation. For it doth not limit God to any set time of deliuerance, but leaues all to God, He that beleeues, doth not make haste. Daniell waited 70. yeares for deliuerance out of captiuitie in Babylon, and then finding the time of deliuerance to be at hand, he praied to God for the same. Againe, faith doth not limit God to any meanes of deliuerance. God made promise to Abraham of a blessed seed. For the verifying of this promise he gaue him Isaac in his old age. This done, he commands him to offer his onely sonne in sacrifice. A grieuous crosse: for by this meanes all hope is cut off, touching the promised seede. Yet by faith Abraham still beleeues the promise, and that in the very offering of his sonne. Lastly, faith doth not limit God for the measure of affliction. Iob saith, He will trust in God, though he kill him. It was a grieuous affliction for David to be driuen out of his kingdome by his owne sonne, yet marke what he saith in the flight: If he say, I haue no delight in thee, behold here I am, let him doe vnto me as shall seeme good in his eyes. The second action of faith is to make vs beleeue the promises of God, when we feele the contrarie, and in one contrarie to beleeue another. When we feele our own sinnes, it makes vs beleeue our iustification: when we feele our wretchednes and miserie, it makes vs beleeue our happines: when we feele nothing but death, it makes vs beleeue our eternall saluation: when we apprehend Gods anger and feele him to be our enemie, it makes vs to apprehend his mercie, and to beleeue his fatherly kindnesse. When Christ was forsaken of God, he euen then by his faith beleeues God to be his God. The third action of faith in afflictions, is to assure vs of Gods presence, and to behold him with the eyes of faith. Thus Dauid saith, I haue set the Lord alwaies before me: for he is at my right hand. Moses left Egypt and feared not the wrath of the king; because he saw him that was inuisible. When the seruant of Elisha feared ouer much the host of the king of Syria that compassed the towne of Dothan, the Prophet praies to God for him that his eyes might be opened, to see the fierie charets of the Angels of God protecting him: and we likewise are to pray to God, that the eyes of our minds may be opened to beleeue and to acknowledge the same or the like protection. And thus are men to liue by faith in the middest of their afflictions.

2. Reg. 6.15.

By this which hath beene saide, we are admonished first of all to acquaint our selues with the promises of God, as they are recorded in the books of the Prophets and Apostles: secondly at all times to build vpon them by our faith & not to suffer our selues to be drawne from them, though all temporall temporall blessings of God faile vs, yea health and life it selfe: This is to arme our selues with a shield against all the fiene darts of the deuill, and to put on a breast-plate that will saue the hart & life, though otherwise in temptations we be grieuously maimed and foiled. Eph.6.16 1.Thes.5.8

Thus much of spiritual life: That our temporal life is lead by faith, I make it thus manifest: Temporall life is preserued and maintained by an honest calling: euerie calling hath his labour and work: and the labour of al callings hath miserie & trouble for his companion and fellow; and in all these faith raignes and beares the sway in them that beleeue.

For the first, that is for the choosing & holding of our callings with good conscience, there is required a double vse of faith: For we must haue a faith, whereby we must be assured that our callinges are good and lawfull in themselues: as Paul saith; What soeuer is not of faith, is sinne. For the setling of this faith, this rule must be remembred, That offices and callinges which serue to preserue the good estat of any family, Church, or common-wealth, are lawful and of God: because these are estates ordained of God, and established in the commandements of the moral law, specially in the first, fifth, and sixth commandements. Againe faith is required, wherby euerie man must beleeue that the calling in which he is; is the particular calling in which God will be serued of him. For vnlesse the cõscience be setled in this no good worke can bee done in any calling. And for the better establishing of the conscience, another rule must be remembred, That they which are furnished with gifts for their callinges, namely aptnesse and willingnesse, and are therunto called or set a part by men, whome it concernes to call, are indeede called of God. Thus the elders of Ephesus hauing gifts to feed and being not called of God immediately, but by mẽ, are said to be made ouerseers by the holy Ghost. And Paul saith that God committed not onely to himselfe, but also to Timothie the ministerie of reconciliation: and yet was Timothie not called immediatly of God, but by men. And thus, in all other offices and conditions of life, he that hath gifts fit for his place, and is in good manner called therto by thẽ whose dutie it is to call, may assure himselfe, that he is called of God, and from this double faith and perswasion, that our calling is lawfull in it selfe, and lawfull or pleasing God in respect of vs, ariseth an assurance of the presence of God, and of his protection, when we walke in the duties of our callings. 2.Cor.5.18 1.Tim.4.

In the labour and worke of our calling there is required a double action of faith. The first is to order our labours, that they be done in good manner, this is, in obedience, and to good ends, that is, to Gods glorie, & to the good of men, with whom we liue. In this respect is Noah saide to build an Arke by faith, and good princes to order their common wealths, and in way of protection to make warre with their enemies: and thus must euerie man of euerie office, calling, trade, occupation, doe his dutie by faith. The second action of faith is, in our daily labours to restraine and moderate our care. Men commonly take vpon them a double care: one is to doe the workes and labours of their callings; the other is to procure a blessinge & good successe, to their foresaid labours But faith in Gods word where it raignes, it stirres vp the hearts of men onely to the first care, which is in the performance of their painefull labours and duties, and it restraines them from the second, causing them to leaue it to God. For when men haue done the dutie that appertains vnto them, then faith makes them without any more adoe, to wait for a blessing, on god. To this purpose the holy Ghost saith, Cast thy burden on the Lord, and hee shall nourish thee. Againe, Be nothing carefull, but in all things let your requests be shewed vnto God in prayer and supplication with thankes giuing: and, Cast your care on God. Now this faith, whereby we depend on God for the successe of our labours, hath an infallible ground, namely, That God best knowes our wants, and hee wil giue vnto vs all things which he in his wisdom knowes to be necessarie. Christ saith, Your heauenly father knoweth that you haue neede of these things, that is, foode and rayment. Againe, Hee careth for you: and, Nothing shall bee wanting vnto them that feare God. If men would by faith builde on these promises; they should not need like drudges of the world to toyle and spends themselues, & the best part of their dayes in worldly cares, as they doe; For they should haue a greater blessing of God with lesse care, if they would trust him: and they should haue farre more time then they haue, to care for heauen and heauenly things. Heb.11.7. Vers.33.34. Psal.55.23. Phil.4.6. 1.Pet.5.7. Math.6.32. 1.Pet.5.7. Psal.34.9.

Thirdly,

Thirdly, and laſtly, euerie calling ſince the fall of Adam hath miſerie and affliction to be his companiō. And for the quiet bearing of the miſeries of euerie calling, faith is of great moment. For it workes patience by perſwading and ſetling our minds in two things: the firſt; that God is well pleaſed with vs, and that we are reconciled to God in Chriſt: the ſecond, that all our miſeries ſhall in the end turne to our good and euerlaſting ſaluation: And where theſe two perſwaſions take place, there is contentation in any eſtate.

Thus much for the meaning of the text. nowe followes the vſe. The firſt and principall vſe concernes the information of our iudgement, in the maine point of our ſaluation. For hence Paul hath taught vs to gather; that a ſinner is iuſtified before God by his faith, without the workes of the law. And he diſputes on this manner: If a ſinner be iuſtified by faith, he is not iuſtified by the lawe: but a ſinner is iuſtified by faith; therefore he is not iuſtified by the law. Gal. 3. 11. 12. The concluſion is propounded in the eleuenth v. of the 3. chapter to the Galatians. The maior is confirmed in the 12. verſe by the diuers manner of iuſtifying; The law (ſaith Paul) iuſtifieth by doing, not by beleeuing; and faith iuſtifieth not by doing, but by beleeuing. The minor is confirmed in the 11. verſe. by the teſtimonie of the prophet Habacuk: The iuſt ſhall liue by his faith. And whereas the Papiſts of our time ſay that Paul in this argument diſputes onely againſt ſuch workes of the lawe as are done by nature, but not by grace: they erre and are deceiued. For he oppoſeth not workes of nature & works of grace, but workes and faith, doing and beleeuing: and the Prophet ſaith very plainely: and marke it; that the iuſt man, who is a doer of the workes of grace is iuſtified and liues not by his workes, but by his faith: Againe, where they make a double iuſtification; one whereby a ſinner is made a iuſt man, the other whereby a iuſt man is made more iuſt; and teach that the firſt is by faith without workes, & the ſecond by faith and works, they erre likewiſe. For not only a ſinner vnconuerted, but the iuſt man ſtandes iuſt, and is ſtill iuſtified by his faith without his workes. Paul when hee alleaged this text knewe but of one iuſtification. whereby we reſpect the beginning or the continuance and the accompliſhment thereof.

Secondly, hence may bee learned the right way of reformation of our liues. In this reformation two things are required an Examination and a change. If we examine our liues by this text, wee ſhall finde two maine faultes and aberrations in the liues of men. The firſt is, that they reiect and put away the rule of direction that ſerues for the ordering of their liues. And this they doe, when they doe not beleeue and truſt God in his word. And wee may not think, that this our vnbeleefe is a ſmal matter; becauſe it is a mother ſinne of all other ſinnes: and it is the principall law of the kingdome of darknes, not to beleeue God. Hereupon our enemie Satan endeauoured by all meanes to imprint this leſſon of vnbeleefe in the mindes of our firſt parents: and hauing effected his purpoſe, he euer ſince indeauoured to make this ſinne to raigne in the liues of men. It raignes commonly by ſeuen ſpecial fruits or ſinnes. The firſt is Atheiſme, when men deny God and his word. Atheiſme hath two parts: Epicuriſme and Temporiſing. Epicuriſme is, when men contemning Gods commandements, threatnings, promiſes, care for nothing but meate, drinke and pleaſures. Temporiſing is, when men imbrace religion ſo farre forth as they are forced by lawes and times, and no otherwiſe. Theſe are the common ſinnes of our dayes. The ſeeond fruit is Hereſie, and that is, when men diſtruſt God in ſome Article of faith. This fruit abounds in this laſt age of the world: becauſe in theſe times the deuill hath reuiued the hereſies of the former ages. The third fruit is Apoſtaſie, and that is when men chaunge their faith and religion. And this change is made, when the euill heart of vnbeleefe cauſeth them to depart from the liuing God, This hath beene the fault of the people of this land in the daies of perſecutiō. The fourth fruite is Hypocriſie, which is to mak a ſhew and pretence of faith, & to want the power of it in honeſt and godly conuerſation. or again, hypocriſie is nothing els, but the vnbeleefe of the heart, couered ouer with the falſe appearance of faith. And it is the common ſinne of theſe times, in which a formall or ceremoniall faith and ceremoniall repentance beare a great ſway. For men make the higheſt degree of profeſſiō that can be, when they come to the Lords table; & yet afterward take to themſelues libertie to liue and doe as they liſt. The fifth fruit is, carnall ſecuritie, when men vpon contēpt of the iudgements of God, Heb. 3. 12.

and threatnings of his worde, goe on still in their sinnes, flattering and smoothing themselues. Thus the sonnes in lawe of Lot, when they heard of the destruction of Sodome, esteemed it but as a mockery, Thus did the Iewes make a league with hell and death, and saide with themselues that the scourges of God shold not come at them. And in this last age of the world, men shall wholly addict themselues to pleasures & profits, thinking nothing of any iudgement of god, till vengeance befall them. The sixth is, wilfull ignorance of the will and word of God, For the deuill blinds the minds of vnbeleeuers, that the light of the Gospell shine not vnto them. This is the fault of our common people, who commonly hold an opinion, that it belongs not to them to know the worde of God: becausse they are not learned (as they say:) or becausse they haue other busines to thinke on. The last frut is worldlines; and that is when men mind nothing but worldly matters. And this comes of the want of faith in the prouidence of God, These are the principall fruits of vnbeleefe, whereby it may easily be discerned and descried where it is, And if any man thinke himselfe to haue a fulnesse & perfection of faith, as many doe: euen this one thing as a sufficient argument of his vnbeleefe. For it is the first steppe to faith to see our selues the want of faith.

Gen. 19. 4.
Isa. 28. 15.
Math. 25.
2. Cor. 4.
Math. 6. 30.

The second maine aberration in the liues of men is, that they set vp false rules to order their liues by: and they are foure. The first is the light of naturall reason. For many are of opinion, that it is sufficient to the pleasing of God: if they liue ciuilly, that is, doe iustice to euerie man, and liue peaceablie, hurting none, This is the blind Diuinitie of the worlde, that if they carrie themselues thus & thus, whatsoeuer their sinnes be, God will holde them excused. But they are farre wide: for in a life acceptable to God, faith is required; the light of reason will not serue the turne. Paul saith, The wisedome of the natural man is enmitie to God; and he cannot discerne the things of Gods. The Pharisies had ciuil iustice and goodnes: yet saith Christ, except your iustice exceede theirs, ye cannot enter into the kingdome of heauen.

Rom. 8. 7.
1. Cor. 2. 14.

The second false Rule is Sense; that is, seeing and feeling: by this men commonly liue. If we enioy the good blessinges of God; health, wealth, libertie, peace, honour, good report, then we can trust God but if he withdraw his blessings and present himselfe to vs with an emptie hande, we trust him no longer, nay we murmure and dispaire, and without feare of God, vse any vnlawfull meanes to releeue our selues. Thogh we haue his pretious word yet doe we not trust him vpon his bare & naked word, vnlesse withal hee lay downe vnto vs some good pawne, and make vs to feele and enioy his good blessings. Again if any man, that is our friende, make promise of helpe or deliuerance in any danger, we rest content and finde our selues much eased thereby: and yet the promises made by God in his word of helpe & deliuerãce, though they be often read vnto vs, and often vrged, breed nor the lik cõtentation. He that on his death bed hath commended his children to some trustie friend, departs more quieted in mind, thẽ if he had commended them without help of friend to God their best father: A man vpon good securitie lends to ano ther an 100. pounds, hoping for the principall with the increase at the yeares end: yet dare he not skarse deliuer an 100. pence to the poore members of Christ, vppon the promise and bonde of God himselfe, who saith, He that giueth to the poore, lends to the Lord, & he will returne the said gifts with a blessing. Nowe all this comes to passe, becausse men rather trust them whome they see, then God whome they neuer saw. Moreouer, it is a propertie of them that doe indeede beleeue, to iudge their estate by feeling: but herein they deceiue themselues. For we must liue by faith and not by feeling: and feeling is often deceitfull: Because such as finally fall away from God may haue a feeling, or taste of the good word of God, and of the powers of the life to come.

Heb. 6. 4.

The third false Rule is false faith, which is without or against the word. Thus the Turke liues by his false faith: the Iewe by his: the Papist by his, For he beleeues as well the Tradition of men, as the word of God, and he puts his trust not onely in God, but also in the Creatures, namely Saints and angels. Thus also doe Magitians, sorcerers, witches, inchanters, whatsoeuer they doe, by a Satanicall faith in that couenant which they haue made with the deuill. And such persons as aske counsell of witches and wizzards, called cunning men & women: helpe thẽselues onely by their false faith. For whẽ they vse charmes or spels, or like Satanical ceremonies, they monly find ſucceſſe and are helped of the euills that betide them. And that comes to paſſe on this manner. In the vſe of the foreſaid ceremonies preſcribed and deliuered by witches; they haue a blind & erronious faith: vppon their faith followes a Satanicall operation in effectinge of the cure deſired. For charmes or ſpels beeing but words, haue no vertue in them to eaſe or helpe man or beaſt, either by creatiō or by any ordinance of God in his word: & therefore the effect they haue, is by the power of the deuill vpon mans faith. Let our common people thinke on this. who though they much boaſt of their faith in Chriſt, yet when they are in any extremitie or danger, very commonly practiſe this Satanicall faith.

The laſt falſe rule is, the luſt of the heart and by this rule do moſt men ſquare their liues. The luſt that commonly rules is threefold: luſt concerning bodilie pleaſure, luſt of wordly wealth, luſt of honor, as S. Iohn ſaith, Whatſoeuer is in the world, is the luſt of the fleſh, the luſt of the eye, and the pride of life: 1. Ioh. 2. 16

Thus much of the examination; nowe followes the change. That we may change our liues in reſpect of vnbeleefe, foure thinges are required. The firſt is, that wee muſt acknowledge and bewaile our vnbeleefe with the manifold fruits thereof. And we haue good cauſe to doe ſo. For by vnbeleefe the deuill erects his kingdome in mens hearts, and workes his pleaſure in vs and vpon vs. Secondly, vnbeleefe corrupts and defiles all our actions whatſoeuer, though otherwiſe they be good and lawfull in themſelues. Paul ſaith, that to vnbeleeuers all things are vncleane, yea their minds and conſciences are defiled. Thirdly, vnbeleefe depriues vs of the good bleſſings of God which otherwiſe we might enioy, If yee beleeue not, yee ſhall not be eſtabliſhed, ſaith the Prophet. In Capernaum Chriſt could doe no great wonders, by reaſon of their vnbeleefe. Laſtly, vnbeleefe plucks down vppon men the plagues and iudgements of God. Moſes and Aaron were barred the land of Canaan for their vnbeleefe. A certaine prince was troden to death in the gates of Samaria, becauſe he would not beleeue the word o the Lord by the mouth of Eliſha. Zacharie was dumbe for a time; becauſe hee would not beleeue the meſſage of the angel. Many at this day, when the iudgmēts of God lie heauie on them, ſay preſently they are foreſpoken, and they cry out on this or that ſuſpected witch. But ſuch perſons are often deceiued. For the great witch that doth them all the hurt, is the vnbeleefe of their harts whereby they diſtruſt God in his Word: and this ſinne alon, if there were no witches in the world is ſufficient alone to prouoke God to plague and puniſh vs ſundrie waies, and that grieuouſly. Therfore let vs with bitternes of hart bewaile our vnbeliefe; and the rather, beauſe it is a ſteppe to faith to acknowledge the want of faith.

Ephes. 2. 2 Titus. 1. 15 Iſa. 7. 9 Mark. 6. 5 Num. 20. 12. 2. Kings. 7 Luke. 1. 20

The ſecond thing to be done is to make examination whether we be in conſcience conuicted of the certaintie of the word or no. If we be not, we muſt labour to be cōuinced. Becauſe that natural atheiſme, wherby we doubt whether the books of the Prophets & Apoſtles be the word of Goe or no, hinders the certaintie of faith For the ſetling of the conſcience in this point, theſe arguments may be vſed. The firſt; it is a principle in nature that there is a God: if there be a God nature can ſay he is to be worſhipped: if he be to be worſhipped, hee hath reuealed himſelfe and his will to man, for otherwiſe he cannot be worſhipped. And this reuelation is to be found in the writings of the Prophets & Apoſtles, and in no other writings of men: becauſe wee finde the doctrine of Scriptures to be agreeable to the very nature and maieſty of God, and ſo is no other doctrine or learning whatſoever. For it is the moſt ancient, & all other religiōs come far ſhort of it. It is one & the ſame, euermore conſenting with it ſelfe, without change or alteration. The Apoſtles agree with the Prophets: the Prophets with Moſes: and all with the firſt reuelation made at the creation. Againe, a it diſcouers & reueales the ſecret thoughts of men, that no art or learning can diſcouer; & this argues that it was penned by him who is the ſearcher of al harts. The 2. argument is a wonderfull Euidence of the truth, not to be found in any other writings in the world. This euidence ſtands ſpecially in eight things. The firſt is, that the writers of Scriptures fully & plainly ſet down their own faults, yea their chiefeſt faults, not ſparing to ſhew thēſelues in mans reaſon: and this argues; that in writing they were guided by the ſpirit of truth. The ſecond is, that the bookes of Scriptures contain many miſteries aboue the reach of mans reaſon, yet not againſt reason: because we may discerne a truth in them, and that by groundes and principles of reason. The thirde, that the speeches of Scripture aime not at by-respects, but simply and absolutlie giue and ascribe all glorie to God alone. The fourth is, that the scriptures containe full & perfect doctrine for the pacifying, setling, & directing of the conscience in all things. The fifth is the holinesse and puritie of the lawe of Moses, in that it accuseth and condemneth all men of sinne, and prescribeth perfect righteousnes. Herein it surpasseth the lawes of al countries, cómon-wealths, kingdomes whatsoeuer. The sixth is the wisdome that appeares in the policie or gouernment of the Common-wealth of the Iewes set downe by Moses. The seauenth is a reconciliatió of iustice & mercy propounded in the gospell, For in Christ iustice and mercie meete, and iustice after a sort giues place to mercie. The eight thing, where in the euidence of truth appeares, is the consent of Scripture with it selfe: for doctrine agrees with historie, & euerie part with euerie part. This manifold euidence of truth shewes that scipture is from the God of truth. If any say, that they finde no such euidence in Scripture, I answere it is their owne fault: for if they would seriously reade the Scriptures with prayer to God, it would appeare. The third argument is the efficacy of the word which appeares on this manner. Gods word is flat contrary to the nature & disposition of man: and yet for all this, when being preached, it conuinceth and condemneth men of sinne, it turneth and conuerteth them to it selfe, and causeth them to liue and die in the loue and obedience thereof. This could it neuer doe, vnlesse it were of diuine operation. The fourth argument is, that the Prophets and Apostles wrought miracles for the ratifying and confirming of their doctrine. Nowe these miracles surpasse the strength of nature, and were immediately from God: & therefore the doctrine thereby confirmed was also of God. The fifth and last is, that the writings of the Prophets & Apostles containe many prophecies or predictions of things to come, that none cold foresee or foretell, but God. The name of Iosias and his doings are foretold 330. years before he was borne: Cyrus and his doings are mentioned more than an 100. yeares before he was borne; nowe these and the like prophecies argue that the whol doctrine is of God. By these & like arguments are all that in wardly doubt of the word of God, to settle and stablish their consciences.

Heb. 4 12.
2. Cor. 1 0.
1. King. 13. 2
Isa. 44. end

This done then followes the third point and that is, that wee must search and inquire what is the substance and scope of the word of God. The scope of the whole Bible in Christ with his benefits. and he is reuealed, propounded, and offered vnto vs in the maine promise of the word: the tenour whereof is that God will giue remission of sins and life euerlasting to such as will beleeue in Christ. To this maine promise, God hath added a maine commandement, which biddes vs to beleeue the same promise, or to applie Christ with his benefits vnto our selues. Nowe the our third dutie is, to subiect our harts and wilses to this commaundement that biddes vs to beleeue in Christ. This is the subiection of faith, of which two thinges must be obserued. One is, that this is the first subiection that wee can giue to God, to trust him vpon his promise for the pardon of our sinnes, and for life eternal. And from this subiection of faith ariseth our subiection to the whole word. In Christ are al the promises of God, yea, and Amen: the lawe and the obedience of al the commandements thereof is established by faith; without Christ no good things can be done. The second point is, that this subiection is easie in respect of that subiection which the law requires. The perfect obedience of the lawe is impossible to al men except Christ, yea to such as are borne anewe of the holy Ghost, though for the time of this life, they desire it neuer so earnestly. Yet faith in Christ and repentance is so far forth possible to all that will and desire it, that whosoeuer doth seriously but will to beleeue and to bee conuerted doth indeed beleeue and is conuerted, and doth please God, and shall not perish eternally; although the beginning of this faith and conuersion be weake, so it be in truth and not counterfeit. Isa; 1, 19, If yee will and obey, ye shall eate the good thinges of the land. Luke, 11.13. Your heauenly father giueth the holy ghost to them that desire him. Math, 11, My yoake is easie and my burden light. Therefore let vs trie our selues whether we haue will to subiect our selues to the word of God, that bids vs beleeue in Christ; neuertheless wee may not thinke that this will to beleeue is in our power. For it is by the special mercy of God stirred vp in the heartes of the Elect, by the operation of the holy Ghost:

2. Cor. 1. 20.

The fourth and last thing in this chang is, that faith in Christ or in the worde beleeued, must raigne and rule in the heart: bringing the whole man in subiection to the whole word of God: And this faith in Christ doth: because when it is once setled in the heart, it workes in vs a full and setled faith of euerie part of the worde of God; namely of his precepts and of his threats. Here then our dutie is to subiect our selues by meanes of our faith to the whole word: and to suffer nothing within vs but it alone to beare sway. Col. 3, 17. This is the will of God; let the worde of God dwell in you plentifully. The good grounde yelds it selfe and giues place, that the seed may take deepe roote. It is a blessed thing to haue the kingdome of God erected, in our hearts: now this kingdome is erected, when the word of God keepes all the powers of body and soule in subiection. And when our faith in Christ bringes our thoughts, affections, wordes, deedes, sufferings, in subiection to the worde of God, then we liue by faith.

The third vse followeth: in that we are to liue by our faith, we are taught to seeke for knowledge of the will and worde of God, and daily to increase in the same knowledge; specially to acquainte our selues with the commandements of God that concerne vs, with his promises, and threatnings. For faith is the life of our soules, and the word is the life of faith: because it is first kindled and afterwarde confirmed by the hearing of Gods word. Again the word moderates our faith, that we beleeue not more then we should, or come short in beleeuing. The word therefore that serues thus to limit our faith, must be knowne in his seuerall heades and points.

Fourthly, hence we learne how we are to carrie our selues in greatest daungers, as in the time of plague and pestilence, in the time of famine, in the time of warre & bloodshed, in the time of our last and deadly sickneſſe. Wee haue then neede of great helpe: and the only way is then to stay our selues and establish our hearts by our faith on Gods promises. It is the verie scope of this text to teach this one point of doctrine to the Iewes, beeing now oppressed by the Babylonians. Dauid in danger and Christ in the time of his passion, by their faith commended their spirits into the hands of god. Of the Martyrs and Saints of Gods, some were by their faith imprisoned, some racked, some stoned. Heb. 11. 36. Faith in perilous times is of great vse. First when a man is hase dead, it quickens and puts life in him, as Dauid saith, Remember the promise made to thy seruant, wherein thou hast caused me to trust: it is my comfort in my trouble: for thy promises hath quickned me. Pſal. 119, 49. Vnderstand here the promise as it was tempered and mingled with his faith. Againe, faith in the times of danger doth as it were sense and compasse vs with the promises of God. This may bee gathered by the opposition that is betweene these wordes and the former. The vniust man puffes vp himselfe, saith the Prophet. or builds towers of defence to himselfe: but the iust man only beleeues; and that shal be to him in stead of all the towers in the world. For it brings vs vnder the presence, wing, and protection of God; it makes him to be our safeguard, & tower, and defence: This doctrine is to bee thought on the rather; because, though wee nowe inioy peace and other blessings of God, yet our common sinnes and especially our vnbeleefe, calls downe for the great and grieuous iudgements of God.

Moreouer henee we are taught that euerie man must haue a faith of his owne, The iust man shall liue by his OWN faith, saith the Prophet: And good reason; for euerie man is a creature of God, and must doe his homage to God by beleeuing in him; and because euerie man hath neede of Christ for himselfe: therefore must euery one haue a faith of his owne to lay hold on Christ. It may bee obiected that sometime the faith of others hath saued men. Mar. 2: 5, When Christ saw their faith, hee saide to the sick of the palsie, thy sinnes are forgiuen thee. And, Iam. 5, 6, The prayer of faith shall saue the sicke. I answere, that the faith of one man may be a meanes to procure heelth of bodie and other temporall blessings, yea faith vnto others; yet can not any man receiue pardon of sinnes, and eternall life but for himself. Therfore whē it is saide in the first place, When hee saw their faith, the faith of the palsie man must not bee excluded but included; and the place of Iames speakes only of the bodily health.

Againe it may bee alleaged, that seeing we are iustified by the iustice of an other, namely of Christ: we may also be iustified and saued by the faith of another.

I an-

I answer, that the reason is not like, because the obedience of Christ is both his and ours: his, because it is in him: ours, because it is applied vnto vs by God, and receiued by our faith: and the like cannot be said of the faith of any other man.

Thirdly it may be alleadged, that Infants haue no faith of their owne. I answer, there be three opinions touching Infants faith. The first, that infants haue actuall faith wrought in them by the holy Ghost. because is is saide, Math. 18. 6. Whosoeuer offendeth one of these little ones that beleeue in me. But this opinion seemes to be an vntruth: because faith presupposeth vnderstanding and knowledge, which infants want. Againe, if infants receiued to beleeue when they are yong, they would, no doubt, shew it when they come to be of yeares: but faith they shew none, vnlesse they attaine vnto it afterward by diligent teaching and instruction. And the place in Matthew may be vnderstood of men of yeares, who if they haue contrite and humbled hearts, are little ones beleeuing in Christ. Againe, children after some yeares by good education and instruction, may attaine to some knowledge, and consequently to faith. Thus Timothie was brought vp in the Scriptures of a child. The second opinion is, that all places of Scripture intreating of faith are to bee vnderstood of men of yeares, and that children are saued by some other vnknowne and vnspeakable way without faith. I somewhat doubt of this; because it is said, Mark. 16. 16. Whosoeuer beleeueth not is already condemned. Againe, Without faith it is impossible to please God. The third opinion is, that children haue faith after a sort: because the parents according to the tenour of the couenant, I will be thy God, and the God of thy seede, beleeue for themselues and their children; and therefore their faith is not only theirs, but also the faith of their children. Hence it is that the Scripture saith, If the roote be holy, the branches are holy: and, Rom. 11. If ye beleeue, your children are holy. 1. Cor. 7. 14. According to humane lawe, the father and his heires are but one person, the father couenanting for himselfe and his children: what then should hinder, that the father might not beleeue for his child, and the child by the parents faith haue title to the couenant, and the benefits thereof? It is alledged, [a] that by this meanes chidren shall be borne beleeuers, and so be conceiued and borne without originall sinne. I answer: Beleeuing parents sustaine two persons: one, whereby they are men: and thus they bring forth children hauing mans nature with all the corruptions of nature. The other, as they are holy men and beleeuers: and thus they bring forth infants that are not so much their children as the children of God. And Infants are Gods children not by vertue of their birth, but by meanes of parents faith, which intitles them to all the blessings of the couenant. Children proportionally sustaine a double person: If they be considered in and by themselues, they are conceiued and borne in Originall sinne. If they be considered as they are holy and beleeue by the faith which is both theirs and their parents faith, and consequently haue by this meanes title to Christ and his benefits; originall sinne is couered, and remitted. If it be said, that by this meanes all children of beleeuing prarents are the children of God; I answer, that we must presume that they are all so; leauing secret iudgements to God. To this third opinion I most Incline: because we are to iudge that infants of beleeuing parents in their infancie dying are iustified, and I finde no iustification in Scripture without faith. And this hath beene the iudgement of the auncient fathers. August. serm. 14. of the words of the Apostle, How (saith he) doe infants beleeue? by the faith of the parents. If by the faith of parents they be purged, by parents sinnes they are polluted. The bodie of sinne in the first parents begot them sinners: and the spirit of life in their latter parents did regenerate them to be beleeuers, Bernard, epist. 77. saith, Among the nations as many as were faithfull, if they were of yeares, we beleeue that they were cleansed by faith and the sacrifices, and that the parents faith alone auaileth for children, yea that it is sufficient for them. Againe, It is meete and for the honour of God, that to whome age denies their owne faith, grace should graunt to them a benefit by the faith of another. See further Iustin. q. 56. Aug. epist. 23. 57. 105. de bapt. l. 4. c. 2. Bernard. serm. 66. in Cant.

Thus then it is manifest, that euery person must haue a faith of his owne. Hence we learne, that the doctors of the Romish Church erre and are deceiued, [b] when they teach, that a man may rest himselfe in the faith of his teachers, beleeuing in sundrie things onely as the Church beleeues, though he knew not distinctly what is the faith of the Church. Againe, here the Popes pardons fall to ground. For in vaine doth the Pope by the power of the keyes, applie the meritorious workes and the satisfactorie sufferings of one man to another, considering euery man is saued onely by his owne faith. The wise virgins professed that they had oyle no more then serued their owne turnes. They knew not the popish doctrine, that men might haue good works enough for themselues, and an ouerplus for others. Hilarie gathereth hence, that one mans good workes cannot be applied to another. Hierome saith, Euery man shall receiue a reward for his owne works: and that one mans works cannot couer another mans faults in the day of iudgement. The speech of Leo may stoppe the mouthes of all Papists. Though (saith he) the death of the Saints be pretious in the sight of God, yet the killing of no innocent is the reconciliation of the world. The righteous haue receiued crownes, but they haue not giuen crownes. And the fortitude of beleeuers ministers examples of patience, but not giftes of iustice. For the deaths of them all were priuate or particular: neither did any of them by his funerall discharge another mans debt: considering among the sonnes of men, Christ our Lord is onely found in whome all are crucified, dead, and buried, and risen againe. Paul indeed saith to the Corinthians, that he desired to be bestowed for their soules: and, that he suffers all things for the elect: but this he speakes in respect of his Apostolicall ministerie, and not in respect of any works of satisfaction, performed by him in the behalfe of others. Againe he saith, I beare in mine owne bodie the remainders of the sufferings of Christ: but these remainders are the sufferings which euery man must beare for himselfe. For euery disciple of Christ, must take vp his owne crosse, and so accomplish the sufferings of the whole mysticall bodie.

2. Tim. 2.

Coloss. 1.

Thirdly by this we learne, not to relie on the gifts, suffrages, and praiers of others: but to seeke for a sufficient & liuely faith of our owne. The foolish virgins, that supposed they might haue furnished themselues with sufficient oyle of the wise virgins, were vtterly disappointed. Therefore the speech of the Papists is to be detested: namely, that the suffrages of the liuing, that is, their fastings, praiers, almes, masses, &c. doe three waies helpe the dead, by way of merit of congruitie, by way of intreatie, and by way of satisfaction.

Bellarm. de Indulg. c. 14. p. 85.

Lastly here we learne, that faith and the iustice of good conscience must alwaies goe together. And for this cause it is not saide that man liues by faith, but the iust man. Let all Protestants learne and remember this. For it is Gods commandement that we should ioyntly keepe faith & good conscience. And it is a cõmõ offence to Atheists, Papists, worldlings, that such as pretend faith, faile in the righteousnes of good conscience. Some it may be, will say, that it shall suffice for them to call vpon God when they are dying, and to die by faith: I answer, that we must not onely die and be saued, but also liue in this world by our faith.

TO THE RIGHT HONOVRAble and vertuous Ladie the Ladie Lucie, Countesse of Bedford.

THe death of the righteous, that is, of euery beleeuing and repentant sinner, is a most excellent blessing of God, and brings with it many worthie benefits: which thing I proone on this maner. I. God both in the beginning and in the continuance of his grace, doth greater things vnto his seruants then they doe commonly aske or thinke, and because he hath promised aide and strength vnto them, therefore in wonderfull wisdome he casteth vpon them this heauie burden of death, that they might make experience what is the exceeding might and power of his grace in their weakenes. II. Iudgement begins at Gods house: and the righteous are laden with afflictions and temptations in this life, and therefore in this world they haue their deaths and hells, that in death they might not feele the torments of hell and death. III. When Lazarus was dead Christ said, He is not dead but sleepeth: hence it followeth that the Christian man can say, My graue is my bedde, my death is my sleepe: in death I die not, but onely sleepe. It is thought that of all terrible things death is most terrible: but it is false to them that be in Christ, to whome many things happen farre more heauie and bitter then death. IV. Death at the first brought forth sinne, but death in the righteous by meanes of Christs death, abolisheth sinne, because it is the accomplishment of mortification. And death is so farre from destroying such as are in Christ, that there can be no better refuge for them against death: for presently after the death of the bodie, followes the perfect freedome of the spirit, and the resurrection of the bodie. V. Lastly, death is a meanes of a Christian mans perfection, as Christ in his owne example sheweth, saying, Behold, I will cast out deuills, and will heale still to day and to morrow, and the third I will be perfected. Luk. 13. 32. Now this perfection in the members of Christ, is nothing else but the blessing of God the author of peace, sanctifying them throughout, that their whole spirites, and soules, and bodies, may be preserued without blame to the comming of our Lord Iesus Christ.

Now hauing often thus considered with my selfe of the excellencie of death, I thought good to draw the summe and chiefe heads thereof vnto this small Treatise: the protection and consideration whereof, I commend to your Ladiship, desiring you to accept of it, and read it at your leisure. If I be blamed for writing vnto you of death, whereas by the course of nature you are not yet neere death, Salomon will excuse me, who saith, that we must remember our Creatour in the daies of our youth. Thus hoping of your Honours good acceptance, I pray God to blesse this my little labour to your comfort and saluation. Septemb. 7. 1595.

The day of death is better then the day that one is borne;

THese wordes are a ruleor precept laid downe by Salomon for weightie causes. For in the chapters going before he sets forth the vanitie of all creatures vnder heauen: and that at large in the verie particular. Nowe men herevpon might take occasion of discontentment in respect of their estate in this life: therefore Solomon in great wisedome here taks anew course, and in this chapter begins to lay downe certaine rules of direction and comforte, that men might haue somewhat wherewith to arme themselues against the troubles and miseries of this life. The first rule is in this third verse, that a good name is better then a pretious oyntment: that is, a name gotten & maintained by godly cõuersation, is a speciall blessinge of God, which in the midst of the vanities of this life, ministreth greater mater of reioycing aad comfort to the heart of man, then the most pretious oyntment can doe to the outward senses. Now some men hauing heard this first rule concerninge good name, might obiect & say, that renowne and good report in this life affoards slender comfort: considering that after it followes death, which is the miserable ende of all men. But this obiection the wiseman remooueth by a second rule in the words which I haue in hand, saying that the day of death is better then the daie that one is borne.

That wee may come to the true and proper sense of this precept or rule, three points are to be considered. First, what is death here mentioned: secondly, how it can be truely saide, that the day of death is better then the day of birth: Thirdly in what respect it is better.

For the first, death is a depriuation of life as a punishment ordained of God and imposed on man for his sinne. First, I saie, it is a depriuation of life, because the very nature of death is the absence or defect of that life which God vouchsafed man by his creation. I adde further that death is a punishment, more especially to intimate the nature and qualitie of death; and to shewe, that it was ordained as a means of execution of Gods iustice & iudgement. And that death is a punishment; Paul plainly auoucheth when he saith, that by one man sinne entered into the worlde, and death by sinne. And againe, that death is the stipend, wages or allowance of sinne. Furthermore in euerie punishment there be three workes: the ordainer of it, the procurer, and the executioner. The ordainer of this punishment is God in the estate of mans innocencie; by a solemne law then made in these verie words. In the day thou eatest thereof, thou shalt die the death, Genesis. 2. 17. But it may be alleaged to the contrarie, that the Lorde saith by the prophet Ezechiel. that he will not the death of a sinner, and therefore that he is no ordainer of death. The answere may easily bee made, and that sundrie waies. First, the Lord speakes not this to all men or of all men, but to his owne people the Church of the Iewes, as appeares by the clause prefixed, Son of man say vnto the house of Israel; &c. Again; the words are not spoken absolutly but only in way of comparison, in that of the twaine he rather wills the conuersion and repentance of a sinner, then his death and destruction. Thirdly, the very proper meaninge of the wordes import thus much, that God doth take no delight or pleasure in the death of a sinner, as it is the ruine and destruction of the creature. And yet all this hinders not but that God in a new regard and consideration may both will and ordaine death, namely, as it is a due and deserued punishmẽt, tending to the executiõ of iustice: in which iustice God is as good as in his mercie: Againe it may be obiected, that if death indeed had beene ordained of God, then Adam should haue beene destroyed, and that presently vppon his fall. For the verie wordes are thus, Whensoeuer thou shalt eate of the forbidden fruite, thou shalt certenly die. Answ. Sentences of Scripture are either Legall or Euangelicall, the lawe and the Gospell beeing two seuerall and distinct partes of Gods worde. Now this former sentence is Legall, and must bee vnderstood with an exception

rowed from the Gospell or the couenant of grace made with Adam, and reuealed to him after his fall. The exception is this Thou shalt certenly die whensoeuer thou eatest the forbidden fruite, except I doe further giue thee a meane of deliuerance from death, namely the seed of the womã to bruise the serpentes heed. Secondlie it may be aunswered, that Adam and all his posteritie died, and that presently after his fall, in that his body was made mortal and his soule became subiect to the curse of the Lawe. And wheres God would not vtterly destroy Adam at the very first, but onely impose on him the beginnings of the first and second death: hee did the same in great wisedome, that in the midst of his iustice he might make away to mercy: which thing could not haue beene, if Adam had perished.

The executioner of this punishment is he that doth impose and inflict the same on man, and that also is God himselfe, as he testifieth of himselfe in the prophet Esai. I make peace and create euill. Now euill is of three sortes: naturall, morall, materiall. Naturall euill, is the destruction of that order which God set in euerie creature by the creation. Morall euill is the want of the righteousnes & vertue which the lawe requires at mans hand: and that is called sinne. Material euill is any matter or thinge which in it selfe is a good creature of God, yet so, as by reason of mans fall it is hurtfull to the health and life of man, as henbane, wolfebane, hemlocke, and all other poysons are. Nowe this saying of Esai must not bee vnderstoode of morall euills, but of such as are either materiall or naturall: to the latter of which, death is to bee referred, which is the destruction or abolishment of mans nature created.

Esa. 45. 6.

The procurer of death is man, not god; in that man by his sinnes & disobedience did pull vpon himselfe this punishment. Therefore the Lord saith in Oseah, O Israel one hath destroyd thee, but in mee is thine helpe. Against this it may be obiected, that man was mortall in the estate of innocencie before the fall. Answer. The frame and composition of mans bodie considered in it selfe was mortall, because it was made of water and earth and other elements, which are of themselues alterable and changable; yet if we respect the grace & blessing which God did vouchsafe mans bodie in his creation, it was vnchangeable and immortall, and so by the same blessing should haue continued, if man had not fallen: and man by his fall depriuing himselfe of this gift and blessing, became euerie way mortall.

Ose. 13. 9.

Thus it appeares in part what death is: yet for the beter clearing of this point, we are to consider the difference of the death of a man and of a beast. The death of a beast is the totall and final abolishment of the whole creature: for the body is resolued to his first matter, & the soule arising of the temperature of the body, vanisheth to nothing. But in the death of man it is otherwise. For though the body for a time be resolued to dust, yet must it rise againe in the last iudgement & become immortall: and as for the soule it subsisteth by it selfe out of the bodie, and is immortall. And this being so, it may be demanded, how the soule can die the second death. Ans. The soule dies not, because it is vterly abolished: but because it is as thogh it were not, and it ceaseth to be in respect of righteousnesse & fellowship with god And indeede this is the death of al deaths when the creature hath subsisting and being, and yet for all that is depriued of all comfortable fellowship with God.

The reason of this differenee is, because the soule of a man is a spirit or spirituall substance, wheras the soule of a beast is no substance, but a naturall vigour or qualitie, and hath no being in it selfe without the bodie, on which it wholly dependeth. The soule of man contrariwise beeing created of nothing, & breathed into the bodie, and as well subsisting forth of it as in it.

The kindes of death are two, as the kindes of life are, bodily and spirituall, Bodily death is nothing else but the separatiõ of the soule from the bodie, as bodily life is the coniunctiõ of body & soule: and this death is called the first, because in respect of time it goes before the second. Spirituall death is the separation of the whole man both in bodie and soule from the gratious fellowship of God. Of these twaine, the first is but an entrance to death & the secõd is the accõplishmẽt of it. For as the soule is the life of the body, so god is the life of the soule, and his spirit is the soule of our soules, and the want of fellowship with him brings nothing but the endlesse and vnspeakeable horrors and pangs of death.

Againe, spiritual death hath 3. distinct and and seuerall degrees. The first is, when a man that is aliue in respect of temporall life, lies dead in sinne. Of this degree Paul speakes when he saith, But shee that liueth in pleasure is dead when shee liueth. And this is the case of all men by nature, who are children of wrath and dead in sinnes & trespasses The second degree is the verie ende of this life when the bodie is laide in the earth, and the soule descends to the place of torment, The third degree is in the day of iudgement, when the bodie and soule meete againe & goe both to the place of the damned, there to be tormented for euer and euer.

1. Tim. 5. 6

Eph. 2. 1.

Hauing thus found the nature and difference & kindes of death, it is more then manifest, that the text in hand is to be vnderstood, not of the spirituall but of the bodily death: because it is opposed to the birth or natiuitie of man, The words then must carrie this sense: The time of bodily death in which the bodie and soule of mã are seuered a sunder, it is better then the time in which one is brought into the world.

Thus much of the first point: now followeth the second, and that is, howe this can be true which Salomon saith, that the day of death is better then the day of birth. I make not this question to call the Scriptures into controuersie, which are the truth it selfe, but I doe it for this end, that we might without wauering be resolued of this which Salomon auoucheth. For there may be sundrie reasons brought to the contrarie. Therefore let vs handle the question: the reasons or obiections which may be alleaged to the contrarie, may all be reduced to sixt heads. The first is taken from the opinion of wise men, who thinke it the best thing of all neuer to bee borne, and the next best to die quickly. Nowe if it be the best thing in the world not to be borne at all, then it is the worst thing that can bee to die after a man is borne; Answer. There bee two sortes of men: one, that liue and die in their sinnes without repentance: the other, which vnfainedlie repent and beleeue in Christ. Now this sentence may bee truely auouched of the first: of whome we may say as Christ said of Iudas, It had beene better for him that he had neuer beene borne. But the saying applied to the second sort of mẽ is false. For to them that in this life turne to God by repentance, the best thing of al is to be born: because their birth is a degree of preparation to happines, and the next best is to die quickely; because by death they enter into possessiõ of the same their happinesse, For this cause Balaam desired to die the death of the righteous: and Salamon in this place preferres the daie of death before the day of birth, vnderstanding that death which is ioyned with godly life, or the death of the righteous.

The second obiection is taken from the testimonie of Scripture. Death is the wages of sinne, Rom: 6, 23, it is an enemy of Christ. 1, Cor, 15. and the curse of the law. Hence it seemes to followe that in and by death, men receiue their wages and paiment for their sins: that the day of death is the dolefull day in which the enemie preuailes against vs: that hee which dieth is cursed. Answ: We must distinguish of death: it must be considered two waies: first as it is by it selfe in his owne nature: secondly, as it is altered and changed by Christ: Now death by it selfe considered, is indeede the wages of sin, and enemy of Christ and of al his members, & the curse of the law, yea the verie suburbes & gates of hell; yet in the second respect, it is not so: For by the vertue of the death of Christ it ceaseth to be a plague or punishment, and of a curse it is made a blessing, and is become vnto vs a passage or mid-way betweene this life and eternal life, and as it were a little wicket or doore wherby we passe out of this world and enter into heauẽ. And in this respect the saying of Salomon is most true: For in the day of birth, men are borne and brought foorth into the vale of miserie, but afterward when they goe hence, hauing death altered vnto them by the death of Christ, they enter into eternall ioy and happines with al the Saints of God for euer.

The third obiection is taken from the examples, of most worthy men, who haue made their prayers against death: As our Sauiour Christ who praied on this manner, Father if it bee thy will, let this cup passe from me, yet not my will, but thy will be done. And Dauid prayed, Returne, O Lord, deliuer my soule, saue me for thy mercies sake: for in death there is no remembrance of thee, in the graue who shall praise thee? And Ezechiah, when the Prophet Esai bad him set his house in order, and tolde him that he must die, wept sore, and that in respect of death: Now by the examples of these most worthie men; yea by the example of the sonne of God himselfe, it may seeme that that the day of death is the most terrible and dolefull day of all. Answ. When our Saviour Christ praied thus to his Father, he was in his agonie, and hee then as our Redeemer stood in our roome and stead, to suffer all things that wee should have suffered in our owne persons for our sins and therefore he praied not simply against death, but against the cursed death of the crosse; and he feared not death it selfe, which is the seperation of bodie & soule, but the curse of the lawe which went with death, namely the vnspeakeable wrath & indignation of God. The first death troubled him nor, but the first and second ioyned togither. Touching Dauid, when he made the sixt psalme, hee was not onelie sicke in bodie, but also perplexed with the greatest temptation of al, in that he wrestled in conscience with the wrath of god as appeares by the wordds of the text, where he saith, Lord rebuke me not in thy wrath. And by this we see that hee praied not simply against death, but against death at that instant when he was in that grieuous temptation. For at other times he had no such feare of death, as hee himselfe testifieth, saying, Though I shoulde Psal. 23. 4. walke through the valley of the shadowe of death, I will feare no euill. Therefore hee praied against death only as it was ioyned with the apprehension of Gods wrath. Lastly, Ezechiah praied against death, not onely because he desired to liue and doe seruice to God in his kingdome, but vpon a further and more speciall regarde; because when the prophet brought the message of death, he was without issue, & had none of his owne bodie to succeede him in his kingdome. It wil be said, what warrant had Ezechiah to pray against death for this cause? Answ. His warrant was good: for God had made a particular promise to Dauid and his posterity after him, that so long as they feared God and walked in his commandements, they should 2. King. 8. 25 nor want issue to sit vppon the throne of the kingdome after them. Now Ezechiah at the time of the Prophets message remembring what promise God had made: and howe hee for his part had kept the condition thereof, in that hee had walked before God with an vpright heart, & had done that which was acceptable in his sight; he praied against death, not somuch because he feared the danger of it, but because he wanted issue. This prayer God accepted and heard, and he added fifteene yeares vnto his daies, and two yeares after gaue him Manasses.

The fourth obiection is this, that those which haue beene reputed to bee of the better sort of men, oftentimes haue miserable endes: for some end their daies despairing, some raging and blaspheming, some strangely tormented: it may seeme therefore that the day of death is the day of greatest woe and miserie. To this I answer first of al generally, that we must not iudge of the estate of any man before god by outward things, whether they be blessings or iudgements; whether they fall in life or death: For (as Salomon saith) All things come alike to all: and the same condition is to the iust and wicked, to the good and to the pure, and to the polluted, and to him that sacrificeth, and to him that sacrificeth not: as is the good so is the sinner, he that sweareth, as he that feareth an oath. Secondly, I answer the particulars: which be alledged, on this manner; And first of all touching despaire it is true that not onely wicked and loose persons despaire in death, but also repentant sinners, who oftentimes in their sicknesse, testifie of themselues, that beeing a liue and lying in their beddes, they feele themselues as it were to be in hell, and to apprehend the verie pangs and torments thereof. And I doubt not for all this, but that the childe of God most deare vnto him, may through the gulfe of desperation attaine to euerlasting happinesse. This appeares by the manner of Gods dealing in the matter of our saluation. All the works of God are done in and by their contraries, In the creation all things were made, not of somethinge, but of nothing, cleane contrarie to the course of nature. In the worke of redemption, God giues life, not by life, but by death: and if wee consider aright of Christ upon the crosse, we shall see our paradise out of paradise in the middest of hell. For out of his owne cursed death doth he bring vs life and eternall happinesse. Likewise in effectuall vocation, when it pleaseth god to conuert & turne men vnto him, hee doeth it by the meanes of the gospell preached, which in reason should driue all men from God. For it is as contrarie to the nature of man as fier to water, and light to darkenes: and yet for all this, though it be thus against the disposition and heart of man, it preuailes with him and turnes him to God. Furthermore, when God will send his owne seruants to heauen, he sendes them a contrarie way, euen by the gates of hell: and when it is his pleasure to make men depend on his fauour and prouidence, he makes them feele his anger, and to be nothing in themselues, that they may wholy depend vpon him, and bee whatsoeuer they are in him. This point beeing well considered, it is manifest that the childe of God may passe to Heauen by the verie gulfes of hell: The loue of God is like a sea, into which when a man is cast, he neither feeles bottome nor sees banke. I conclude therefore, that despaire, whether it arise of weaknes of nature, or of conscience of sinne, though it fall out about the time of death, cannot preiudice the saluation of the that are effectually called. As for other strange euents which fall out in death, they are the effects of diseases: Rauings and blasphemings arise of the disease of melancholie and of frensies, which often happen at the ende of burning feauers, the choller shooting vp to the brain. The writhing of the lips, the turning of the necke, the buckling of the ioyntes & the whole bodie, proceedes of crampes & conuulsions, which followes after much euacuation. And whereas some in sickenesse are of that strength that three or foure men cannot hold them down without bondes; it comes not of witchcrafts and possessions, as people commonly thinke, but of choller in the veines. And whereas some when they are dead, become as blacke as pitch (as Bonner was) it may arise by a bruise, or an impostume, or by the blacke iaundise, or by the putrefaction of the liuer: & it doth not alwaies argue some extraordinarie iudgement of God. Now these and the like diseases with their Symptomes and straunge effects, thogh they shal depriue man of his health and of the right vse of the parts of his bodie, and of the vse of reason too: yet they cannot depriue his soule of eternall life. And all sinnes, procured by violent diseases, and proceeding from repentant sinners are sinnes of infirmitie: for which, if they know them, and come againe to the vse of reason, they will further repent: if not, they are pardoned and buried in the death of Christ: And wee ought not so much to stand vpon the strangnesse of any mans ende, when we know the goodnesse of his life; for wee must iudge a man not by his death, but by his life. And if this be true, that strange diseases, & therupon strange behauiours in death, may befal the best man that is; we must learne to reform our iudgements of such as lie at the point of death. The common opinion is, that if a man die quietly & goe away like a lambe (which in some diseases, as consumptions and such like, any man may doe) then hee goes straight to heauen: but if the violēce of the disease stirre vp impatience, and cause in the partie franticke behauiours, then men vse to say, there is a iudgement of God seruing either to discouer an hypocrite, or to plague a wicked man; But the truth is otherwise. For indeede a man may die like a lambe; & yet goe to hell: & one dyinge in exceeding torment and straunge behauiours of the bodie, may goe to heauen. And by the outward condition of any man, either in life or death, wee are not to iudge of his estate before God.

The fith obiection is this. When a man is most neare death, then the deuill is most busie in temptation, and the more men are assaulted by Satan, the more dangerous and troublesome is their case. And therefore it may seeme that the daye of death is the worst day of all. Anſ. The condition of Gods children in death is twofold. Some are not tempted, and some are. Some I say are not tempted, as Simeō who when hee had seene Christ, brake forth and saide, Lorde, nowe lettest thou thy seruant depart in peace, &c. foresignifying no doubt, that he should end his daies in all manner of peace. As for them which are tempted, though their case be very troublesome and perplexed, yet their saluation is not further off, by reason of the violence & extremitie of temptation. For God is then present by the vnspeakeable comfort of his spirit, and when wee are most weake, he is most strong in vs: because his manner is to shewe his power in weakenesse. And for this cause, euen in the time of death the deuill receiues the greatest foile, when he looks for the greatest victorie.

The sixth obiection is this Violent and sudden death is a grieuous curse, and of all euils, which befall man in this life, none is so terrible: therefore it may seeme, that the day of sudden death is most miserable. Anſ. It is true indeede, that suddaine death is a curse and a grieuous iudgment of God, and therefore not without cause feared of men in the world: yet all things cōsidered we ought more to be afraid of an impatient and euill life, then of sud-daine death. For though it be euill, as death it selfe in his owne nature is, yet we must not thinke it to be simply euill: because it is not euill to all men, nor in all respects euill. I say it is not euill to all men considering that no kind of death is euill or a curse vnto them that are in Christ, who are freed frō the whole curse of the Law. And therefore the holy Ghost saith, Apoc, 14, 13 Blessed are they that dye in the Lord, for they rest from their labour: whereby is signified that they which depart this life, beeing members of Christ enter into euerlasting happinesse; of what death soeuer they dy, yea though it be suddaine death. Againe I say that suddaine death is not euill in all respects. For it is not euil, because it is suddain, but because it commonly takes men vnprepared, and by that meanes makes the day of death a blacke day, and as it were a very speedy downefall to the gulfe of hell. Otherwise if a man be readie and prepared to die, suddaine death is in effect no death, but a quicke and speedie entrance to eternall life.

These obiections beeing thus answered, it appeares to be manifest truth which Salomon saith, that the day of death is better indeede then the day of birth. Now I come to the third point, in which the reasons & respects are to be considered, that make the day of death to surpasse the day of mans birth: and they may all be reduced to this one, namely that the birth day is an enterance into all woe and misery; whereas the day of death ioyned with godly and reformed life, is an entrance or degree to eternall life. Which I make manifest thus: Eternal life hath three degrees one in this life, when a man can truely say that he liues not, but that Christ liues in him: and this all men can say that repent and beleeue, and are iustified & sanctified, and haue peace of Conscience, with other gifts of Gods spirit, which are the earnest of their saluation. The second degree is in this life, when the bodie goes to the earth and the soule is carried by the Angels into heauen. The third is in the ende of the world at the last iudgment, when body and soule reunited, doe ioyntly enter into eternall happines in heauen. Now of these three degrees, death it selfe being ioyned with the feare of God, is the second; which also containeth in it two worthie steppes to life. The first, is a freedome from all miseries which haue their ende in death. For though men in this life are subiect to manifold daungers by sea and land, as also to sundrie aches, paines, and diseases, as feauers, and consumptions, &c. yet when death comes there is an end of all. Againe, so long as men liue in this world whatsoeuer they be, they do in some part lie in bondage vnder originall corruption & the remnants thereof, which are doubtings of Gods prouidēce, vnbeleefe, pride of heart, ignorance, couetousnesse, ambition, enuie, hatred, lust, and such like sins which bring forth fruits vnto death. And to bee in subiection to sinne on this manner, is a miserie of all miseries. Therefore 2, Cor, 12, 7. Paul when he was tempted vnto sinne by his corruption, calls the very temptation the buffets of Sathan, & as it were a prick or thorn wounding his flesh, and paining him at the very heart. Againe, in another place wearied with his own corruptions, he complaines that he is sold vnder sinne, and he cries out, O miserable man that I am, who shall deliuer me from this bodie of death? Rom, 7, 24 Dauid saith, that his eies gushed out with Ps, 119, 136 riuers of teares when other men sinned against God: how much more then was he grieued for the sinnes where with he himselfe was ouertaken in this life? And indeede it is a very hell for a man that hath but a sparke of grace, to be exercised, turmoyled, and tempted with the inborne corruptions and rebellions of his owne heart: and if a man would deuise a tormēt for such as feare God and desire to walke in newnesse of life, hee cannot deuise a greater then this. For this cause blessed is the day of death which bringes with it a freedome from all sinne whatsoeuer. For when we die, the corruption of nature is quite abolished, and sanctification is accomplished. Lastly, it is a great miserie that the people of God are constrained in this world to liue and conuerse in the companie of the wicked; as sheep are mingled with goates which strike them, annoy their pasture, and muddy their water. Hereupon Dauid cries out, Woe is mee Psal, 120, 5 that I remaine in Meshech, and dwell in the tents of Kedar. When Elias saw that Ahab 1 King, 19, 4 and Iesabel had planted Idolatrie in Israel and they sought his life also, hee went apart into the wildernes and desired to dy. But this misery also is ended in the day of death, in as much as death is as it were the hand of God to sort and single out those that bee the seruants of God from all vngodly men in this most wretched world.

Fur-

Furthermore this exceeding benefitte comes by death, that it doth not onely abolish the miseries, which presently are vpon vs, but also prevent those which are to come. The righteous (saith the prophet Esay) perisheth, and no man considereth it in his heart: and mercifull men are taken away, and no man vnderstandeth that the righteous is taken away frō the euill to come. Esa.57.1. Example of this we haue in Iosias. Because (saith the Lorde) thine heart did melt, and thou hast humbled thy selfe before the Lord, when thou heardest what I spake against this place, &c; behold therefore I will gather thee to thy fathers, and thou shalt bee put in thy graue in peace, and thine eies shall not see all the euill which I will bring vpon this place: 2.kin.22.20 And Paul saith, that among the Corinthians some were asleepe, that is, dead, that they might not be condemned with the world: 1.cor.11.32

Thus much of freedome from miserie which is the first benefit that comes by death, and the first steppe to life: now follows the second, which is, that death giues an entrance to the soule, that it may come into the presence of the euerliuing God, of Christ, and of all the Angels and Saints in heauen. The worthinesse of this benefit makes the death of the righteous tobe no death; but rather a blessing to be wished of al men. The consideration of this made Paul to say, I desire to be dissolued: but what is the cause of this desire? that followes in the next words, namely, that by this dissolution hee might come to bee with Christ. Phil.3. When the Queene of Sheba saw all Salomons wisdome, and the house that he had built, and the meat of his table, and the sitting of his seruants, and the order of his ministers, and their apparell, &c. shee said, Happie are thy men, happie are these thy seruants which stand euer before thee and heare thy wisedome: much more then may we say that they are ten thousand folde happie which stande not in the presence of an earthly king; but before the king of kings, the Lord of heauen & earth: & at his right hand inioy pleasures for euer more. Moses hath beene renowned in all ages for this, that god vouchsafed him but so much fauour as to see his hinder partes at his request, O then, what happinesse is this, to see the glorie and Maiestie of God face to face, and to haue eternall fellowshippe with God our father, Christ our Redeemer, and the holy Ghost our comforter, and to liue with the blessed Saints and Angels in heauen for euer? 1.king.10.8

Thus now the third point is manifest, namely in what respects death is more excellent then life. It may be, here the minde of man vnsatisfied, will yet further replie & say, that howsoeuer in death the soules of men enter into heauen, yet their bodies though they haue beene tenderly kept for meate, drinke and apparell; and haue slept many a night in beds of doune, must lie in darke and loathsome graues, & there bee wasted and consumed by wormes. Answ. All this is true indeede, but al is nothing; if so bee it, we will but consider aright of our graues as we ought. We must not iudge of our graues, as they appeare to the bodily eie, but we must looke vpon them by the eie of faith, & consider them as they are altered and chaunged by the death and buriall of Christ, who hauing vnquished death vpon the crosse, pursued him afterward to his owne death, and foyled him there, and depriued him of his power. And by this meanes Christ in his owne death hath buried our death, & by the vertue of his buriall, as sweete incense hath sweetned and perfumed our graues, and made them of stinking & loathsome Esa.57.2. cabbins, to become princely pallaces, and beds of most sweete and happie rest, farre more excellent then beds of doune.

And though the bodie rot in the graue and be eaten of wormes, or of fishes in the sea, or burnt to ashes, yet that will not be vnto vs a matter of discomfort, if we doe well consider the grounde of all graces, namely, our coniunction with Christ. It is indeed a spirituall, and yet a most real coniunction. And we must not imagine that our soules alone are ioyned to the bodie or soule of Christ, but the whole person of man both in bodie or soule is ioyned and vnited to whole Christ. And when we are once ioyned to Christ in this mortall life by the bond of the spirit, wee shall remaine and continue eternally ioyned with him: and this vnion once truely made shall neuer be dissolued. Hence it followes, that although the bodie be seuered from the soule in death, yet neither body nor soule are seuered from Christ, but the verie bodie rotting in the graue, drowned in the sea, burned to ashes, abides still vnited to him, and is as truely a member of Christ then, as before: This point we must remember as the foundation of all our comfort, and hold it for euer as a trueth. For looke what was the condition of Christ in death the same or the like is the condition of al his members. Now the cõdition of Christ was this, though his body and soule were seuered each from other as farre as heauen and the graue, yet neither of them were seuered from the godhead of the Sonne, but both did in death subsist in his person. And therefore though our bodies and soules bee pulled a sunder by natural or violent death, yet neither of them no not the bodie it selfe shal bee seuered and disioyned from Christ. It will be alleadged, that if the bodie were then vnited to Christ, it should liue and be quickened in the graue. Answ. Not so: when a mans arme or legge is taken with the dead palsie, it receiues little or no heat, life sense, or motion from the bodie; and yet notwithstanding it remaines still a member of the bodie, because the flesh and the bone of it remaine ioyned to the flesh and the bone of the bodie: euen so may the bodie remaine a member of Christ, though for some space of time it receiue neither sense nor motion nor life from the soule or frõ the spirit of Christ.

Furthermore wee must remember that by the vertue of this coniunction, shal the dead bodie, be it rottẽ, burned, deuoured, or howsoeuer consumed, at the day of iudgement rise to eternal glorie, In the winter season trees remaine without fruit or leaues, and being beaten with wind and weather appeare to the eyes as if they were rottẽ trees: yet whẽ the spring time comes againe, they bring forth, as before, buds & blossoms, leaues and fruit: the reason is, because the bodie, graines, & armes of trees are al ioyned to the root, wher lies the sap in the winter season, & whence by means of this coniunction it is deriued to al parts of the tree in the spring time: Euen so the bodies of men haue their winter also, in which they are turned to dust, and so remaine for the space of many thousande yeares, yet in the day of iudgement by meanes of that mystical coniunction with Christ, shall diuine and quickening vertue streame thence to all the bodies of the elect to cause them to liue againe, and that to life eternal. But some wil say, that the wicked also rise againe. Anſ. They doe so indeed; but not by the same cause; for they rise by the power of Christ as he is a iudge to condemne them: wheras the godly rise againe by the vertue of Christs resurrection, whereof they are partakers by meanes of that blessed & indissoluble coniunctiõ which they haue with Christ, And the bodies of the elect though they putrifie and consume neuer so much in the graue, yet are they still in the fauour of God and in the couenant of grace: to which, because they haue right and title being dead, they shal not remaine so for euer, but shal rise to glorie at the last iudgement. Therefore the rotting of the bodie is nothing in respect; and the death of the bodie is noe death. And therefore also death in the old and newe Testament is made but a sleepe, and the graue a bed, whereof the like was neuer seene; wherein a man may rest, nothing at all troubled with dreames or fantasies. and whence hee shall rise no more subiect to weakenesse or sickenesse, but presently bee translated to eternal glorie. By this then which hath beene said, it appeares that the death of the righteous is a second degree to euerlasting happinesse.

Nowe then considering our coniunction with Christ is the foundation of al our ioy and comfort in life & death; we are in the feare of God to learne this one lesson, namely, that while we haue time in this world, we must labour to bee vnited vnto Christ, that wee may be bone of his bone, and flesh of his flesh. This very point is as it were a flaggon of wine to reuiue our soules when they be in a swoune at any instant: And that we may be assured that wee are certainely ioyned to Christ, we must shew our selues to be members of his mystical bodie by the daily fruites of righteousnesse and true repentance. And beeing once certainely assured in conscience of our beeing in Christ: let death come when it wil, and let it cruelly part a sunder both bodie & soule, yet shal they both remaine in the couenant, and by meanes thereof be reunited and taken vp to life eternall. Whereas on the contrarie, if men bee out of the couenant & die out of Christ, their soules goe to hel, and their bodies rot for a time in the graue; but afterwardes they rise to endlesse perdition. Wherfore I say againe and again, labour that yout consciences by the holy Ghost may testifie that ye are liuing stones in the temple of God, and braunches bearing fruite in the true vine: and then ye shal feele by experience, that the pangs of death shal bee a further degree of happinesse then euer ye found in your liues, euen then when ye are gasping and panting for breath.

Thus much of the meaning of the text, now followe the vses, and they are manifold. The first and principall is this. In that Solomon preferres the day of death before the day of birth, hee doth therein giue vs to vnderſtand, that there is a direct and certaine way whereby a man may die well; if it had beene otherwiſe, hee coud not haue ſaid that the day of death is better. And whereas he auouchethtthis, he ſhewes withal that there is an infallible way whereby a man may make a bleſſed ende, Therefore nowe let vs come to ſearch out this way: the knowledge and true vnderſtanding whereof muſt not bee fetched from the writings of men, but from the worde of God; who hath the power of life and death in his owne hand.

that

Nowe that a man may die well, Gods word requires two things: a preparation before death, and a right behauiour and diſpoſition in death.

The preparation vnto death is an action of a repentant ſinner, whereby he makes himſelfe fit and readie to die, and is a duty very neceſſarie, to which wee are bound by Gods commaundement. For there bee ſundrie places of Scripture which doe ſtraightly inioyne vs to watch and pray, and to make our ſelues readie euery way againſt the ſecond comming of Chriſt to iudgement. Nowe the ſame places doe withall binde vs to make preparation againſt death, at which time God comes to iudgement vnto vs particularly. Againe, looke as death leaueth a man, ſo ſhall the laſt iudgement finde him, and ſo ſhall hee abide eternally: there maybe changes and conuerſions from euill to good in this life, but after death there is no chang at al. Therefore a preparation to death can in no wiſe be omitted of him that deſires to make an happie and bleſſed end.

The preparation is twofold, generall, and particular. Generall preparation is that wherby a man prepares himſelfe to die through the whole courſe of his life, A dutie moſt needefull which muſt in no wiſe bee omitted. The reaſons are theſe: Firſt of all death which is certaine is moſt of all vncertaine. I ſay it is certen. becauſe no man can eſchew death. And it is vncertaine three wayes: firſt, in regard of time: for no man knoweth when he ſhal die: ſecondly, in regard of place: for noe man knowes where he ſhall die, whether in his bed or in the field, whether by ſea or by land; thirdly, in reſpect of the kinde of death; for no man knowes whether hee ſhal die of a lingring or ſudden, of a violēt or naturall death. Hence it followes, that men ſhould euerie day prepare theſelues to death: Indeed if we could know when where, and how we ſhould die, the cauſe were otherwiſe, but ſeeing we know none of theſe, it ſtands vs in hand to look about vs. A ſecond reaſon ſeruing further to perſwade vs in this. The moſt daungerous thing of all in this worlde, is to neglect all preparation. To make this point more manifeſt, I will vſe this compariſon. A certaine man purſued by an Vnicorne, in his flight falls into a dungeon, and in his fall takes hold and hangs by the arme of a tree: now as he thus hangs looking down ward, he ſees two wormes gnawing at the roote of the tree, and as he lookes vpward hee ſees an hiue of moſt ſweete honnie, whereupon hee climes vp vnto it, and ſitting by it feedes thereon. In the meane ſeaſō while he is thus ſitting, the two wormes gnawe in pieces the roote of the tree: which done, tree and man and all falls into the bottome of the dungeon. Now this Vnicorne is death; the man that flies is euerie one of vs, and euerie liuing man; the pit ouer which he hangeth, is hell; the arme of the tree is life it ſelf, the two wormes are day and night, the continuance whereof is the whole life of man; the hiue of hony is the pleaſures and profits & honours of this world, to which when men wholly giue themſelues not conſidering their endes, till the tree roote, that is, this temporal life be cut off: which being once done, they plunge themſelues quite into the gulfe of hell: By this we ſee, that there is good cauſe that men ſhold not deferre their preparation till the time of ſickneſſe but rather euerie daye make themſelues readie againſt the day of death. But ſome will ſay, it ſhall ſuffice if I prepare my ſelfe to pray when I beginne to be ſicke. Anſ. Theſe men greatly deceiue themſelues, for the time then is moſt vnfitte to begin a preparation, becauſe all the ſences and powers of the bodie are occupied about the paines and troubles of the diſeaſe; and the ſicke partie is exerciſed partly in conference with the Phyſitiā, partly with the Miniſters about the ſoules health and matters of conſcience, and partly with friends that come to viſit. Therefore there muſt ſome preparion goe before in the time of health, when the whole man with all the powers of bodie and ſoule are at liberty. Againe, there bee ſome others which imagine and ſay, that a man may repent when he will, euen in the time of death: & that ſuch repentance is ſufficient. Anſ. It is falſe which they ſay: For it is not in the power of man to repent when he himſelfe will; when God will hee may. It is not in him that willeth or runneth, but in God that hath mercie. And Chriſt ſaith, that many ſhall ſeeke to enter into heauen and ſhal not be able. But why ſo? becauſe they ſeeke when it is too late; namely when the time of grace is paſt. Therefore it is exceeding folly for men ſo much as once to dreame that they may haue repentance at command; nay it is a iuſt iudgement that they ſhould bee condemned of God in death, that did contemne God in their life and that they ſhould quite bee forgotten of God in ſickneſs, that did forget God in their health. Againe I anſwer, that this late repentance is ſeldome or neuer true repentance. It is ſicke like the partie himſelf, commonly languiſhing and dying together with him. Repentance ſhould be voluntarie (as all obedience to God ought) but repentance taken vp in ſickeneſſe, is vſually conſtrained and extorted by the feare of hel, and other iudgements of god: for croſſes, afflictions, and ſickeneſſe, will cauſe the groſſeſt hypocrite that euer was to ſtoope and buckle vnder the hand of God, and to diſſemble faith and repentance and euerie grace of God, as though he had them as fully as any of the true ſeruants of God; whereas indeede hee wants them altogither. Wherefore ſuch repentance commonly is but counterfeit. For in true and ſound repentance men muſt forſake their ſinnes; but in this, the ſinne forſaks the man: who leaues all his euil waies onely vpon this, that he is conſtrained to leaue the world. Wherefore it is a thing greatly to be wiſhed, that men would repent and prepare themſelues to die in the time of health before the day of death or ſickneſſe come. Laſtly it is alleadged that one of the theeues repented vppon the croſſe. Anſ. The theefe was called after the eleuenth houre at the point of the twelfth when he was now dying & drawing on, Therefore his conuerſion was altogether miraculous and extraordinarie: and there was a ſpeciall reaſon why Chriſt would haue him to be called then, that while he was in ſuffering he might ſhew forth the vertue of his paſſion: that al which ſawe the one, might alſo acknowledge the other: Now it is not good for men to make an ordinatie rule of an extraordinarie example.

Thus then this point beeing manifeſt that a general preparation muſt be made, let vs now ſee in what manner it muſt bee done. And for the right doing of it, 5. duties muſt be practiſed in the courſe of our liues. The firſt is, the meditatiō of death in the life time. For the life of a Chriſtian is not hing elſe but a meditation of death: A notable practiſe hereof we haue in the example of Ioſeph of Arimathea, who made his tombe in his life time in the midſt of his garden: no doubt for this end, to put himſelfe in mind of death, and that in the midſt of his delight & pleaſures. Heathen Philoſophers, that neuer knew Chriſt, had many excellent meditations of death, though nor comfortable in regard of life euerlaſting. Now we, that haue knowne and beleeued in Chriſt, muſt goe beyond them in this point, conſidering with our ſelues ſuch things, as they neuer thought of, namely, the cauſe of death, our ſin: the remedy therof, the curſed death of Chriſt: curſed I ſay, in regard of the kind of death and puniſhment laid vpon him, but bleſſed in regard of vs. Thirdly, we muſt often meditate on the preſence of death, which we doe, when by Gods grace we make an account of euerie preſent day as if it were the preſent daie of our death, and recken with out ſelues when wee goe to bedde as though we ſhould neuer riſe againe; and when we riſe, as though we ſhould neuer lie downe againe.

This meditation of death is of ſpeciall vſe and brings forth many fruits in the life of man. And firſt of al it ſerues to humble vs vnder the hand of God. Example wee haue of Abraham, who ſaid, Behold I haue begunne now to ſpeake to my Lord; and I am but duſt and aſhes. Marke here, how the conſideration of his mortalitie made him to abaſe and caſt downe himſelfe in the ſight of God; and thus if we could recken of euery day as of the laſt day, it would ſtraightway pull downe our peacockes feathers, and make us with Iob to abhorre our ſelues in duſt and aſhes.

Secondly, this meditation is a meanes to further repentance. When Ionas came to Niniue and cried, Yet foortie daies and Niniue ſhall be deſtroyed, the whole citie repented in ſackcloath and aſhes. When Elias came to Ahab and told him that the dogges ſhould eate Ieſabel by the wal of Ieſreel, and him alſo of Ahabs ſtocke that died in the cittie, &c. it made him to humble himſelfe ſo, as the Lorde ſaith to Elias, Seest thou how Ahab is humbled before mee? Nowe if the remembrance of death was of such force in him that was but an hypocrite; howe excellent a meanes of grace will it bee in them that truly repent.

Thirdly, this meditation serues to stirre vp contentation in euerie estate and condition of life that shall befall vs. Righteous Iob in the verie middest of his afflictions, comforts himselfe with this consideration Naked (saith he) came I forth of my mothers wombe, and naked shall I returne againe, &c. blessed be the name of the Lord; And surely the often meditation of this, that a man of al his abundance can carrie nothing with him but either a coffin or a winding sheet, or both, should be a forcible meanes to represse the vnsatiable desire of riches and the loue of this world.

Thus we see what an effectuall meanes this meditation is, to encrease and further the grace of God in the heartes of men. Now I commend this first dutie to your Christian considerations, desiring the practise of it in your liues: which practise that it may take place, two things must be performed. First, labour to plucke out of your hearts a wicked and erroneous imagination, whereby euerie man naturally blesseth himselfe and thinkes highly of himselfe: and though he had one foote in the graue, yet he perswades himselfe that he shall not die yet. There is no man almost so old but by the corruption of his heart he thinks that he shal liue one yeare longer. Cruel & vnmercifull death makes league with no man: and yet the Prophet Esay saith, that the wicked man makes a league with death. How can this be? their is no league made in deede, but onely in the wicked imagination of man; who falsly thinks that death will not come nere him, though all the world should bee destroyed. See an example in the parable of the rich man, that hauing stored vp abundance of wealth for many yeares, said vnto his owne soule, Soule, thou hast much goods laide vp for many yeres, liue at ease, eat drink and take thy past time, whereas his soule was fetched away presently. And seeing this natural corruption is in euerie mans hart, we must daily fight against it, and labour by all might and maine that it take no place in vs: for so long as it shall preuaile, we shall be vtterly vnfit to make any preparation to death. We ought rather to endeauour to attaine to the minde and meditation of S. Hierome, who testifieth of himselfe on this manner, Whether I wake or sleepe, or whatsoeuer I doe, mee thinkes I here the sound of the trumpet, Rise ye dead, and come to iudgement. In epist.

The second thing which we are to practise that we may come to a serious meditation of our owne endes, is, to make prayer vnto God that we might be inabled to resolue our selues of death continually. Thus Dauid praied, Lord make me to know mine ende, and the measure of my daies, let me know how long I haue to liue. Psal. 39. 4. And Moyses, Lord teach me to number my dayes, that I may applie mine heart vnto wisedome. Psal. 90. 12. It may be said, What need men pray to God that they might be able to number their daies? cannot they of themselues recken a fewe yeares and dayes that are able by art to measure the globe of the earth, and the spheres of heauen; & the quantities of the starres, with their longitudes, latitudes, altitudes, motions, and distances from the earth? No, verily. For howsoeuer by a generall speculation we think something of our endes, yet vnlesse the spirit of God be our schoolemaster to teach vs our dutie, we shall neuer be able soundly to resolue our selues of the presence and speedines of death. And therefore let vs pray with Dauid and Moyses that God would inlighten our mindes with knowledge; and fill our hearts, with his grace, that we might righly consider of death, and esteeme of it euerie day and houre as if it were the day and houre of death.

The second dutie in this generall preparation is, that euerie man must daily endeauour to take away from his own death the power and strength thereof. And I pray you marke this point. The Philistins saw by experience that Sampson was of great strengh, and therefore they vsed meanes to know in what part of his body it lay: and when they found it to be in the haire of his head, they ceased not vntill it was cut off. In like manner the time will come when wee must encounter hand to hand with tyranous and cruel death: the best therefore is, before hand now while we haue time, to search where the strēgth of death lies, which beeing once knowne, we must with speede cut off his Sampsons lockes, and bereaue him of his power, disarme him, and make him altogether vnable to preuaile against vs: Now to find out this matter, we nede not to vse the counsel of any Delilah: for we haue the worde of God which teacheth vs plainely where the ſtrength of death conſiſts, namely in our ſinnes, as Paule ſaith, The ſting of death is ſinne. Well then, we knowing certainly that the power and force of euery mans particular death lies in his owne ſinnes, muſt ſpend our time and ſtudie in vſinge good meanes that our ſinnes may be remooued and pardoned. And therefore we muſt daily inure our ſelues in the practiſe of two duties. One is to humble our ſelues for all our ſinnes paſt, partly confeſſing them againſt our ſelues, partly in praier crying to heauen for the pardon of thē. The other is for time, to come to turne vnto God, and to carrie a purpoſe, reſolution, & indeauour in all things to reforme both heart and life according to Gods word. Theſe are the verie principall and proper duties, whereby the ſtrength of death is much rebated, and he is made of a mightie & bloodie enemie ſo farre forth friendly and tractable, that we may with comfort encounter with him and preuaile too. Therefore I commende theſe duties to your Chriſtian conſiderations, & carefull practiſe, deſiring that ye would ſpend your daies euer hereafter in doing of thē. If a man were to deale with a mightie dragon or ſerpent hand to hand, in ſuch wiſe as he muſt either kill or be killed, the beſt thing were to bereaue him of his ſting, or of that part of his bodie where his poiſon lies: now death it ſelfe is a ſerpent, dragon or ſcorpion, and ſinne is the ſting or poiſon whereby hee woundes and kils vs. Wherefore without any more delay, ſee that yee pull out his ſting: the practiſe of the foreſaid duties is as it were a fit and worthie inſtrument to doe the deed. Haſt thou beene a perſon ignorant of Gods will, a contemner of his worde and worſhip, a blaſphemer of his name, a breaker of his ſabbaths, diſobedient to parents & Maieſtrates, a murderer, a fornicatour, a railer, a ſlanderer, a couetous perſon, and &c. reforme theſe thy ſinnes and all other like vnto them, pull them out by the roots from thy heart, and caſt them off. So many ſinnes as be in thee ſo many ſtings of death be alſo in thee to wound thy ſoule to eternall death. Therefore let noe one ſinne remaine, for which thou haſt not humbled thy ſelf & repented ſeriouſly: When death hurts any man, it takes the weapons whereby he is hurt, from his owne hand. It cannot doe vs the leaſt hurt but by the force of our owne ſinnes. Wherfore I ſay againe and againe, lay this point to your heartes, and ſpend your ſtrength, life, and health, that yee may before yee die, aboliſh the ſtrength of death. A man may put a ſerpent in his boſome, when the ſting is cut, & wee may let death creepe into our boſomes, and gripe vs with his legs, and ſtab vs at the heart, ſo long as hee bringes not his venime and poyſon with him.

And becauſe the former duties are ſo neceſſarie, as none can be more, I will vſe ſome reaſons yet further to enforce them. Whatſoeuer a man would doe when he is dying, the ſame he ough to doe euery day while he is liuing: now the moſt notorious and wicked perſon that euer was, whē he is dying will pray and deſire others to pray for him, and promiſe amendment of life, proteſting that if he might liue, hee wold becom a practitioner in al the good duties of faith, repentance, and reformation of life. Oh therefore bee careſull to doe this euerie day. Againe, the ſaying is true, he that would liue when he is dead, muſt die while he is aliue; namely to his ſinne. Wouldeſt thou then liue eternally? ſue to heauen for thy pardon, and ſee that now in thy life time thou die to thine own ſinnes. Laſtly wicked Balaam would faine die the death of the righteous: but alas, it was to ſmall purpoſe: for he would by no meanes liue the life of the righteous: For his continuall purpoſe and meaning was to follow his old waies in ſorceries and couetouſnes. Now the life of a righteous man ſtandes in the humbling of himſelfe for his ſinnes paſt, and in a carefull reformatiō of life to come. Wouldeſt thou thē die the death of the righteous, then looke vnto it, that thy life be the life of the righteous; if yee wil needes liue the life of the vnrighteous yee muſt looke to die the death of the vnrigteous. Remember this, and content not your ſelues to heare the word, but be dooers of it: for yee learne no more indeede: what meaſure of knowledge ſoeuer ye haue; then ye practiſe. Eph. 4. 21. 22.

The third dutie is out generall preparation, it is in this life to enter into the firſt degree of life eternall. For as I haue ſaide there be three degrees of life euerlaſting, and the firſt of them is in this preſent life. For he that would liue in eternall happineſſe for euer, muſt begin in this worlde to riſe out of the graue of his own ſinnes, in which by nature he lies buried, and liue in newneſſe of life, as it is ſaid in the Reuelation, He that will eſcape the ſecond death, Reuel. 20. 6.

must bee made partaker of the first resurrection: And Paul saith to the Colossians, that they were in this life deliuered from the power of darknesse, and translated into the kingdome of Christ; And Christ saith to the Church of the Iewes, the kingdome of heauen is amongst you. Now this first degree of life is, when a man can say with Paul, I liue not, but Christ liues in me: that is, I find partly by the testimonie of my sanctified conscience, and partely by experience, that Christ my redeemer by his spirit guideth and gouerneth my thoughts, will, affections, and all the powers of bodie & soule according to the blessed direction of his holy will. Now that wee might be able to say this, we must haue three gifts and graces of God, wherein especially this first degree of life consists: The first is, sauing knowledge, whereby we doe truly resolue our selues that God the father of Christ is our father, Christ his sonne our redeemer, and the holy Ghost our comforter. That this knowledge is one part of eternal life, it appeares by the saying of Christ in Iohn, This is life eternall, that is, the beginning & entrance into life eternall, to know thee the onely God, and whom thou hast sent Iesus Christ. The second grace, is peace of conscience which passeth all vnderstanding: and therefore Paul saith, that the kingdome of heauen is righteousnesse, peace of conscience, and ioy in the holy Ghost. The horrour of a guiltie conscience is the beginning of death and destruction: therefore peace of conscience deriued from the death of Christ, is life and happines. The third is the regiment of the spirit, whereby the heart and life of man is ordered according to the word of God. For Paul saith, that they that are the children of God, are led by the spirit of Christ. Now seeing this is so, that if wee would liue eternally, we must begin to liue that blessed & eternall life before we die, here we must be carefull to reforme two common errours. The first is, that a man enters into eternall life when he dies and not before: which is a flat vntruth. Our Sauiour Christ saide to Zacheus, This day is saluation come to thy house, giuing vs to vnderstand, that a man then begins to be saued, when God doth effectually call him by the ministerie of his Gospel. Whosoeuer then will bee saued when he is dying and dead, must begin to be saued while he is now liuing. His saluation must beginne in this life, that would come to saluation after this life: Verily, verily, saith Christ, he that heareth my word, & beleeueth in him that sent mee, hath eternall life, namely in this present life. The second errour is, that howsoeuer a man liue, if when he is dying he can lift vp his eyes, and say, Lord haue mercie vpon me, hee is certenly saued. Behold a verie dangerous and foolish conceit, that deceiues many a man. It is all one as if an arrant theefe should thus reason with himselfe, and say; I will spend my dayes in robbing & stealing, I feare neither arraignment, nor execution. For at the verie time when I am to be turned off the ladder, if I doe but call vpon the iudge I knowe I shall haue my pardon. Behold a most dangerous and desperate course: and the verie same is the practise of careless men in the matter of their saluation. For a man may die with Lord haue mercie in his mouth, & perish eternally: except in this world he enter into the first degree of eternall life. For not euery one that saith, Lorde, Lorde, shall enter into heauen: but he that doth the will of the father which is in heauen.

The fourth dutie is, to exercise and inure our selues in dying by little and little so long as we liue here vpon earth, before we come to die indeede. And as men that are appointed to runne a race, exercise themselues in runninge that they may get the victorie; so should we beginne to die now while wee are liuing, that we might die wel in the end. But some may say, how should this be done? Paul giues vs direction in his owne example when he saith, By the reioycing which I haue in Christ I die daily. And he died daily, not onely because he was often in danger of death by reason of his calling: but also because in all his dangers and troubles, he inured himselfe to die. For when men doe make the right vse of their afflictions, whether they be in bodie or mind, or both, and doe with al their might endeauour to beare them patiently, humbling themselues as vnder the correction of God, then they begin to die wel And to doe this indeede is to take an excellent course. He that would mortifie his greatest sinnes, must begin to doe it with small sinnes which, when they are once reformed, a man shall be able more easily to ouercome his master sinnes: So likewise he that would be able to beare the crosse of all cosses, namely death it selfe, must first of all learne to beare small crosses, as sicknesses in body, and troubles in minde, with losse of goods and of friendes, and of good name; which I may fitly tearme little deaths, and the beginnings of death it selfe: and wee must first of all acquaint our selues with these little deaths, before we cã be wel able to beare the great death of all. Again, the afflictions and calamities of this life are as it were the harbingers & puruiers of death: and we are first to learn how to entertaine these messengers, that when death the lord himselfe shall come, wee may in better manner entertaine him. This point Bilney the martyr well considered, who oftentimes before hee was burnad, put his finger into the flame of the candle, not onely to make triall of his abilitie in suffering, but also to arme and strengthen himselfe against greater torments in death. Thus yee see the fourth dutie, which ye must in any wise learne and remember, because we canot be able to beare the pangs of death well, vnleswe be first well schooled and nurtered by sundrie trialls in this life.

Mors post crucẽ minor est.

The fifth and last dutie is set downe by Salomon, All that thine hand shall finde to doe, doe it with all thy power. And marke the reason: For there is neither worke, nor invention, nor knowledge nor wisdome in the grave whither thou goest. To the same purpose Paul saith. Doe good to all men while ye have time: Therefore if a man bee able to doe any good seruice either to Gods Church or to the commonwealth, or to any priuate man, let him doe it with all speede and with all might, least death it selfe preuent him. He that hath care thus to spend his dayes; shall with much comfort and peace of conscience ende this life.

Eccles. 9, 10.

Gal. 6. 10.

Thus much of generall preparation. Now followeth the particular, which is in the time of sickneſse. And here first of all I will shew what is the doctrine of the Papists, and then afterward the truth. By the Popish order and practise, when a man is about to die, he is inioyned three things. First to make sacramentall confession, specially if it be in any mortall sinne: secondly to receiue the Eucharist; thirdly to require his annoyling, that is, the sacrament (as they call it) of extreame vnction.

Sacramentall confession, they tearme a rehearsall or numeration of all a mans sinnes to a priest, that he may receiue absolution. But against this kind of confession, sundrie reasons may bee alleadged. First of all, it hath no warrant either by commandement or example in the whole word of God. They say yes: and they indeauour to prooue it thus: He which lies in any mortall sin, is by Gods law bound to doe penance and to seeke reconciliation with God: now the necessarie meanes after baptisme to obtaine reconciliation, is the confession of all our sinnes to a priest Because Christ hath appointed priests to be iudges vpon earth, with such measure of authoritie, that no man falling after baptisme, can without their sentence and determination bee reconciled; and they can not rightly iudge, vnlesse they know al a mans sinnes: therefore all that fall after baptisme are bound by Gods worde to open all their sinnes to a priest. Ans. It is false which they say that priests are iudges, hauing power to examine and take knowledge of mens sinnes, and iurisdiction whereby they can properly absolue and pardon or retaine them. For Gods word hath giuen no more to man, but a ministerie of reconciliation, whereby in the name of God. and according to his word. he doth preach, declare, and pronounce, that God doth pardon or not pardon his sinnes. Againe, pardon may truely be pronounced, and right iudgement of the estate of any man, without a particular rehearsall of his sinnes, for hee which soundly and truely repents of one or some fewe sinnes repentes of all. Secondly, this confessiõ is ouerturned by the practise of the Prophets and Apostles, who not onely absolued particular persons, but also whole Churches without exaction of auricular confession. When Nathan the prophet had rebuked Dauid for his two great and horrible crimes, Dauid touched with remorse saide, I haue sinned, And Nathan presently without further examination declared vnto him in the name of God, that his sinnes were forgiuen him. Thirdly, it cannot be prooued by any good and sufficient proofes, that this confession was vsed in the Church of God til after fiue or sixe hundred yeares were expired. For the confession which was then in vse, was either publicke before the Church, or the opening of a publike fault to some priuate person in secret. Therefore to vrge sicke men vnto it lying at the pointe of death, is to lay more burdens on them, that euer God appointed.

2. Sam. 12. 13

And whereas they make it a necessary thing to receiue the Eucharist in the time of sickness toward death, and that priuately of the sicke partie alone, they haue no warrant for their practise and opinion,

for

For in the want of the ſacrament there is no danger, but in the contempt: and the very contempt it ſelfe is a ſin which may be pardoned, if we repent. And there is no reaſon why we ſhould thinke that ſick men ſhould be depriued of the comfort of the Lords ſupper, if they receiue it not in death; becauſe the fruit and efficacy of the Sacrament once receiued, is not to be reſtrained to the time of receiuing; but it extendes it ſelfe to the whole time of mans life afterward. Againe the ſupper of the Lord is no priuate action, but meerely Eccleſiaſticall: and therefore to be celebrated in the meeting and aſſembly of Gods people; as our Sauiour Chriſt preſcribeth, when he ſaith, Doe ye this; and Paul in ſaying, When ye come together. But it is alleaged that the Iſraelites did eat the Paſchal Lambe in their houſes when they were in Egypt. Anſw. The Iſraelites had then no liberty to make any publike meeting for that end; and God commanded that the Paſchal Lamb ſhould be eaten in all the houſes of the Iſraelites at one and the ſame inſtant; and that in effect was as much as if it had beene publike. Againe, they alleadge a Canon of the Councill of Nice; which decreeth that men beeing about to die, muſt receiue the Euchariſt, & not be a depriued of the prouiſion of food neceſſarie for their iourney. Anſw. The Councill made no decree touching the adminiſtration of the Sacrament to all them that dye, but to ſuch onely as fall away from the faith in perſecution, or fell into any other notorious crime, & were thereupon excommunicate, and ſo remained till death: and either then or ſomewhat before teſtified their repentance for their offences. And the Canon was made for this ende, that ſuch perſons might be aſſured that they were againe receiued into the Church, & by this means depart with more comfort. Thirdly, it is obiected that in the primitiue Church, part of the Euchariſt was caried by a ladde to Serapion an aged man, lying ſicke in his bedd. Anſw. It was indeede the cuſtome of the auncient church from the very beginning that the elements of bread & wine ſhould be ſent by ſome of the Deacons to the ſicke, which were abſent from the aſſembly. And yet neuertheleſſe here is no footing for priuate communions. For the Euchariſt was only thē ſent when the reſt of the Church did openly communicate; & ſuch as were thē abſent only by reaſon of ſickneſſe, and deſired to be partakers of that bleſſed communion, were to bee reputed as preſent. Laſtly it is obiected, that it was the manner of man and woman in former times to carrie part of the ſacramēt home to their houſes, and to reſerue it till the time of neceſſity, as the time of ſicknes and ſuch like. Anſw. The reſeruation of the ſacrament was but a ſuperſtitious practiſe, though it be auncient. For out of the adminiſtration, that is, before it begin, and after it is ended, the ſacrament ceaſeth to be a ſacrament, and the elements to be elements. As for the practiſe of them that vſed to cramme the Euchariſt into the mouth of them that were deceaſed; it is not onely ſuperſtitious but alſo very abſurd.

Concil. Carth 3. can. 6.

As for the annoiling of the ſicke, that is, the annointing of the body, ſpecially the organes or inſtruments of the ſenſes, that the party may obtaine the remiſſion of his ſinns, and comfort againſt all temptations of the deuil in the houre of death and ſtrength more eaſily to beare the pangs of ſickneſſe and the pangs of death and bee againe reſtored to his Corporall health, if it be expedient for the ſaluation of his ſoule; it is but a doating of mans braine, and hath not ſo much as a ſhew of reaſon to iuſtifie it. The fifth of Iames is commonly alleadged to this purpoſe, but the annointing there mentioned is not of the ſame kind with this greaſie ſacrament of the Papiſts. For that annointing of the body was a ceremony vſed by the Apoſtles and others, when they put in practiſe this miraculous gift of healing, which gift is now ceaſed. Secondly that annointing hath a promiſe that the partie ſhould recouer his health: but this popiſh annointing had no ſuch promiſe, becauſe for the moſt part the perſons thus annointed dye afterward without recouerie; whereas thoſe which were annointed in the primitiue Church alwaies recouered. Thirdly, the auntient annointing ſerued onely for the procuring of health, but this tends further to the procuring of remiſſion of ſinnes, & ſtrength in temptation.

Iam. 5. 16.

Thus hauing ſeene the doctrine of the Papiſts; I come now to ſpeake of the true & right manner of the making particular preparation before death, which contains three ſorts of duties: one cōcerning God; the other concerning a mans owne ſelfe, the third concerning our neighbour. The firſt concerning God, is to ſeeke seekes to be reconciled vnto him in Christ though we haue beene long assured of his fauour. Al other duties must come after in the second place, and they are of little or no effect without this. Now this reconciliation must be sought for, and is obtained by a renewing of our former faith and repentance; and they must be renewed on this manner. So soone as a man shall feele any manner of sicknes to seaze vppon his bodie, hee must consider with himselfe whence it ariseth: and after serious consideration, he shall finde that it comes not by chance or fortune, but by the speciall prouidence of God. This done, he must goe yet further and consider for what cause the Lorde should afflict his bodie with any sicknes or disease. And he shal finde by Gods worde, that sicknes comes ordinarily and vsually of sinne, Wherefore

Lam. 3. 36 is the liuing man sorrowfull? man suffereth for his sinnes. It is true indeed, there bee other causes of the wants of the bodie, and of sicknes, beside sinne; and though they be not know to vs, yet they are knowne to the Lord. Hereupon Christ when hee saw a certaine blind man, and was demanded what was the cause of the blindnesse, answered, Neither hath this man sinned, nor his parents but that the worke of God should
Ioh. 9. 3. be shewed on him. Yet we for our parts, who are to goe not by the secret, but by the reuealed will of God, must make this vse of our sicknes, that it is sent vnto vs for our sinnes. When Christ healed the man sicke of the palsie, he saith, Be of good comfort, thy Math. 9. 2. sinnes are forgiuen thee: and when he had healed the man by the poole of Bethesda, that had beene sicke thirtie eight yeares, he bids him sinne no more, least a worse thing
Ioh. 5. 14. happen vnto him: giuing them both to vnderstand, that their sicknesse came by reason of their sinnes. And thus should euery sicke man resolue himselfe. Now when we haue proceeded thus farre, and haue as it were laid our finger vpon the right and proper cause of our sicknes, three thinges concerning our sinnes must bee performed of vs in sicknes. First wee must make a new examination of our hearts & liues, and say as the Israelites saide in affliction, Lam. 3. 40 Let vs search and trie our waies, and turne againe to the Lord. Secondly, wee must make a newe confession to God of our new and particular sinnes, as God sendes newe corrections and chastisements. When Dauid had the hand of God very Psa. 32. 5 heauie vpon him for his sinnes, so as his very bones and moisture consumed within him, hee made confession of them vnto God, and thereupon obtained his pardon, and was healed. The third thing is to make newe prayer and more earnest then euer before, with sighs and grones of the spirit, and that for pardon of the same sinnes, and for reconciliation with God in Christ. In the exercise of these three duties stands the renouatiō of our faith and repentance, whereby they are increased, quickned, and reuiued. And the more sickneſse preuailes & takes place in the bodie, the more should we be carefull to put them in vre: that spirituall life might increase as temporall life is decaied. When king Ezechias lay sicke, as he thought, vpon his deathsbedde, hee wept as for some other causes, so also for his sins and withall hee prayed God to cast them behind his backe. Dauid made certaine Psalmes when he was sicke, or at the least vpon the occasion of his sicknes, as namely the 6. the 32. 38. 39, &c. and they all are Psalmes of repentance: in which we may see howe in destresse of bodie and minde he renued his faith and repentance, heartily bewailing his sinnes, and intreating the Lord for the pardon of them. Manasses, one that fell from God, and gaue himselfe to many horrible sinnes, when he was taken captiue and imprisoned in Babilon, Hee prayed to the Lord his
2. Chro. 33. 12. 13. God, and humbled himself greatly before the God of his fathers, and prayed vnto him: and God was intreated of him, and heard his prayer, and brought him againe into Ierusalem into his kingdome, and then Manasses knewe that the Lord was God. Now looke what Manasses did in this tribulation, the same thing must wee doe in the time of our bodily sickneſse.

Here I haue occasion to mention a notorious fault, that is very common in this age, euen among such as haue long liued in the bosome of the Church: and that is this. Men now a dayes are so farre from renuing their faith and repentance, that when they lye sicke and are drawing toward death, they must bee catechized in the doctrine of faith and tepentance, as if they had beene but of late receiued into the Church. Whosoeuer will, but as occasion is offered, visit the sicke, shall finde this to be true which I say. What a shame is this, that when a man hath spent his life and dayes in the Church for the space of twentie, or thirtie, or fourtie yeares, he should at the verie ende of all and not before, begin to inquire what faith, & what repentance is, and how his soule might be saued. This one sinne argues the great securitie of this age, & the great contempt of God and his word. Well, let all men hereafter in time to come, be warned to take heed of this exceeding negligence in matters of saluation, and to vse all good means before hand, that they may be able in sickenes and in the time of death to put in practise the spirituall exercises of inuocation and repentance.

Now if so bee it fall out that the sicke partie cannot of himselfe renew his owne faith and repentance, hee must seeke the helpe of others. When the man that was sicke of the dead palsie could not goe to Christ himselfe, hee got others to beare him in his bed: and when they could not come neare for the multitude they vncouered the roofe of the house, and let the bed downe before Christ: euen so, when sicke men cannot alone by themselues doe the good duties to which they are bound, they must borrow helpe from their fellow members; who are partly by their counsell to put to their helping hand, and partly by their prayers to present them vnto God, and to bring them into the presence of God.

Mark. 2.

And touching helpe in this case, sundry duties are to be performed: Saint Iames sets downe foure; two whereof concerne the sicke patient, and other two such as be helpers. The first dutie of the sicke man is to send for helpe: where two circumstances must be considered: who must be sent for, and when. For the first Saint Iames saith, Is any sicke among you? let him call for the elders of the Church. Whereby are meant not onely Apostles & all ministers of the Gospel, but others also (as I take it) which were men ancient for yeares, indued with the spirit of vnderstanding and prayer, and had withall the gift of working miracles and of healing the sicke. For in the primitiue Church this gift was for a time so plentifully bestowed on them that beleeued in Christ, that souldiers cast out deuils, and parents wrought miracles on their children. Hence we may learne, that howsoeuer it be the dutie of the ministers of the word principally to visit and comfort the sicke, yet is it not their dutie alone, for it belongs to them also which haue knowledge of Gods word, and the gift of prayer. Exhort one another (saith the holy Ghost) while it is called to day. And againe, Admonish them that are disordered, and comfort those that are weake. And indeede in equitie it should be the dutie of euerie Christian man to comfort his brother in sicknes. Here we must needes take knowledge of the common fault of men and women when they come to visit their neighbours and friendes: they cannot speake a word of instruction and comfort but spend the time in silence, gazing, and looking on: or in vttering words to little or no purpose, saying to the sicke partie, that they are very sorrie to see him in that case, that they would haue him to be of good comfort, but wherein and by what meanes they cannot tell, that they doubt not but that hee shall recouer his health and liue with them still, and be merrie as in former time: that they will pray for him whereas all their prayers are nothing else but the Apostles Creede, or the ten commandements, and the Lords prayer vttered without vnderstanding. And this is the common comfort that sick men get at the hands of their neighbours when they come vnto them; and al this comes either because men liue in ignorance of Gods word, or because they falsly think that the whole burthen of this dutie lies vpon the shoulders of the minister.

Tertul. de corona mil. c. 11, & de Idol. c. 11

1 Thess. 5. 11, 14

The second circumstance is, when the sicke partie must send for the elders to instruct him and pray for him. And that is in the verie first place of all before any other helpe bee sought for. Where the Diuine endes, there the Physitian must begin: and it is a verie preposterous course that the Diuine should there begin where the physitian makes an ende. For til helpe be had for the soule, & sinne which is the roote of sickneese be cured, physicke for the bodie is nothing. Therefore it is a thing much to be disliked, that in all places almost, the physitian is first sent for, & comes in the beginning of the sicknes, and the Minister comes when a man is halfe dead, and is then sent for oftentimes when the sicke partie lies drawing on and gasping for breath, as though Ministers of the Gospell in these daies were able to worke miracles.

The second dutie of the sick partie is to confesse his sinnes, as S. Iames saith, confesse your sinnes one to another, & pray one for another. It will be said, that this is to bring in againe Popish shrift. An. Confession of our sinnes, and that vnto men, was neuer denied of any: the queſtion only is of the manner and order of making confeſſion. And for this cauſe wee muſt put a greate difference between Popiſh ſhrift, and the confeſſion of which S. Iames ſpeaketh For he requires onely a confeſſion of that or thoſe ſinnes which lie vpon a mans cõſcience whẽ hee is ſicke: But the Popiſh doctrine requireth a particular enumeration of all mans ſinnes. Againe, S. Iames enioynes confeſſion onely as a thing meete, and conuenient, but the Papiſts as a thing neceſſarie to the remiſſion of ſins. Thirdly, S. Iames permits that confeſſion be made to any man, and by one man to an other mutually: whereas Popiſh ſhrift is made onely to the prieſt. The ſeconde dutie then is, that the ſicke partie troubled in minde with the memorie and conſideration of any of his ſinnes paſt, or any manner of way tempted by the deuil, ſhal freely of his owne accord open his caſe to ſuch as are both able and willing to helpe him, that he may receiue cõfort and die in peace of conſcience.

Thus much of the ſicke mans dutie; now follow the duties of helpers. The firſt is, to pray ouer him, that is, in preſence to pray with him, and for him, and by praier to preſent his verie perſon and his whole eſtate vnto God. The Prophet Elizeus, the Apoſtle Paul, and our Sauiour Chriſt vſed this manner of praying; when they would miraculouſly reſtore temporal life and therfore it is very meete that the ſame ſhold be vſed alſo of vs, that we might the better ſtirre vpp our affections in prayer, and our compaſſion to the ſicke when we are about to intreat the lord for the remiſſion of their ſinnes, and for the ſaluation of their ſoules.

2. King. 4. 33. Act. 20. 10. Ioh. 11. 41.

The ſecond dutie of him that comes as an helper, is to annoint the ſicke party with oile. Nowe this annointing was an outward ceremonie which was vſed with the gift of healing, which is nowe ceaſed. and therfore I omit to ſpeake further of it.

Thus much of the dutie which the ſicke man owes to God: now follow the duties which hee is to performe vnto himſelfe, and they are twofold: one concerns his ſoule the other his bodie. The dutie concerning his ſoule is, that he muſt arme and furniſh himſelfe againſt the immoderate feare of preſent death. And the reaſon hereof is plaine; becauſe howſoeuer naturally men feare through the courſe of their liues more or leſſe; yet in time of ſicknes when death approcheth, this naturall feare bred in the bone will moſt of all ſhew it ſelfe, euen in ſuch ſort, as it wil aſtoniſh the ſenſes of the ſicke partie, and ſometime cauſe deſperation. Therefore it is neceſſarie that we vſe meanes to ſtrengthen our ſelues againſt the feare of death. The meanes are of two ſorts; practiſes, & meditations. Practiſes are two eſpecially.

he firſt is, that the ſicke man muſt not ſo much regard death it ſelfe as the benefits of God which are obtained after death; he muſt fix his mind vpon the conſideration of the pangs and torments of death; but all his thoughts and affections muſt be ſet vpon that bleſſed eſtate that is enioyed after death. Hee that is to paſſe ouer ſome great and deepe riuer, muſt not looke downward to the ſtream of the water; but if he would preuent feare, he muſt ſet his foote ſure and caſt his eie to the banke on the further ſide: and ſo muſt he that drawes neare death, as it were, looke ouer the waues of death and directly fixe the eie of his faith vpon eternal life. The ſecond practiſe is to looke vpon death in the glaſſe of the Goſpel, and not in the glaſſe of the law: that is we muſt conſider death not as it is propounded in the law, and looke vpon that terrible face which the lawe giueth vnto it; but as it is ſet forth in the Goſpel. Death in the law is a curſe and the downfal to the pit of deſtruction: in the goſpel it is the entrance to heauen; the law ſets forth death as death; the Goſpel ſets forth death as no death, but as a ſleep only becauſe it ſpeaketh of death as it is altered and changed by the death of Chriſt; by the vertue whereof death is properly no death to the ſeruants of God. When men ſhal haue care on this manner to conſider of death, it will bee a notable meanes to ſtrengthen & ſtabliſh them againſt all immoderate feares and terrours that vſuallie riſe in ſicknes.

The meditations which ſerue for this purpoſe are innumerable, but I will touch onely thoſe which are the moſt principal and the grounds of the reſt: and they are foure in number. The firſt is borrowed from the ſpecial prouidence of God; namely that the death of euerie man, much more euery child of God, is not only foreſeene, but alſo foreappointed of God: yee the death of euerie mã deſerued & procured by his ſinnes, laide vpon him by God, who in that reſpect may bee ſaide to bee

the cause of euerie mans death. So saith Anna, The Lord killeth and maketh a liue. 1.Sam 2.6. The Church of Ierusalem confessed that nothing came to passe in the death of Act.4.28. Christ, but that which the foreknowledge and eternal counsel of God had appointed. And therefore the death also of euery member of Christ is foreseene and ordained by the speciall decree and prouidence of God. I adde further, that the verie circumstances of death, as the time when, the place where, the manner how, the beginnings of sicknes, the continuance, and the ende, euerie fit in the sicknes, and the pāgs of death, are particularly set downe in the counsell of God. The verie haires of our heads are numbred (as our Sauiour Christ saith) and a sparrow lights not on the ground without the will of our heauenly father. Dauid saith excellently. My bones are not Psal.139. 15.16. hidde from thee, though I was made in a secret place, and fashioned beneath in the earth: thine eyes did see mee when I was without forme for in thy booke were all things written, which in continuance were fashioned, when there was none of them before. And he praies Psal.56.8 to God to put his teares into his bottle. Now if this be true, that God hath bottles for the verie teares of his seruāts, much more hath he bottles for their blood, and much more doth hee respect and regarde their paines and miseries with al the circumstances of sicknes and death. The carefull meditation of this one point is a notable meanes to arme vs against feare & distrust and impatience in the time of death; as Psal.39.10 some examples in this case will easily manifest, I held my tongue & said nothing, saith Dauid: but what was it that caused this patience in him? the cause followes in the next wordes; because thou Lord didst it. Gen.45. And Ioseph saith to his brethren: Feare not, for it was the Lord that sent mee before you. Marke here how Ioseph is armed against impatience and griefe and discontentment by the very consideration of Gods prouidence: and so in the same manner shall we be confirmed against all feares and sorrowes, and say with Dauid, Pretious in the sight of the Lord is the death Psal.116.13 of his Saints: if this perswasion bee once setled in our hearts, that all things in sicknesse and death come to passe vnto vs by the prouidence of God, who turnes all things to the good of them that loue him.

The second meditation is to be borrowed from the excellent promise that God made to the death of the righteous: which is, Blessed are they that die in the Lorde: for they rest from their labours, and their workes follow them. Apoc.14.13 The author of truth that can not lie hath spoken it. Now then let a man but throughly cōsider this, that death ioyned with reformed life hath a promise of blessednes adioyned vntoit, & it alone wil be a sufficient meanes to stay the rage of our affections, and all inordinate feare of death: and the rather, if we marke wherein this blessednes consists. In death we are indeed thrust out of our old dwelling places, namely these houses of clay and earthly tabernacles of our bodies, wherein we haue made long aboad: but what is the end? surely that liuing and dying in Christ we might haue a building giuen of God, 2.Cor.5.1. that is, an house not made with hands, but eternal in the heauēs, which is vnspeakable and immortal glory. If a poore man should be commanded by a Prince to put off his torne and beggerly garments, and instead therof to put on royal and costly robes, it would be a great reioycing to his hart: oh then what ioyfull newes must this bevnto all repentant and sorrowful sinners, when the King of heauen and earth comes vnto them by death, and bidds them lay down their bodies as ragged and patched garments, and prepare themselues to put on the princely robe of immortalitie? No tongue can be able to expresse the excellencie of this most blessed and happie estate.

The third meditation is borrowed from the estate of all them that are in Christ, whether liuing or dying. He that dieth beleeuing in Christ, dieth not forth of christ but in him, hauing both his bodie and soule really coupled to Christ according to the tenour of the couenant of grace: & though after death bodie & soule be seuered one from other, yet neither of them are seuered or disioyned from Christ; The coniunction which is once begun in this life remaines eternally. And therefore though the soule goe from the bodie, and the bodie it selfe rot in the graue, yet both are still in Christ, both in the couenant, both in the fauour of God as before death and both shal againe be ioyned togither, the bodie by the vertue of the former coniunction beeing raised to eternall life. Indeede if this vnion with Christ were dissolued as the coniunction of bodie and soule is, it might be some matter of discomfort and feare, but the foundation & substance of our mysticall coniunction with Christ both in respect of our bodies and soules enduring for euer, must needs be a matter of exceeding ioy & comfort.

The fourth meditation is, that God hath promised his speciall, blessed, and comfortable presence vnto his seruantes when they are sicke or dying, or any way distressed. When thou passest through the water, I will be with thee (saith the Lord) & Psal. 43. 3. through the floods that they doe not ouerflowe thee: when thou walkest through the very fire thou shalt not be burnt, neither shall the flame kindle vpon thee. Now the Lord doth manifest his presence three wayes: the first is, by moderating and lessening the paines and torments of sickenesse and death, as the verie wordes of the former promise doe plainely import. Hence it comes to passe that to many men the sorrowes and pangs of death, are nothing so grieuous and troublesome, as the afflictions and crosses which are laid on thē in the course of their liues. The second way of Gods presence is by an inward and vnspeakable comfort of the spirit, as Paul saith, We reioyce in tribulation, knowing that tribulation bringeth forth patience &c. but why is this Rom. 5. 3. 5. reioycing? because (saith hee in the next words) the loue of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the holie ghost. Againe, Paul hauing in some grieuous sickenesse receiued the sentence of death, saith of himselfe, 2. Cor. 1. 5. that, as the sufferings of Christ did abound in him, so his consolation did abound through Christ. Here then we see, that when earthly comforts faile, the Lorde himselfe drawes neere the bed of the sicke, as it were visiting them in his owne person, and ministring vnto thē refreshing for their soules: Cant. 2. 6. With his right hand hee holds vp their heads, and with his left hand hee imbraceth them. The third meanes of Gods presence is the ministerie of his good Angels, whom the Psal. 91. Lord hath appointed as keepers & nources vnto his seruants to hold them vp and to beare them in their armes as nources doe young children, and to be as a guard vnto them against the deuill and his angels. And all this is verified specially in sickenesse, at which time the holy Angels are not onely present with such as feare God, but ready also to receiue and to carrie their soules into heauen, as appears by the example of Lazarus.

And thus much of the first dutie which a sicke man is to performe vnto himselfe, namely that he must by al meanes possible arme and strengthen himselfe against the feare of death: nowe followeth the second dutie which is concerning the body; and that is, that all sicke persons must bee carefull to preserue health and life til God doe wholly take it away. For Paul saith, None of vs liueth to himselfe, neither doth anie die to himselfe: for whether we liue, wee liue vnto the Lord, or whether wee die, wee die Rom. 14. 7. vnto the Lord: whether wee liue therefore or die wee are the Lords. For this cause we may not doe with our liues as we will, but wee must reserue the whole disposition thereof vnto God, for whose glorie wee are to liue and die. And this temporall life is a most pretious iewell, and as the common saying is, life is very sweet; because it is giuen man for this ende, that he might haue some space of time wherein he might vse all good meanes to attaine to life euerlasting. Life is not bestowed on vs, that wee should spend our daies in our lusts & vain pleasures, but that we might haue liberty to come out of the kingdome of darknes into the kingdome of grace, and from the bondage of sinne into the glorious libertie of the sonnes of God: and in this respect speciall care must be had of preseruation of life, till God doe call vs hence.

In the preseruing of life, two thinges must bee considered: the meanes, and the right vse of the meanes. The meanes is good & wholsom physick, which, though it bee dispised of many as a thing vnprofitable and needles, yet must it be esteemed as an ordinance and blessing of God. This appeares, because the spirite of God hath giuen approbation vnto it in the Scriptures. When it was the good pleasure of God to restore life vnto King Ezekias, a lūpe of drie figs by the prophets appoint 2. King. 20. 7 ment was laid to his boyle and he was healed. Indeede this cure was in some sort miraculous, because hee was made whole in the space of two or three dayes, and the third day he went vp to the temple: yet the Gal. li. de art. curat. cap. 7. bunch of figges was a naturall and ordinarie medicine or plaister seruing to soften and ripen tumours or swellings in the Luk. 10. 34 flesh. And the Samaritane is commended for the binding vp and for the powring in of wine and oyle into the wounds of the man that lay wounded betweene Ierusalem and Ierico. Nowe this dealing of his was a right practise of phy- Valla de fals. era philos. c. 8. sicke: for the wine serued to cleanse the wound and to ease the paine within: and the oyle serued to supple the flesh and to asswage the paine without. And the prophet Esai, seemes to commend this physick, when he saith, From the sole of the foot there is nothing whole therein, but woundes and swellings, and sores full of corruption: they haue not bin wrapped nor bounde vp, nor mollified with oyle. And whereas God did not command circumcision of Children before the eight day, he followed a rule of physicke obserued in al ages, that the life of the Child is verie vncerten til the first seauen dayes be expired, as we may see by the example of the child which Dauid had by Bathsabe, which died the seuenth day: And vpon the very same ground heathen men vsed not to name their children before the eight day. Thus then it is manifest that the vse of physicke is lawful & commendable.

Furthermore, that physicke may bee well applied to the maintenance of health special care must be had to make choise of such physitians as are knowne to bee well learned, and men of experience, as also of good conscience and good religion. For as in other callings, so in this also, ther be sundrie abuses which may indanger the liues and the health of men. Some venter vpon the bare inspection of the vrine, without further direction or knowledge of the estate of the sicke, to prescribe and minister as shall seeeme best vnto them. But the learned in this faculty doe plainly auouch that this kind of dealing rends rather to kill then to cure; and that sundrie men are indeed killed thereby. For iudgement by the vrine is most deceitfull: the water of him that is sicke of a pestilent feauer euen vnto death, lookes for substance and colour as the water of a whole man: and so doth the water of them that are sick of a quartane or of any other intermitting feauer: specially if they haue vsed good diet from the beginning; as also of them that haue the pluresie, or the inflammation of the lungs, or the Squinancie, oftentimes when they are neare death. Nowe then considering the waters of such as are at the point of death, appeare as the vrines of haile and sound men, one and the same vrine may foresignifie both life and death, and bee a signe of diuers, nay of contrarie diseases. A thin, crude, and pale vrine in them that bein health, is a token of want of digestion, but in them that are sicke of a sharpe or burning ague, it betokens the frensie, and is a certen signe of death. Againe, others there be that thinke it a smal matter to make experiments of their deuised medecines vpon the bodies of their patiets, whereby the health, which they hoped for, is either much hindred or much detained. Thirdly, there bee others which minister no physick at any time, or vse phlebotomie without the direction of iudiciall Astrologie: but if they shal follow this course alwaies, they must needes kill many a man. Put the case that a man full bodied is taken with a pleuresie, the moone being in Leone, what must bee done? The learned in this art say, hee must presently be let blood: but by Astrologie a stay must be made, til the moone be remooued from Leo the house of the sunne: but by that time the impostume wil be so much increased by the gathering togither of the humours, that it can neither be dissolued nor ripened: and by this means the sicke partie wanting helpe in time, shall die either by inflammation, or by the consumption of the lunges. Againe, when a man is sicke of the Squinancie, or of the feauer called Synochus, the moone then beeing in the malignant aspects with anie of the infortunate planets (as Astrologers vse to speake) if letting of blood be deferred til the mooue be freed from the foresaid aspects, the partie dies in the meane season. Therfore they are farre wide that minister purgations and let blood no otherwise then they are counselled by the constitution of the starres, whereas it is a farre better course to consider the matter of the disease, with the disposition & ripening of it; as also the causes and symptomes and crisis thereof. This beeing so, there is good cause that sicke men should as wel be careful to make choise of meete Physitians, to whome they might commend the care of their health, as they are careful to make choise of lawiers for their worldly suites, and Diuines for cases of conscience.

Furthermore, all men must be here warned to take heede, that they vse not such meanes as haue no warrant. Of this kind are all charmes or spels, of what words so euer they consist: characters and figures either in paper, wood, or wax: all amulets, and ligatures, which serue to hang about the necke or other parts of the body except they be grounded vpon some good naturall reason; as white peonie hung about the necke, is good against the falling sickenes: and woolfe-dung tied to the bodie is good against the collick, not by any inchantment, but by inward vertue. Otherwise they are all vaine and superstitious: because neither by creation, nor by any any ordinance in Gods word, haue they any power to cure a bodily disease. For wordes can doe no more but signifie, and figures can doe no more but represent. And yet neuertheles, these vnlawfull and absurd meanes are more vsed and sought for of common people, then good physicke. But it stands all men greatly in hand in no wise to seeke forth to inchanters, & sorcerers, which indeede are but witches and wizzards, though they are commonly called cunning men and women. It were better for a man to die of his sicknes, then to seeke recouery by such wicked persons.

Leuit. 20.6 For if any turne after such as worke with spirits, and after southsayers, to goe an whoring after them, the Lord will set his face against them, and cut them off from among his people.

When Achazia was sicke, he sent to Baalzebub to the God of Ekron to knowe whether he should recouer or no: as the messengers were going, the prophet Elias met them, and said, Goe and returne to the King which sent you, and say vnto him, Thus

2. King. 1. 6 saith the Lord, It is not because there is no God in Israel, that thou sendest to inquire of Baalzebub the God of Ekron? therefore thou shalt not come down frō thy bed in which thou art gone vp, but shalt die the death. Therefore such kinde of helpe is so far from curing any pain or sicknes, that it rather doubleth them and fasteneth them vpon vs.

Thus much of the meanes of health: now followes the manner of vsing the meanes concerning which, three rules must be followed. First of all, hee that is to take physicke, must not onely prepare his bodie, as physitians doe prescribe: but he must also prepare his soule by humbling himselfe vnder the hand of God in his sicknes for his sinnes, and make earnest prayer to God for the pardon of them before any medicine come in his bodie. Nowe that this order ought to be vsed appeares plainly in this, that sickenes springs from our sinnes as from a roote; which should first of all bee stocked vp, that the branches might more easily die. And therefore A-

2. Chr. 16. 12 sa commended for many other things, is blamed for this by the holy Ghost, that he sought not the Lorde, but to the physitians: and put his trust in them. Oftentimes it comes to passe, that diseases curable in themselues, are made incurable by the sinnes and the impenitencie of the parties: and therfore the best way is for them that would haue ease, when god begins to correct them by sickenes, then also to begin to humble themselues for al their sinnes, and turne vnto God.

The second rule is, that when we haue prepared our selues, and are about to vse physicke, we must sanctifie it by the word of God and prayer, as wee doe our meat and drinke. For by the word wee must haue our warrant, that the medicines prescribed are lawfull and good: and by prai-

1. Tim. 4. 5 er we must intreat the Lord for a blessing vpon them, in restoring of health, if it bee the good will of God.

The third rule is, that we must carrie in minde the right and proper ende of Physicke, least we deceiue our selues. We must not therefore thinke that physick serues to preuent old age or death it self. For that is not possible, because God hath set downe that all men shal die and be changed. And life consists in a temperature and proportion of natural heat and radical moisture: which moisture beeing once consumed by the former heat, is by art vnrepairable and therefore death must needes follow. But the true ende of physicke is to continue and lengthen the life of man to his natural period: which is when nature, that hath beene long preserued by al possible meanes, is now wholly spent. Now this period, though it cannot be lengthened by any skil of man, yet it may easily bee shortned by intemperance in diet, by drūkennesse, and by violent diseases. But care must be had to auoide all such euils, that the litte lampe of corporal life may burne till it goe out of it selfe. For this very space of time is the very day of grace and saluation: and whereas God in iustice might haue cut off & haue vtterly destroyed vs yet in great mercie he giues vs this much time, that we might prepare our selues to his kingdome: which time when it is once spent, if a man would redeeme it with the price of 10000. worlds, he cannot haue it Intercuman-tem omnia fera.

And to conclude this point touching physicke, I will here set downe two speciall duties of the Physitian himselfe. The first is, that in the want and defect of such as are to put sicke men in minde of their sinnes, it is a dutie specially concerning him, he beeing a member of Christ, to aduertise his patients that they must truely humble themselues, and pray feruently to God for the pardon of al their sinnes: and surely this dutie would be more cōmonly practised then it is, if al physitians did cōsider that oftentimes they want good successe in their dealings, not because their is any want in art or good wil, but because the party with whome they deale is impenitent. The second dutie is, when he sees manifest signes of death in his patient, not to depart concealing them, but first of all to certifie the patient thereof. There may be and is too much niceness in such concealements, and the plaine truth in this case knowne, is very profitable. For when the partie is certaine of his ende, it bereaues him of all confidence in earthly things, & make him put al his affiance in the meere mercie of God. When Ezechias was sicke the prophet speakes plainly vnto him and saith, Set thine house in order for thou must die: And what good wee may reape by knowing certainely that we haue receiued the sentence of death, Paul sheweth when he saith. 2. Cor. 1, 9 We receiued the sentence of death in our selues, because wee should not trust in our selues, but in God which raiseth the dead.

Hauing thus seene what be the duties of the sick man to himselfe, let vs now see what be the duties which he oweth to his neighbour; and they are two. The first is the dutie of reconciliation, whereby hee is freely to forgiue all men; and to desire to be forgiuen of all. In the old testament when a man was to offer a bullocke or lambe in sacrifice to God, hee must leaue his offering at the alter, and first goe and be reconciled to his brethren, if they had ought against him: much more then must this be done, whē we are in death to offer vp our selues, our bodies, and soule, as an acceptable sacrifice vnto God. Quest. What if a man cannot come to the speech of them with whome he would be reconciled; or if he doe, what if they will not be reconciled? Answ. When they shall in their sickenesse seeke and desire reconciliation, and cannot obtaine it, either because the parties are absent, or because they wil not relent, they haue discharged their conscience, and God will accept their wil for their deede. As put case a man lying sicke on his death bedde, is at enmitie with one that is then beyond the sea; so as hee can not possibly haue any speech with him, if he would neuer so faine, how shall he stay his minde? why he must remember that in this case, a wil and desire to be reconciled is reconsiliation it selfe.

The second dutie is, that those which are rulers and gouernours of others, must haue care and take order that their charges committed to them by God, be left in good estate after their death: and here come three duties to be handled; the first of the Maiestrate, the second of the Minister, the third of the master of the family. The Magistrates dutie is, before hee die to prouide as much as he can, for the godly, and peaceable estate of the towne, citie or common wealth: and that is done partly by procuring the maintenance of sound religion and vertue, and partly by establishing of the execution of ciuill iustice and outward peace. Examples of this practise in GODS Word are these. When Moses was an hundred and twenty yeare old, and was no more able to go in and out before the people of Israell, he called them before him, and signified that the time of his departure was at hand, and thereupon tooke order for their welfare after his death. And first of all he placed Iosuah ouer them in his stead, to be their guid to the promised land: secondly he giues speciall charge to all the people, to bee valiant and couragious against their enemies, and to obey the commaundements of God. Deut. 31, 1 And Iosua followes the same course. For he calls the people, together, and shewes them that the time of his death is at hand, and giues them a charge to be couragious, and to worship the true God: which doue, hee ends his dayes as a worthy Captaine. Ioſ. 23. When king Dauid was to goe the way of all flesh, and lay sicke on his death bedd; he placed his own sonne Salamon vpon his throne, and giues him charge; both for maintenance of religion, and execution of iustice. 1. King. 2, 12 &c.

The dutie of Ministers when they are dying is, as much as they can, to cast and prouide for the continuance of the good estate of the Church ouer which they are placed. Consider the example of Peter: I will (saith he) indeauour alwaies, that ye also may be able to haue remembrance of these things after my departure. If this had beene well obserued there could not haue been such aboundance of schismes, errors and heresies as hath been, and the Church of God could not haue suffered so great hauocke. But because men haue had more care to maincaine personal succession, then the right succession, which standes in the doctrine of the Prophets and Apostles; therfore wolues haue cōe into the rooms of faithfull teachers; and the Apostacie of which Paul speakes, hath ouerspread the face of the Church. Thirdly, housholders must set their families in order before they die, as the Prophet Esai saith to Ezechiah; Set thine house in order for thou must dy. For the procuring of good order in the family after death, 2. things are to be done. The first concerns this life, & that is to dispose of lands and goods. And that this may be wel & wisely done; if the Wil be vnmade, it is with godly aduise and counsell to be made in in the time of sicknes; according 2. Pet. 1, 15 Act. 20, 28 2. Thess. 2. 3 any ordinance in Gods word, haue they any power to cure a bodily disease. For wordes can doe no more but signifie, and figures can doe no more but represent. And yet neuertheles, these vnlawfull and absurd meanes are more vsed and sought for of common people, then good physicke. But it stands all men greatly in hand in no wise to seeke forth to inchanters, & sorcerers, which indeede are but witches and wizzards, though they are commonly called cunning men and women. It were better for a man to die of his sicknes, then to seeke recouery by such wicked persons.

Leuit. 20. 6 For if any turne after such as worke with spirits, and after soothsayers, to goe an whoring after them, the Lord will set his face against them, and cut them off from among his people.

When Achazia was sicke, he sent to Baalzebub to the God of Ekron to knowe whether he should recouer or no: as the messengers were going, the prophet Elias met them, and said, Goe and returne to the King which sent you, and say vnto him, Thus

2. King. 1. 6 saith the Lord, It is not because there is no God in Israel, that thou sendest to inquire of Baalzebub the God of Ekron? therefore thou shalt not come down frō thy bed in which thou art gone vp, but shalt die the death. Therefore such kinde of helpe is so far from curing any pain or sicknes, that it rather doubleth them and fasteneth them vpon vs.

Thus much of the means of health: now followes the manner of vsing the meanes concerning which, three rules must be followed, First of all, hee that is to take physicke, must not onely prepare his bodie, as physitians doe prescribe: but he must also prepare his soule by humbling himselfe vnder the hand of God in his sicknes for his sinnes, and make earnest prayer to God for the pardon of them before any medicine come in his bodie. Nowe that this order ought to be vsed appeares plainly in this, that sickenes springs from our sinnes as from a roote; which should first of all bee stocked vp, that the branches might more easily die. And therefore A-

2. Chr. 16. 16 sa commended for many other things, is blamed for this by the holy Ghost, that he sought not the Lorde, but to the physitians: and put his trust in them. Oftentimes it comes to passe, that diseases curable in themselues, are made incurable by the sinnes and the impenitencie of the parties: and therfore the best way is for them that would haue ease, when god begins to correct them by sickne, then also to begin to humble themselues for al their sinnes, and turne vnto God.

The second rule is, that when we haue prepared our selues, and are about to vse physicke, we must sanctifie it by the word of God and prayer, as wee doe our meat and drinke. For by the word wee must haue our warrant, that the medicines prescribed are lawfull and good: and by prai-

1. Tim. 4. er we must intreat the Lord for a blessing vpon them, in restoring of health, if it bee the good will of God.

The third rule is, that we must carrie in minde the right and proper ende of Physicke, least we deceiue our selues. We must not therefore thinke that physick serues to preuent old age or death it self. For that is not possible, because God hath set downe that all men shal die and be changed. And life consists in a temperature and proportion of natural heat and radical moisture: which moisture beeing once consumed by the former heat, is by art vnrepairable and therefore death must needes follow. But the true ende of physicke is to continue and lengthen the life of man to his natural period: which is when nature, that hath beene long preserued by al possible meanes, is now wholly spent. Now this period, though it cannot be lengthened by any skil of man, yet it may easily bee shortned by intemperance in diet, by drunkennesse, and by violent diseases. But care must be had to auoide all such euils, that the litte lampe of corporal life may burne till it goe out of it selfe. For this very space of time is the very day of grace and saluation: and whereas God in iustice might haue cut off & haue vtterly destroyed vs yet in great mercie he giues vs thus much time, that we might prepare our selues to his kingdome: which time when it is once spent, if a man would redeeme it with the price of 10000. worlds, he cannot haue it Intercutanea nem enisca.

And to conclude this point touching physicke, I will here set downe two speciall duties of the Physitian himselfe. The first is, that in the want and defect of such as are to put sicke men in minde of their sinnes, it is a dutie specially concerning him, he beeing a member of Christ, to aduertise his patients that they must truely humble themselues, and pray feruently to God for the pardon of al their sinnes: and surely this dutie would be more cōmonly practised then it is, if al physitians did cōsider that oftentimes they want good successe in their dealings, not because their is any want in art or goodwil, but because the party with whome they deale is impenitent. The second dutie is, when he sees manifest signes of death in his patient, not to

Hauing thus seene what be the duties of the sick man to himselfe, let vs now see what be the duties which he oweth to his neighbour, and they are two. The first is the dutie of reconciliation, wherby hee is freely to forgiue all men, and to desire to be forgiuen of all. In the old testament when a man was to offer a bullocke or lambe in sacrifice to God, hee must leaue his offering at the alter, and first goe and be reconciled to his brethren, if they had ought against him: much more then must this be done, whē we are in death to offer vp our selues, our bodies, and soule, as an acceptable sacrifice vnto God. Quest. What if a man cannot come to the speech of them with whome he would be reconciled; or if he doe, what if they will not be reconciled? Answ. When they shall in their sickenesse seeke and desire reconciliation, and cannot obtaine it, either because the parties are absent, or because they wil not relent, they haue discharged their conscience, and God will accept their wil for their deede. As put case a man lying sicke on his death bedde, is at enmitie with one that is then beyond the sea; so as hee can not possibly haue any speech with him, if he would neuer so faine, how shall he stay his minde? why he must remember that in this case, a wil and desire to be reconciled is reconciliation it selfe.

The second dutie is, that those which are rulers and gouernours of others, must haue care and take order that their charges committed to them by God, be left in good estate after their death: and here come three duties to be handled; the first of the Maiestrate, the second of the Minister, the third of the master of the family. The Magistrates dutie is, before hee dieth prouide as much as he can, for the godly, and peaceable estate of the towne, citie or common wealth: and that is done partly by procuring the maintenance of sound religion and vertue, and partly by establishing of the execution of ciuill iustice and outward peace. Examples of this practise in GODS Word are these. Deut. 31, 2

When Moses was an hundred and twenty yeare old, and was no more able to go in and out before the people of Israell, he called them before him, and signified that the time of his departure was at hand, and thereupon tooke order for their wel-fare after his death. And first of all he placed Iosuah ouer them in his stead, to be their guid to the promised land: secondly he giues speciall charge to all the people, to bee valiant and couragious against their enemies, and to obey the commaundements of God. And Iosua followes the same course. Iof. 23.

For he calls the people, together, and shewes them that the time of his death is at hand, and giues them a charge to be couragious, and to worship the true God: which doue, hee ends his dayes as a worthy Captaine. When king Dauid was to goe the way of all flesh, and lay sicke on his death bedd; he placed his own sonne Salamon vpon his throne, and giues him charge; both for maintenance of religion, and execution of iustice. 1. King. 2, 1 &c.

The dutie of Ministers when they are dying is, as much as they can, to cast and prouide for the continuance of the good estate of the Church ouer which they are placed. Consider the example of Peter: I will (saith he) indeauour alwaies, that ye also may be able to haue remembrance of these things after my departure. If this had beene well obserued there could not haue been such aboundance of schismes, errors and heresies as hath been, and the Church of God could not haue suffered so great hauocke. But because men haue had more care to maintaine personal succession, then the right succession, which standes in the doctrine of the Prophets and Apostles; therfore wolues haue crept into the rooms of faithfull teachers; and the Apostacie of which Paul speakes, hath ouerspread the face of the Church. Thirdly, housholders must set their families in order before they die, as the Prophet Esai saith to Ezechiah; Set thine house in order for thou must dy. For the procuring of good order in the family after death, 2. things are to be done. The first concerns this life, & that is to dispose of lands and goods. And that this may be wel & wisely done; if the Will be vnmade, it is with godly aduise and counsell to be made in in the time of sicknes; according 2. Pet. 1, 15 Act. 20, 28 1. Thess. 2. 2 to the practise of ancient & worthie men. Abraham before his death makes his Wil, and giues legacies; so did Isaac, and Iacob, in whose last will and testament are contained manie worthie blessings and prophecies of the estate of his children. And Christ our Sauiour when hee was vppon the crosse prouided for his mother, specially commending her to his disciple Iohn whome he loued. And indeede this duty of making a will, is a matter of great weight and importance; for it cuttes off much hatred and contention in families, and staies many suites in law. It is not therefore alwaies a matter of indifferencie, which may be done or not done, as many falsely thinke, who vpon blinde and sinister respects abstaine from making wills, either because their wealth should not be known, or because they would haue their decaied estate to be concealed; or because they feare they shall die the sooner if the will be once made.

Gen. 17. and 25. and. 49.

Now though the making of wills belong to another place and profession, yet so much may bee spoken here as the holy Ghost hath vttered in the words: and that I will reduce to certaine rules. The first is, that the will must bee made according to the lawe of nature, and the written word of God, and the good and holesome positiue lawes of that kingdome or country whereof a man is a member. The wil of God must bee the rule of mans will. And therefore the will that is made against any of these, is faultie. The second is, that if goods euil gotten be not restored before, they must euen then bee restored by will, or by some other way. It is the practise of couetous men to bequeath their soules when they die to God, and their goods euill gotten to their children and friends; which in al equitie should bee restored to them to whome they belong. Quest. How if a mans cõscience tel him that his goods be euil gotten, and he knowes not where, or to whom to make restitution? Ans. The case is common, and the answeare is this. When the partie is knowne whome thou hast wronged, restore to him particularly; if the partie be vnknown or dead, restore to his executors or assignes, or to his next kin; if there be none, yet keepe not goods euill gotten to thy self, but restore to god, that is, in way of recompence & ciuil satisfaction, bestow them on the Church or common-wealth. The thirde rule is, that heads of families must principally bestow them vpon their owne children, and them that be of their owne kindred. This man (saith God to Abraham of Eleazar a stranger) shall not bee thine heire, but the sonne which shall come of thy loynes. And this was Gods commandement to the Israelites, that when any man died, his sonne should be his heire, & if he had no sonne, then his daughter: and if he haue no daughter, the his brethren: and if hee haue no brethren, then his fathers brethren; and if there bee none, then the next of his kinne whosoeuer. And Paul saith, If ye be sonnes, then also heires. And againe, He that prouides not for his owne, and namely for them of his household, is worse then an infidell. Therefore it is a fault for any man to alienate his goods or landes, wholly and finally from his blood and posteritie. It is a thing which the very law of nature it selfe hath condemned. Againe, it is a fault to giue al to the eldest, & nothing in respect to the rest; as though the eldest were borne to be gentlemen, & yonger brethren borne to beare the wallet. Yet in equitie the eldest must haue more then any; euen because hee is the eldest, and because stockes and families in their persons are to be maintained; & because their must alwaies bee some that must bee fit to doe speciall seruice in the peace of the common weale, or in the time of warre; which could not bee, if goods should be equally parted to al. The fourth and last rule is, that no Will is of force til the testator be dead, for so long as he is aliue he may alter and change it. These rules must be remembred, because they are recorded in Scripture; the opening of other points & circumstances belongeth to the profession of the lawe.

The second dutie of the maister of the family concerneth the soules of such as be vnder his gouernment: and that is to giue charge to them that they learn, beleeue, & obey the true religion, that is, the doctrine of saluation set downe in the writings of the Prophets & Apostles. The Lord himselfe commends Abraham for this: I knowe Abraham, saith he, that he will command his sonnes, and his household after him, that they keepe the way of the Lord to doe righteousnes and iudgement. And David giues Salamon on his death bed a most notable and solemne charge, the summe and substance whereof is, to know the god of his father and to serue him: which being done, he further commends him to God by prayer. for which purpose the 72. psalme was made made. This practise of his is to be followed of all. Thus gouernours, whē they shall carefully dispose of their goods, and giue charg to their posteritie touching the worship of God, shal greatly honour God dying as well as liuing.

Hitherto I haue intreated of the twofolde preparation which is to goe before death: nowe followes the second part of Dying well, namely the disposition of death. This disposition is nothing els but a religious and holy behauiour specially towards God, when we are in or neere the agonie or pang of death. This behauiour containes three speciall duties. The first is to die in or by faith. To die by faith is when a man in the time of death, doth with all his heart relie himselfe wholly on Gods speciall loue and fauour and mercy in Christ, as it is reuealed in the worde. And though there be no part of mans life voide of iust occasions whereby wee may put faith in practise, yet the speciall time of all is the pangs of death, when friends, and riches, and pleasures, and the outward senses, and temporal life, and all earthly helpes forsake vs. For then true faith maketh vs to goe wholly out of our selues, and to dispare of comfort and saluation in respect of any earthly thing; and with all the power and strength of the hart to rest on the pure mercie of God. This made Luther both thinke and say, that men were best Christians in death. An example of this faith we haue in Dauid, who when he sawe nothing before his eyes but present death, the people intending to stone him comforted him at the very instant (as 1 Sam. 30 6 the text saith) in the Lord his God. And this comfort he reaped, in that by faith he applyed vnto his owne soule the mercifull promises of God: as hee testifieth of himselfe: Remember (saith he) the promise made Psal. 119 49. 50 to thy seruant, wherein thou hast caused mee to trust. It is my comfort in trouble: for thy promise hath quickened me. Againe, My flesh failed and my heart also, but God is the Psal. 73. 26 strength of my heart, and my portion for euer. Nowe looke what Dauid here did, the same must euery one of vs doe in the like case. When the Israelites in the wilderness where stung with fiery serpents, and lay at the point of death, they looked vp to the Iohn. 3. 14. brasen serpent which was erected by the appointment of God, and were presently healed: euen so whē any may feeles death to draw neere, and his fiery sting to pierce the heart, he must fixe the eye of a true and liuely faith vpon Christ, exalted and crucified on the crosse, which being done, he shall by death enter into eternall life.

Nowe because true faith is noe dead thing, it must be expressed by speciall actions; the principal whereof is Inuocation, whereby either prayer or thanksgiuing is directed vnto God. When death had seazed vpon the bodie of Iacob, he raised vp himselfe, and turning his face towards the Heb. 11. 21. beds head, leaned on the top of his staffe by reason of his feeblenesse, and prayed vnto God: which prayer of his was an excellent fruit of his faith. Iobs wife in the midst of his affliction sayde vnto him to Iob. 2. verie good purpose, Blesse God and die. I know and grant that the words are commonly translated otherwise, Curse God & die: but (as I take it) the former is the best. For it is not like that in so excellēt a family, any one person, much lesse a matrone and principall gouernour thereof would giue such lewd and wretched counsell, which the most wicked man vpon earth hauing no more but the light of nature would not once giue, but rather much abhorre and condemn. And though Iob call her a foolish woman yet hee doth it not because she was of the mind of Iobs friends and * thought that he stood too much in a conceit of his owne righteousnes. Now the effect and meaning of her counsell is this: Blesse God, that is, husband, no doubt thou art by the extremitie of thine affliction at deaths dore: therefore beginne now at length to lay aside the great ouerweening which thou hast of thine owne righteousnes, acknowledge the hand of God vpon thee for thy sinnes, confesse thē vnto him giuing him the glorie, praie for the pardon of them and end thy dayes. This counsell is verie good and to be followed of al: though it may be the applying of it (as Iob wel perceiued) is mixed with folly.

* Dost thou continue yet in thine vprightnes. v. 9.

Here it may be alleadged, that in the pangs of death men want their senses and conuenient vtterance, and that therfore they are vnable to pray. Answ. The verie sighes, sobbes, and grones of a repentant and beleeuing heart are prayers before God, euen as effectuall as if they were vttered by the best voyce in the world. Prayer standes in the affection of the heart the voyce is but an outwarde messenger thereof. God lookes not vpon the speech but vpon the heart. Dauid saith, God Psal. 10. 17 heares the desires of the poore: againe, that hee will fulfill the desires of them Psal. 145. 19 that that feare him; yea their verie teares are loud and sounding prayers in his eares.

Againe faith may otherwise bee expressed by the Last wordes, which for the most part in them that haue truely serued God, are verie excellent and comfortable and ful of grace: some choise examples wherof I wil rehearse for instructions sake and for imitarion. The last wordes of Iacob were those whereby as a prophet he foretold blessings and curses vpon his childrē and the principall among the rest were these, The scepter shall not depart from Iudah, and the lawgiuer from betweene his feete life, and this bodie of mine is to be laid downe, yet I know certenly that I shall remaine with thee for euer, neither shall any bee able to pull me out of thy hand. Of Hooper, O Lord Iesus sonne of Dauid haue mercie on me and receiue my soule. Of Annas Burgius. For sake me not O Lord, least I forsake thee. Of Melancthon, If it be the will of God, I am willing to die, and I beseech him that hee will graunt me a ioyfull departure. Of Caluine, I held my tonge, because thou Lord hast done it. 2. I mourned as a doue. 3. Lorde thou grindest me to powder, but it sufficeth mee because it is thine hand. Of Peter Marter, that his bodie was weake, but his minde was well: that he acknowledged no life or saluation but only in Christ who was giuen of the father to be a redeemer of mankind: and when he had confirmed this by testimony of Scripture, he added: This is my faith in which I wil die: and God will destroye them that teach otherwise: This done, he shooke hands with all and said. Farewell my breathren and deare friends. It were easie to quote more examples, but these few may be in stead of many: and the summe of all that godly men speak, is this, Some enlightened with a prophetical spirit foretel things to come as the Patriarkes Iacob and Ioseph did: and there haue bin some which by name haue testified who should verie shortly come after them; and who should remaine aliue and what should be their condition: some haue shewed a wonderfull memorie of things past, as of their former life, and of the benefits of God; and no doubt it was giuen them to stirre vp holy affections & thanks giuing to God: some againe rightly iudging of the change of their present estate for a better, doe reioyce exceedingly that they must be translated from earth to paradise: as Babylas Martyr of Antioch when his head was to be chopped off, Returne (saith he) O my soule vnto thy rest: because the Lord hath blessed thee because thou hast deliuered my soule from death, mine eies from teares, and my foote from falling, I shall before thee leboua in the land of the liuinge. And some others spake of the vanitie of this life, of the imagination of the sorrowes of death, of the beginning of eternall life, of the comfort of the holy Ghost which they feele, of their departure vnto Christ.

Quest. What must wee thinke if in the time of death such speches be wãting: & in the stead therof idle talke be vsed Ans. We must consider the kind of sicknes wherof men die, whether it bee more easie or violent: violent sicknes is vsually accompanied with frensies, and with vnseemely motions and gestures, which wee are to take in good part euen in this regard, because we our selues may bee in the like case.

Thus much of the first dutie which is to die in obedience, otherwise our death cannot be acceptable to God, because we seeme to come vnto God of feare & constraint as slaues to a master, and not of loue as children to a father. Now to die in obedience is, when a man is willing & readie and desirous to goe out of this world whē soeuer God shal call him, and that without murmuring or repining, at what time where, and when it shall please God. Whether we liue or die, saith Paul, we do it not to our selues but vnto God; & therfore mans dutie is to be obedient to God in death as in life. Christ is our example in this case, who in his agonie praied, Father let this cup passe from me, yet with a submission, not my will, but thy will be done: teaching vs in the very pãgs of death to resigne our selues to the good pleasure of God. When the prophet told king Ezechiah of death, presently with out all manner of grudging he addressed himselfe to prayer. We are commanded to present our selues vnto God as free-will offering, without any limitation of time, and therefore as well in death as in life. I couclude then that we are to mak as much conscience in performing obediēce to god in suffering death, as wee doe of any thing in the course of our liues. Rom. 14. 7. 8

The third dutie is to render vp our soules into the hands of God, as the most faithfull keeper of all. This is the last dutie of a Christian, and it is prescribed vnto vs in the example of Christ vppon the crosse, who in the verie pangs of death when the dissolution of bodie and soule drewe on, saide, Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit, & so gaue vp the ghost. Luk. 23. The like was done by Steuen, who when he was stoned to death said, Lord Iesus receiue my spirit. And Dauid in his time being in daunger of death vsed the verie same that Christ vttered. Act. 7. Psal. 31. 5.

Thus we see what be the duties which we are to performe in the verie pangs of death that wee may come to eternall life. Some men will happily say, if this be all to die in faith and obedience and to surrender our soules into Gods hand, we wilnot greatly care for any preparation before hand, nor trouble our ſelues much about the right manner of dying well: for wee doubt not, but that when death ſhal come we ſhal be able to performe all the former duties with eaſe. Anſ. Let no man deceiue himſelfe by any falſe perſwaſion, thinking with himſelfe that the practiſe of the foreſaid duties is a matter of eaſe; for ordinarily they are not, neither can they be performed in death, vnleſſe there bee much preparation in the life before. He that wil die in faith muſt firſt of all liue by faith; and there is but one example in all the bible of a man dying in faith that liued without faith; namely, the theefe vppon the croſſe. The ſeruants of God that are indued with great meaſure of grace do verie hardly beleeue in the time of affliction. Indeed whē Iob was afflicted he ſaid, though the Lorde kil me, yet wil I truſt in him; yet afterwarde, his faith being ouercaſt with a cloud, hee ſaith, that god was becōe his enemy, & that he had ſet him as a mark to ſhoote at: & ſundrie times his faith was oppreſſed with doubting and diſtruſt. Howe then ſhall they that neuer liued by faith, nor inured themſelues to beleeue, bee able in the pang of death to reſt vpon the mercie of God? Againe, he that would die in obedience, muſt firſt of all lead his life in obedience: hee that hath liued in diſobedience cannot willingly & in obedience appeare before the iudge whē he is cited by death the ſergeant of the Lord; he dies indeede, but this is vpon neceſſitie, becauſe he muſt yeild to the order and courſe of nature, as other creatures do. Thirdly, he that would ſurrender his ſoule into the hands of God muſt be reſolued of two things: the one is that God can: the other is, that God will receiue his ſoule into heauen & there preſerue it till the laſt iudgement. And none can be reſolued of this, except he haue the ſpirit of god to certifie his conſcience that hee is redeemed, iuſtified, ſanctified by Chriſt, and ſhall be glorified. Hee that is not thus perſwaded, dare not render vp & preſent his ſoule vnto God. When Dauid ſaid, Lord into thy hands I commend my ſpirit Pſal. 31. 5. what was the reaſon of this boldneſſe in him? ſurely nothing els but the perſwaſion of faith, as the next words import: for thou haſt redeemed me, O Lord God of truth. And thus it is manifeſt that no man ordinarily can performe theſe duties dying, that hath not performed them liuing.

This beeing ſo, I doe againe renue my former exhortation, beſeeching you that ye would practiſe the duties of preparation in the courſe of your liues, leading thē daily in faith & obedience, and from time to time commending our ſoules into the hand of God, and caſting all our workes vpon his prouidence. They which haue done this, haue made moſt happie & bleſſed endes. Enoch by faith walked with God, as on that was alwaies in his preſence, leading an vpright and godly life, and the Lord tooke him away that hee ſhoulde not ſee death. And this which befell Enoch, Heb. 11, 5. ſhall after a ſort befall them alſo that liue in faith and obedience: becauſe death ſhal be no death but a ſleep vnto them, and no enemie bnt a friend to bodie and ſoule. On the contrarie let vs conſider the wretched & miſerable ends of them that haue ſpent their dayes in their ſins without keeping faith and good conſcience. The people of the old world were drowned in the flood: the filthie Sodomites and Gomorrians were deſtroyed with fire from heauen: Dathan and Abiram with the companie of Core ſwallowed vp of the earth, Core himſelfe (as it ſeemes by the text) being burnt with fire: wicked Saul and Achitophel and Iudas deſtroy themſelues. Herod is eaten vp of wormes and gaue vp the ghoſt: Iulian the Apoſtata ſmitten with a dart in the field, died caſting vp his blood into the aire & blaſpheming the name of Chriſt. Arius the hereticke died vpon the ſtoole ſcouring forth his very entrals. And this very age affoards ſtore of like examples. Hoffmeiſter a great Papiſt, as he was going to the Councill of Ratiſbone to diſpute againſt the defenders of the Goſpel was ſuddainly in his iourney preuented by the hand of God, and miſerablie dyed with horrible roaring, and crying out. In the Vniuerſity of Louaine Guarlacus a learned Papiſt falling ſick, whē he perceiued no way with him but death, he fel into a miſerable agonie & perturbation of ſpirit, crying out of his ſinnes, how miſerably he had liued; and that he was not able to abide the iūdgment of God; & ſo caſting out words of miſerable deſperation ſaid; his ſinnes were greater then they could be pardoned, and in that deſperation ended his daies. Iacobus Latomus of the ſame Vniuerſity of Louaine, after he had beene at Bruxels, and there thinking to doe a great acte againſt Luther and his fellowes, made an oration before the Emperour ſo fooliſhly & ridiculouſly that he was laughed to scorne almost the whole court: then returning from thence to Louaine again, in his publike lecture hee fell into open madnesse vttering such wordes of desperation and blasphemous impietie, that other diuines which were present, were faine to carrie him away as he was rauing, and to shut him into a close chamber. Frō that time to his verie last breath, hee had neuer any thing els in his mouth, but that he was damned and reiected of God, and that there was no hope of saluatiō for him, because that wittingly and against his knowledge hee withstood the manifest truth of gods word. Crescentius the Popes Legate and vicegerent in the Council of Trent was sitting all the day longe vntill darke night in writing of letters to the Pope: after his labour when night was come, thinking to refresh himselfe, hee began to rise, & at his rising, behold there appeared to him a mightie blacke dogge of an huge bignesse, his eies flaming with fire, and his eares hanging low down well neere to the ground, which began to enter in & straight to come towards him, & so to couch vnder the boord. The Cardinal not a little amased at the sight therof, somewhat recouering himselfe called to his seruants which were in the outwarde chamber next by, to bring in a candle and to seeke for the dogge. But when the dogge could not bee found there, nor in any other chamber about, the Cardinall therevpon stricken with a suddaine conceit of minde immediatly fell into such a sickenes whereof his Physitians which he had about him could not with al their industrie and cunning cure him: and there vpon hee died. Steuen Gardiner, when a certaine Bishop came vnto him and put him in minde of Peter denying his master answered againe that he had denied with Peter, but neuer repented with Peter, and so (to vse M Foxes wordes) stinckingly and vnrepentantly died. More examples might be added, but these shall suffice.

Sleid. lib. 23

Againe, that we may be further induced to the practise of these duties, let vs call to minde the vncertentie of our daies; though we now liue, yet who can say that he shall be a liue the next day, or the next houre. No man hath a lease of his life. Now marke, as death leaues a man so shall the last iudgement find him: and therefore if death take him away vnprepared; eternall damnation followes without recouerie. If a thiefe bee brought from prison either to the barre to be arrained before the iudge, or to the place of execution, he wil bewaile his misdemeanour past, and promise all reformation of life; so be it, hee might be deliuered, though he be the most arrant theefe that euer was. In this case we are as fellons or theeues: for we are euery day going to the barre of Gods iudgement, there is no stay or standinge in the way, euen as the shippe in the sea continues on his course day or night whether the marriners be sleeping or waking: therefore let vs al prepare our selues and amend our liues betime, that in death wee may make a blessed ende. Ministers of the Gospell doe dayly cal for the performance of this durie: but where almost shal we finde the practise and obedience of it in mens liues and conuersations? Alas, alas, to lend our eares for the space of an houre to heare the wil, of God is common: but to giue heart and hand to doe the same, is rare. And the reason hereof is at hand: we are all most grieuous sinners, and euery sinner in the tearms of Scripture is a foole and a principall part of this folly is to care for the things of this world, & to neglect the kingdome of heauen, to prouide for the body and not for the soule, to cast and forecast how wee may liue in wealth and honour and ease; and not to vse the last forecast to die well. This folly our Sauiour Christ noted in the rich man that was carefull to inlarge his barnes, but had no care at all for his ende or for the saluation of his soule. Such an one was Achitophel, who (as the Scripture tearmes him) was as the verie oracle of God for counsell, being a man of great wisdom & forecast in the matters of the commonwealth, and in his owne priuate worldly affaires: and yet for all this he had not so much as cōmon sense & reason to cōsider how he might die the deathe of the righteous, and come to life euerlasting. And this folly the holy Ghost hath noted in him. For the text saith, when he saw that his counsell was despised hee saddled his asse, and arose and went home into his citie, and put his houshold in order, and went and hanged himselfe, And the fiue fooliish virgins contented themselues with the blasing lampes of bare profession, neuer seeking for the horne of lasting oyle of true and liuely faith, that might furnish & trimme the lampe both in life and death. But let vs in the feare of God, cast off this damnable folly, first of all seeking the kingdome dome of God and his righteousnesse, and leading our liues in faith & obedience, that we may die accordingly.

And thus much of the first point of doctrine, namely that there is a certen way whereby a man may die well: now I come to the second. Whereas, therfore Salomon saith, that the day of death is better then the day of birth, wee are further taught that such as truly beleeue themselues to be the children of God, are not to feare death ouermuch. I say ouer much; because they must partly feare it, and partly not. Feare it they must for two causes: the first, because death is the destruction of humane nature in a mans own selfe and others: and in this respect Christ feared it without sin: and we must not feare it otherwise thē we feare sicknes and pouertie, and famine, with other sorrowes of bodie and minde, which God will not haue vs to despise or lightly regard, but to feele with some pain because they are corrections and punishments for sinne. And hee doth therefore lay vpon vs paines and tormēts, that they may be feared and eschewed: and that by eschewing them we might further learne to eschew the cause of them, which is sin: and by experience in feeling of paine, acknowledge that God is a iudge and enemie of sinne, and is exceeding angrie with it. The second cause of the feare of death, is the losse of the Church or Commonwealth, whē we or others are depriued of them which were indeede or might haue bin an helpe, stay, and comfort to either of them, and whose death hath procured some publike or priuate losse.

Againe we are not to feare death, but to be glad of it, and that for many causes. First of al, in it wee haue occasion to shew our subiection and obedience which we owe vnto God, when he calles vs out of this world, as Christ saide, Father, not my will but thy will be done. Secondly, all sinne is abolished by death, and wee then cease to offend god any more as we haue done. Thirdly, the dead bodie is brought into a better condition then euer it was in this life, for by death it is made insensible, and by that meanes it is freed from all the miseries and calamities of this life; and it ceaseth to bee either an actiue or passiue instrument of sinne, whereas in the life time it is both: Fourthly, it giues the soule passage to rest, life, and celestiall glorie in which we shall see God as he is, perfectly know him, and prayse his name for euer, keeping without intermission an eternall sabbath, therefore Paul saith, I desire to be dissolued and to be with Christ, for that is best of all. Fifthly, God executes his iudgements vpon the wicked, and purgeth his Church by death. Nowe in all these respects godly men haue cause not to feare and sorrow but to reioyce in their owne death, and the death of others.

Thirdly if the day of death be so excellent, yea a day of happines, then it is lawfull to desired death, and men doe not alwaies sin in wishing for death. Paul saith, I desire to be dissolued; and againe, O miserable man that I am who shall deliuer me frō this bodie of death? Yet this desire must not be simple, but restrained with certaine respects: which are these. First death must be desired so farforth as it is a meanes to free vs from the corruption of our nature: secondly as it is a meanes to bring vs to the immediate fellowship of Christ and God himselfe in heauen: thirdly death may be lawfully desired in respect of the troubles & miseries of this life, two caueats beeing obserued; the first, that this desire must not be immoderate: the second, it must be ioyned with submission and subiection to the good pleasure of God. If either of these be wanting, the desire is faultie, and therefore Iob, and Ieremie, & Ionas failed herein because they desired death beeing carried away with impatiencie.

On the contrarie also a man may desire a continuance of life. Ezechias praied and desired to liue; when hee heard the message of present death, that hee might doe seruice to God. And Paul desired to liue in regard of the Philippians, that he might further their faith, though in regard of himselfe to die was aduantage to him. Isa. 38. 1. Phil. 1. 24. 25.

Lastly, if death ioyned with reformation of life be so blessed, then the death of the vnbeleeuing and vnrepentant sinner is euerie way curst and most horrible. Reasons are these. First, it is the destruction of nature, & the wages of sinne. Secondly, in it there is no comfort of the spirit to be found, no mitigation of paine, and no good thing that may counteruaile the miseries thereof. Thirdly, that which is the most fearefull thing of all, bodily death is the beginning of eternall death, desperation, and infernall torment; without hope of deliuerance. Therefore as I began so I ende, haue care to liue well, and die well.

FINIS.

An

An addition, of things that come to my minde afterward:

1 THe laſt combate with the deuill in the pang of death, is oftentimes moſt dangerous of all. For thē he wil not vrge men to deſperatiō, knowing that by this means he ſhall ſtirre them vp to reſiſt; but he labours with them that they would not reſiſt him when he aſſaults them, and by this meanes he indeauours to extinquiſh hope. And this is not done in any other temptation in which faith or hope alone are impugned, whereas in this they are both impugned togither. This muſt bee thought vpon, for when the deuils temptation is, not to reſiſt his temptation: it is moſt deceitfull of all: and it is more eaſie to ouercome the enemie that compels vs to fight then him that diſwades vs from it.

2 Lib decubitu Knoxi. The temptation of M. Iohn Knox in the time of his death is worth the marking He lay on his death bedde ſilent for the ſpace of foure houres, verie often giuing great ſighes, ſobbes and grones, ſo as the ſtanders by well perceiued that hee was troubled with ſome grieuous temptation and when at length hee was raiſed in his bedde, they asked him howe hee did, to whome hee anſwered thus: that in his life time he had indured many cōbats & conflicts with Satan, but that now moſt mighti ly the roaring lyon had aſſaulted him: often (ſaith he) before he ſet my ſinnes before mine eies; often he vrged me to deſperation, often hee laboured to intangle me with the delights of the world, but being vanquiſhed by the ſword of the ſpirit which is the word of God, he could not preuaile. But nowe he aſſaults me another way: for the wily ſerpent would perſwade me that I ſhal merit eternall life for my fidelitie in my miniſtery. But bleſſed be god which broght to my minde ſuch ſcriptures wherby I might quench the fierie darts of the deuill, which were, What haſt thou that thou haſt not receiued: and, By the grace of God, I am that I am; and, not I but the grace of God in me: & thus being vanquiſhed he departed.

3 When thou art tempted of Satan and ſeeſt no way to eſcape, euen plainly cloſe vp thine eies: & anſwer nothing; but commend thy cauſe to God. This is a principal point of Chriſtian wiſedome whichwe muſt follow in the houre of death.

4 If thy fleſh tremble & feare to enter into another life, and doubt of Saluation; if thou yeeld to theſe things, thou hurteſt thy ſelfe: therefore cloſe thine eies as before, and ſay with S. Stephen, Lord Ieſus into thy hands I commend my ſpirit; and then certenly Chriſt will come vnto thee with all his Angels and bee the guider of thy way. Luther.

TO THE RIGHT HONOVRABLE SIR WILLIAM Piryam Knight, Lord chiefe Baron of her Maieſties Exchequer:

Grace and peace.

RIght Honourable it cannot be vnknowne to your ſelfe, or to any man of a daies experience that it is thought a ſmall matter to commit a ſinne, or, to lie in ſinnes againſt a mans owne conſcience. For many when they are told of their dutie in this point, replie and ſay, What tell you me of Conſcience? Conſcience was hanged long agoe. But vnleſſe they take better heede, and preuent the danger by repentance, Hanged conſcience will reuiue and become both gibbet and hangman to them either in this life or the life to come. For Conſcience is appointed of God to declare and put in execution his iuſt iudgement againſt ſinners: and as God cannot poſſibly be ouercome of man, ſo neither can the iudgement of Conſcience being the iudgment of God, be wholly extinguiſhed. Indeede Satan for his part goes about by all meanes he can, to benumme the conſcience: but all is nothing. For as the ſicke man when he ſeemes to ſleepe and take his reſt, is inwardly full of troubles: ſo the benummed and drouſie conſcience wants not his ſecret pangs and terrours, and when it ſhal be rouſed by the iudgement of God, it waxeth cruell and fierce like a wild beaſt. Againe, when a man ſinneth againſt his conſcience, as much as in him lieth, he plungeth himſelfe into the gulfe of deſperation: for euery wound of the conſcience, though the ſmart of it be little felt, is a deadly wound: and he that goes on to ſinne againſt his conſcience ſtabbes and woundes, it often in the ſame place: and all renewed wounds (as we know) are hardly or neuer cured. Thirdly, he that lieth in ſinnes againſt his conſcience, cannot call vpon the name of God: for guiltie conſcience makes a man flie from God. And Chriſt ſaith, God heareth not ſinners, vnderſtanding by ſinners ſuch as goe on in their owne waies againſt conſcience: and what can be more dolefull then to be barred of the inuocation of Gods name? Laſtly, ſuch perſons after the laſt iudgement, ſhall haue not onely their bodies in torment, but the worme in the ſoule and conſcience ſhall neuer die: and what will it profit a man to gaine the whole world by doing things againſt his owne conſcience, and looſe his owne ſoule?

Now that men on this manner careleſſe touching conſcience, may ſee their folly and the great danger thereof, and come to amendment, I haue penned this ſmall treatiſe: & according to the auncient and laudable cuſtome, as alſo according to my long intended purpoſe, I now dedicate and preſent the ſame to your Lordſhip. The reaſons which haue imboldened me to this enterpriſe (all by reſpects excluded) are theſe: Generall doctrine in points of religion is darke and obſcure, & very hardly practiſed without the light of particular examples: and therefore the doctrine of conſcience, by due right pertaines to a man of conſcience; ſuch an one as your Lordſhip is, who (others of like place not excepted) haue obtained this mercie at Gods hand to keepe faith and good conſcience. Againe, conſiconsydering that iustice and conscience haue alwaies bin friends, I am induced to thinke that your lordship beeng publikely set a part for the execution and maintenance of ciuill iustice, will approue & accept a Treatise propounding rules and precepts of conscience. Thus therefore craving pardon for my boldnes, and hoping of your lordships good acceptance, I commend you to God and to the word of his grace. 1596. Iune 14.

OF CONSCIENCE.

CHAP. I.

What conscience is.

COnscience is a part of the vnderstanding in al reasonable creatures, determining of their particular actions, either with the or against them.

I say Conscience is a part of the vnderstanding and I shew it thus: God in framing of the soule placed in it two principall faculties, Vnderstanding and Will; Vnderstanding is that facultie in the soule, whereby we vse reason: and it is the more principall part, seruing to rule and order the whole man: and therefore it is placed in the soule to be as the wagginer in the waggin. The Will is another faculty wherby we doe will or nill any thing, that is, choose or refuse it. With the will is ioyned sundry affections, as ioy, sorrow, loue, hatred, &c. wherby we imbrace or eschew that which is good or euill. Now, conscience is not placed in the affections nor will, but in the vnderstanding: because the actions thereof stands in the vse of reason. Vnderstanding again hath two parts. The first is that which stands in the viewe and contemplation of truth and falshood, and goes no further. The second is that which stands in the viewe and consideration of euery particular action, to search whether it be good or badde. The first is called the Theoricall, the second the practicall vnderstanding. And vnder this latter is cõscience to be comprehended: because his propertie is to iudge of the goodnes or badnesse of things or actions done.

[a] Vnderstãding hath no partes properly, but by an alogie in respect of diuers obiects & actions, [b] Tho. Aquin. p. 1. q. 79. art. 13. Dominic. Bannes on this place. Antonius, &c.

Againe, I say that Conscience is a part of the minde or vnderstanding, to shewe that conscience is not a bare knowledg or iudgement of the vnderstanding (as men commonly write) but a natural power, facultie or created qualitie, from whence knowledge and iudgement proceede as effects. This the Scriptures confirme, in that they ascribe sundrie workes and actions to conscience, as accusing, excusing, comforting, terrifying: which actions could not thence proceede, if conscience were no more but an action or acte of the minde. Indeede I graunt, it may bee taken for a kinde of actuall knowledge in the minde of man: but to speake properlie, this knowledge must proceede of a power in the soule, the propertie whereof is to take the principles and conclusions of the minde and applie them, and by applying either to accuse or excuse. This is the ground of all, and this I take to be conscience. If it be obiected that conscience can not be a natural power, because it may be lost: I aunswere, if conscience be lost, it is onely in respect of the vse thereof, as reason is lost in the drunken man, and not otherwise.

I adde that the proper subiects of conscience are reasonable creatures, that is, men and Angels. Hereby conscience is excluded, first of all from brute beasts: for though they haue life and sense, and in many things some shadows of reason, yet because they want true reason, they want conscience also. Secondly from God the creator, who being righteousnes it selfe, needeth not conscience to order and gouerne his actions. And whereas Peter saith, 1. Pet. 2. 19. that men must endure griefe wrongfully for conscience of God, his meaning is not to shewe that God hath conscience, but that men are to suffer many wrongs, because their conscience doe bind them, in so doing to obey Gods wil, which conscience directly respecteth;

And I say that conscience is in all reasonable creatures, that none might imagine that some men by nature haue conscience in them, some none at all. For as many men as there are, so many consciences there be: and euerie particular man hath his owne particular conscience.

The proper end of conscience is, to determine of things done. And by this conscience is distinguished from al other gifts of the minde, as intelligence, opinion, science, faith, prudence. Intelligence simply conceiues a thing to be or not to bee: opinion iudgeth a thing to be probable or contingent: science, iudgeth to bee certen & sure:

faith is a perswasion, whereby we beleeue things that are not: prudence discerneth what is meete to be done, what to be left vndone; but conscience goes further yet then all these: for it determines or giues sentẽce of things done, by saying vnto vs this was done, this was not done, this may be done, this may not be done; this was well done, this was ill done.

The things that cõscience determines of, are a mans own actions: his owne actions, I say. To be certẽ what another man hath said or done; it is commonly called knowledge: but for a man to be certen what he himself hath done or said, that is cõscience Againe, conscience meddles not with generals, onely it deales in particular actions, and that not in some few but in all.

The manner of consciences determination, is to set down his iudgemẽt either with the creature or against it: I adde this clause, because conscience is of a diuine nature, and is a thing placed of God in the middest betweene him and man, as an arbitratour to giue sentẽce & to pronounce either with man or against man vnto god. For otherwhiles, it consents and speakes with God against the man in whome it is placed: otherwhiles againe it consents with him and speakes for him before the Lord. And hence comes one reason of the name of cõscience, Scire, to know, is of one man alone by himselfe: & conscire is, when two at the least knowe some one secret thing; either of them knowing it togither with the other. Therfore the name; or conscientia, conscience, is that thing that combines two togither, & makes thẽ partners in the knowledge of one and the same secret. Now man and man, or man and Angel cannot be combined; because they can not know the secret of any man vnlesse it be reuealed to them: it remaines therefore that this combination is onely betweene man and God. God knowes perfectly all the doings of man, though they be neuer so hid and concealed: & man by a gift giuen him of God; knowes togither with God, the same things of himselfe: and this gift is named Conscience.

CHAP. II.

Of the duties of Conscience.

1. Of the testimony of conscience.

THe proper actions or duties of conscience are twofold, to giue testimonie, or to giue iudgement. Rom. 2. 15.

Conscience giues testimonie by determining that a thing was don or it was not done, Rom. 2, 15. Their conscience also bearing witnesse. 2. Cor. 1. 12. Our reioycing is the testimonie of our conscience, that in, &c.

Here we must consider three thing: I. of what things conscience beares witnesse II: in what manner, III, how long.

For the first, conscience beares witnesse of our thoughts, of our affections, of our outward actions.

That it beares witnesse of our secret thoughts, it appeares by the solemne protestation which at sometime mẽ vse; In my conscience I neuer thought it: whereby they signifie that they think something or they think it not, & that their cõsciences can tel what they thinke. Neither must this seeme strange. For there be two actions of the vnderstãding, the one is simple, whichbarely conceiueth or thinketh this or that: the other is a reflecting or doubling of the former, whereby a man conceiues or thinkes himself what he thinks. And this actiõ properly pertaines to the conscience. The mind thinks a thought, now cõscience goes beyond the mind, & knowes what the mind thinkes, so as if a man would goe about to hide his sinfull thoughts from God, his cõscience as it were another person within him, shall discouer all. By meanes of this second action, cõscience may beare witnes euẽ of thoughts, & fiõ hence also it seemes to borrow his name, because conscience is a science or knowledge ioyned with another knowledge: for by it I conceiue and know what I know. Conscientia Iscientia cum alia scientia.

Againe, conscience beare witnes what the wills, & affections of men be in euery matter, Rom. 9, 1. I say the truth in Christ, I lie not, my Cõscience bearing me witnes by the holy ghost, that I haue great heauines & cõtinuall sorrow in my heart: for I could wish my self to be separate from Christ for my brethren.

Lastly, it witnesseth what be mens actions, Eccl. 7, 24. Oftentimes also thine heart knoweth, (that is, conscience witnesseth) that thou likewise hast cursed others.

The manner that conscience vseth in giuing testimonie, stands in 2. things. First it obserues & takes notice of al things that we doe: secondly it doth inwardly and secretly within the heart, tel vs of them al. In this respect it may fitly bee compared to a *N*otarie, or a Register that hath alwaies the penne in his hand, to note & record whatsoeuer is said or done: who also because he keepes the rolles and recordes of the court can tell what hath beene said or don many hundred yeares past.

Touching the third point. How longe conscience beares witnes, it doth it continually; not for a minute, or a day, or a moneth, or a yeare, but for euer; when a man dies, conſcience dieth not: when the bodie is rotten in the graue, conſcience liueth and is ſafe and ſound: and when we ſhall riſe againe, conſcience ſhall come with vs to the barre of Gods iudgement, either to accuſe or excuſe vs before God, Rom. 2, 15, 16. Their conſcience bearing witnes at the day when God ſhal iudge the ſecrets of men by Ieſus Chriſt.

By this firſt dutie of conſcience, wee are to learne three things. The firſt, that there is a God: and we may bee led to the ſight of this euen by common reaſon. For conſcience beares witneſſe; Of what? Of thy particular doings. But againſt whome or with whom doth it giue teſtimonie? thou maieſt feele in thy heart that it doth it either with thee or againſt thee. And to whome is it a witneſſe? to men or angels? that cannot be, for they cannot heere the voice of conſcience, they cannot receiue conſciences teſtimonie, nay they cannot ſee what is in the heart of man. It remaines therefore that there is a ſpiritual ſubſtãce, moſt wiſe, moſt holy, moſt mightie, that ſees all things to whom conſcience beares record, and that is God himſelfe. Let Atheiſts barke againſt this as long as they will: they haue that in them that will conuince them of the truth of the godhead, will they nill they, either in life or death.

Secondly wee learne, that God doth watch ouer all men by a ſpeciall prouidence. The maiſter of a priſon is knowne by this to haue care ouer his priſoners; if he ſend keepers with them to watch them and to bring them home againe in time conuenient: and ſo Gods care to man is manifeſt in this, that when he created man and placed him in the world, he gaue him conſcience to be his keeper to follow him alwaies at his heeles, & to dogge him (as we ſay) & to prie into his actions, and to beare witneſſe of them all.

Thirdly hence wee may obſerue Gods goodneſſe and loue to man. If he doe any thing amiſſe, he ſets his conſcience firſt of all to tell him of it ſecretly: if then hee amend. God forgiues it: if not, then afterward conſcience muſt openly accuſe him for it at the barre of Gods iudgement before all the Saints and Angels in heauen.

The ſecond worke of conſcience is to giue iudgement of things done.

To giue iudgement is to determine, that a thing is well done or ill done. Here in conſcience is like to a Iudge that holdeth an aſſiſe; and takes notice of indites ments, and cauſeth the moſt notorious maleſactour that is to hold vp his hand at the barre of his iudgement. Nay more (as it were) a little God ſitting in the middle of mens harts, arraigning them in this life as they ſhal be arraigned for their offences at the tribunall ſeat of the euerliuing God in the day of iudgement. Wherefore the temporary iudgement that is giuen by the conſcience is nothing els but a beginning or a fore-runner of the laſt iudgement.

Hence we are admoniſhed to take ſpeciall heed that nothing paſt lie heauy vpõ vs, and that we charge not our conſcience in the time to come with any matter. For if our conſcience accuſe vs, God wil much more condemne vs, ſaith S. Iohn, 1. Ioh 3. 18. becauſe he ſeeth al our actions more clearely, and iudgeth them more ſeuerely then conſcience can. It ſhal be good therfore for all men to labour that they may ſay with Paul, 2. Cor. 4. I knowe nothing by my ſelfe, that they may ſtande before God without blame for euer.

Here we muſt conſider two things: firſt, the cauſe that maks conſeience giue iudgment: ſecondly the manner howe.

The cauſe is the Binder of the conſcience. The binder is the thing whatſoeuer which hath power and authoritie ouer conſcience to order it. 3. Of the binding of the conſcience.

To bind, is to vrge, cauſe, & conſtraine it in euerie action either to accuſe for ſinne or to excuſe for well doing: or to ſay, this may be done, or it may not be done.

That we may knowe what this phraſe meaneth (to be bound in conſcience) we muſt in mind cõſider cõſcience a part by it ſelfe from the binding power of Gods cõmandement. For then it hath libertie and is not boũd either to accuſe or excuſe: but is apt to do either of thẽ indifferently: but when the binding power is ſet once ouer the cõſcience, then in euerie action it muſt needs either accuſe or excuſe; euen as a man in a citie or town hauing his libertie, may goe vp & downe or not goe, where and when he will; but if his bodie be attached by the magiſtrate and impriſoned, then his former libertie is reſtrained, he is bound and can goe vp and downe but within the priſon, or ſome other allowed place.

The binder of conſcience, is either proper or improper. Proper is that thing, which hath abſolute and ſoueraigne power in it ſelfe to binde the conſcience. And that is the word of God, written in the booke of the old & new Teſtament. Reaſon, 1. He which is the lord of cõſcience, by his word and lawes binds conscience: but God is the onely Lord of conscience: because he once created it, and he alone gouernes it: and none but hee knowes it: therefore his word and lawes onely bind conscience properlie. II. Hee which hath power to saue or destroy the soule for the keeping and breaking of his lawes, hath absolute power to bind the soule and conscience by the same lawes: but the first is true of God alone, Iam, 3. 12. There is one Lawgiuer which is able to saue and destroy. Esa. 33. 22. The Lord is our iudge, the Lord is our lawgiuer, the Lord is our King, and hee will saue vs. Therefore the word of God alone by an absolute & soueraigne power binds conscience. Because this point is cleare of it selfe, further proofe is needles. Hence wee are taught sundrie pointes of instruction. I. Such as are ignorant among vs must labour to get knowledge of gods word, because it bindes conscience. Neither will the plea of ignorance serue for excuse; because whether wee know Gods lawes or know them not, they still bind vs. And we are bound not only to doe them, but when we know them not, we are further bound not to be ignorant of them, but to seeke to know them. If we had no more sinnes, our ignorance were sufficient to condemne vs. II. Gods worde is to be obeyed, though wee should offend all men, yea loose all mens fauour, and suffer the greatest damage that may be, euen the losse of our liues. And the reaso is at hand; because gods word hath this prerogatiue to bridle, binde, and restraine the conscience. III. Whatsoeuer we enterprise or take in hand, we must first search whether God giue vs libertie in conscience, and warrant to doe it. For if we doe otherwise, conscience is bound presently to charge vs of sinne before God. Lastly, we do here see how dangerous the case is of all Time-seruers that will liue as they list, and be of no certaine religion till differences and dissentions therein be ended, & they haue the determination of a generall Councill; for whether these things come to passe or no, certen it is that they are boũdin cõscience to receiue and beleeue the auncient, Propheticall, and Apostolicall doctrine touching the true worship of God and the waie to life euerlasting, which is the true religion. The same is to be said of all drowsie Protestants, and luke-warme gospellers, that vse religion not with that care and conscience they ought, but onely then and so farre forth as it serues for their turnes, commonly neglecting or despising the assemblies where the worde is preached: and seldome frequenting the Lords table vnlesse it bee at Easter. Like sillie wretches they neither see nor feele the constraining power, that gods word hath in their consciences.

Gods word is either Law, or Gospell. The law is a part of gods word of things to be done, or to be left vndone. And it is threefolde: Morall, Iudiciall, Ceremoniall.

Morall lawe concernes dutie of loue partly to God and partly towardes our neighbour; it is contained in the Decalogue or ten commandements; and it is the very law of nature writtẽ in al mens hearts (for substance though not for the manner of propounding) in the creation of man: and therefore it bindes the consciences of all men at all times, euen of blinde and ignorant persons that neither knowe the most of it nor care to knowe it. Yet here must be remembred three exceptions or cautions. I. When two commandements of the morrall law are opposite in respect of vs; so as we cannot doe them both at the same time; the lesser commaundement giues place to the greater, and doth not binde or constraine for [a] that instant. Example, I. Gods commaunds one thing, and the magistrate commaundes the flat contrarie; in this case which of these two commandements is to be obeyed, [b] Honour God, or, [c] Honour the Magistrate? the answere is, that the latter must giue place to the former, and the former alone in this case must be obeyed. Act, 4, 19, Whether it be right in the sight of God to obey you rather then God, iudge yee. II. The fourth commandement prescribes rest on the Sabbath day: now it falles out that at the same time a whole towne is set on fire and the sixt commandement requires our helpe in sauing our neighbours life and goods. Nowe of these two commandementes which must bee obeied? for both cannot. The aunswere is, that the fourth commandement at this time is to giue place, and the sixt commandement alone bindes the conscience; so as then (if neede should require) a man might labour all the day without offence to God. Mat, 9, 13: I will haue mercie and not sacrifice, And the rule must not be omitted, That charity towards our neighbour is subordinate to the Loue of God, and therefore must giue a This morall law is vnchangeable in respect of the eternall iustice which it prescribeth, yet is changeable as it is applied to some particular actions and cases, & in that respect it admits a dispensatiõ, and no otherwise.

giue place to it. For this cauſe the commandement concerning charity muſt giue place to the commandement concerning loue to god: and when the caſe ſo fals out that we muſt either offend our neighbour or God, we muſt rather offend our neighbour then God.

II. Caution, When God giues ſome particular commandement to his people, therein diſpenſing with ſome other commandement of the morall law: for that time it binds not, For euen the moral commandements muſt be conceiued with this condition, Except God commande otherwiſe Example. I. The ſixt commendement is, Thou ſhalt not kill: but God giues a particular commandement to Abraham; Abraham offer thy ſonne Iſaac in ſacrifice to me. And this latter commandement at that inſtant did binde Abraham: and hee is therfore commended for his obedience to it. II: And when God commaunded the children of Iſrael to compaſſe Ierico ſeuen dayes, and therefore on the Sabbath the fourth commaundement preſcribing the ſanctifying of reſt on the Sabbath, for that inſtant & in that action did not bind conſcience.

III. Caution. One and the ſame commandement in ſome things binds the conſcience more ſtraightly and in doing ſome other things leſſe, Gal. 6. 10, Do good to al men, but eſpecially to them which are of the houſhold of faith. Hence it ariſeth, that though all ſinnes be mortall and deſerue eternall death, yet all are not equall, but ſome more grieuous then otherr.

5. Of Iudiciall binding. Iudiciall lawes of Moſes are all ſuch as preſcribe order for the executiō of iuſtice and iudgement in the common wealth. They were ſpecially giuen by God, and directed to the Iewes; who for this verie cauſe were bound in conſcience to keepe them al, and if the common wealth of the Iewes were now ſtāding in the old eſtate, no doubt they ſhould continue ſtill to binde as before;

But touching other nations and ſpecially Chriſtian common wealths in theſe daies, the caſe is otherwiſe, Some are of opinion, that the whole iudiciall lawe is wholly aboliſhed, and ſome againe runne to the other extreame, holding that iudiciall lawes binde Chriſtians as ſtraightly as Iewes: but no doubt they are both wide: & the ſafeſt courſe is to keepe the meane betweene both. Therefore the iudiciall lawes of Moſes according to the ſubſtance and ſcope thereof muſt be diſtinguiſhed; in which reſpect they are of two ſorts. Some of them are lawes of particular equitie, ſome of common equitie. Lawes of particular equitie, are ſuch as preſcribe iuſtice according to the particular eſtate and condition of the Iewes Commonwealth, and to the circumſtances therof: time, place, perſons, things, actions. Of this kinde was the law, that the brother ſhold raiſe vp ſeede to his brother, and many ſuch like: and none of them binde vs, becauſe they were framed and tempered to a particular people, Iuris particularis.

Iuris communis.

Iudicialls of common equitie are ſuch as are made according to the lawe or inſtinct of nature common to all men: and theſe in reſpect of their ſubſtance, bind the conſciences not onely of the Iewes but alſo of the Gentiles: for they were not giuē to the Iewes as they are Iewes, that is, a people receiued into the Couenant aboue all other nations, brought from Egypt to the land of Canaan, of whom the Meſſias according to the fleſh was to come; but they were giuen to them as they were mortall men ſubiect to the order & lawes of nature as all other nations are. Againe iudiciall lawes, ſo farre forth as they haue in them the generall or common equitie of the law of nature are morall; and therefore binding in conſcience, as the morall law.

A iudiciall may bee knowne to bee a law of common equitie, If eyther of theſe two things bee found in it. Firſt, if wiſe men not onely among the Iewes, but alſo in other nations haue by naturall reaſon and conſcience iudged the ſame to bee equall, iuſt, & neceſſarie: and withall, haue iuſtified their iudgment by enacting laws for their common wealths, the ſame in ſubſtance with ſundrie of the iudiciall laws giuen to the Iewes: and the Romane Emperours among the reſt, haue done this moſt excellently, as will appeare by conferring their lawes with the lawes of God. Secōddly a Iudiciall hath common equitie, if it ſerue directly to explane and confirme any of the ten preceptes of the Decalogue: or, if it ſerue directly to maintaine and vphold any of the three eſtates, of the family, the common wealth, the Church, And whether this be ſo or not it will appeare, if we doe but conſider the matter of the law, and the reaſons or conſiderations vpon which the Lord was mooued to giue the ſame vnto the Iews. Now to make the point in hand more plaine, take an example or two. It is a iudicial law of God that murtherers should be put to death: now the question is, whether this law for substance be the common equitie of nature binding consciences of Christians or no? and the answer is, that without further doubting it is so. For first of al, this law hath beene by common consent of wise lawgiuers enacted in many countries and kingdomes beside the Iewes. It was the law of the Egyptians and [a] old Grecians, of Draco, of Numa, and of many of the Romane Emperours. Secondly, this law serues directly to maintain obedience to the sixth commandement: and the consideration vpon which the law was made is so weightie, that without it a commonwealth cānot stand. The murtherers bloud must be shed (saith the Lord, Num. 35, 33, 34.) because the whole lande is defiled with blood, & remaineth vncleansed til his blood be shed. Againe, it was a iudiciall law amonge the Iewes, that the adulterer and adultresse should die the death: now let the question be whether this law concern other nations as beeing deriued from the common law of nature: and it seemes to be so. For first wise men by the light of reason and naturall conscience haue iudged this punishment equall and iust: Iudah before this iudiciall law was giuen by Moses, appointed Tamar his daughter in law to bee burnt to death for playing the whore. Nabuchadnezar burnt Echad and Zedechias because they committed adulterie with their neighbours wiues. By Dracoes law among the Grecians this sin was death, and also by the law of the Romaines. Againe, this law serues directly to maintaine necessarie obedience to the seauenth commandement: and the considerations vpon which this law was giuen are perpetuall, and serue to vphold the common wealth. Leuit, 20, 22. Yee (saith the Lord) shall keepe all my ordinances and my iudgements (the law of adulterie being one of them) Now marke the reasons, 1. Least the land spue you out. 2. For the same sinnes I haue abhorred the nations.

6. Of the ceremonial law binding.

The Ceremoniall lawes is that which prescribes rites and orders in the outward worship of God.

August. epist. 19. ad Hier.

It must bee considered in three times. The first is the time before the comming and death of Christ: the second, the time of publishing the Gospel by the Apostles the third, the time after the publishing of the Gospell.

In the first, it did bind the conscience of the Iewes, and the obedience of it was the true worship of God: But it did not then binde the consciences of the Gentils: for it was the partition wall betweene them and the Iewes. And it did continue to bind the Iewes til the very death and ascension of Christ. For then the hand writing of ordinances which was against vs was nailed on the crosse & cancelled. And when Christ saith, that the Law and the Prophetes indured till Iohn. Luk. 16. 16, his meaning is not, that the ceremonial law ended the: but that things foretold by the Prophets, and obscurely prefigured by the ceremoniall law, began then more plainely to bee preached and made manifest.

The second time was from the ascension of Christ, till about the time of the destruction of the Temple and the Cittie: in which, ceremonies ceased to bind conscience, and remained indifferent. Hereupon Paul circumcised Timothy: the Apostles after Christs ascension, as occasiō was offered were present in the Temple, Act, 3 1. And the Councill of Ierusalem tendering the weaknes of some beleeuers, decreede that the Church for a time should abstaine from strangled and blood. And there was good reason of this, because the Church of the Iewes was not yet sufficiently cōuicted that an end was put to the ceremonial law by the death of Christ:

In the thirde time, which was after the publishing of the Gospel, ceremonies of the Iewes Church became vnlawful, and so shal continue to the worlds end.

By this appeares, what a monstrous and miserable religion the Church of Rome teacheth and maintaineth; which stands wholly in ceremonies, partly heathenish and partly Iewish.

7. Of the Gospel binding.

As for the Gospel, I take it for the part of the worde of God which promiseth righteousnes & life euerlasting to all that beleeue in Christ, and withall commaundeth this faith.

That we may the better know, how the Gospel binds conscience, two points must be considered: one touching the persons bound, the other touching the manner of binding.

Persons are of two sorts: some bee called, some be vncalled. Persons called are all such to whome god in mercie hath offered the meanes of saluation, and hath reuealed the doctrine of the gospel in some measure meaſure more or leſſe by meanes either ordinary or extraordinarie. All ſuch I thinke are ſtraightly bound in conſcience to beleeue and obey the goſpell. For that word of God whereby men ſhall be iudged in the day of iudgement, muſt firſt of all bind their conſciences in this life, conſidering abſolution and condemnation is according to that which is don in this life: but by thy goſpel, al men that haue beene called ſhall be iudged as Paul ſaith, Rom. 2, 16. God ſhall iudge the ſecrets of men by Ieſus Chriſt, according to my Goſpell. And our Sauiour Chriſt ſaith, He that beleeueth hath life euerlaſting, he which beleeueth not is alreadie condemned. It remaines therfore, that the goſpell bindes the conſciences of ſuch men in this life. By this very point we are all put in minde not to content our ſelues with this, that we haue a liking to the goſpel, and doe beleeue it to be true (though many proteſtants in theſe our daies think it ſufficient both in life & death, if they hold that they are to be ſaued by faith alone in Chriſt without the merit of mans workes) but we muſt goe yet further, and enter into a practiſe of the doctrine of the Goſpell as well as of the precepes of the morall law, knowing that the goſpell doeth as well binde conſcience as the law, and if it be not obeyed, wil as wel condemne.

Men vncalled, are ſuch as neuer heard of Chriſt by reaſon the goſpel was neuer reuealed vnto them, nor meanes of reuelation offered. That there haue bin ſuch in former ages, I make manifeſt thus. The world ſince the creatiõ may be diſtinguiſhed into foure ages. The firſt, from the creation to the flood: the ſecond, from the flood to the giuing of the Law: the third from the giuing of the Lawe to the death of Chriſt: the fourth, from the death of Chriſt to the laſt iudgement. Nowe in the three former ages, there was a diſtinction of the world into two ſorts of men whereof one was a people of God, the other no people. In the firſt age in the families of Seth, Noe, &c. were the ſonnes of God, in all other families the ſonne of men, Gen. 6:2, In the ſecond age were the ſons of the fleſh and the ſonnes of the promiſe, Rom. 9, 7. In the third, Iewes and Gentles: the Iewes being the Church of god, all nations beſide no-church. But in the laſt age this diſtinction was taken away whẽ the Apoſtles had a commiſſiion giuẽ them that was neuer giuen before to any, namely, to goe teach not onely the Iewes but all nations. Nowe this diſtinction aroſe of this, that the Goſpel was not reuealed to the world before the cõming of Chriſt as the Scriptures witneſſe. The prophet Eſai ſaith, 52. 14. that kings ſhall ſtop their mouthes at Chriſt, becauſe they ſhall ſee that which had not bin told them: they ſhall ſee that which they had not heard ſhall they vnderſtand. And 55. 5. that a nation that knewe him not ſhal runne vnto him. Paul ſaith to the Epheſians that in the former time they were without God, and without Chriſt, ſtrangers from the couenant. Eph. 2:12. And to the Athenians he ſaith, that the times before the comming of Chriſt were times of ignorance, Act. 17. 30. And that it may not be thought that this ignorance was affected, paul ſaith further that God in times paſt ſuffered the Gentiles to walke in their owne waies, Act. 14:16. and that the miſterie of the Goſpel was kept ſecret from the beginninge of the world, and is now in the laſt age reuealed to the whole world, Rom. 16, 25. Some alledge that the Iewes being the church of God, had traffique with all nations; and by this meanes ſpread ſome little knowledge of the Meſſias through the whole world: I anſwer again that the conference and ſpeech of Iewiſh marchants with forrainers was no ſufficient meanes to publiſh the promiſes of ſaluation by Chriſt to the whole world: firſt becauſe the Iewes for the moſt part haue alwaies bin more readie to receiue any new and falſe religion then to teach their own: ſecondly becauſe the verie Iewes themſelues, though they were wel acquainted with the ceremonies of their religion, yet the ſubſtance therof which was Chriſt figured by externall ceremonies, they knew not: and hereupon the Phariſes when they made a Proſelyte, they made him ten times more the childe of the deuil then themſelues. Thirdly, becauſe men are ſeldome or neuer ſuffered to profeſſe or make any ſpeech of their religion in forraine countries. Againe, if it be alleadged that the doctrine is ſet down in the bookes of the old Teſtament, which men throgh the whole world might haue reade, ſearched and knowne if they would, I anſwer that the keeping of the bookes of the old Teſtament, was committed to the Iewes alone, Rom. 3, 2, and therfore they were not giuen to the whole word, as alſo the Pſalmiſt teſtifieth, He ſheweth his word vnto Iacob, his ſtatutes and his iudgement vnto Iſrael: he hath not dealt Pſal. 147. 8.

Nowe touching such persons as haue not so much as heard of Christ, though they are apt and fit to be bound in conscience by the Gospell in as much as they are the creatures of God, yet are they not indeede actually bound till such time as the Gospell be reuealed, or at the least meanes of reuelation offered: Reasons hereof may be these: 1. Whatsoeuer doctrine or law doth bind conscience, must in some part bee knowne by nature or by grace or by both: the vnderstanding must first of al conceiue, or at the last haue meanes of conceiuing, before conscience can constraine; because it bindeth by vertue of knowne conclusions in the minde. Therefore things that are altogether vnknown and vnconceiued of the vnderstanding, doe not bind in conscience: now, the gospell is altogether vnknowne and vnconceiued of many, as I haue already proued and therefore it binds not them in conscience. II. Paul saith, Rom. 2. 12. They which sinne without the law [written] shall be condemned without the lawe: therefore they which sinne without the Gospel, shal be condemned without the Gospell: and such as shall be condemned without the gospel after this life, were not bound by it in this life. Augustine the most iudicial Diuine of all the auncient fathers vpon these wordes of Christ: but now they haue no excuse for their sinne, saith on this manner. A doubt may bee mooued whether they to whome Christ hath not come, neither hath spoken vnto them, haue an excuse for their sinnes. For if they haue it not, why is it said that these (namly the Iewes (haue no excuse because he came and spake to them) and if they haue it, whether it be that their punishment may be taken away quite, or in part lessened. To these demands to my capacitie as the Lord shall enable me I answere, that they to whom Christ came not, neither hath spoken vnto them, haue an excuse not of entrie sinne but of this sinne, that they haue not beleeued in Christ. Againe, it remaines to inquire whether those, who before Christ came in his Church to the Gentiles, and before they heard his Gospel, haue beene or are preuented by death, may vse this excuse? Doubtlesse they may, but they shall not therefore escape damnation. For whosoeuer haue sinned without the Law, shall perish without the law.

Ioh. 15. 30. August tract. 89. in Ioh.

As for the reasons which some of the schoolemen haue alleadged to the contrarie, they are answered all by men of the same order; and I will briefly touch the principall. First it is obiected, that the holy Ghost shall iudge the worlde of sinne, because they haue not beleeued in Christ, Ioh. 16. 9. I answere, that by the world we must not vnderstand all and euerie man since the creation, but all nations and kingdoms in the last age of the world to whom the Gospell was reuealed. Thus hath Paul expounded this word, Rom. 11. 12. The fall of them is the riches of the world & the diminishing of them is the riches of the Gentiles, v. 15. The casting of them away is the reconciliation of the world. Secondly it is obiected, that the lawe bindes all men in conscience, though the greatest parte of it be vnknowne to them. Answ. The lawe was once giuen to Adam and imprinted in his heart in his first creation, and in him as being the roote of all mankind, it was giuen to all mens: and as when he sinned all men sinned in him, so when he was enlightned all were enlightned in him, & consequently when his conscience was bound by lawe, all were bounde in him. And though his knowledge bee lost by mans defaulte, yet the bond remaines still on Gods part. Now is the case otherwise with the Gospell, which was neuer written in mans nature, but was giuen after the fal and is aboue nature: Here a further replie is made, that the couenant made with Adam, The seede of the woman shall bruise the serpents head, was also made with his seede which is all mankind, and was afterward continued with Abraham to al nations. I answere againe, that Adam was a roote of mankind onely in respect of mans nature with the gifts and sinnes thereof: he was no roote in respect of grace which is aboue nature, but Christ the secod Adam. And therefore when God gaue the promise vnto him & saith to beleeue the promise, he did not in him giue them both to all mankind; neither, if Adam had afterwarde fallen from faith in the Messias, should all mankind againe haue fallen in him. Moreouer that the promise of grace was not made to Adams seede vniuersally but indefinitely, it appeares: because when God did afterward renew the couenant, he restrained it to the familie of Noe and Abraham, & in Abrahams family it was restrained to Isaac, In Isaac (saith the lord) shall thy seede be called: yea in the verie tenour of the couenant there had distinction made of the seed of the woma & the seed of the

1 Tha. 2. 1 Ioh. 2. 1.

the ſerpent; which ſeed of the ſerpent is a a 1,Ioh.3.8 a part of mankind, and it is excluded from the couenant. And whereas the Lord promiſed to Abraham that in his ſeede all the nations of the earth ſhould be bleſſed, the promiſe muſt not bee vnderſtood of all men in euery age, but of all nations in the laſt age of the world. And thus Paul hath cleared the text, Gal, 3, 8. The Scripture foreſeeing that God would iuſtifie the Gentiles through faith (which was done after Chriſts aſcenſion) hee preached before the Goſpel to Abraham, In thee ſhal al nations be bleſſed. Laſtly, it may bee obiected, that if any man be ignorant of the doctrine of ſaluation by Chriſt, it is through his owne fault; it is true indeed that all ignorance of the doctrine of ſaluatiō comes through mans fault and ſinne: but ſinne muſt bee diſtinguiſhed; it is either perſonall, or the ſinne of mans nature. Now in them that neuer heard of Chriſt, their ignorance in this poinc proceeds not of any perſonall ſinne in them, but onely from the ſinne of mans nature, that is, the firſt ſinne of Adam common to all mankinde, which ſinne is puniſhed when God leaues men wholly to themſelues. Now many things there bee in men proceeding from this ſinne, which neuertheleſſe are no ſinnes, as the manifold miſeries of this life: and ſo I take the ignorance of thinges aboue mans nature altogether vnreuealed, to be no ſinne but a puniſhment of originall ſinne.

Thus much of the perſons which are bound by the Goſpell: now let vs ſee how farre forth they are bound by it.

God in the Goſpel generally reueales two points vnto vs: the firſt, that there is perfect righteouſnes and life euerlaſting to be obtained by Chriſt: the ſecond, that the inſtrument to obtaine righteouſneſſe and life eternall is faith in Chriſt. Moreouer when this Goſpel is diſpenſed & preached vnto vs, God reueales vnto vs two points more: the firſt, that he wil make vs particularly to bee partakers of true righteouſnes and life euerlaſting by Chriſt: the ſecond, that he will haue vs without doubting to beleeue thus much of our ſelues. And for this cauſe euery man to whom the Goſpell is reuealed, is bound to beleeue his owne election, iuſtification, ſanctification, and glorification in, and by Chriſt. The reaſons and grounds of this point out of the word of God are theſe: I. 1,Ioh,3,23. This is his Commaundement that we beleeue in the name of his ſon Ieſus Chriſt, and loue one another as he gaue vs commandement. Now to beleeue in Chriſt, is not confuſedly to beleeue, that he is a Redeemer of mankind, but withall to beleeue that hee is my Sauiour, and that I am elected, iuſtified, ſanctified, and ſhal be glorified by him. This is granted of all men, yea of the Papiſts themſelues which otherwiſe are enemies of this doctrine. For Lumbard ſaith, To beleeue in God is by beleeuing to loue, and as it were to go into God: by beleeuing to cleaue vnto him and as it were to be incorporate into his members. II. Paul, Gal, 2, 16. firſt of all propounds a generall ſentence, That a man is not iuſtified by the workes of the lawe, but by the faith of Chriſt. Afterwards he addes a ſpeciall application, Euen wee (namely Iewes) haue beleeued in Ieſus Chriſt, that we might bee iuſtified by the faith of Ieſus Chriſt: and in v. 20. hee deſcends more ſpecially to apply the Goſpel to himſelfe, I liue (ſaith he) by the faith of the ſonne of God, who hath loued mee and giuen himſelfe for me. And in this kinde of application there is nothing peculiar to Paul, for in this very action of his hee auoucheth himſelfe to be an example vnto vs, 1, Tim, 1, 16, For this cauſe (ſayth he) was I receiued to mercie, that Ieſus Chriſt ſhould ſhew firſt on me all long ſuffering vnto the enſample of them which ſhall in time to come beleeue in him to eternall life. Againe, Philip, 3, 8 he ſayth, I thinke all things but loſſe, that I might winne Chriſt, and might be found in him not hauing mine owne righteouſnes, but that which is through the faith of Chriſt, that I may know him and the vertue of his reſurrection: and afterward he addeth v, 15: Let vs as many as bee perfect bee thus minded. III. Whatſoeuer we pray for according to Gods wil, we are bound to beleeue that it ſhall be giuen vnto vs, Mark, 11, 24. Whatſoeuer ye deſire when ye praie, beleeue that ye ſhall haue it, and it ſhal bee done vnto you. But we pray for the pardon of our ſinnes, and for life euerlaſting by Chriſt: and that according to the will of God. Therefore we are bound in conſcience to beleeue the pardon of our ſinnes and life euerlaſting. IV. If God ſhould ſpeake particularly to any man, & ſay vnto him Cornelius, or Peter, beleeue thou in Chriſt, and thou ſhalt be ſaued; this commaundement ſhould bind him particularly. Now when the Miniſter lawfully called in the name and ſtead of God publiſheth the Goſpel to the cōgregatiō, that is as much as if God himselfe had spoken to them particularly, calling each of them by their names and promising vnto them life euerlasting in Christ. 2, Cor, 5, 20. We as embassadours for Christ, as though God did beseech you through vs, pray you in Christs stead, that ye be reconciled to God.

It may bee and is obiected, that if euery man be bound in conscience to beleeue his owne election and saluation by Christ, then some men are bound to beleeue that which is false, because some there be euen in the middest of the Church, which in the counsell of God were neuer chosen to saluation. I answer, that this reason were good; if men were bound absolutely to beleeue their saluatiō without further respect or condition: but the bond is conditionall, according to the tenour of the couenant of grace: for we are bound to beleeue in Christ, if wee would come to life euerlasting, or if we would be in the fauour of God, or if wee would be good disciples and members of Christ. I answere againe, that whatsoeuer a man is bound to beleeue, is true; yet not alwayes in the euent, but true in the intention of God that bindeth. Now the commandement of beleeuing and applying the Gospell is by God giuen to all within the Church; but not in the same manner to all. It is giuen to the Elect, that by beleeuing they might indeed be saued; God inabling them to doe that which he commands. To the rest, whom God in iustice will refuse, the same commandement is giuen not for the same cause, but to another ende, that they might see how they could not beleeue, and by this meanes be bereft of all excuse in the day of iudgment. God doth not alwayes giue Commandements simply that they might be done, but sometimes for other respects, that they might be meanes of triall, as the commandement giuen to Abraham of killing Isaac: againe that they might serue to keepe men at the least in outward obedience in this life, and stopp their mouthes before the tribunall seat of God.

In that we are bound in conscience on this maner to beleeue the promises of the Gospel, with an applicatiō of the benefits thereof to our selues, sundry necessary and profitable points of instruction may be learned. The first that the Popish Doctours abolish a great part of the Gospel, when they teach that men are bound to beleeue the Gospel onely by a Catholike faith, which they make to be nothing else but a gift of God, or illumination of the mind, whereby assent is giuen to the word of God that it is true; and more specially that Iesus is Christ, that is, an all-sufficient Sauiour of mankind. All which the damned spirits believe: whereas the Gospel for the comfort and saluation of mens soules, hath a further reach, namely to enioyne men to beleeue that the promise of saluation is not only true in it selfe, but also true in the very person of the beleeuer, as appeares euidently by the Sacraments which are as it were a visible Gospell, in which Christ with all his benefits is offered and applied to the particular persons of men: to this end, no doubt, that they might beleeue the accomplishment of the promise in themselues.

Secondly, wee learne that it is not presumption for any man to beleeue the remission of his owne sinnes: for to do the will of God to which we are bound, is not to presume: now it is the will of God to which he hath bound vs in conscience, to beleeue the remission of our owne sinnes: and therefore rather not to doe it, is presumptuous disobedience.

Thirdly, we are here to marke and to remember with care, the foundatiō of the vnfallible certentie of mans saluation. For if man be bound in conscience first to giue assent to the Gospell, and secondly to apply it to himselfe by true faith, then without doubt a man by faith may be certenly perswaded of his owne election and saluation in this life without any extraordinarie reuelation: Gods commandements beeing in this and the like cases possible. For comandements are either Legall or Euangelicall: Legall shew vs our disease, but giue vs no remedie: and the perfect doing of them according to the intent of the Lawgiuer, by reason of mans weakenes and through mans default, is impossible in this world. As for Euangelicall commandementes, they haue this priuiledge, that they may and can bee performed according to the intent of the Lawgiuer in this life: because with the commandement is joyned the inward operation of the spirit in the elect, to enable them to effect the duue commanded; and the will of GOD is not to require absolute prefection at our hands in the Gospel as in the Law, but rather to qualifie the rigor of the law by the satisfaction of a Mediatour in our stead; and of vs (wee being in Christ) to accept the vpright will and indeauour for the deede; as the wil to repent, and the wil to beleeue, for repentance and true faith indeed. Now thē, if things required in the Goſpel, be both ordinary & poſſible; then for a man to haue an vnfallible certainetie of his own ſaluation, is both ordinary and poſſible. But more of this point afterward.

Laſtly all ſuch perſons as are troubled with doubtings, diſtruſtings, vnbeleefe, deſpaire of Gods mercy, are to learne and conſider that God by his word binds thē in conſcience to beleeue the pardon of their owne ſins be they neuer ſo grieuous or many, & to beleeue their own election to ſaluation whereof they doubt. Men that are but ciuill haue care to auoide robbing and killing, becauſe God giues commandements againſt ſtealing and killing: why then ſhould not we much more ſtriue againſt our manifold doubtings & diſtruſtings of Gods loue in Chriſt, hauing a commandement of God that cals vpon vs and binds to doe ſo?

Thus we ſee how Gods word bindes conſcience: now conſcience beeing thus bound, again binds the man in whom it is.

The bond of conſcience is called guiltineſſe. Guiltines is nothing elſe but a work of the conſcience, binding euery ſinner to the puniſhment of euerlaſting death, before God for this or that ſinne.

Thus much of the proper binder of the conſcience: nowe followes the improper.

The improper binder is that which hath no power at all or vertue in it ſelfe to binde conſcience: but doth it onely by the authoritie and vertue of Gods Worde, or ſome part thereof. It is threefold, Humane lawes, an oath, a promiſe.

1. Of humane lawes binding.

Touching humane lawes, the ſpeciall point to be conſidered is, In what maner they binde. That this may in part be cleared, I will ſtand a while to examine and confute the opinion, that the very pillars of the popiſh church at this day maintain; namely, that Ciuill and Eccleſiaſticall iuriſdiction haue a coactiue power in the conſcience, and that the lawes made thereby doe as truly and properly binde (as they ſpeake) to mortall and venial ſinne, as Gods lawe it ſelfe. The arguments which they commōly vſe are theſe.

Argum. 1. Deut. 17. That man that will doe preſumptuouſly, and not obey the a authoritie of the Prieſt, or Iudge, ſhall dye: and thou ſhalt take away euill from Iſrael. Heere (ſay they) the precepts of the high Prieſt are imperia, not admonitions or exhortatiōs & they bind in conſcience; otherwiſe the tranſgreſſours therof ſhould not haue bin puniſhed ſo ſeuerely. Anſ. The intent of this lawe (as a very child may perceiue) is to eſtabliſh the authoritie and right of the higheſt appeales for al matters of controuerſie in the Synedrium or great Court at Ieruſalem. Therfore the words alleadged doe not giue vnto the Prieſt a ſoueraigne power of making lawes, but a power of giuing iudgement of controuerſies, and that according to lawes alreadie made by God himſelfe: from which iudgement there might bee no appeale. Nowe this power of determining doth not conſtrain conſcience, but the outward man to maintaine order and peace. For what reaſon is there, that that ſentence, which might be either a gainſaying of Gods lawe, or a miſtaking of it, ſhould bind the cōſcience, to a ſinne. Againe not euery one that refuſed to ſubiect themſelues to the ſentēce of this court, were ſtraight way guilty of ſinne, (for this did Ieremie the Prophet, & Chriſt our Sauiour, when the Iewes condemned them for wicked perſons) but he that preſumptuouſly deſpiſed the ſentēce and by conſequent the authoritie it ſelfe, which was the ordinance of God, was guiltie. Laſtly, the ſeueritie of the puniſhment, which is temporall death, doth not argue any power in the Iudge of binding conſcience: this they might haue learned of their owne Doctor Gerſon, who holdeth that they that binde anie man to mortall ſinne muſt bee able to puniſh him with anſwerable puniſhment, which is eternall death.

b Princely commandements.

Arg. 2. Math. 16. Whatſoeuer ye ſhall bind in earth, ſhall be bound in heauen. Heere (ſay they) to bind, is to make lawes conſtraining conſcience according to Matth. 23. 4. They binde heauie burdens, & lay them on mens ſhoulders. Anſ. The ſouereigne power of binding and looſing, is not belonging to any creature, but is proper to Chriſt, who hath the keies of Heauen and hel; he openeth & no mā ſhutteth, he ſhutteth & no man openeth, Reu. 3. 5. As for the power of the Church, it is nothing but a miniſtery or ſeruice whereby men publiſh and pronounce that Chriſt bindeth or looſeth. Againe, this binding ſtandes not in the power of making lawes, but in remitting and retaining of mens ſinnes sinnes, as the words going before declare, v. 18. If thy brother sinne against thee, &c. & Christ sheweth his owne meaning when he saith, Whose sins ye remit they are remitted, and whose sinnes ye retaine they are retained, Ioh, 20, 23. hauing before in the person of Peter promised them this honour, in this forme of words, Mat, 16. I will giue vnto thee the keyes of the kingdome of heauen, whatsoeuer thou shalt binde vpon earth, shall be bound in heauen. This which I say is approoued by consent of auntient Diuines. August. Psal. 101. serm. 2. Remission of sins (saith he) is loosing: therfore by the lawe of contraries, binding is to hold sinne vnpardoned. Lastly, the place Math. 23. 4. ouerturnes the argument, for there the Scribes and Pharisies are condemned, because they layd vpon mens shoulders the burdens of their traditions, as meanes of Gods worship & things binding conscience.

Argum. 3. Act. 15. It seemes good vnto vs and the holy ghost, to lay no more burden on you then these necessary things, that ye abstain from things offered to idols, and blood, & that which is strangled, and fornication. Here (say they) the Apostles by the instinct of the Holy Ghost make a new lawe not for this or that respect, but simply to bind the cōsciēces of the Gentiles, that they might be exercised in obedience. And this is prooued because the Apostles call this lawe a burden, and call the things prescribed necessarie, and S. Luke tearmes them, the Cōmandements of the Apostles: and Chrysostome cals the Epistle sent to the Church, Imperium, that is, a lordly charge. To this they adde, the testimonie of Tertullian, Origen, Augustine. Ans. Though all bee graunted that the lawe is a burden imposed, a precept of the Apostles, a charge; againe, that things required therein are necessarie: yet will it not follow by good cōsequent, that the lawe simply binds conscience; because it was giuen with a reseruatiō of Christian liberte, so as out of the case of scandall, that is, if no offence were giuen to the weake Iewes it might freely be omitted. And that wil appeare by these reasons. First of all Peter saith, that it is a tēpting of God, to impose vpon the Gentiles the yoke of Iewish ceremonies: hee therfore must needs be contrarie to himselfe, if he intend to bind mens cōsciences to abstinence from strangled blood, and things offered to Idols. A reply is made, that this abstinēce is prescribed not by the auntient law of Moses, but by a newe Ecclesiasticall or apostolicall authoritie. I answer againe, that a Mosaicall ceremonie is stil the same thing, though it be stablished by a new authoritie. And wheras Christ by his death put an end to the ceremonis all lawe, it is absurd to think that the Apostles by their authoritie reuiued some part of it againe, and bound mens consciences thereto. Secondly the Church of God in al places suffered this commandement to cease, which the faithfull seruants of God would neuer haue done, if they had beene perswaded that this lawe had bound conscience simply. It is answered, that this law ceased not bicause the giuing of offence vnto the Iewes ceased, but because it ceased vniuersally: yea but it could not haue ceased, vniuerlally if it had boūd conscience, specially considering is was propounded to the Church without any mention or limitatien of time. Thirdly Paul was present in this counsel: & knew the intent of the law very well, and therefore no doubt hee did not in any of his Epistles gaine say the same. This beeing granted, it cannot be, that this law should bind conscience out of the case of offence, For he techeth the Corinthiās that things offered to idols may be eaten, so be it the weake brother be not offended. Here it is answered, that when Paul writ this first Epistle to the Corinthians this commandement of the Apostles touching thinges strangled and blood was not come vnto them. Well, to graunt all this, which cannot be prooued let it bee answered, why Paul did not nowe deliuer it, and why he deliuereth a doctrine contrarie to that which he had decreed at Ierusalem, which was that the Gentiles should absolutelye abstaine from thinges offered to idoles. As for the testimonie of the fathers they are abused. Indeede Turtullian saith plainlie, that Christians in his daies abstained from eating of blood, & he perswades men to continue in ſo doing, becauſe he is of opinion (beeing indeede farre deceiued) that this verie lawe of the Apoſtles muſt laſt to the ende of the world; which cõceit if the papiſts hold not, what meane they to build vpon him. Origen ſaith, that this lawe was verie neceſſarie in his dayes; and no maruell: For by Idolithytes he vnderſtandes not things that haue beene offered to idols, and are afterward brought to priuat houſes or to the market as other 1 commõ meats; but he vnderſtandes things

2 that remaine conſecrated to idols, and are no where elſe vſed but in their temples, which wee graunt with him muſt for euer be auoided as meanes and inſtruments of Idolatrie. Whereas the lawe of the Apoſtles ſpeakes onely of the firſt kinde; As for things ſtrangled and blood, he takes them to be the deuils foode; and for this cauſe he approoues abſtinence from them. And whereas Auguſtine ſaith, that it is a good thing to abſtaine from things offered to Epiſt. 154 ad Publicolam. Idols, though it be in neceſſitie; hee muſt be vnderſtood of the firſt kinde of Idolithytes which are yet remaining in the idol-temples ſtil cõſecrated vnto them, & not of the ſecond; of which the Apoſtles lawe (as I haue ſaid) muſt bee vnderſtood.

Argum. 4, Ioh. 21. Chriſt ſaith to Peter: Feede my ſheepe: that is, (as the word importeth) feed and rule my sheep. Anſ. This feeding and ruling ſtands not in the making new lawes, but in teaching and gouerning the Church of God according to the doctrine which they had receiued from Chriſt. And this action of feeding is aſcribed to all Chriſtians, Reuel. 3, 27. Who cannot thereuppon challenge a power of making lawes to the cõſcience?

Argum. 5, Ioh. 20. As my Father ſent me ſo I ſend you: But Chriſt was ſent of his father not only with power of preaching and miniſtring the Sacramentes, but alſo with authoritie of commanding & giuing iudgement. Anſw. If this kinde of reaſoning may ſtand, all the Apoſtles ſhall bee made redeemers: for they were all ſent as Chriſt was, and hee was ſent not onely to preach the redemption of mankind, but alſo to effect and worke the ſame. If this bee abſurd, then it is a flat abuſing of Scripture to gather from this ſaying of Chriſt, that the Apoſtles had power of binding conſcience becauſe he had ſo. It is true indeed that there is a ſimilitude or analogie between the calling of Chriſt & his Apoſtles, but it wholy ſtandes in theſe points. Chriſt was ordained to his office before al worlds, and ſo were the Apoſtles: Chriſt was called of his father immediatly and ſo were they of Chriſt: Chriſt was ſent to the whole world, and ſo were they: Chriſt receiued all power in heauen and earth as being neceſſarie for a mediatour; & they receiued an extraordinarie authoritie from him with ſuch a plentifull meaſure of the ſpirit as was neceſſarie for the Apoſtolicall function. Laſtly Chriſt was ſent euen as he was man to be a teacher of the Iewes: and therefore he is called the miniſter of circumciſiõ Ro. 15, 8, & ſo the Apoſtles are ſent by him to teach the gentiles. Thus farre is the compariſon to bee inlarged, and no further. And that no man might imagine that ſome part of this reſemblance ſtandes in a power of binding conſcience, Chriſt hath put a ſpeciall exception, when he ſaith: Go teach al nations, teaching them to obſerue all things that I haue commanded you, and not commandements of your owne.

Argum. 6, Rom. 13, Whoſoeuer reſiſteth the power, reſiſteth the ordinance of God: and they that reſiſt ſhal receiue to themſelues iudgment: and, yee muſt bee ſubiect not onelie for wrath, but alſo for conſcience ſake. Anſwer, Magiſtracie indeede is an ordinance of God to which wee owe ſubiection, but how farre ſubiection is due there is the queſtion. For bodie and goods and outward converſation, I graunt al; but a ſubiection of cõſcience to mens laws, I deny. And betweene theſe two ther is a great difference: to be ſubiect to authoritie, in conſcience, and to be ſubiect to it for conſcience, as will be manifeſt if we doe but conſider the phraſe of the Apoſtle, the meaning whereof is that we muſt performe obedience not only for anger, that is, for the auoiding of puniſhment, but alſo for the auoiding of ſinne, and ſo by conſequent for auoiding a breach in conſcience. Now this breach is not properly made becauſe mans law is neglected, but becauſe Gods law is broken which ordaineth magiſtracie, and withall bindes mens conſciences to obey their lawfull commandementes. And the damnation that is due vnto men for reſiſting the ordinance of God, comes not by the ſingle breach of magiſtrates cõmandement, but by a tranſgreſſiõ of the law of god which appointeth magiſtrates & their authoritie. To this anſwer Papiſts

Argum. 5, Ioh. 20. As my Father ſent me ſo I ſend you: But Chriſt was ſent of his father not only with power of preaching and miniſtring the Sacramentes, but alſo with authoritie of commanding & giuing iudgement. Anſw. If this kinde of reaſoning may ſtand, all the Apoſtles ſhall bee made redeemers: for they were all ſent as Chriſt was, and hee was ſent not onely to preach the redemption of mankind, but alſo to effect and worke the ſame. If this bee abſurd, then it is a flat abuſing of Scripture to gather from this ſaying of Chriſt, that the Apoſtles had power of binding conſcience becauſe he had ſo. It is true indeed that there is a ſimilitude or analogie betweene the calling of Chriſt & his Apoſtles, but it wholy ſtandes in theſe points. Chriſt was ordained to his office before al worlds, and ſo were the Apoſtles: Chriſt was called of his father immediatly and ſo were they of Chriſt: Chriſt was ſent to the whole world, and ſo were they: Chriſt receiued all power in heauen and earth as being neceſſarie for a mediatour; & they receiued an extraordinarie authoritie from him with ſuch a plentifull meaſure of the ſpirit as was neceſſarie for the Apoſtolicall function. Laſtly Chriſt was ſent euen as he was man to be a teacher of the Iewes: and therefore he is called the miniſter of circumciſiõ, Ro. 15, 8, & ſo the Apoſtles are ſent by him to teach the gentiles. Thus farre is the compariſon to bee inlarged, and no further. And that no man might imagine that ſome part of this reſemblance ſtandes in a power of binding conſcience, Chriſt hath put a ſpeciall exception, when he ſaith; Go teach al natiõs, teaching them to obſerue all things that I haue commanded you, and not commandements of your owne.

Argum. 6, Rom. 13, Whoſoeuer reſiſteth the power, reſiſteth the ordinance of God: and they that reſiſt ſhal receiue to themſelues iudgment: and, yee muſt bee ſubiect not onelie for wrath, but alſo for conſcience ſake. Anſwer, Magiſtracie indeede is an ordinance of God to which wee owe ſubiection, but how farre ſubiection is due there is the queſtion. For bodie and goods and outward converſation, I graunt al: but a ſubiection of cõſcience to mens laws, I deny. And betweene theſe two ther is a great difference: to be ſubiect to authoritie, in conſcience; and to be ſubiect to it for conſcience, as will be manifeſt if we doe but conſider the phraſe of the Apoſtle, the meaning whereof is that we muſt performe obedience not only for anger, that is, for the auoiding of puniſhment, but alſo for the auoiding of ſinne, and ſo by conſequent for auoiding a breach in conſcience. Now this breach is not properly made becauſe mans law is neglected, but becauſe Gods law is broken which ordaineth magiſtracie, and withall bindes mens conſciences to obey their lawfull commandementes. And the damnation that is due vnto men for reſiſting the ordinance of God, comes not by the ſingle breach of magiſtrates cõmandemẽt, but by a tranſgreſſiõ of the law of god which appointeth magiſtrates & their authoritie. To this anſwer Papiſts replie nothing that is of moment. Therefore I proceede.

Argum. 7. 1 Cor. 4. What will you that I come vnto you with a rodde, or in the spirit of meekenesse? Now this rod is a iudicial power of punishing of sinners. Ans. For the regiment and protection of Gods Church; their be two rods mentioned in Scripture the rodde of Christ, and the Apostlicall rodde. The rod of Christ is termed a rod of yron, or the rod of his mouth; and it signifies that absolute and soueraigne power which Christ hath ouer his creatures, whereby hee is able to conuert and saue them, or to forsake and destroy them. And it is a peculiar priuiledge of this rodde, to smite and wound the conscience. The Apostolicall rodde was a certaine extraordinarie power whereby God inabled to plague and punish rebellious offendours with grieuous iudgementes, not in their soules but in their bodies alone. With this rodde Paul smote Elimas blind, and Peter smote Ananias and Saphira with bodily death. And it may be that Paul by his power did giue vp the incestuous man, when he was excommunicate, to be vexed in his bodie and tormented by the deuill: but that by this rod the Apostles could smite conscience, it cannot be prooued.

Argum. 8, 1. Tim. 3. Paul made a lawe that none hauing two wiues should bee ordained a Bishop: Now this lawe is positiue and Ecclesiasticall and bindes conscience. An. Paul is not the maker of this law, but god himselfe, who ordained that in marriage not three but two alone should bee one flesh: and that they which serue at the altar of the Lord, should be holy. And to grant that this lawe were a new lawe beside the written word of God, yet doeth it not follow that Paul was the maker of it; because he vsed not to deliuer any doctrine to the Churches but which hee receiued of the Lord.

Argum. 9, Luke, 10. Hee which heareth you, heareth me. Ans. These words properly concerne the Apostles, and doe not in like manner belong to the Pastors and teachers of the Church. And the ende of these words is not to confirme any Apostolicall authoritie in making lawes to the conscience: but to signifie the priuiledge which he had vouchsafed them aboue all others, that he would so farre forth assist them with his spirit, that they should not erre or bee deceiued in teaching & publishing the doctrine of saluation, though otherwise they were sinful men according to Math. 10, It is not you that speake, but the spirit of my father which speaketh in you. And the promise to be led into all trueth, was directed vnto them.

Argum. 10. 1 Cor. 11, I praise you that you keepe my commandements. Answ. Paul deliuered nothing of his own concerning the substance of the doctrine of saluation and the worship of God, but that which hee receiued from Christ. The precepts here ment are nothing els but rules of decency and comely order in the congregation: and though they were to bee obeyed, yet Pauls meaning was not to bind any mans conscience therewith. For of greater matter, hee saith, I bid I speake for your commoditie, and not to intangle you in a snare. 1, Cor, 7, 35.

Argum, 11, Councels of auncient fathers when they command or forbid any thing, doe it with threatning of a curse to the offenders. Answ: The Church in former time vsed to annexe vnto her Canons the curse anathema, because things decreed by them were indeede, or at the least thought to be the wil and word of God: and they had respect to the saying of Paul if any teach otherwise though hee bee an Angel from heauen, let him bee accursed. Therefore councels in this action were no more but instrumentes of God to accurse those, whome hee first had accursed;

Argum, 12, an act indifferent if it bee commanded, is made necessarie: and the keeping of it is the practise of vertue, therefore euery law bindes conscience to a sin. Answ: An act in it selfe indifferent beeing commanded by mans lawe, it is not made simply necessarie, for that is as much as gods law doth or can do, but only in some part, that is, so farre forth as the said act or action tendes to maintaine & preserue the good ende for which the law is made. And though the action be in this regard necessarie: yet doth it still remaine indifferent, as it is considered in it selfe out of the end of the lawe: so as if peace, the common good, & comly order may be maintained & al offence auoided by any other means, the act may be done or not done without sinne before God. For whereas God himselfe hath giuen libertie and freedome in the vse of things indifferent, the law of man doth not take away the same, but only moderate and order the ouer common vse of it for the common good.

Argum,

Argum. 13. The faſt of lent ſtandes by a law and commandement of men; and this lawe binds conſcience ſimply: for the auntient fathers haue called it a Tradition Apoſtolicall, and make the keeping of it to be neceſſarie, and the not keeping of it a ſinne, and puniſh the offendours with excommunication. Anſ. It is plaine to him that will not be obſtinate, that lent faſt was not commaunded in the primitiue Church, but was freely at mens pleaſures, and in ſeuerall Churches diuerſly both in regard of ſpace of time, as alſo in reſpect of diuerſitie of meats. Ireneus in his epiſtle to Victor cited by Euſebius ſaith, Some haue thought that they muſt faſt one day, ſome two dayes, ſome more, ſome 40. houres, daie and night, which diuerſitie of faſting commendeth the vnitie of faith. Spiridion a good man did eate fleſh in lent, and cauſed his gueſt to do the ſame, and this he did vpon iudgment, becauſe hee was perſwaded out of Gods word, that to the cleane all things were cleane. And Euſebius records, that Montanus the hereticke was the firſt that preſcribed ſolemne and ſet laws of faſting And whereas this faſt is called Apoſtolicall traditió, it is no great mater, for it was the maner of the auntient Church in former times to tearme rites & orders Eccleſiaſticall not ſet down in Scriptures Apoſtolicall orders, that by this meanes they might cómend them to the people: as Ierome teſtifieth, Euery prouince (ſaith hee) may thinke the conſtitutions of the Anceſtors to be Apoſtolicall laws. And whereas it is ſaid to be a ſinne not to faſt in lent (as Auguſtine ſpeaketh, it is not by reaſon of any commandement binding conſcience, for Auguſtine ayth plainely, that neyther Chriſt nor his Apoſtles appointed any ſet time of faſting: and Chryſoſtome, that, Chriſt neuer commanded vs to follow his faſt; but the true reaſon hereof is borrowed from the end. For the primitiue Church vſed not the popiſh faſt, which is to eate whitemeate alone, but an abſtinency from all meates vſed ſpecially to mortifie the fleſh, & to prepare men before hand to a worthy receiuing of the Euchariſt. And in regard of this good end was the offence. And whereas it is ſaid that ancient fathers taught a neceſſitie of keeping this faſt, euē Hierom whom they alleadge to this purpoſe ſaith the contrarie. For confuting the errour of Montanus who had his ſet time of faſt to be kept of neceſſitie, he ſaith, wee faſt in Lent according to the Apoſtles tradition as in a time meete for vs: and wee doe it not, as though it were not lawfull for vs to faſt in the reſt of the yeare except Pentecoſt: but it is one thing to doe a thing of neceſſitie, and another to offer a gift of free will. Laſtly excommunication was for open contempt of this order taken vppe in the Church, which was, that men ſhould faſt before Eaſter for their further humiliation and preparation to the ſacrament. So the 29. canon of the Councill of Gangres muſt be vnderſtood. As for the Canons of the Apoſtles (ſo falſely called) and the eight Council of Tolledo, I much reſpect not what they ſay in this caſe.

Arg. 14. Gods authoritie binds conſcience; Magiſtrates authoritie is Gods authoritie: therefore Magiſtrates authoritie bindes conſcience properly. Anſ. Gods authoritie may be taken two wayes; firſt for that ſouereigne and abſolute power which he vſeth ouer all his creatures: ſecondly for that finite and limited power which he hath ordained that men ſhould exerciſe ouer men. If the minor, namely that Magiſtrats authority is Gods authority, be taken in the firſt ſenſe, it is falſe: for the ſoueraigne power of God is incommunicable. If it be taken in the ſecōd ſenſe the propoſition is falſe. For there be ſundrie authorities ordained of God, as the authoritie of the father ouer a child, of the maſter ouer the ſeruant, the authoritie of the Maſter ouer his ſcholler, which do binde in conſcience as the authoritie of Gods lawes doth.

By theſe arguments which I haue now anſwered, and by manie other beeing but lightly skanned, it wil appeare that neceſſary obedience is to be performed both to ciuill and Eccleſiaſticall iuriſdiction; but that they haue a conſtraining power to bind conſcience & that properly as Gods laws do, it is not yet proued, neither cā be; as I wil make manifeſt by other argumēts

Argum. 1. Hee that makes a lawe binding conſcienee to mortall ſinne, hath power, if not to ſaue, yet to deſtroy: becauſe by ſinne; which followes vpon the tranſgreſſion of his law, comes death and damnation. But God is the onely Lawegiuer that hath this priuiledge; which is, after hee hath giuen his lawe, vpon the breaking or keeping therof, to ſaue or deſtroy, Iam. 4, 12. There is one Lawginer that can ſaue or deſtroy. Therefore God alone makes laws binding conſcience properly, and no creature can do the like. Anſwer is made made that S. Iames ſpeakes of the principall Lawgiuer, that by his owne proper authoritie makes lawes; and doth in ſuch manner ſaue and deſtroy, that he need not feare to be deſtroyed of any: and that he ſpeakes not of ſecondarie lawgiuers that are deputies of god, and make lawes in his name I ſay againe that this anſwer ſtandes not with the text. For S. Iames ſpeakes ſimply without diſtinction, limitation, or exception: and the effect of his reaſon is this. No man at all muſt ſlaunder his brother, becauſe no man muſt be iudge of the lawe: and no man can be iudge of the law, becauſe no man can be a law-giuer to ſaue or deſtroy. Now then where be thoſe perſons that ſhall make lawes to the ſoules of men, and bind them vnto puniſhment of mortall ſinne; cõſidering that God alone is the ſauing and deſtroying law-giuer.

Argum; 2. Hee that can make lawes as truly binding conſcience as Gods laws, can alſo preſcribe rules of Gods worſhip, becauſe to bind the conſcience is nothing els but to cauſe it to excuſe for things that are well done, and therefore truly pleaſe God; and to accuſe for ſinne whereby god is diſhonoured, but no man can preſcribe rules of Gods worſhip, and humane laws as they are humane lawes appoint not the ſeruice of God, Eſa. 29, 13. Their feare towards mee was taught by the precept of men. Matth, 15, 6. They worſhip mee in vaine teaching doctrines which are the cõmandements of men. Papiſts here make anſwer, that by lawes of men we muſt vnderſtande ſuch lawes as be vnlawfull or vnprofitable being made without the authoritie of god, or inſtinct of his ſpirit, It is true indeed that theſe commandements of men were vnlawfull: but the cauſe muſt be conſidered, they were vnlawful not becauſe they commanded that which was vnlawfull and againſt the will of God, but becauſe things in themſelues lawefull were commanded as parts of Gods worſhip. To waſh the outward part of the cuppe or platter, and to waſh handes before meate, are things in reſpect of ciuill vſe very lawfull, and yet are theſe blamed by Chriſt, and no other reaſon can bee rendred but this, that they were preſcribed not as things indifferent or ciuil, but as matters pertaining to gods worſhip. It is not againſt Gods worde in ſome politicke regards to make diſtinction of meates, and drinkes, and times; yet Paul cals theſe things doctrines of deuils, becauſe they were commaunded as things wherein God ſhould be worſhipped.

Argum. 3. God hath now in the new Teſtament giuen a libertie to the conſcience, whereby it is freed from all lawes of his own whatſoeuer, excepting ſuch laws and doctrines as are neceſſary to ſaluation Col. 2. 10, If yee bee dead with Chriſt, yee are free from the elements of the world. Gal. 5. 1. Stande yee in the libertie wherewith Chriſt hath freed you; and bee not againe intangled with the yoke of bondage. Now, if humane lawes made after the grant of this libertie binde conſcience of theſeſelues, then muſt they either take away the foreſaid libertie or diminiſh the ſame; but that they cãnot doe: but that which is granted by an higher authoritie, namely god himſelfe, can not be reuoked or repealed by the inferiour authoritie of any man. It is anſwered, that this freedome is onely from the bondage of ſinne, from the curſe of the morall lawe, from the ceremoniall and iudiciall lawes of Moſes, and not from the lawes of our ſuperiours. And I anſwere againe, that it is abſurd to thinke that God giues libertie in conſcience from any of his owne lawes, and yet will haue our conſciences ſtill to remaine in ſubiection, to the lawes of ſinneful men.

Argum. 4, Whoſoeuer bindes conſcience, commandes conſcience. For the bõd is made by a commandement vrging conſcience to doe his dutie, which is to accuſe or excuſe for euill or well doing. Nowe Gods lawes commaund conſcience in as much as they are ſpirituall, commanding bodie and ſpirit, with al the thoughts, wil, affections, deſires, and faculties, and requiring obedience of them all according to their kind. As for the lawes of men, they want power to command conſcience. Indeede if it were poſſible for our gouernours by laws to commā l mens thoughts and affections, then alſo might they command conſcience: but the firſt is not poſſible, for their lawes can reach no further then the outward man, that is, to bodie & goods, with the ſpeeches and deeds there of: and the end of them al, is not to maintaine ſpirituall peace of conſcience, which is betweene man and god, but onely that externall and ciuill peace which is betweene man and man. And it were not meete that men ſhould command conſcience, which cannot ſee conſcience & iudg of all her actions, which appeare not outwardly, & whereof there be no witneſſes, but God and the conſcience of the doer.

Laſtly,

Laſtly, men are not fitte commanders of conſcience, becauſe they are no Lords of it, but God himſelfe alone.

Argum. 5. Men in making lawes are ſubiect to ignorance and errour: and therfore when they haue made a lawe (as neere as poſſibly they can) agreeable to the equitie of Gods lawe, yet can they not aſſiure themſelues and others that they haue failed in no point or circumſtance. Therefore it is againſt reaſon that humane lawes being ſubiect to defects, faults, errours, and manifold imperfections, ſhould truly bind conſcience, as Gods lawes doe, which are the rule of righteouſneſſe. All gouernours in the world (by reaſon that to their olde lawes, they are cõſtrained to put reſtrictiõs, amplifications, and modifications, of al kinds with new readings and interpretations) vpon their daily experience ſee and acknowledge this to bee true which I ſay, ſauing the Biſhop of Rome (ſo falſly tearmed) which perſwades himſelfe to haue when he is in his conſiſtorie, ſuch an infallible aſſiſtance of the ſpirit, that he cannot poſſibly erre in iudgement.

Argum. 6. If mens lawes by inward vertue binde conſcience properly as Gods lawes, then our dutie is to learne, ſtudie, & remember them as well as Gods lawes; yea miniſters muſt bee diligent to preach them, as they are diligent in preaching the doctrine of the Goſpel: becauſe euery one of them bindes to mortall ſin, as the Papiſts teach. But that they ſhould be taught and learned as Gods lawes, it is moſt abſurd in the iudgement of all men, Papiſts themſelues not excepted.

Argum. 7. Inferiour authoritie cannot bind the ſuperiour: now the courts of men and their authoritie are vnder conſcience. For God in the hart of euery man hath erected a tribunall ſeate, and in his ſtead hee hath placed neither Saint not Angell, nor any other creature whatſoeuer, but conſcience it ſelfe, who therefore is the higheſt Iudge that is or can bee vnder God; by whoſe direction alſo courts are kept, and lawes are made.

Thus much of the Popiſh opinion: by which it appeares that one of the principall notes of Antichriſt agrees fitlie to the Pope of Rome. Paul. 2. Theſſ. 2. makes it a ſpeciall propertie of Antichriſt to exalt himſelfe againſt or aboue all that is called God, or worſhipped. Now what doth the Pope elſe, when hee takes vpon him authoritie to make ſuch lawes as ſhall binde the conſcience, as properly and truely as Gods lawes? and what doeth he els when he aſcribes to himſelfe power to free mens conſciences from the bond of ſuch lawes of God, as are vnchangeable; as may appeare in a Canon of the councill of Trent: the wordes are theſe, If any ſhall ſay, that Seſſ. 24. can. 3 thoſe degrees of conſanguinitie that be expreſſed in Leuiticus, doe onely hinder matrimonie to be made, and breake it being made, and that the Church cannot diſpenſe with ſome of them, or appoint that more degrees may hinder or breake marriage, let him bee accurſed. O ſacrilegious impietie! conſidering the lawes of affinitie & conſanguinitie, Leu. 18. are not ceremoniall, or iudiciall lawes peculiar to the Iews, but the very lawes of nature. What is that canon elſe, but a publike proclamation to the world, that the Pope & Church of Rome doe ſit as lords, or rather idols in the hearts and conſciences of men. This will yet more fully appeare to any man, if we read popiſh books of practicall or Caſe-diuinity, in which the common manner is, to binde conſcience where God looſeth it, and to looſe where he binds: but a declaration of this requires long time.

Now I come (as neere as poſſibly I can) to ſet downe the true manner, how mens lawes by the common iudgement of Diuines may bee ſaid to bind conſcience. That this point may be cleared, two things muſt be handled. By what meanes they binde, and how far forth.

Touching the meanes, I ſet down this rule. Wholeſome lawes of men, made of things indifferent, ſo far forth binde conſcience by vertue of the generall commandement of God, which ordaineth the Magiſtrates authoritie: that whoſoeuer ſhall wittingly and willingly, with a diſſoyall minde, either breake or omit ſuch lawes, is guiltie of ſinne before God.

By wholeſome lawes, I vnderſtand ſuch poſitiue conſtitutions, as are not againſt the law of God, and withall tend to maintaine the peaceable eſtate and common good of men.

Furthermore I adde this clauſe, made of things indifferent, to note the peculiar matter whereof humane lawes properly intreat: namely, ſuch things as are neither expreſſely commanded or forbidden by God.

Now ſuch kind of lawes haue no vertue or power in themſelues to conſtraine conſcience, but they binde onely by vertue of an higher commandement. Let euery soule be subiect to the higher powers, Rom. 13.1, or, Honour father and mother, Exod. 20. which commandements binde vs in conscience to performe obedience to the good lawes of men. As S. Peter saith, Submit your selues to euery humane ordinance for the Lord. 1. Pet. 2. 13. that is, for conscience of God, as he saith afterward, v. 19. whereby he signifieth two things: first that GOD hath ordained the authoritie of gouernours, secondly that he hath appointed in his word, and thereby bound men in conscience to obey their gouernours lawfull commandements.

If the case fall out otherwise, as commonly it doth, that humane lawes be not enacted of things indifferēt, but of things that be good in themselues, that is commanded by god; then are they not humane properly but diuine lawes. Mens lawes intreating of thinges that are morally good, & the parts of Gods worship, are the same with Gods lawes: and therefore binde conscience, not because they were enacted by men, but because they were first made by God; men being no more but instruments and ministers in his name to reuiue, renewe, and to put in execution such precepts and lawes as prescribe the worship of God, standing in the practise of true religion & vertue. Of this kind are all positiue lawes touching articles of faith, and the duties of the morall law. And the man that breaks such lawes sinnes two wayes, first because hee breakes that which is in conscience the law of God: secondly because in disobeying his laweful Magistrate he disobeyes the generall commandement of God, touching magistracie.

But if it shal fal out that mens lawes be made of things that are euil and forbidden by God, then is there no bond of conscience at all; but contrariwise men are boūd in conscience not to obey. Act. 4. 19. And hereupon the three children are commended for not obeying Nabuchadnezzar, when hee gaue a particular commandement vnto them to fall down and worship the golden image. Dan. 3.

Moreouer, in that mans law bindes not but by the authoritie of Gods lawe, hence it followes, that Gods law alone hath this priuiledge, that the breach of it should be a sinne. S. Iohn saith, 1. epist. 3. Sinne is the anomie, or, transgression of the law, vnderstāding Gods lawe. When Dauid by adulterie and murder had offended many men, and that many waies, he saith, Psal. 51. Against thee, against thee haue I sinned. And Augustine defined sinne to be some thing said, done, or desired against the lawe of God. Some man may say, if this be so, belike then we may breake mens lawes without sinne. I answer, that men in breaking humane lawes, both may and doe sinne; but yet not simply, because they breake them, but because in breaking them, they doe also breake the law of God. The breach of a lawe must bee considered two waies. First as it is a trespasse, hinderāce, iniurie, damage; & in this respect it is committed against mens lawes: secondly the breach of a lawe must be considered as it is sinne, and it is onely against Gods lawe, which appoints obedience to the Magistrate.

The second point, namely, How farre forth mens lawes bind conscience, I explane on this manner. It is all that the laws of God doe or can doe, to binde conscience simply and absolutely. Therefore humane lawes binde not simply of themselues, but so far forth as they are agreeable to Gods word, serue for the common good, stand with good orders, and hinder not the libertie of conscience. The necessitie of the lawe ariseth of the necessitie of the good end thereof. And as the ende is good and profitable more or lesse, so is the law it selfe necessarie more or lesse. Mens lawes are like their testimonies, which neither prooue nor disprooue of themselues, but borrowe all the strength which they haue to constraine, frō the truth, wisdome, and fidelity of them that beare witnes.

Hence it followeth that a man may doe any thing beside humane lawes and constitutions without breach of conscience. For if we shall omit the doing of any lawe, I. without hinderance of the end and particular considerations, for which the lawe was made: II. without offence gluing, as much as in vs lieth: III. without contempt of him that made the lawe, wee are not to be accused of sinne. Example. In time of warre, the magistrate of the citie commands that no man shall open the gates: the end is that the cittie & euery member thereof may be in safetie. Nowe it falls out that certaine cittizens, being vpon occasion without the cittie, are pursued by the enemie and in danger of their liues. Hereupon some man without any more adoe openeth the gate to reskue thē. The question is, whether he hath sinned or no. And the truth is, he hath not; because he did not hinder the ende of the law, but rather further it, and that without ſcandall to men, or contempt to the Magiſtrate.

And this ſtandes euen by the equitie of Gods word, God made a lawe, that the prieſts only ſhould eat of the ſhew bread: now Dauid beeing no prieſt, did vppon vrgent occaſion eate of it without ſinn. If this be true in Gods lawe, then it may alſo be true in the lawes of men, that they may in ſome caſes be omitted without ſinne againſt God.

Neither muſt this ſeeme ſtrange. For as there is a keeping of a law, and a breaking of the ſame; ſo there is a middle or meane action between them both, which is, to doe a thing a beſide the lawe, and that without ſinne.

aFacere aliquid præter legem, non contra eam.

To proceed further, mens lawes be either Ciuill or Eccleſiaſticall. Ciuill lawes are for their ſubſtance determinations of neceſſarie and profitable circumſtances, tending to vphold & maintaine the commandements of the ſecond table. More ſpecially they preſcribe what is to be done and what is to be left vndone, touching actions both ciuil and criminall, touching offices and bargaines of all ſorts, &c. yea they conclud, inioyne, and command not onely ſuch affaires as bee of ſmall importance, but alſo things and actions of great waight tending, to maintaine common peace, ciuill ſocietie, and the very ſtate of the common-wealth. Now ſuch lawes bind ſo farre forth, that albeit they be omitted without any apparant ſcandall or contempt, yet the breach of them is a ſinn before God. Take this example. A ſubiect in this land vpon pouertie, or vpon a couetous minde, againſt the good lawe of the land, coynes money, which afterward by a ſleight of his witte, is cunningly conueyed abroad into the hands of men, and is not eſpied. Here is no euident offence giuen to any man, nor open contempt ſhewed to the lawgiuer: and yet in this action he hath ſinned, in that cloſely otherwiſe then he ought to haue done, he hath hindered the good of the common-wealth, and robbed the ſouereigne Prince of her right.

Eccleſiaſticall lawes are certaine neceſſary and profitable determinatione of circumſtances of the commandements of the firſt table. I ſay here circumſtances, becauſe all doctrines pertaining to the foundation and good eſtate of the church, as alſo the whole worſhip of God, are ſet downe and commanded in the written word of God and cannot be preſcribed & concluded otherwiſe by al the Churches in the world. As for the Creedes and Confeſſions of particular Churches, they are in ſubſtance Gods Word, and they bind not in conſcience by any power the Church hath, but becauſe they are the Word of God.

The lawes then which the Church in proper ſpeech is ſaide to make, are decrees concerning outward order & comlineſſe in the adminiſtration of the word and Sacraments, in the meetings of the congregation, &c. And ſuch lawes made according to the generall rules of Gods word, (which requires that all things bee done to edification, in comlines, for the auoyding of offence) are neceſſarie to bee obſerued, and the Word of God binds all men to them ſo farre forth as the keeping of them maintaines decent order, and preuents open offence. Yet if a lawe concerning ſome external right or thing indifferent, be at ſometime or vpon ſome occaſion, omitted; no offence giuen, nor contempt ſhewed to Eccleſiaſticall authoritie there is no breach made in the conſcience and that appeares by the example before handeled. The Apoſtles guided by the holy Ghoſt, made a decree for the auoiding of offence, neceſſary to be obſerued, namely that the Gentiles ſhould abſtaine from ſtrangled and blood & idolithites, and yet Paul out of the caſe of ſcandall & contempt, permits the Corinthians to do otherwiſe, 1. Cor. 8. & 9. which he would not haue done, If to doe otherwiſe out of the caſe of ſcandall and contempt, had been ſinne.

Againe, lawes are either mixt or meerely penall. Mixt are ſuch lawes as are of waightie matters, and are propounded in commanding or forbidding termes: and they according to the good intention of the Lawgiuer, binde men firſt of all to obedience, for the neceſſary good of humane ſocieties, and ſecondly to a puniſhment, if they obey not, that a ſupply may be made of the hinderance of the commō good. In the breach of this kind of lawes, though a man be neuer ſo willing to ſuffer the puniſhment, yet that wil not diſcharg his cōſcience before God, whē he offends If a man coyn mony with this mind to be willing to dy when he is cōuicted, yet that wil not free him frō a ſin in the action, becauſe Gods law bindes vs not only to ſub-iection in bearing of punishment, but also to obedience of his bare commandement, it being lawful, though he shold set down no punishment.

A lawe meerely penall is that, which beeing made of matters of lesse importance, and not vttered precisely in commanding tearmes, doth only declare and shew what is to be done, or conditionally require this or that with respect to the punishment, on this manner. If any person doe this or that, then he shall forfeit thus or thus. This kind of lawe bindes especially to the punishment, and that is the very intent of the lawgiuer, and he that is readie in omitting the law to pay the fine or punishment, is not to be charged with sinne before god: the penaltie being answerable to the losse that comes by the neglect of the law. Here a question may be demanded: whether a man that hath taken his oath to keepe all the lawes or orders of any towne or corporation, and yet afterward omits the doing of some of them; bee periured or no. The answer may be this, that the lawes of euerie societie and corporation must bee distinguished. Some are verie waightie (as I haue said) beeing of the verie foundation & state of a bodie: so as it cannot well stād without them; and whosoeuer wittingly and willingly breaks any of these (they beeing good and lawfull,) cannot bee freed from periurie. Againe, there bee lawes of lesser importance, that tend only to maintaine decent order and comelinesse in the societies of men; & they are of that nature that the estate of the corporation or town may stand without them: and whosoeuer vpon occasion omits the doing of any of these, is not therefore periured, so be it he carrie a loyal mind and be content to pay the fine or penaltie. For such kind of orders and constitutions require first of all obedience, and if that be omitted, they require a mulct or fine: which, if it bee willingly paied, the law is satisfied.

Thus we see how farre forth mens lawes bind conscience. The vse of this point is this: first. Hence we learne that the immunitie of the Popish cleargie, whereby they take themselues exempted from ciuil courts & from ciuil authoritie in criminall causes, hath no warrant: because Gods commandements bind euerie man whatsoeuer, to bee subiect to the magistrate, Rom. 13, 1, Let euerie soule be subiect to the higher powers. II. Hence we see also what, notorious rebells those are, that beeing borne subiects of this land, yet choose rather to die then to acknowledge (as they are bounde in conscience) the Queenes Maiestie to bee supreame gouernour vnder God in all causes and ouer all persons III. Lastly wee are taught hereby to bee willing to giue subiection, obedience, reuerence, & all other duties to Magistrates, whether they bee superiour or inferiour: yea with chearefulnesse to pay taxes and subsidies, and all such lawfull charges as are appointed by them. Giue to Cæsar that which is Cesars, and to God that which is Gods. Giue to all men their duties: tribute to whome tribute: custome to whome custome, Rom. 13, 7.

Now followes the Oath, which is either assertorie, or promissorie. Assertorie, by which a man auoucheth that a thing was done or not done: Promissorie, by which a man promiseth to doe a thing or not to doe it. Of both these I meane to speake but specially of the second. And here two points must be considered, the first by what meanes an oath bindeth, the second when it bindeth. 9 Of the oath binding.

An oath bindeth by vertue of such particular cōmandements, as require keeping of oathes lawfully taken. Num. 30. 3 Whosoeuer sweareth an oath to binde his soule by a bond, hee shall not breake his worde, but shall doe according to all that proceedeth out of his mouth.

This beeing so a question may bee made, whether the oather of Infidels binde conscience, and by what vertue, considering they neither know the Scriptures nor the true God, Answ. They [a] doe bind in conscience, For example: Iacob and Laban make a couenant cōfirmed by oath, Iacob sweares by the true God, Laban by the gods of Nachor, that is, by his idols, Now Iacob, though he approoue not the forme of this oath, yet hee accepts it for a ciuill bond of the couenant: and no doubt, though Laban beleeued not Gods word reuealed to the Patriarkes, yet hee was boūd in cōscience to keep his oath euē by the law of nature: & though he knew not the true God, yet he reputed the false god of Nachor to be the true god. Gen, 31, 53. [a] Thus saith Augustine, ep. 154. ad Publicolam & Lumbard. sent. l. 3. dist 93

Againe if a lawfull oath by vertue of Gods commandements bind conscience, then it must needes bee that the Romane Church hath long erred, in that she teacheth and maintaineth that gouernours, as namely the pope & other inferiour Bishops haue power to giue relaxations and dispen- Thom. 2, 2. q. 89

diſpenſations, not onely for oathes vnlawfull (frō which the word of God doth ſufficiently free vs, though they ſhould neuer giue abſolution) but from a true and lawfull oath made wittingly and willingly without error or deceite, of a thing honeſt and poſsible; as when the Pope frees the ſubiects of this land, as occaſion is offered from their ſworne allegiance & loyaltie to which they are bound, not onely by the law of nature, but alſo by a ſolemne and particular oath to the Supremacie, which none euer deemed vnlawfull but ſuch as carrie traitours hearts. Nowe this erronious diuinitie would eaſily bee reuoked, if men did but conſider the nature of an oath, one part whereof is Inuocation, in which wee pray vnto GOD, firſt that hee would become a witneſſe vnto vs that wee ſpeake the trueth and purpoſe not to deceiue: ſecondly if wee faile and breake our promiſe, that hee would take reuenge vpon vs: and in both theſe petitions we bind our ſelues immediately to GOD himſelfe: and God againe who is the ordainer of the oath, accepts this bond and knittes it by his commaundement, till it bee accompliſhed. Hence it followes, that no creature can haue power to vntie the bonde of an oath, that is truely and lawfully an oath, vnleſſe we wil exalt the creatures aboue God himſelfe. And the Iewiſh teachers gaue better counſell when they commaunded the people to performe their oathes to the Lord, for the preuenting of periurie, and our Sauiour Christ in that gaineſaies them not. Math 5.33

Next let vs conſider the time when an oath bindeth or bindeth not.

An oath bindeth then, when it is made of things certaine and poſsible, in truth, iuſtice, iudgement, for the glorie of God and the good of our neighbour.

Queſt. I. Whether doeth an oath binde conſcience if by the keeping of it there followe loſſes and hinderances? Anſ. If it bee of a thing that is lawefull, and the damages bee priuate to him that ſweareth, then doeth it binde conſcience. For example: A man makes a purchaſe of land at the ſea ſide: his bargaine is confirmed onely by oath: and it falles out that before he do enter poſſeſsion, the ſea breakes in and drownes a part of that purchaſe. Nowe hee is in conſcience to ſtand to his bargaine, becauſe the thing is lawefull, and the damage is priuate, and great reuerence muſt bee had of the name of God, which hath been vſed in the bargaine making. Dauid makes it the propertie of a good man, to ſweare to his owne hinderance, and not to change, Pſal. 15. 4.

Queſt. II. Whether the oath which a man hath taken, being induced thereto by fraude and guile, doth binde conſcience. Anſ. If it be ſtill of a thing lawefull, and bring nothing but priuate loſſes, it is to bee kept. When the Gibeonites had by a fraud brought Ioſua to make a league with them, and to binde it with an oath; hee and the Princes of the people anſwere them thus: Wee haue ſworne vnto them by the Lorde God of Iſrael, now therefore we may not touch them, Ioſ. 9. 19. And 300. yeeres after, when Saul ſlewe certaine of the Gibeonites againſt this oath, the plague was vpon the people of Iſrael three yeares, and was not ſtayed till certaine perſons of Saules familie for a recompence were put to death. 2. Samuel. 21. 7.

Queſt. III. VVhether an oath made by feare or compulſion bind in conſcience. For example: a thiefe diſappointed of the bootie which he looked for, bindes the true man by ſolemne oath vppon paine of preſent death to fetch and deliuer vnto him ſome portion of money, as 100. or 200. crownes for the redeeming of his life. Wel, the oath is taken, and the queſtion is; whether it bind him or not to performe his promiſe. An anſwer may be this: ſome [a] Proteſtant diuines thinke it doeth binde: ſome againe thinke [b] no: but I take it the ſafeſt courſe to holde the meane betweene both, on this manner. The oath ſeemes to binde, and is to be performed: neither is it againſt the good of the common-wealth (for then it were vnlawfull) but it is rather a furtherance in that a member thereof is preſerued: and the loſſes which followe are onely priuate to the man, rather to be endured then loſſe of life. Yet that a remedie may be had of this priuate iniurie, and that a publike miſchiefe may bee preuented, the partie is to reueale the matter to the Magiſtrate, whoſe office it is to puniſh robbers and to order all things according to equity for the common good. But if the caſe fall out, that the man through exceeding feare doe further ſweare to keep ſilence, I ſee not howe his oath may bee kept, except hee be ſure that nothing will enſue thereof, but a priuate damage to himſelfe. For otherwiſe perpetuall ſilence ſeemes to be a ſecret conſenting to the robber, and an occaſion that others fall into the like danger and hazard of their liues.

[b] Calu. vpon Pſal. 15.

Againe, in fixe cases an oath bindes nothing at all. I. If it bee made of a thing that is flat against the word of God. For all the power of binding which it hath is by the word of God: and therefore when it is against Gods will, it hath no power to cõstraine. And it is an old receiued rule, that an oath must not bee a bond of iniquitie. Hereupon Dauid when hee made a rash oath to kill Nabal and all his household, reioyced when he had occasion offered by Abigail to breake the same. 1. Sam. 25. 32. And though he sware to Shemi, that he would saue his life. 2. Sam. 19. 23. yet afterward vpon better consideration (as it may seeme) hee commanded his sonne Salomon to put him to death, as one that had long agoe deserued the same. 1. King. 2. 9. And Herod was farre deceiued, that thought he was bound by his oath to giue to the damsell Iohn Baptists head in a platter, Math. 14. 7. II. If it bee against the good and wholesome lawes of any kingdome or countrey, whereof a man is a member, it binds not at all: because one the contrarie Gods commaundement bindes vs to keepe the good lawes of men. III. If it be made by such persons as want sufficient reason and discretion, as young children, fooles, mad men. For the conscience cannot indeede be bound where the vnderstanding cannot discerne what is done. IV. If it be made of such as haue no power to binde themselues, it binds not: because it is made against the law of nature, which is, that he which is not in his owne power cannot binde himselfe. hence it followes, that Papists erre grossely when they teach, that a childe may enter into any rule or order of religion, yea bind himselfe therto by oath, and the oath to bee good, flat against his parents consents. Num. 30. 4. If a woman vow vnto the Lord, and binde her selfe by a bond, beeing in her fathers house in time of her youth, &c. v. 6: If her father disallowe her the same day that hee heareth all her vowes and bonds, they shall not be of value: And an auncient Councill decreed that all children that vppon pretence of Gods worship should depart from their parents, and not doe them due reuerence should be accursed. Secondly, they erre in that they teach that the promise made priuately by a childe in way of mariage, without and against consent of wise and carefull parents, bindes them: whereas indeede if this promise were further bound by an oath, it could not stand: because children vnder gouernment and tuition of parents, cannot giue themselues. V. It bindes not if it be made of a thing that is out of a mans power, as if a man sweare to his friend to giue him another mans goods. VI. If at the first it were lawfull, and afterward by some meanes become either impossible or vnlawfull, it binds not conscience. For when it becomes impossible, then we must safely thinke that God from heauen frees a man from his oath. And when it begins to be vnlawfull, then it ceaseth to binde, because the binding vertue is onely in and from the word of God. For example: A king bindes himselfe by oath to a forraine Christian Prince to finde him men and money to defend his people against all enemies. This oath is lawfull. Wel, afterward the Prince becomes a professed enemie to him, his religion, and people: and then the kings oath becomes vnlawfull and bindes him not? because the word forbiddes there should be any league of amitie with GODS enemies: though there may be leagues of concord with them. Seeing a lawefull oath must binde conscience, though a man be deceiued and great losses followe, it shewes in how great reuerence we shoule haue Gods name, and with what care and consideration take an oath. And by this we must be aduertised to take heede of customable swearing in our common talke, whether our oathes be great or small. We must thinke of an oath as a part of Gods worship: nay, the H. Ghost often puts it for the whole worship of God. Esa. 19. 18. In that day shall fiue cities in the lande of Egypt speake the language of Canaan, and shall sweare by the Lord of Hosts, that is, acknowledge and worship him. Ier. 12. 16. If they will learne the waies of my people, to sweare by my name, The Lord liueth, then shall they be built in the midest of my people. This serues to shew vnto vs, that such as giue themselues to swearing, want religion and good conscience: and that those families in which there is rifenes of oathes, abandon all care of religion, & banish God out of their houses. And indeede it is a very hard thing for the common swearer to auoyd common periurie. If wee see a man hold vp his hand at the barre of an earthly iudge, we pittie him and are sorry for him: Oh then why doe we not pittie blasphemers and common swearers? For with God they are no better then rebels, that holde vp their handes at the bar of his iudgement seat as guiltie malefactours. Exod. 20. 7. Augustine saith well,

Qui sui iuris non est obligare alchon potest

Bellar. l. 2. de Mon cap 36.

Conc. Gang. cap 16.

Ser 30. de verbis Apost.

well; They that worship stocks and stones, come to sweare falsely by stones, and doest thou not feare God that is present, God that liueth, God that knoweth, God that taketh vengeance of contemners? but of bad matters when thou art beleeued, thou sweareste: when none requires it, thou sweareste: and when men cannot abide it, thou sweareste.

Thus much of an Oath: now followes a promise, which is either to God, or man: the first is called a vowe, the second a single promise.

§ 10. Of a vow binding.

A vowe is taken three waies. First, generally for a promise of morall obedience: and this vowe is first made in Baptisme, and continued in the Lords supper, as also in the spirituall exercises of inuocation and repentance. It is called of Peter, 1. Epist. 3. 21. the stipulation which a good conscience makes to God.

This kind of vowe bindes all and euery member of the Church of God. And the not keeping of it is the common sinne of the world: for most men make not conscience to performe that which they haue promised to God in Baptisme: and therefore their Baptisme is become vnto them the sacrifice of fooles, Eccl. 4. 17. But considering we are bound in conscience by this vowe, let vs hereafter indeauour to be as good as our word: and that shall be, when we beginne to die to our sinnes, and rise to newnesse of life: There is no man almost but will seeme to haue care to keepe touch with men; what a shame is it then for vs not to keepe couenant with God!

Againe, a vowe is taken for a promise of ceremoniall obedience, whereof reade Num. 6. and 30. and Leuit. 27. This vow is peculiar to the old testament, and did not bind all men, but onely such as had peculiar occasion to vowe, and thereupon bound themselues: as the Nazarites, and others.

Thirdly, a vowe is taken for the performance of some outward and bodily exercises taken vp of mans owne accord, as being things in a mans owne liberty, without any commaundement of God: as the keeping of set times of fast, of praying or reading, the performance of set taskes, almesgiuing, abstinence from certaine meates & drinkes, in the vse whereof through our owne weaknes, wee feare any occasion of sinne. And this kind of vow is more peculiar to the new testament.

In the making of it, that it may be warranted, foure things must be obserued: I. It must be agreeable to the word of God. II. It must not be against a mans generall, or particular calling. III. It must be in a mans power, and not against Christian liberty. IV. It must be so made and be so obserued without any opinion of merit or worship of God to this ende alone, that it may be a meanes to exercise and cherish repentance and inuocation, temperance, patience, and to shew forth thankfulnes to God.

A vowe thus made binds conscience by vertue of Gods commandement, Eccl. 5. 3. When thou hast vowed a vowe to God deferre not to pay it.

And the vowe once made continues to bind so long as the thing is in force which was the occasion of the vowe. For example: A man desirous to practise sobriety and temperancie, findes that drinking of wine is hurtfull vnto him: hereupon hee vowes to God to drink no wine: now this vowe once made, bindes him till the estate of his body alter, and he feeles no inconuenience in wine: but then it ceaseth to binde any longer.

Quest. Whether Papists are bound in conscience to keepe the vowes of single life, and voluntarie pouertie which they make, or no? Anst. No. The reasons hereof are these: I. such vowes are flat against Gods commaundement: But if they cannot abstaine, let them marrie: for it is better to marrie then to burne, 1. Corinth. 7. 9. This we warned you of, that if there were any that would not worke, they should not eate. 2. Thes. 3. 10. II. They are not in the power of him that voweth: as for example, to promise perpetuall chastitie in single life. III. They abolish Christian libertie in the vse of the creatures and ordinances of God, as riches, and marriage, meate, drinke, apparrell: making that necessarie which GOD left to our liberty. IV. They are made to this ende that men may thereby merit life eternall and worship God: whereas Paul saith, 1. Tim. 4. 8. Bodily exercise profiteth little, but godlines is profitable for al things. Therefore they are better broken then kept.

§ 11. Of a single promise binding.

As for a single promise, it also bindes a man according as he wil to whom the promise is made; though he be an[a] heretick or an infidell. As for the purpose of the minde, it bindes not, but may vpon conuenient cause be altered.

[a] Aug. ep. 205

Yet wee must remember that there are some cases, in which a promise made binds not.

not I, If it bee against Gods word. One saith well, Inuenill promises cut off thy faith. It is a wicked promise that cannot bee performed without an offence. II. If he which makes it want reason or sufficient discretion. III. If he make the promise who cannot binde himselfe: as a childe vnder the gouernment of his parents. IV. If a man be induced to make his promise by fraud, and guile. V. If the promise beeing at the first lawfull become afterward either impossible or vnlawfull.

Ifid lib. 4. 57. nonim.

And though men bee bound in conscience to keepe their promises: yet this hinders not but that there is and may bee a good and lawefull vse of Indenture and obligations. For the bond of conscience is betweene man and God: but the bond of an obligation passeth onely beetweene man and man. When Abraham bought a purchase of Ephron the Hittite, he payed his money, and made it sure before witnes. Gen. 23.17.

Here wee must consider the generall sinne of this age: which is to speake deceitfully euerie one to his neighbour. It is an hard thing to find a man that will stand to his word and lawfull promise. It is a rule of Machiauel that a man may practise many things against his faith, against charity, and humanitie, and religion: and that it is not necessarie to haue these vertues, but to counterfait and dissemble them. But let all such as feare God, make conscience of their word, becausse they are bound so to doe: and hereby they shall resemble their heauenly father who is true in all his promises; and they shall also bring forth a notable fruit of the spirit. Gal. 5.22.

Hitherto I haue spoken of the cause that maketh conscience to giue iudgement. Nowe followeth the manner of iudgement.

§. 12. How conscience giues iudgement.

Conscience giues iudgement in or by a kinde of reasoning or disputing called a practicall syllogisme. Rom. 2. 15. Their reasonings, accusing or excusing each other.

Mind tells what is law.

In the making of this reason conscience hath two assistants: minde, and memorie. The minde is the storehouse and keeper of al manner of rules and principles. It may bee compared to a booke of law, in which are set down the penall statutes of the land. The dutie of it is to preferre and present to the conscience rules of diuine law whereby it is to giue iudgement.

Memorie serues to bring to minde the particular actions which a man hath done or not done, that conscience may determine of them.

Now conscience assisted by these twain, proceedes in iudgement by a kinde of argumentation: an example whereof we may take from the conscience of a murtherer, thus:

Euerie murtherer is cursed, saith the mind:
Thou art a murtherer, saith conscience assisted by memorie:
ergo, Thou art cursed, saith conscience, & so giueth her sentence.

To proceede: Conscience giues iudgement either of thinges past or thinges to come.

§ 13. How many waies conscience giues iudgement.

Of thinges past two waies, either by accusing and condemning, or by excusing and absoluing. Rom. 2.15.

To accuse is an action of conscience giuing iudgement that this or that thing was euill done: and that still by reasoning on this manner:

Euery murther is sinne:
This thy action is murther:
ergo, This thy action is a sinne.

To condemne is another action of the conscience ioyned with the former, whereby it giueth iudgement that a man by this or that sinne hath deserued death, on this manner:

Euerie murtherer deserueth a double death:
Thou art a murtherer:
ergo, Thou hast deserued a double death.

These two actions are very forcible and terrible: for they are the compunctions and prickings that bee in the heart, Act. 2.37. they are the stripes as it were, of an yron rod, wherewith the heart of a man smiteth it selfe, 2. Sam. 24. 10. And by reason of them, conscience is compared to a worme that neuer dieth, but alwaies lies gnawing and grabbling, and pulling at the heart of man, Mark. 9. 24. and causeth more paine and anguish, then any disease in the world can doe.

The time when conscience performes these actions, is not before the sinne or in the act of sinning, but especially after the sinne is done and past. Reasons. I. Before a man sinneth, the deuill doth extenuate the fault and make sinne to bee no sinne. II. Corrupt affections doe for a time so blinde and ouercast iudgement, that it doth not see or at the least consider what is good or bad, till afterward.

Neither doth conscience accuse and condemne onely for the time present, but also long long after a thing is done. The conſcience of Ioſephs brethren accuſed them 22. years after they had ſould him into Egypt Gen. 42, 21.

The effect of the accuſing and condemning conſcience, is to ſtirre vp ſundrie paſſions and motions in the heart, but ſpecially theſe fiue.

The firſt is ſhame, which is an affection of the heart, wherby a man is grieued and diſpleaſed with himſelf, that he hath done any euill; and this ſhame ſheweth it ſelfe by the riſing of the blood from the hart to the face.

Yet we muſt here remember that euen ſuch as haue the pardon of their ſinnes, & are not guiltie, may bee aſhamed and bluſh, Rom. 6, 21. What fruite had yee in thoſe thinges, whereat now yee bluſh, or, bee aſhamed. Yet for all this, euen thoſe which are moſt guiltie, may bee without all ſhame, Ier, 6, 15 Were they aſhamed when they had committed abomination? nay, nay, they were not aſhamed, neither could they haue any ſhame: becauſe they are growne to ſome great height in ſin. Eph, 4, 18.

The ſecond paſſion is ſadnes & ſorrow: cõmonly thought to be nothing elſe but melancholie: but betweene them twaine, there is great difference. Sorrowe, that comes by melancholy, ariſeth only of that humor annoying the bodie: but this other ſorrow ariſeth of a mans ſinnes, for which his conſcience accuſeth him. Melancholie may bee cured by phyſicke: this ſorrowe cannot be cured by any thing but by the blood of Chriſt.

The thirde is feare. in cauſing whereof conſcience is verie forcible. If a man had al the delights and pleaſures that heart can with, they cannot doe him any good if conſcience be guiltie. Belſhazzar whenhe was in the middeſt of al his delightes, and ſaw the hand writing vppon the wall; his countenance changed, his thoughts troubled him, his ioynts looſed, and his knees ſmote together, Dan, 5, 9. Yea the guiltie conſcience will make a man afraid, if he ſee but a worme peepe out of the grõund: or a ſillie creature goe croſſe his way; or if hee ſee but his owne ſhadow on a ſuddaine; or if he doe but forecaſt an euil with himſelfe Prou. 28, 1, The wicked flyeth when no man purſueth him.

Terrours of conſcience, which are more vehement, cauſe other paſſiõs in the body, as exceeding heat, like that which is in the fitte of an ague, the riſing of the entrals towards the mouth; and ſouning; as experience hath often ſhewed. And the writer of the booke of wiſdome ſaith truely, cap. 17, 10. It is a feareful thing when malice is condemned by her own teſtimony, and a conſcience that is touched, doth euer forecaſt cruell things. For feare is nothing elſe, but the betraying of the ſuccours, that reaſon offereth, &c. they that did indure the a night that was intollerable, &c. ſometimes were troubled with monſtrous viſions, and ſometimes they ſwouned, as though their owne ſoules ſhould betray them: for a ſudden feare not looked for, came vpon them.

a The darknes of Egypt.

The fourth is deſperation, whereby a man through the vehement and conſtant accuſation of his conſcience comes to bee out of al hope of the pardon of his ſinnes. This made Saul, Achitophel, and Iudas, to hang themſelues; this makes many in theſe dales to doe the like; as appeareth by the declarations of ſuch as haue been preuented, when they were about to hang or drõwne themſelues, or to cut their owne throates.

The laſt is a perturbation or diſquietneſſe of the whole man: wherby al the powers and faculties of the whole man are forth of order. Eſa. 57. 20. The wicked is like the raging of the ſea that can not reſt, whoſe waters caſt vp mire and durt.

Thus much of the two firſt actions of conſcience, which are to accuſe and condemne: the ſecond followeth to excuſe & abſolue.

The excuſe, is an action of the conſciẽce giuing iudgement that the thing is well done.

To abſolue; is an action of the conſcience giuing iudgement that a man is free and cleare from fault and ſo from puniſhment.

From theſe two actions ariſe ſome ſpeciall affections: 1. boldnes and confidence. Prou. 28. 1. The righteous are bold as a lyon. 11. Ioy and reioycing, 2, Cor, 1. 12, Our reioycing is the teſtimonie of my conſcience, that in all ſimplicitie and godly purenes I haue had my converſation in the world. Hence it is ſaide, that a good conſcience is a continuall feaſt.

Hitherto I haue ſpoken how conſcience giues iudgment of things done and paſt: now followeth hir iudgement of things to be done.

Conſcience giues iudgement of things to come, by foretelling, & (as it were) ſaying inwardly in the heart, that the thing may may bee well done. Of this kind of iudgement euerie man may haue experience in himselfe, when hee is about to enterprise any businesse either good or bad.

By this we may see the goodnes of God to all men. If a man beeing to make an vnknowne iourney, should finde one that would goe with him and shewe him the way, and all the turnings thereof, he could not but take it for a point of curtesie. Well, we are pilgrims in this world, our life is our iourney: God also hath appointed our conscience to be our companion and guide, to shewvs what course we may take and what we may not.

And here it may bee noted, that in all things to be done, conscience is of great force and beares a great stroke. For this is the beginning of a good worke, that the conscience first of all giue her iudgement truly, that the thing may bee done, and is acceptable to God. Rom. 14. 23. Whatsoeuer is not of faith, that is, whatsoeuer is not don of a setled perswasion in iudgement and conscience out of Gods word, howsoeuer men iudge of it, is sinne. Againe; God regardes not the outward pompe of the action or the doer, but obedience and especially the obedience of the heart: therfore vnlesse the conscience first of all approue the thing to be good and agreeable to Gods wil, it can be nothing els but a sinne. And he that shal doe a thing, because it is good in his owne eyes, not knowing that God doth allow of it preferres himselfe before God, and disobeyes as the seruant that in his masters house will not doe his maisters will but his owne will.

From this former rule ariseth three other: the first, whatsoeuer is done with a doubting conscience is a sinne. For example: some beleeuers in the Primitiue Church held, that stil after the ascension of Christ there remained a difference betweene meate and meate, and therefore it was a scruple to them to eate of sundrie kind of meates: now put the case, that by example they are drawne on to eate swines flesh; or some other thing which they thinke is forbidden; this done there is no question but they haue sinned, as Paul prooueth: Rom. 14. 14, I knowe and am perswaded through the Lord Iesus, that there is nothing vncleane of it self: but vnto him that iudgeth any thing vncleane, it is vncleane: and, v. 23 He that doubteth, is condemned, if he eate, because he eateth not of faith.

The second, whatsoeuer thing is done in, or with an erronious conscience, it is a sinne. For example: in the primitiue Church diuers of the gentiles held this errour, that fornication wes a thing indifferent, and therefore conscience tolde them that they might doe it; and yet neuertheless fornication in them was a sinne, because conscience erred in her iudgement & euill remaines euill, though conscience say the contrarie a thousand times.

Erronious cõscience bindeth so far forth, that if a man iudge a thing to be euill, though falsly and yet afterward doe it, he hath sinned and dishonoured god as much as in him lieth.

The third, what is done against conscience though it erre and be deceiued, it is sinne in the doer. Example. An Anabaptist holding it vtterly vnlawfull to sweare, is brought before a maiestrate; and vrged either through feare or some like cause, takes an oath and that against his owne conscience: now the question is, whether hee hath sinned or no? Anſ. He hath indeed sinned; not so much because he hath taken on oath, for that is the ordinance of God; but because he hath taken an oath in a bad manner, that is against his cõscience and therefore not in faith.

Thus it is manifest that conscience beares a great stroke in all things that are to be said or done. And here by wee are aduertised of many things. First, if a thing done without good direction of conscience be a sin, then much more that which is done without good direction of Gods word, is a flat sin: for without direction of gods word, conscience can giue no good direction. And if god will hold that for a sinne which is done without direction of his word; then no doubt gods word ministers sufficient direction for all action, whatsoeuer: so as if a man bee but to receiue a morsell of bread into his mouth, it can so farre forth direct him, that in doing of it, he shal be able to please god. If this were not true, mans case were most miserable: For then wee should sinne in manifolde actions, and that without remedie. And here by the Word, I meane nothing but the Scriptures of the olde and new testament, which coutaine in themselues sufficient direction for all actions. As for the lawe of nature, thought it affoarde indeede some direction; yet it is corrupt, imperfect, vncerten: & whatsoeuer is right and good therein, is contained in the written worde of God. And as for the best vnwritten traditiõs, let all the Papists in the world answere if they can, how I may in conscience be perswaded that they are the word of god. If they say that the auncient fathers of the Primitiue Church auouch in their writings that they are Apoſtolicall traditions; I anſwer againe, howe ſhall I know and be certen in conſcience that the fathers ſubiect to errour, in ſaying ſo, haue not erred.

Againe wee learne hence, that a good intention is not ſufficient to make a good work, vnles withal conſcience giue iudgement that God doth approoue the action. This ſhewes the ignorance of our people that when as, in their dealings they runn vpon a good meaning, then alwaies they thinke they doe well and pleaſe God.

Thirdly, hence it appeares that all things deuiſed by man for the worſhip of God, are flat ſinnes; becauſe conſcience cannot ſay of them that they pleaſe God. Eſa. 29. 13. Mark. 7. 7.

Laſtly we learne here that ignorance of Gods wil and word, is a dangerous thing, and makes the life of man to abound, yea to flowe with a ſea of offences againſt God. Men commonly thinke that if they keepe themſelues from periurie, blaſphemie, murther, theft, whoredome, all is well with them: but the truth is, that ſo long as they liue in ignorance, they want right and true direction of conſcien ce out of Gods word, and therefore their beſt actions are ſinnes, euen their eating and drinking, their ſleeping and waking, their buying and ſelling, their ſpeech and ſilence, yea their praying and ſeruing of God. For they doe theſe actions either of cuſtome, or example, or neceſſity, as beaſts doe, and not of faith: becauſe they know not Gods wil touching things to be done or left vndone. The conſideration of this point ſhould make euerie man moſt carefull to ſeeke for knowledge of Gods word and daily to increaſe in it, that he may in all his affaires haue Gods lawes to be the men of his counſell, Pſal. 119. 24. that he may giue heed to them as to the light ſhining in a darke place, 2. Pet. 1. 19. that hee may ſay with Peter, when Chriſt commanded him to launch foorth into the deepe, and to caſt forth his nette: Lord wee haue beene all night, and haue catched nothing: yet in thy word will I lette downe my nette. Luk. 5. 5.

CHAP. III.

Of the kindes of conſcience: and of conſcience regenerate.

COnſcience is either good or badde. Good conſcience is that which rightly according to Gods word, excuſeth and comforteth. For the excellency, goodnes and dignitie of conſcience, ſtands not in accuſing, but in excuſing. And by doing any ſinne whatſoeuer to giue any occaſion to the conſcience to accuſe and condemne, is to wounde it and to offend it. Thus Paul ſayth that the Corinthians wounded the conſciences of their weake brethren, when they vſed their libertie as an occaſion of offence to them, 1. Cor. 8. 9. 12. Againe he calleth a good cõſcience, a conſcience without offence, that is, which hath no ſtoppe or impediment to hinder it from excuſing. Act. 24. 19.

Good conſcience, is either good by creation or regeneration.

Good by creation was the conſcience of Adam, which in the eſtate of innocencie did onely excuſe and could not accuſe him for any thing: though it may be, an aptnes to accuſe was not wanting, if afterward an occaſion ſhould be offered. And hence we haue further direction to conſider what a good conſcience is namely ſuch an one as by the order ſet downe in the creation, excuſeth onely without accuſing. Yea to accuſe is a * defect in true conſcience, following after the firſt ceation. For naturally there is no agreement and harmonie betweene the parts and the whole: but if the conſcience ſhould naturally accuſe there ſhould be a diſſent & diſagreement and diuiſion betweene the cõſcience and the man himſelfe.

* In reſpect of the excellent eſtate in which man was created.

Regenerate conſcience is that which beeing corrupt by nature, is renewed and purged by faith in the blood of Chriſt. For to the regenerating of the cõſciẽce, there is required a conuerſion or change; becauſe by nature all mens conſciences ſince the fall are euill, and none are good but by grace. The inſtrument ſeruing to make this change is faith. Act. 15. 19. Faith purifieth the hart. The meritorious cauſe is the blood of Chriſt. Hebr. 9, 14. How much more ſhall the blood of Chriſt, &c. purge your conſcience from dead workes to ſerue the liuing God.

The propertie of regenerate conſcience is twofold: Chriſtian libertie, & Certentie of ſaluatiõ. Becauſe both theſe haue their place, and not in the outward man, but in the ſpirit and conſcience.

Chriſtian libertie, is a ſpirituall and holy freedome purchaſed by Chriſt. 1 Of Chriſtian libertie.

I ſay, it is ſpirituall, firſt to put a difference betweene it and ciuill libertie, which ſtands in outward and bodilie freedomes domes and priuiledges: secondly, to confute the Iewes, that looke for earthly liberty by Christ: and the Anabaptists, who imagine a freedome, from all authoritie of Magistrates in the kingdome of Christ.

Againe, I say it is an holy freedome, to confute the Libertines, who thinke that by the death of Christ they haue libertie to liue as they list.

Lastly, I say it is purchased by Christ, to shew the authoritie therof. Gal. 5.1. Stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made you free. And to confute the Papists, whose doctrine in effect is thus much, that this libertie is procured indeede by Christ, but is continued partly by Christ, & partly by the man himselfe.

Christian libertie hath three partes.

The first is freedome from the iustification of the morall law. For hee that is a member of Christ, is not bound in conscience to bring the perfect righteousnes of the law in his owne person for his iustification before God. Gal. 5.1. with v. 3

Hence it followeth, that he that is a Christian, is likewise freed from the curse and condemnation of the law Rom. 8.1. There is no condemnation to them that are in Christ. Gal. 3.13. Christ hath redeemed vs from the curse of the law, when he was made a curse for vs.

By this first part of Christian libertie, it appeares that there cannot be any iustification of a sinner by workes of grace before God. For he that will be iustified but by one worke, is debter to the whole law, Gal. 5.3. but no man that is a member of Christ is debter to the whole law; for his liberty is to be free in that point: therefore no man is iustified so much as by one worke of his owne.

The second part, is freedome from the rigour of the law, which exacteth perfect obedience and condemneth all imperfection. Rom. 6.14. Sinne hath no more dominion ouer you: for ye are not vnder the lawe, but vnder grace. 1. Ioh. 5.3. This is the loue of God, that we keepe his commandements: and his commandements are not grieuous.

Hence it followeth, that God will accept of our imperfect obedience, if it bee sincere: yea he accepts, the will, desire, and indeauour to obey for obedience it selfe. Malach. 3.17. And I will spare them as a man spareth his owne sonne that serueth him.

The third part is, that the conscience is freed from the bond of the ceremoniall law. Gal. 3.25. But after that faith is come we are no more vnder a schoolemaster. Eph. 2.15. And hath broken the stoppe of the partition wall, in abrogating through his flesh, the law of commandements which standeth in ordinances. Colos. 2.14. And hath put out the hand-writing of ordinances which was against vs. v. 16. Let no man therefore condemne you in meate and drinke, or in respect of any holy day, or of the new moone, &c.

Hence it followeth, that all Christians may freely without scruple of conscience, vse all things indifferent, so it be the manner of vsing them be good.

And first, when I say that all may vse them, I vnderstand a twofold vse; naturall, and spirituall.

The naturall vse, is either to releeue our necessities, or for honest delight. Thus the Psalmist saith, that God giues not onely bread to strengthen the heart of man, but also wine to make glad the heart, and oyle to make the face to shine, Psal. 104.15. and God hath put into his creatures infinite varieties of colours, sauours, tasts, & forms, to this ende that men might take delight in them. Hence it followes, that Recreation is lawfull, and a part of Christian libertie, if it be well vsed. By recreation, I vnderstand exercises and sports seruing to refresh either the bodie or the minde: and that they may be well vsed, two rules especially must be remembred. The first, that lawfull recreation stands onely in the vse of things indifferent. For if the thinges bee commanded by God, there is no sporting in them; or if they be forbidden, there is no vsing of them at all. Vpon this ground, sundrie kinds of recreation are to be neglected. As I. the dauncing commonly vsed in these dayes, in which men and women, young men and maides, all mixed together, daunce to the sound of the instrument or voice in time and measure, with many wanton gestures, & that in solemne meetings after great feasts. This exercise cannot be numbred among things indifferent: for experience sheweth, that it hath beene vsually either a fruit or a follower of great wickednes, as idolatrie, fornication, drunkennesse: hereupon, one well compared it to a * circle, whose center was the diuell. Againe, if we must giue an account of euerie idle word, then also of euerie idle gesture and pace: and what account can be giuen of these paces backward and forward, of caprings, iumps, gambols, turnings, with many other frisks of lightnes and vanitie, more beseeming goates and apes,

* Tripudium est circulus cuius centrum Diabolus.

apes, of whome they are commonly vſed, then men. Whereas Salomon eſteemed laughter as madneſſe, he would (no doubt) haue condemned our common laſtiuious dauncing much more for madneſſe, laughter beeing but the leaſt part of it. II. Dicing, which is preciſely the caſting of a lotte, not to be vſed at our pleaſures, but in matters of weight and importance. And of this kinde are all games, the ground whereof are not the ſleight of mans witte, but lotte alone. III. Plaies and enterludes, that ſtand in the repreſentation of the vices and miſdemeanour of the world. For if it be not lawfull to name vices, vnleſſe it bee in the way of diſlike, Eph. 5. 3. much leſſe is it warrantable to geſture and repreſent vice in the way of recreation and delight. The ſecond rule is, that recreation muſt be ſparing, moderate, and lawfull vſe of things indifferēt, according to the rules b following.

b 3648

The ſpirituall vſe is when wee take occaſion by the creatures to meditate and ſpeake of heauenly thinges: as, vpon the ſight of the vine and the branches thereof, to conſider the miſticall coniunction betweene Chriſt and his Church: by the ſight of the rainebow to thinke of the promiſe of God of not drowning the worlde by waters: and by any thing that befalls, to take occaſion to conſider in it the wiſdome, goodnes, iuſtice, mercy, prouidence of God &c.

I adde further, that things indifferent; as bondage, outward libertie, riches, pouerty, ſingle eſtate, mariage, meate, drinke, apparell, buildings, may be vſed freely, becauſe they are neither commanded by God nor forbidden: and in themſelues conſidered, they may be vſed or not vſed without breach of conſcience.

The right manner of vſing them, is to ſanctifie them by the word and praier, 1. Tim. 4. 3. 4. and not onely ſome of them, but the vſe of them all. Meate, drinke, and marriage are thus to bee ſanctified, as the place before noted declareth. Paule ſanctified his iourney on this manner, Act. 21. 5. And the Iewes were commanded to dedicate their houſes at the firſt entrance, Deut. 20. 5. By this dedication wee may well vnderſtand not onely the letting of the houſe, or the prouiding of a tenant, but alſo the ſanctifying of it by inuocation of Gods name, that by his bleſſing the place with the roomes therof might ſerue for their benefit and comfort. And on this maner to bleſſe our dwelling places when we firſt enter into them, is the beſt way that can be to preſerue them from the caſualties of fire within, and lightening from heauen, and from the annoyance and moleſtation of euill ſpirits, and other iudgements of God.

Things indifferent are ſanctified by Gods word, becauſe it ſhewes what things we may vſe, and what things we may not: and if we may vſe them, in what manner it is to be done. And to this purpoſe the Scripture affoards foure rules.

The firſt, that all things muſt be done to Gods glorie, 1. Cor. 10. 31. Whether ye eate or drinke, or whatſoeuer ye doe, doe all to the glory of God. And that this may bee performed, thinges indifferent muſt bee vſed as ſignes and tables, in which we may ſhew forth the graces and vertues that God hath wrought in the heart. For example: we muſt ſo make our apparell both for matter and faſhion, and ſo weare it, that it may in ſome ſort ſet forth to the beholder our modeſtie, ſobrietie, frugalitie, humilitie, &c. that hereby he may be occaſioned to ſay, behold a graue, ſober, modeſt perſon: and ſo of the reſt. And the common ſinne of this time is, that meate, drinke, apparell, buildings are vſed as banners diſplaied to ſet forth to the worlde, mans riot, exceſſe and pride of heart.

The ſecond. Wee muſt ſuffer our ſelues lawfully to be limitted & reſtrained in the ouermuch or ouercommon vſe of thinges indifferent. I ſay the ouercommon vſe, becauſe it is not Gods will vtterly and abſolutely to barre vs of the vſe of ſuch things. Now the reſtrainers of our vſe, are two; the firſt is the law of charitie. For as charitie giues place to pietie, ſo Chriſtian libertie in the vſe of outward thinges, giues place to charitie. And the law of charitie is, that we ſhold not vſe things indifferent to the hurt or offence of our brother. 1. Cor. 8. 13.

Queſt. Whether may a man vſe his libertie before ſuch as are weake, and not yet perſwaded for their liberty. Anſ. Some are weake of ſimple ignorance, or becauſe they haue been deceiued by the abuſe of long cuſtome: and yet are willing to be reformed. And before ſuch wee muſt abſtaine, leaſt by example we draw them to ſinne by giuing occaſion to them of doing that whereof they doubt. Againe ſome are weake vpon affected ignorance or of malice, and in the preſence of ſuch wee neede not abstaine. Vpon this ground Paul who circumcised Timothie would not circumcise Titus.

The second restrainer, is the wholsome lawes of men, whether Ciuill or Ecclesiasticall. For howsoeuer things indifferent, after the law is once made of them, remain still indifferent in themselues: yet obedience to the law is necessarie, and that for conscience sake. Act. 15:28.

The third. We must vse things indifferent so far forth as they shall further vs in godlines. For we ought to doe all things not onlie to the edification of others, but also of our owne selues. And therefore it is a flat abuse of Christian libertie, for men so to pamper their bodies with meate & drinke, that thereby they disable themselues to heare gods word, to pray, to giue good counsell, to doe the ordinary works of their callings.

The fourth. Things indifferent must bee vsed within compasse of our callings, that is, according to our abilitie, degree, state, and condition of life. And it is a common abuse of the libertie in our daies, that the meane man will be in meate, drinke, apparrell, building as the gentleman; the gentleman as the knight; the knight as the Lord or Earle.

Now then things indifferent are sanctified to vs by the word, when our cōsciences are resolued out of the word that we may vse them, so it bee in the manner before named, and according to the rules here set downe.

They are sanctified by praier, when we craue at Gods hāds the right vse of them; and hauing obtayned the same, giue him thanks therefore. Coloss. 3.17. Whatsoeuer ye doe in word or deede, doe all in the name of our Lord Iesus giuing thankes to God the father by him.

Thus much of Christian libertie, by which we are admonished of sundrie duties: I. to labour to become good members of Christ, of what estate or condition so euer we be. The liberty of the city of Rome made not onely Romanes borne but euen the men of other countries seek to be citizens thereof. Act. 22,28. The priuiledges of the Iewes in Persia made many become Iewes. Hest. 8.17. O then, much more should the spirituall libertie of conscience purchased by the blood of Christ, mooue vs to seeke for the kingdome of heauen, & that wee might become good members thereof. II. Againe by this wee are taught to study, learne and loue the Scriptures, in which our liberties are recorded. We make account of our charters whereby we hold our earthly libertis, yea we gladly read thē and acquaint our selues with them: what a shame then will it bee for vs, to make no more account of the word of God that is the law of spiritual libertie. Iam. 2,16. III. Lastly wee are aduertised most hartilie to obey & serue God according to his word, for that is the ende of their libertie: the seruant doth all his busines more cheerefully, in the hope and expectation he hath of libertie. Againe our libertie most of all appeares in our seruice and obedience; because the seruice of God is perfect freedome: as on the contrarie in the disobedience of Gods commandements, stands our spirituall bondage.

§ 2. Of certentie of saluation.

The second propertie of conscience is an infallible certentie of the pardon of sinne and life euerlasting. That this point may be cleared, I will handle the question betweene vs and Papists touching the certentie of saluation. And that I may proceede in order, wee must distinguish the kinds of certentie First of all, Certaintie is either Vnfallible or Coniecturall. Vnfallible, wherein a man is neuer disappointed. Coniecturall, which is not so euident, because it is grounded onelie vppon likelihoodes. The second all Papists graunt, but the first they deny in the matter of saluation. Againe, certentie is either of faith, or experimentall, which Papists call morall. Certainty of faith, is wherby any thing is certenly beleeued: and it is either generall or speciall. General certaintie, is to beleeue assuredly that the worde of God is truth it selfe, and this both wee and Papists allow. Speciall certentie is by faith to aplie the promise of saluation to our selues, and to beleeue without doubt, that remission of sinnes by Christ and life euerlasting belong vnto vs. This kind of certentie wee hold and maintaine, and Papists with one consent denie it; acknowledging no assurance but by hope. Morall certentie is that which proceeds from sanctification and good workes, as signes and tokens of true faith. This wee both allow, yet with some difference. For they esteeme all certentie that comes by workes to bee vncerten and often to deceiue: but we doe otherwise, if the works be done in vpright nes of heart.

The question then is, whether a man in this life maye ordinarily without reuelation, tion, be vnfallibly certen of his owne saluation, first of all and principally by faith, and then secondly by such workes as are vnseparable cõpanions of faith. Wee hold this for a cleare and euident principle of the word of God, and contrariwise the Papists denie it wholly. I will therefore proove the truth by some few arguments, and then answer the common obiections.

Arg.1. That which the spirit of God doth first of all testifie in the heart & conscience of any man, and then afterward fully confirme, is to bee beleeued of the same man as vnfallibly certen: but the spirit of God first of all doth testifie to some men, namely true beleeuers, that they are the sonnes of God: & afterward confirmes the same vnto them. Therefore men are vnfallibly to beleeue their own adoption. Now that the spirit of God doth giue this testimonie to the conscience of man, the Scripture is more then plaine. Roma. 8, 15. Ye haue receiued the spirit of adoption whereby we crie, Abba, father. The same Spirit beareth witnesse with our spirit, that we are the sonnes of God. Answer is made, that this testimonie of the spirit is giuen only by an experiment or feeling of an inward delight or peace, which breedes in vs not an infallible but a coniecturall certentie. And I answer againe that this exposition is flat against the next. For the Spirit of adoption is said here not to make vs to thinke or speake, but to crie Abba, father: and crying to God as to a father argues courage, confidence, and boldnes. Againe the same spirit of adoption is opposed to the spirit of bondage causing feare: & therfore it must needes be a Spirit giuing assurance of libertie, and by that meanes driuing away distrustfull feares. And the ende, no doubt why the holy Ghost comes into the heart as a witnes of adoption is, that the truth in this case hidden and therefore doubtfull, might be cleared and made manifest. If god himself hath appointed that a doubtfull truth among men, shall bee confirmed and put out of doubt by the mouth of two or three witnesses, it is absurd to think that the testimonie of God himselfe knowing all things and taking vppon him to bee a witnesse, should bee coniecturall. Saint Bernard had learned better diuinitie, when he said. Who is iust, but he that being loued of God, returnes loue to him againe? which is not done but by the spirit of God a reuealing by faith vnto man the eternall purpose of God concerning his salnation in time to come: which reuelation vndoubtedly is nothing else but an infusion of spirituall grace: by which, whilest the deedes of the flesh are mortified, the man is prepared to the kingdome of GOD, receiuing withall that whereby hee may presume that he is loued and loue againe.

Bernard ep. 107.

I Marke it well.

Furthermore that the Spirit of God doth not onely perswade men of their adoption but also confirme the same vnto them, it is most manifest. Eph. 4. 30. Grieue not the Spirit whereby ye are sealed vp to the day of redemption. and 1. v. 13. After ye beleeued, ye were sealed with the spirit of promise which is the earnest of our inheritance. 2. Cor. 1 21. It is God that hath sealed vs & giuen vs the earnest of his spirit in our hearts. Here the wordes of sealing and earnest, are to be considered. For thinges that passe too and fro among men, though they be in question, yet when the seale is put too, they are made out of doubt: and therefore when God by his spirit is said to seale the promise in the heart of euery particular beleeuer, it signifieth that hee giues vnto them euident assurance that the promise of life belongs vnto them. And the giuing of earnest is an vnfallible token vnto him that receiueth it, and the bargaine is ratified, and that he shal receiue the things agreed vpon. And it were a great dishonour vnto God, to thinke that the earnest of his owne Spirit giuen vnto vs, should be an euidence of eternall life, not vnfallible but coniecturall.

Arg.2. The faith of the Elect or sauing faith it is a certen perswasion & a particular perswasion of remission of sinne and life euerlasting. Touching the first of these twaine, namely that faith is a certen perswasion, yea that certentie is of the nature of faith it appeares by expresse testimonie of Scripture. Matth. 14. 31. O thou of little faith, why hast thou doubted? and 21. v. 21. If ye haue faith, and doubted not. Iam. 1. 6. Let him aske in faith, and wauer not: for hee that waureth is like a waue of the sea, tost of wind, and carried away. Romans. 4. 20. Neither did he doubt of the promise of God through vnbeleefe, but was strengthened in faith. I will not stand lõger on this point which is not denied of any.

Touching the second part of my reasõ, that faith is a particular perswasion applying things beleeued: I prooue it thus. The propertie of faith is to receiue the promise, Gal. 3. 14. and the thing promised which is Christ with his spirit. Iohn. 1. 12. Nowe Christ is receiued by a particular application, as will appeare if wee doe but marke the ende and vse of the ministery of the word & of the Sacraments. For when God giues any blessing to man, it is to be receiued by man as God giueth it. Nowe God giues Christ or at the least offereth him not generally to mankind, but to the seuerall and particular members of the Church. In the Lords Supper, as in euery sacrament, there is a relation or analogie betweene the outward signes & the things signified. The action of the minister giuing the bread and wine to the handes of particular communicants, representeth Gods action in giuing Christ with his benefits to the same particular communicants. Againe the action of receiuing the bread and wine particularly, representeth an other spirituall action of the beleeuing heart which applieth Christ vnto it selfe for the pardon of sinne and life euerlasting. Papists yeeld not this: yet if they refuse to maintaine this analogie, they ouerturne the sacrament and dissent from antiquitie. Augustine saith The bodie of Christ is ascended into heauen: some may answer and say, How shall I hold him beeing absent? how shall I reach vp mine hand to heauen that I may lay hold of him sitting there? Send vp thy faith, and thou hast laid hold of him. And what is more common then an other saying of his: What meanest thou to prepare thy bellie and teeth, Beleeue and thou hast eaten. Againe Eph. 3. 12 Paul saith, By Christ wee haue boldnes and entrance with confidence by faith in him. In which wordes are set downe two notable effects and fruits of faith: boldnes, and confidence. Boldnes is, when a poore sinner dare come into the presence of God, not being terrified with the threatnings of the law, nor with the consideration of his owne vnworthinesse, nor with the manifold assaults of the diuell: and it is more then certentie of Gods fauour. Nowe whereas Papists answer that this libertie or boldnes in comming vnto God, proceedes of a generall faith, they are farre wide. It is not possible that a generall perswasion of the goodnes and truth of God, and of his mercie in Christ, should breed confidence and bouldnes in the heart of a guiltie sinner and no example can bee brought thereof. This general faith cõcerning the articles of our beleefe, was no doubt in Caine, Saul, Achitophell, Iudas, yea in the diuell himselfe: and yet they despaired and some of them made awaye themselues: and the diuill for all this faith trembleth before God. Wherefore that faith which is the roote of these excellent vertues of boldnes and confidence, must needes be a speciall faith, that is, a large and plentifull perswasion of the pardon of a mans owne sinnes and of life euerlasting. Againe Heb. 11. 1. faith is called hypostasis, that is, a substance or subsistence of things hoped for: where faith in the matter of our saluation and other like things, is made to goe beyond hope: for hope waites for thinges to come till they haue a beeing in the person hoping, but faith in present giues a subsisting or beeing vnto them. This can not bee that generall faith (of Papists teamed Catholicke) for it comes short of the hope, but it must needs be a speciall faith that makes vs vndoubtedly beleeue our owne election, adoption, iustification, and saluation by Christ. And to this purpose haue some of the fathers said excellent wel, Augustin saith, I demaund of thee, O sinner, doest thou beleeue Christ or no? thou saiest, I beleeue. Aug. de verb. dom. serm. 7. What beleeuest thou? that he can freely forgiue thee all thy sinnes. Then hast that which thou hast beleeued. Ambrose saith, This is a thing ordained of God, that he which beleeueth in Christ should be saued without any works, by faith alone freely receiuing remission of sinnes. And with Ambrose I ioyne the testimonie of Hesichius vppon Leuiticus, who saith God pitying mankind when he saw it disabled for the fulfilling of the workes of the law, willed that a man should be saued by grace without the workes of the law. And grace proceeding of mercie is apprehended by faith alone without workes. Whereas in the two last testimonies, faith is opposed generally to all workes, and is withall said to apprehend and receiue, yea alone to apprehend and receiue grace and remission of sinnes, they can not be vnderstood of a generall but of a speciall applying faith. Bernard hath these words. If thou beleeuest that thy sinnes can not be blotted out but by him against whome thou hast sinned, thou dost well; but goe yet further, and beleeue that hee pardoneth thy sins. This is the testimony which the holie Ghost giueth in our harts, saying, Thy sins are forgiuen thee. For so the Apostle thinketh that a man is iustified freely by faith. Papists beeing much choked with this place make answer that S. Bernard doth not say that we must beleeue the pardõ of our sins absolutely without respect of works, but that he requires the cõditiõ of our cõuersation and and repentance, as ſignes whereby this perſwaſion is wrought. I anſwer againe that hee auoucheth plainely the generall faith whereby the pointes of religion are beleeued, to bee but a beginning or rudiment of faith, and therefore not ſufficient vnleſſe wee goe further and applie the grace of God to our ſelues by faith ſimply without reſpect of any condition performed on mans part. Indeede I graunt that the truth of conuerſion and other workes are by him mentioned afterward, but that was for this ende to ſhew how any man may haue a ſenſible & euident experience by workes as fruits of the pardon of his owne ſinnes and life euerlaſting, which he beleeueth.

*Arg.*3. S. Iohn penned his firſt epiſtle that hee might ſhew vnto the Church of God a way how they might ordinarilie & fully be aſſured of the loue of God and of eternall life: and therefore hee affoardeth vs many pregnant teſtimonies for this purpoſe. 1. Ioh. 2. 3. And by this wee know that we haue known him, if we keepe his commandements. and v. 5. He which keepeth his word, in him is the loue of God truly accompliſhed: by this we know that we are in him. chap. 3, 10. By this are manifeſt the children of God and the children of the diuell. and ver. 19. by this we know that we are of the truth, and before him wee ſhall make our hearts confident. chap. 4. 13. By this we know that wee dwell in him and he in vs, becauſe he hath giuen vs of his Spirit. chap. 5. 2. By this we know that wee loue the ſonnes of God, when we loue God and keepe his commandements. ver. 13. I haue written theſe thinges vnto you which beleeue in the name of the Sonne of God, that ye may know that you haue life eternal. To theſe teſtimonies, firſt of all anſwer is made, that none of them dooe neceſſarily implie a certentie of diuine faith; becauſe we are ſaid to knowe the thinges which we learne by coniectures. Behold a ſilly and poore ſhift. Saint Iohn ſaith, ch. 1. 4. Theſe thinges we write vnto you that your ioy may be full. Now it is but an vncerten ioy that riſeth by coniecturall knowlege. Againe this knowledge brings forth confidence and boldnes euen before God. c. 3. v. 19. 21. & therefore it cannot but include an infallible certentie. And to put it out of queſtion that the knowledge here mentioned is the knowledge of diuine faith, or as infallible as it is or can bee, it is added, chap. 4. 16. And we haue knowne and beleeued the loue which God hath towards vs. Secondly it is anſwered, that al theſe ſpeeches are generall and not concerning particular men: but it is falſe: for when Saint Iohn ſaith (we know) he ſpeakes of himſelfe and includes the reſt of the Church in the ſame condition with himſelfe. Now hee himſelfe was fully aſſured of his owne ſaluation For Chriſt a little before his departure out of the world, did comfort all his diſciples partly by renewing the promiſe of life euerlaſting and of the preſence of his ſpirit vnto them; & partly by praying vnto the Father for their finall preſeruation: ſo as they could bee fully reſolued of their happie eſtate both in this life and in the life to come.

*Arg.*4. Abrahams faith was a full perſwaſion whereby hee applied the promiſe vnto himſelfe. Rom. 4. 21. And this faith of his is an example propounded vnto vs according to which wee are to beleeue: and therefore he is called the father of the faithfull v. 16. and Paul hauing ſet downe the nature and effects of this faith, ſaith, It was written not onely for him but alſo for vs which beleeue. v. 22. It it obiected that Abrahams faith was not of ſaluation, but it concerned his iſſue in his old age, as Paul ſaith. Rom. 4. 18. Abraham aboue hope beleeued that hee ſhould bee the father of many nations: according to that which was ſpoken, So ſhall thy ſeede be. Anſ. Wee muſt diſtinguiſh the obiect of faith, which is either principall or leſſe principall. Principall, is alwaies Chriſt with his benefits: leſſe principall, are other leſſe and particular benefits obtained by Chriſt. As of Abrahams faith the obiect leſſe principall was a carnall ſeede or iſſue: and the principall obiect moſt of all reſpected as the foundation of all other bleſſings, was the bleſſed ſeede Chriſt Ieſus. Galat. 3. 16. To Abraham and his ſeede were the promiſes made. He ſaith not, And to the ſeedes, as of many: but, & to thy ſeede, as of one, which is Chriſt. & v. 29 If yee be Chriſts then Abrahams ſeede. Thus it is plaine that iſſue was neither promiſed nor deſired but with reſpect to Chriſt, who could not haue deſcēded of Abrahā, if he had beene wholly without ſeede.

Hauing thus alleaged ſome arguments for the truth, I come now to conſider the obiections of the Papiſts. Obiect. I. Iob beeing a righteous man wanted certentie of grace in himſelf, Iob. 9. 20. If I would iuſtifie my ſelfe, mine owne mouth ſhal condemne me: if I would be perfect, he ſhall iudge me wicked: though I were perfect, yet my ſoule shall not know it. Again, v. 25. I, am afraid of all my works, knowing that thou wilt not iudge me innocent. Ans. Bildad in the former chapter extolled the iustice of God: and Iob in this chapter giues assēt thereto, saying. v. 2. I know verely it is so: and he likewise spends the whole chapter in magnifying the iustice of God: and hauing propounded this ende of his speech, hee doth not speake of himselfe and his owne estate simply, as it is cōsidered in it selfe: but as hee esteemed himselfe beeing compared with God especially then when he entreth into a straight examination of his creature. And so must the speech be vnderstood, If I were perfect, my soule should not know it, that is I will not acknowledge or stand vpon any righteousnesse of mine owne, when God shall enter into iudgement with me. And thus much the very elect angels beeing in possession of heauen, and therefore hauing more then assurance thereof, cannot but say, when they are compared with God. Againe, the words according to the originall, are commonly of all and so may well bee translated thus, Am I perfect? I know not my soule, I abhorre my life: that is, if I thinke my selfe perfect, I haue no respect of mine owne soule: or thus, I am perfect in respect of you and I know not my soule, and I abhorre my life, namely in respect of mine owne vprightnesse. And the other place is thus to bee translated I feare all my sorrowes, and not all my works: for this is flat against the Hebrew text, and Popish translatours themselues follow it not.

b Thus Hierome vnderstands the chapter.

Obiect. 2. Eccles. 9. Man knowes not whether he be worthie of loue or hatred. For all things are kept vncerten till the time to come. Answ. First I say, the translation is not right: the wordes are thus in the Hebrew and the Seuentie. No man knoweth loue or hatred, all things are before them. As for these wordes (all things are kept vncerten till the time to come) are thrust into the text by head and shoulders: and Hierome hath them not. Secondly I answer that the holy Ghost doth not denie simply the knowledge of Gods loue or hatred, as though there could be no certen assurance of it in this life. If we vnderstand the wordes thus then the argument of the holy Ghost must be framed on this manner: If loue or hatred were to be knowne, then it must be known by the outward blessinges of God: but it cannot be knowne by the outward blessings of God, for all things come alike to all: therefore loue and hatred cannot be knowne. The proposition is false. For loue may be knowne other waies then by outward benefits: and therefore the reason is not meete to be ascribed to the spirit of truth. Wherefore the true and proper sense of the words, is, that loue or hatred cannot bee iudged or discerned by outward blessings of God. Saint Bernard speakes of this text on this manner, that no mans knowes loue or hatred, namely by him: yet that God giues most certen testimonies thereof to men vppon earth. And serm. 5. de Dedic. his words are these: Who knowes if he bee worthie loue or hatred? who knowes the mind of the Lord? Here both faith and truth must needes helpe vs, that, that which is hidden in the heart of the father, may be reuealed vnto vs by the spirit: and his spirit giuing testimonie perswades our spirit, that we are the sonnes of God: and this perswasion is caused by his calling, and iustifying vs freely by faith. And S. Hierome (though commonly abused to the contrarie) saith no more but that men cannot know loue or hatred by the present afflictions which they suffer, because they know not whether they suffer thē for trial or punnishmēt Obiect. 3. 1. Cor. 4. I iudge not my selfe, I know nothing by my selfe. Here Paul as not beeing priuie to his owne estate, refuseth to giue any iudgement of his righteousnes Ans. It is manifest by the words of this epistle, that certain in Corinth, boldly more then wisely, censured the Apostles ministerie and withall disgraced it in respect of the ministerie of other teachers. Therefore Paul in this chapter goes about to make an Apologie for it, speaking nothing of his owne person and the estate thereof before God, but onely of his ministerie and the excellency thereof. And this is the iudgement of Theodoret, Aquinas, and Lira vpon this text. And when hee saith, I iudge not my selfe, his meaning is I take not vpon me to iudge of what value and price my ministerie is before God in respect of the ministerie of this or that man: but I leaue all to God. Here then Paul refuseth onely to giue iudgement of the excellencie of his owne ministerie, and in other causes hee refuseth not to iudge himselfe, as when hee saide, I haue fought a good fight, I haue kept the faith, henceforth is laid vp for me the crowne of righteousnesse which the Lord the righteous iudge shall giue me. 2. Tim. 4. 8. And Chrysostome on this place saith, that Paul refused to iudge himselfe not ſimply, but onely for this ende, that he might reſtraine others, & teach them modeſty. And where Paul ſaith, I know nothing by my ſelfe, the ſpeech is not generall, but muſt be vnderſtood of negligences and offences in the compaſſe of his miniſterie. For hee was priuie to himſelfe that in ſimplicitie and godly pureneſſe, hee had his conuerſation in the world, 2. Cor. 1. 12. & he knewe this by himſelfe, that nothing ſhould ſeuer him from the loue of God in Chriſt. Rom. 8. 38.

Obiect. 4. That wee may be iuſtified there is ſomewhat required in vs, namely faith and repentance: and where theſe are wanting, a man cannot be iuſtified. Nowe no man can be certaine by the certainetie of faith that he repents of his ſinnes with all his heart, & that he hath ſuch a faith, as Gods requires at our handes, conſidering there is no teſtimonie in the word, of our faith and repentance in particular. Therefore no man can be certaine by certaintie of faith, that his ſinnes are pardoned. Anſ. It is not neceſſarie that any man ſhould be certaine by faith, of his faith and repentance; becauſe faith is onely of ſuch things as are preſent, whereas faith and repentance are truely preſent in all that truelie beleeue and repent, it ſhall be ſufficient if a man may any way bee vnfallibly certaine that he hath them. And though ſome men falſely perſwade themſelues that they beleeue, yet hee that hath true faith indeede knowes that he hath true faith; euen as certainely as he that vnderſtands, that hee vnderſtands. Paul ſaith to the Corinthians proue your ſelues whether yee bee in the faith or no. 2. 13. 5. hereby giuing them to vnderſtand that all which beleeue, haue the ſpirit of diſcerning to knowe certainely that they doe beleeue. Againe, hee ſaith of himſelfe. 2. Tim. 1. 12. I knowe whome I haue beleeued. And S. Iohn ſaith, 1. epiſt. 3. 24. By this we knowe that hee dwels in vs by the ſpirit which he hath giuen vs; making no queſtion of it, but that he which hath the ſpirit knowes that he hath the ſame. And teſtimonies of men are not wanting in this caſe. Auguſt (a) Euery one ſeeth faith to be in his owne heart, if he beleeue, if not, he ſeeth it to be wāting. Againe, b A beleeuer ſeeth his own faith, by which he anſweareth that he beleeueth without doubt: & c he which loueth his brother, more knoweth the loue whereby hee loueth, then his brother whome he loueth. Againe whereas it is ſaid that hauing faith, yet we knowe not whether it be ſufficient or not I anſwer that faith beeing without hypocriſie, is ſufficient to ſaluation though it be vnperfect. God more reſpects the truth of our faith then the perfection ther-of. And as the hand of the child or of the palſie man though it bee feeble, is able to reach out it ſelfe and receiue an almes of a Prince, ſo the faith that is but weake, is able to apprehend and receiue Chriſt with all his benefits.

Obiect. 5. Pro. 28. Bleſſed is the man that feareth alwaies. Phil. 2. Worke your ſaluation with feare and trembling. Anſw. There is threefold feare, one of nature, the ſecond of grace, the third of diſtruſt. Feare of nature is that whereby the nature of man is troubled with any thing that is hurtful vnto it, and therefore auoideth it. Feare of grace is that excellent gift which is called the beginning of wiſedome, and it is a certain awe or reuerence vnto God, in whoſe preſence we doe whatſoeuer we do. Feare of diſtruſt is when men tremble at the iudgments of God for their ſinnes, becauſe they haue no hope of mercie. Of theſe three, the firſt was good by creation, and therefore it was in our Sauiour Chriſt, but ſince the fall it is defectiue. The third is a vice called ſlauiſh feare. And the ſecond is that which is commanded in theſe & the like places of ſcripture; the intent whereof is to make vs circumſpect and fearefull, leaſt we ſhould offend God by any ſinne, our owne weakneſſe conſidered, and the imminent iudgements of God. And this kind of feare, as al the firſt, may ſtand with certainty of faith. Rom. 11. Thou ſtandeſt by faith, be not high minded but feare. Pſ. 2. ſerue the Lord in feare, and reioyce & trembling.

Obiect. 6. Where there is no word, there is no faith. For faith and the word of God be relatiues. But there is no word of God that ſaith to particular men; Cornelius, or Peter, or Iohn, thy ſinnes are pardoned, excepting a fewe perſons, as Marie Magdalen, and the palſie man, &c. Therefore there is no particular faith. Anſ. Though there be no word ſet downe in ſcripture touching the ſaluation of this or that particular man, yet there is ſet downe that which is equiualent to a particular word, and as much in effect. For the promiſe of remiſſion of ſinnes and life euerlaſting, is giuen with a commandement that euerie man (a) apply the promiſe to himſelfe, as I haue before prooued: & this is altogether as much as if euerie mans particular name had beene put in the promiſe. I adde fur-further that the promiſes of the Goſpell muſt be conſidered two waies, firſt as they are generally ſet downe in Scripture without application to any perſon: ſecondly as they are taught and publiſhed in the miniſterie of the word, the ende whereof is to apply them to the perſons of men, partly by preaching and partly by adminiſtring the Sacraments of Baptiſme and the Lords Supper, which are ſeales of righteouſnes of faith. Nowe the promiſe applyed and (as I may ſay) particularized to the members of the Church, is by the vertue of Gods ordinãce as much, as if God himſelfe had giuen the promiſe particularly, and annexed mens names vnto it. It is further anſwered that the promiſe of remiſſion of ſinne, is preached not ſimply but vpon condition of mens faith & repentance, which indeed cannot be certainly known. I anſwer againe, (as I haue alreadie prooued) that he which truely beleeueth and repenteth, knoweth that he doth certainely beleeue and repent.

Obiect.7. To beleeue the pardon of a mans owne ſinnes, is none of the articles of faith, propounded in any Creed either of the Apoſtles or the Nicene fathers, or Athanaſius, or any other creed. Anſ. This faith is contained vnder theſe wordes: I beleeue remiſſion of ſinnes: and I prooue it thus. Theſe wordes are an article of Chriſtian faith, and therefore they muſt in ſenſe containe more then the diuell doeth or can beleeue; now the deuill beleeueth thus much, that God giues remiſſion of ſinnes to his Church. Chriſtian men therfore muſt goe one ſteppe further, and beleeue particularly the remiſſion of their own ſinnes. Otherwiſe if the Papiſts will haue the Catholike faith to beleeue no more in this point, then the damned ſpirits beleeue, let them take it to themſelues. But they reply further, that if there were any ſuch article of faith, then ſome perſons muſt beleeue, that they are iuſt, though they willingly commit mortal ſinn, which is an euident falſhood. Anſw. He that beleeues the pardon of his owne ſinnes by true faith, hath the ſpirit of God in him, and a conſtant purpoſe not to ſinne againſt God; and therefore if he ſinne, it is againſt his purpoſe, and without any full conſent of will: and it is not he that doth it, but the ſinne that dwelleth in him. But if it ſo fall out, that the child of God be ouertaken with any actuall ſinne, then his caſe ſtandeth thus: Hee hath by his fall wounded his conſcience, weakened his faith, bereaued himſelf of Gods fauour, as much as in him lieth; made himſelfe guiltie of a ſinne and worthie of damnation: and Gods for his part accordingly turnes the wonted ſignes of his fauor, into ſignes of anger and diſpleaſure: and though it be pardoned in the purpoſe of God, yet is it not actually pardoned, till the partie repent. Things ſtanding thus, wee teach not that men muſt beleeue the pardon of their ſinnes while they liue and lie in them; for that were flatly to teach falſhood for truth but our doctrine is, that ſuch perſons muſt firſt of all humble themſelues, and ſay with the prodigall child, that they haue ſinned againſt God, & are not worthy to bee called his children any more: and againe renue their decaied faith and repentance, that they may beleeue (as before) their perfect reconciliation with God.

Obiect.8. In reſpect of God, who is trueth it ſelfe, we are to beleeue the promiſe in particular: yet if wee reſpect our own vnworthineſſe & in diſpoſition, we are to feare and in ſome part to doubt. For the promiſe of remiſſion of ſinnes, is not abſolute, but depends vppon the condition of our workes. Therefore our certaintie is onely coniecturall. Anſw. I anſwer, firſt that in reſpect of our owne vnworthineſſe, we are not to doubt of our ſaluation, but to be out of all doubt, yea to deſpaire before the iud gemẽt ſeat of God. For they which are of the workes of the lawe, are vnder the curſe, Gal.3.10. and Paul ſaith of his owne workes of grace, In this I am not iuſtified. 1.Corin.4.4. And Dauid beeing out of all doubt of his owne deſerued damnation, in regard of his owne vnworthineſſe, ſaith freely, Enter not into iudgement with thy ſeruant, O Lord, for no fleſh ſhall be iuſtified in thy ſight. Againe the conſideration of any worthineſſe in our ſelues doth not hinder a reſolution cõcerning Gods mercie in Chriſt. For true faith makes an entrance vnto God with boldnes. (I ſay with boldneſſe) euen for thoſe perſons that are vnworthy in thẽſelues. Eph. 4,12. And Abraham (whoſe faith is to be followed of vs) did not vpon the conſideration of his olde decaied bodie, reſt himſelfe with bare hope vpon a likelihood of the accompliſhment of Gods promiſe, but he beleeued vnder hope euẽ againſt hope. Romans 4,18. Laſtly I anſwere that the ground of the former obiection is erronious, namely that the promiſe of ſaluatiõ dedependes on the condition of our works: becauſe the ſcripture ſaith, it is made and accompliſhed on mans part freely. I grant indeede that to the promiſe there is annexed a condition of faith: yet faith muſt not here be conſidered as a worke, but as an inſtrument apprehending Chriſt with his benefits: and withall, repentance with the fruits thereof, are on our part required; yet no otherwiſe, but as they are neceſſary cõſequents of faith, & the ſignes & documents thereof.

Obiect. 9. No man knowes all his ſinnes: no man therefore can certenly know that all his ſinnes are pardoned, and that hee is accepted of God. Anſ. The ground of this argument is falſe: namely that a man cannot be aſſured of the pardon of his ſinnes, if ſome of them bee vnknowne. And to make this manifeſt, I will lay down a more certen ground, which ſhall be this. As the caſe is in Repentance, ſo it is alſo in faith: but there may be true & ſufficient repentance of vnknowne ſinnes. God indeed requires a particular repentance for particular knowne ſinnes; but if they bee hidden and vnknown, hee accepts a generall repentance. An example whereof wee haue in Dauid, Who knows, ſaith hee, the errours of this life? then purge me from my ſecret ſinnes. If it were not as I haue ſaid, neither Dauid nor any man elſe could be ſaued. For when Dauid repented greatly of his murder and adulterie, yet we finde not that hee repented particularly of his polygamie: which in all likelihoode, through the ſwinge and cuſtomes of thoſe times, was not then reputed to be any ſinne; ſpecially in the perſon of a king: and yet becauſe (as wee know) hee is certenly ſaued this very ſinne is pardoned. Therefore when God pardons the knowne ſinnes of men whereof they doe in particular repent, hee doth withal pardon the reſt that are vnknowne. And by this it appeares, that the ignorance of ſome hidden ſinnes, after a man with diligence hath ſearched himſelf, cannot preiudice an vnfallible aſſurance of the pardon of them all and of his own ſaluation.

Obiect. 10. We pray for the pardon of our owne ſinnes, and therefore we are vncertaine of pardon: the man which knowes that he hath pardon needs not pray for it. I anſwer firſt, whē we are taught by Chriſt to pray for the forgiueneſſe of our debts, wee are put in minde not to ſeeke the pardon of all our ſinnes, whether paſt or preſent; but ſpecially of our preſent and daily offences, whereby wee make our ſelues day by day guiltie, till ſuch time as we humble our ſelues and repent of them. Secondly by this petition wee are taught to aske the increaſe of our aſſurance; becauſe though GOD beſtow endleſſe mercie on vs, yet we are skant in receiuing of it: our heartes being like a narrow-necked veſſell, which beeing caſt euen into the Ocean ſea, receiueth in water onely droppe by droppe.

Obiect. 11. No man can beleeue his owne ſaluation, as he beleeues the articles of faith: therefore no man can beleeue the pardon of his ſinns and his ſaluation by an infallible certentie. I anſwer, firſt that euery one that lookes for ſaluatiõ by Chriſt is bound in conſcience as certenly to beleeue his owne ſaluation and adoption by Chriſt, as he beleeues the articles of faith. Becauſe to the promiſe of life there is annexed a commandement to beleeue and applie it. Secondly this faith whereby wee are to beleeue our owne ſaluation, if wee reſpect the true & proper nature thereof is as certen as that faith whereby wee beleeue the articles of faith. Thirdly, as there be diuers ages in the life of man, ſo there bee diuers degrees and meaſures of true faith. There is firſt of all a beginning or rudiment of faith, like the ſmoking flaxe & bruiſed reede, which Chriſt will neither quench nor bruiſe. Againe there is weake faith, which beleeueth the promiſe truely, but yet it is perplexed with many doubtings. Laſtly, there is ſtrong faith, which hath ouercome all doubtings, and is not onely for nature certen (as the former is,) but alſo a large and plentifull perſwaſion of Gods mercie in Chriſt. Examples of this wee haue in Abraham, Dauid, the Martyrs and ſuch like worthie men. Now by the ſecond faith, men do as certenly beleeue their adoption as the articles, but not ſo firmely and fully. But by the laſt, remiſſion of ſinnes is not onely as certenly but alſo as fully beleeued as any article of faith.

Obiect. 12. Auncient fathers the lights of Gods Church, haue alwaies condemned this vnfallible and ſpeciall certentie of faith, which the Proteſtants hold and maintaine. Anſw. Though we builde not the doctrine of our religiõ vpon the iudgments of men yet we refuſe not in this and other points to bee tried by the fathers, whoſe writing well vnderſtood, make more more for vs, then for the Popish religion. And their testimonies cõmonly alleadged to confute the certentie of speciall faith, are much abused. I. Many of them serue to proove that a man can not iudge and discerne of euery particular motion and grace of his heart, of the increase of these graces: and the contrarie disease, of speciall vices and wants: many thereof are hidden from the vnderstanding. Theoderet in his comment. 1. Cor. 4. I will not (saith he) free my selfe from sinne, but wait the sentence of God: for it often falls out that men sinne of ignorance, and thinke that to be equall and iust which the God of all sees to be otherwise. Auguſt. de verbis dei, sermo. 23. Peradventure thou findes nothing in thy conscience: but he findes something that seeth better. And vpon Psal. 41. I know that the iustice of my God shall abide, but whether mine shall or no; I know not: for the saying of the Apostle terrifieth me, He which thinkes hee stands, latte him take heede least he fall. Here he speakes of his inward righteousnes, and that, as it is considered in it selfe without the assistance of God. For hee addes afterward, Therefore because there is no stabilitie in me for my selfe, hereupon my soule is troubled for my selfe. Chrysostom homil. 87. on Iohn. I am grieued, least paradventure supposing my selfe to loue, doe not loue as before: when I seemed constant and courragious vnto my selfe, I was found but a dastard. These and a thousand like testimonies prooue nothing. For though a man cannot fully discerne his haert either in respect of euery one of his owne sinnes, or in respect of euery grace; yet this hinders not but that he may haue an vnfallible certentie of his saluation, and also a sufficiẽt gift to discern his own faith and repentance. II. Other places must bee vnderstood of proud presumption, and of a kind of securitie, in which men dreame of ease and libertie without trouble or temptation. Auguſt. de corrept. and grat. cap. 13. Who of all the companie of the faithfull, as long as he liues in this mortall condition can presume, that he is of the number of the predestinate? And, de bona perseuer. cap. 22. No man can be seoure touching eternall life, till this life be ended. Bernard epist. 107. Hauing now receiued the knowledge of himselfe in part, he may reioyce in hope, but not in securitie as yet. Hieron. Dan. 4. Let no man boldly promise to another the pardon of sinnes. III. Some places anouch that a man cannot be sure of perseuerance to the end without falls & decaies in grace: all which we graunt. Auguſt. de ciuit. Dei. lib. 11. cap. 12. Although the Saints be certaine of the reward of their perseuerance, yet they are found to be vncertaine of the perseuerance it selfe: for what man can know that he shall perseuere in the practise and increase of righteousnes vnto the ende, except he be assured of it by some reuelation? IV. Some places must bee vnderstood of experimentall certentie, when the euent is accomplished. Hieron. booke 2. against Pelagians. Call no man blessed before his ende, for as long as we liue here wee are in the fight, and as long as we are in the fight we haue no certaine victory. V. Some places speake of the vncertaintie of other mens saluation, which we graunt. The authour of the booke de vocat. Gent. 1. classe. saith, We can pronounce of no man before his ende that he shall be in the glorie of the elect. Auguſt. lib. de perseuer. cap. 13. Men are not with any certain assseratiõ to anouch that others belong to his calling. VI. Some speake of that certaintie which comes by reuelation without the word. Greg. lib. 6. epist. 22. to Gregoria. Whereas you adde in your epistles that you will be earnest vvith mee till I vvrite, that it hath beene made knowne vnto mee that your sinnes are forgiuen: you haue required a hard and vnprofitable thing. Hard, because I am vnworthy to whome a reuelation should be made. Vnprofitable, because you must not bee made sure touching your sinnes vnlesse it bee in the last daie of your life, for then you should not be able to bewaile the same sinnes. VII. Some places denie vnto man that certẽtie which is proper to God, which is, to discerne in himselfe all thinges to come plainely, as they shall come to passe without helpe of testimonie and outward signes. Bernard. serm. 1. de Septuages. vvho can say, I am of the Elect? I am of the predestinate to life: certenly we haue none as yet, but the affiance of our hope comforteth vs. Conferre these wordes with those that follow. For this cause certaine signes and manifest tokens of saluation were giuen, that it may bee a thing out of doubt that hee is in the number of the elect in whome these signes are.

a Marke it well.

Thus I haue in some part made manifest, that an vnfallible certentie of pardon of sinne and life euerlasting is the property of euerie renued conscience. Now therefore I will proceede further to consider how this certentie is caused and imprinted in the conscience. The principall agent & beginner thereof, is the holye Ghost, inlightned lightning the mind and conſcience with ſpirituall and diuine light: and the inſtrument in this action, is the miniſterie of the Goſpel wherby the word of life is applied in the name of God to the perſon of euery hearer. And this certaintie is by little & little conceiued in a forme of reaſoning or practicall ſylogiſme framed in the minde by the holie Ghoſt, on this manner:

Euerie one that beleeues is the child of god.
But I do beleeue:
Therefore I am the child of God.

The propoſition is made by the miniſter of the word in the publike congregation: and is nothing elſe but the promiſe of eternall life applied to the particular hearers. The ſecond part or the aſſumption is the voice of conſcience regenerate or the voice of Gods ſpirit in the ſame Now Papiſts write and auouch that the aſſumption is falſe: but the reaſons which they vſe to prooue the ſame, are of ſmall moment. Firſt they alleage, that many are deceiued in their perſwaſions, thinking they haue that which they haue not: I anſwere againe that many dooe falſely preſume of Gods mercie, and imagine they haue that faith which they haue not: and in all ſuch the aſſumption is falſe: yet in all them that are choſen to ſaluation and truly called, it is vnfallibly true. For ſuch as haue receiued the gift of true faith, haue alſo another gift of diſcerning whereby they ſee and know their own faith. It is further obiected that Ieremie ſaith. 17.9. The heart is deceitfull and wicked aboue all things, who can knowe it? But the intent of this place is onely to ſhewe, that no man can ſearch his heart to the very bottom, to ſee all and euerie want, infirmitie, and wicked inclination that is therein. For originall ſinne wherewith the heart of man is tainted, is a proneneſſe or diſpoſition to all the ſinnes that are or may be. And though men cannot diſcerne all their ſinnes, yet many of them are certainly knowne: why maye not then many of the graces of God be certainelie known, eſpecially thoſe which bee of the principall, as faith, ſanctification, repentance. Againe it is alleaged, that Peter beleeued that hee was able to lay downe his life for Chriſts ſake, and yet indeede was not the euent declared, for when the time came hee denied Chriſt. Anſw. Peter at that time was but weake in faith, and he was much carried away with a confidence of his owne ſtrength, which made him ſpeake thoſe wordes of preſumption: and though hee failed in this one particular action, yet failed he not in the principall, that is in the perſwaſion of the pardon of his owne ſins and of life euerlaſting. In a word, it is certaine that many perſwade themſelues of Gods mercie, and yet are deceiued: neuertheleſſe all ſuch as doe truly beleeue are not deceiued. The holy Ghoſt maketh them to ſee that in themſelues which by nature they cannot diſcern, that Paul ſignified, when he ſaid, I ſpeake the truth, I lie not, my conſcience bearing mee witneſſe by the holie Ghoſt. Rom. 9.1.

Againe the ſame teſtimonie is giuen otherwiſe thus:

Euerie child of God hath the pardon of his ſinnes, ſaith Gods word:
But I am Gods child and therefore haue the pardon of my ſinnes, ſaith the renued conſcience, by the direction of gods ſpirit, Rom. 8.16, Gal. 4.6.

After that this teſtimonye is once begunne, it is confirmed by the ſame means, as alſo by praier and the Sacraments. But it may be demaunded, howe a bodily element, as bread, wine, water, ſhould be able to confirme a perſwaſion of our adoption that is in the conſcience. Anſ. The element in the ſacrament is an outward ſeale or inſtrument to confirme faith, not as a medicine reſtores and confirmes health, whether we thinke on it or not, whether wee ſleepe or wake, and that by his owne inherent vertue: but by reaſoning in a ſylloglſme made by the good conſcience: that medium thereof beeing the outward ſigne in the Sacrament. By meanes of which ſyllogiſme the holie Ghoſt mooues and ſtirs the minde, yea cheriſheth and increaſeth faith on this manner: A reaſon.

He which vſeth the elements aright ſhall receiue the promiſes:
But I doe, or haue vſed the elements aright.
Therefore I ſhall receiue the promiſes.

Whereas preſumption and the illuſion of Satan vſe as well to tell a man that he is the child of God, as the true teſtimonie of regenerate conſcience, the way to put difference betweene them in this. I. Preſumption is naturall and from the verie wombe, but this teſtimonie of conſcience is ſupernaturall. II. Preſumption is in them that make no account of the ordinarie meanes of ſaluation. This teſtimonie comes by the reuerent & careful hearing of gods word. III. Preſumption is in them that vſe not to call on the name of God: but this teſtimonie monie of conſcience is ioyned with the ſpirit of adoption which is the ſpirit of praier. IV. Preſumption is ioyned with looſeneſſe of life, this teſtimonie brings with it alwaies an happie change and alteration. For he which hath a good conſcience hath alſo care to keepe good conſcience in all thinges. V. Preſumption is peremptorie without doubting: whereas the teſtimonie of conſcience is mingled with manifold doubtings, Mark. 9. 24. Luk. 17 5. yea otherwhiles ouercharged with thē, Pſal. 77. 7. 8. VI. Preſumption will giue a man the ſlippe in the time of ſickeneſſe, & in the houre of death; and the teſtimonie of good conſcience ſtickes by him to the ende and euen makes him ſay, Lord remember now howe I haue walked before thee in trueth, and haue done that which is acceptable in thy ſight. Iſa. 38, 2.

§. 3. Of the duties of regenerate conſcience.

The duties of conſcience regenerate are two; in ſpeciall manner to giue teſtimony, and to excuſe.

The ſpeciall thing of which conſcience giues teſtimony is that we are the children of God predeſtinate to life euerlaſting. And that appears by theſe reaſons. I. Rom. 8. 16. The ſpirit of God witneſſeth togither with our ſpirit that wee are the ſonnes of God. Now the ſpirit of man here mentioned is the mind or conſcience renewed and ſanctified. To this purpoſe ſaith Iohn, He that beleeueth hath a witneſſe in himſelfe, 1. Ioh. 5. 10. II. That which Gods ſpirit doth teſtifie to the conſcience, the conſcience can againe teſtifie to vs: but Gods ſpirit doth teſtifie to the conſcience of a man regenerate that he is the child of god, 1. Cor. 1. 12. Therefore the conſcience alſo doth the ſame. III. Hee that is iuſtified hath peace of conſcience. Rom. 5. 1. Nowe there can be no peace in conſcience till cō-ſcience tell the man which is iuſtified that he is indeed iuſtified. IV. That which the conſcience may know certenly, it may teſtifie; but conſcience may know certainlie without reuelation, the mans election, and adoption as I haue before prooued: therefore it is able to giue teſtimony of theſe.

Againe the regenerate conſcience giueth teſtimonie of a certaine kind of righteouſneſſe, beeing an vnſeperable companion thereof; and for this cauſe, it is called of ſome the righteouſneſſe of a good conſcience. Now the righteouſneſſe is nothing elſe, but an vnfained, earneſt, and conſtant purpoſe with indeauour anſwereable thereto not to ſin in any thing, but in al thinges whatſoeuer to pleaſe God and do his will. Heb. 13. 18. Pray for vs, for we are aſſured that we haue good conſcience in all things deſiring to liue honeſtly. 2. Cor. 1. 12. Our reioycing is this the teſtimony of our conſcience, that in ſimplicity and godly pureneſſe, and not in fleſhly wiſdome we haue had our conuerſation in this world. 1. Cor. 4. 4. I know nothing by my ſelfe. Eſa. 38. 2. Lord remember nowe how I haue walked before thee with an vpright heart, and haue done that which is acceptable in thy ſight.

I adde this clauſe, in all things, becauſe that obedience which is the ſigne or fruite of good conſcience, of which alſo it giues teſtimony, is general, ſhewing it ſelfe in all and euerie commandement of God. Philoſophers haue ſaid that iuſtice is vniuerſall, becauſe hee which hath it hath all vertues. But it is more trulie ſaid of this Chriſtian righteouſneſſe or new obedience, that it is vniuerſall, and that he which can perform true obedience in one commandement cā doe the ſame in all. Act. 23. 1. Men & brethren I haue in all good conſcience ſerued God till this day. Pſal. 119. 6. Then ſhall I not be confounded when I ſhall haue reſpect to all thy commandements. Act. 24. 16. In the meane ſeaſon I endeauour my ſelfe, or, take paines to haue a conſcience without offence towards God, and towards men.

This ſhewes that there is a great number of men profeſſing the Goſpell that want good conſcience. For though they ſhewe themſelues very forward and willing to obey God in many things, yet in ſome one thing or other, they vſe to follow the ſwing of their owne wills. Many are diligent to frequent the place of Gods worſhip, to heare the word preached with liking, to receiue the Sacraments at times appointed, and to approoue of any good thing: all this is very commendable; yet theſe men often, when they depart home from the cōgregation, ſay in effect on this manner; Religion ſtaie thou heare at the Church doore till the next Sabbath. For if we looke into their priuate cōuerſations, the gouerment of their families, or their dealings in their particular callings, wee ſhall with griefe ſee much diſorder and little conſcience. It is a common practiſe with ſicke men when they make their wils on their death beds, in the very firſt place to commend their bodies to the graue, & their ſoules to god that gaue them in hope of a better reſurrection: and all this is well done; but afterward they bequeath their goods goods gotten by fraud, oppreſsion, and forged cauillation to their owne friendes and children, without making any recompence or ſatisfaction. But, alas, this ſhould not be ſo: for obedience that goes with good conſcience muſt be performed to all Gods commandements without exception: and if it be done but to ſome alone, it is but counterfeit obedience: and hee that is guiltie in one is guiltie in all.

As a regenerate conſcience giues teſtimonie of our newe obedience; ſo it doeth alſo by certaine ſweete motions ſtirre men forwarde to performe the ſame Pſal. 16. 7. My reines (that is, the mind & conſcience inlightned by the ſpirit of God) teach mee in the night ſeaſon. Eſai. 30. 22. And thine eares ſhall heare a worde behinde thee, ſaynge, This is the waie walke ye in it, when thou turneſt to the right hand and when thou turneſt to the left. Now this word is not onely the voice of Paſtours and teachers in the open miniſterie, but alſo the voice of a renewed conſcience inwardly by many ſecret cogitations ſtubbing them that are about to ſinne. A Chriſtian man is not onely a Prieſt and a prophet, but alſo a ſpirituall king, euen in this life: and the Lorde in mercie hath vouchſafed him this honour, that his conſcience renewed within him ſhall bee his ſolliciter to put him in minde of all his affaires and duties which he is to performe to God: yea it is the controller to ſee all thinges kept in order in the heart, which is the temple and habitation of the holy Ghoſt.

The ſeconde office of conſcience regenerate is to excuſe, that is, to cleare and defend a man euen before God againſt all his enemies both bodily and ghoſtly. Pſal. 7. 8. Iudge thou mee, O Lord, according to my righteouſneſſe, and according to mine innocencie in me. Againe, 26. 1. 2. Iudge me, O Lord, for I haue walked in mine innocencie, &c. Proue me, O Lord, and trie me: examine my reynes and my heart. That the conſcience can doe this, it ſpecially appeares in the conflict & combate made by it againſt the deuill, on this manner.

The deuill beginnes and diſputes thus. Thou, O wretched man, art a moſt grieuous ſinner: therefore thou art but a damned wretch. The conſcience anſwereth & ſaith, I know that Chriſt hath made a ſatisfaction for my ſinnes, and freed mee from damnation. The deuil replyeth againe thus; Though Chriſt hath freed thee from death by his death; yet thou art quite barred from Heauen, becauſe thou neuer diddeſt fulfill the lawe. The conſcience anſwereth, I knowe that Chriſt is my righteouſneſſe and hath fulfilled the lawe for mee. Thirdly, the deuill replies and ſaith, Chriſts benefits belong not to thee, thou art but an hypocrite and wanteſt faith. Nowe when a man is driuen to this ſtraight, it is neither wit, nor learning, nor fauour, nor honour, that can repulſe this temptation; but onely the poore conſcience directed and ſanctified by the ſpirit of God which boldly and conſtantly anſwereth, I knowe that I beleeue.

And though it bee the office of the conſcience after it is renued principally to excuſe, yet doth it alſo in part accuſe. When Dauid had numbred the people his heart ſmote him. 2. Sam. 24. 10. Iob ſaith in his affliction that God did write bitter thinges againſt him, and made him poſſeſſe the ſinnes of his youth. Iob. 13. 26. The reaſon hereof is, becauſe the whole man and the verie conſcience is onely in part regenerate, and therefore in ſome part remaines ſtill corrupt.

Neither muſt it ſeeme ſtrange that one & the ſame conſcience ſhould both accuſe and excuſe, becauſe it doth it not in one and the ſame reſpect. It excuſeth, in that it aſſureth a man that his perſon ſtands righteous before God, and that hee hath an indeauour in the generall courſe of his life to pleaſe God: it accuſeth him for his particular ſlippes, and for the wants that be in his good actions.

If any ſhall demaund why GOD doth not perfectly regenerate the conſcience & cauſe it onely to excuſe, the anſwere is this. God doth it for the preuenting of great miſchiefes. When the Iſraelites came into the land of Canaan, the Cananites were not at the firſt wholly diſplaced. Why? Moſes rendreth the reaſon; leaſt wilde beaſts come and inhabit ſome partes of the land that were diſpeopled, and more annoy them then the Cananites. In like manner God renues the conſcience, but ſo as it ſhal ſhl accuſe when occaſion ſerueth; for the preuenting of many daungerous ſinnes which like wild beaſts would make hauocke of the ſoule. Exod. 23. 29

Thus much of good conſcience: nowe followes euill conſcience: and that is ſo called partly becauſe it is defiled and corrupted by originall ſinne, and partly becauſe it is euill, that is, troubleſome and painefull in our ſenſe and feeling: as al ſor- 4. Of euill conſcience.

rowes, calamities, and miſeries are, which for this verie cauſe alſo are called euils. And though conſcience bee thus tearmed euill, yet hath it ſome reſpects of generall goodneſſe, in as much as it is an inſtrument of the execution of diuine iuſtice: becauſe it ſerues to accuſe them before God, which are iuſtly to be accuſed.

It hath ſpreade it ſelfe ouer mankinde as generally as originall ſinne: and therefore it is to bee found in all men that come of Adam by ordinarie generation. The propertie of it is, with all the power it hath, to accuſe and condemne; and therby to make a man afraid of the preſence of God, and to cauſe him to flie from God as from an enemie. This the Lord ſignified when he ſaid to Adam, Adam where art thou? When Peter ſaw ſome little glimbering of the power and Maieſtie of GOD in the great draught of fiſh, hee felle on his knees and ſaid to Chriſt, Lord, goe from mee for I am a ſinnefull man. Luk.5.8.

Euill conſcience is either dead or ſtirring. Dead cõſcience is that, which though it can doe nothing but accuſe, yet commonly it lies quiet, accuſing little or nothing at all. Dead conſcience.

The cauſes why conſcience lyeth dead in all men, either more or leſſe, are many. I. Defect of reaſon or vnderſtanding in craſed braines. II. Violence and ſtrength of affections, which as a cloud doe ouercaſt the minde, and as a gulfe of water ſwallow vp the iudgement and reaſon: and thereby hinder the conſcience from accuſing; for when reaſon cannot doe his part, then conſcience doth nothing. For example: ſome one in his rage behaues himſelfe like a madde man, and willingly commits any miſchiefe without any controlment of conſcience: but when choller is downe, he beginnes to bee aſhamed and troubled in himſelfe, not alwaies by grace, but euen by the force of his naturall conſcience, which when affection is calmed begins to ſtirre, as appeareth in the example of Cain. III. Ignorance of Gods will and errours in iudgement cauſe the conſcience to be quiet, when it ought to accuſe. This wee finde by experience in the deaths of obſtinate heretikes, which ſuffer for their damnable opinions without checke of conſcience.

Deade conſcience hath two degrees. The firſt is the ſlumbering or the benummed conſcience; the ſeconde is the ſeared conſcience.

The benummed conſcience is that which doeth not accuſe a man for any ſinne, vnleſſe it be grieuous or capitall; and not alwaies for that, but only in the time of ſome grieuous ſickeneſſe or calamitie. Ioſephs brethren were not much troubled in conſcience for their villanie in ſelling their brother, till afterward when they were afflicted with famine and diſtreſſed in Egypt. Gen.42.2. This is the conſcience that commonly raignes in the hearts of drouſie Proteſtants, of all carnall and lukewarme goſpellers, and of ſuch as are commonly tearmed ciuill honeſt men, whoſe apparant integritie will not free them from guiltie conſciences. Conſcien benum

Such a conſcience is to be taken heede of, of vs as being moſt daungerous. It is like a wild beaſt, which ſo long as he lies a ſleepe ſeemes verie tame and gentle, and hurts no man: but when hee is rouſed, he then awakes and flies into a mans face, and offers to pull out his throat. And ſo it is the maner of a dead conſcience, to lie ſtill and quiet euen through the courſe of a mans life: and hereuppon a man would thinke (as moſt doe) that it were a good conſcience indeed: but when ſickeneſſe or death approcheth, it beeing awaked by the hand of God, beginnes to ſtand vp on his legs, and ſhewes his fierce eies, and offers to rend out euen the verie throat of the ſoule. And heathen Poets knowing this right well, haue compared euill conſcience to Furies purſuing men with fire-brandes.

The ſeared conſcience is that which doth not accuſe for any ſinne; no not for great ſinnes. It is compared by Paul. 1. Tim.4.2 to the part of a mans bodie which is not onely bereft of ſenſe, life, and motion by the gangrene, but alſo is burnt with a ſearing yron: and therefore muſt needes bee vtterly paſt all feeling. Seared conſcience.

This kind of conſcience is not in all men, but in ſuch perſons as are become obſtinate heretickes and notorious malefactours. And it is not in them by nature, but by an increaſe of the corruption of nature; and that by certaine ſteppes and degrees. For naturally euerie man hath in him blindneſſe of minde, and obſtinacie or frowardnes of heart, yet ſo, as with the blindneſſe and ignorance of minde, are ioyned ſome remnantes of the light of nature, ſhewing vs what is good and euill. Now the heart of man being exceedingly obſtinate & peruerſe, carrieth him to commit ſinnes euen againſt the light of nature and common conſcience: by practiſe of ſuch ſinnes the light of nature is extinguiſhed: and then commeth the reprobate minde, which iudgeth euill good, and good euill: after this followes the ſeared conſcience, in which there is no feeling or remorſe: and after this comes an exceeding greedines to all manner of ſinne. Epheſ. 4. 18. Rom. 1. 28.

Here it may be demanded, how mens conſciences ſhall accuſe them in the day of iudgement, if they be thus benummed and ſeared in this life. Anſ. It is ſaid, Rev. 20. 12. that at the laſt iudgement all ſhall be brought before Chriſt, and that the bookes then ſhall be opened: among theſe bookes no doubt, conſcience is one. Wherefore though a dead conſcience in this life be as a cloſed or ſealed booke (becauſe it doth either little or nothing accuſe,) yet after this life, it ſhall be as a booke laid open: becauſe God ſhall inlighten it, and ſo ſtirre it vp by his mightie power, that it ſhall be able to reueale & diſcouer all the ſinns that a man euer commited.

Stirring conſcience, is that which doth ſenſibly either accuſe or excuſe. And it hath foure differences.

The firſt which accuſeth a man for doing euill. This muſt needs be an euill cõſcience. Becauſe to accuſe is not a propertie that belonges to it by creation, but a defect that followeth after the fall. And if the conſcience which truly accuſeth a man for his ſins, were a good cõſcience, then the worſt man that is, might haue a good cõſcience; which cannot be.

When the accuſation of the conſcience is more forcible and violent, it is called a wounded or troubled conſcience: which though of it ſelfe it be not good nor any grace of God; yet by the goodneſſe of God it ſerueth often to be an occaſion or preparation to grace; as a needle, that drawes the thread into the cloath, is ſome meanes whereby the cloath is ſewed togither.

The ſecond, is that which accuſeth for doing well. And it is to be found in them that are giuen to idolatrie and ſuperſtition. As in the Church of Rome: in which, becauſe mens conſciences are inſnared and intangled with humane traditions, many are troubled for doing that which is good in it ſelfe, or at the leaſt a thing indifferent. As for example: let a prieſt omit to ſay maſſe and to ſay his canonicall houres, his cõſcience will accuſe him therfore: though the omitting of the cononical houres & of the idolatrious maſſe, be indeede by Gods word no ſinne.

The third, is the conſcience which excuſeth for doing that which is euill. This alſo is to be found in them that are giuen to idolatrie and ſuperſtition. And there is a particular example hereof. Ioh. 19. 2. Yea the time ſhall come that whoſoeuer killeth you, will thinke that he doth God good ſervice. Such is the conſcience of Popiſh traytours in theſe daies, that are neuer touched at all, though they intend and enterpriſe horrible villanies, and be put to death therefore.

The fourth is that which excuſeth for well doing at ſome times, and in ſome particular actions of carnall men. When Abimelech had taken Sarai from Abraham, God ſaid vnto him in a dreame, I know that thou diddeſt this with an vpright minde, Gen. 20. 6. This may be tearmed [a] good coſcience, but is indeede otherwiſe. For though it doe truly excuſe in one particular action, yet becauſe the man in whome it is, may be vnregenerate and as yet out of Chriſt, & becauſe it doth accuſe in many other matters: therefore it is no good cõſcience. If all the vertues of natural men are indeede but certaine [b] beautifull ſinnes, and their righteouſnes but a carnall righteouſnes; then the conſcience alſo of a carnall man, though it excuſe him for well doing, is but a carnall conſcience.

CHAP. IIII.

Mans dutie touching conſcience.

MAns dutie concerning conſciene is two-fold. The firſt is, if he want good conſciẽce aboue all things to labour to obtaine it: for it is not giuen by nature to anie man, but comes by grace.

[1] Mans firſt dutie to get good conſcience.

For the obtaining of good conſcience, three things muſt be procured; a preparation to good conſcience, the appliyng of the remedie, the reformation of conſcience.

In the preparation, foure things are required. The firſt is, the knowledge of the law, and the particular commandements thereof, whereby wee are taught what is good, what is badde; what may be done, and what may not be done.

The men of our daies, that they may haue the right knowledge of the lawe, muſt lay aſide manie erronious and fooliſh opinions, which they hold flat againſt the true meaning of the law of god: otherwiſe wiſe they can neuer be able to diſcerne betweene ſinne and no ſinne. Their ſpeciall and common opinions are theſe: I. That they can loue God with all their hearts, and their neighbours as themſelues; that they feare God aboue all, and truſt in him alone; and that they euer did ſo. II. That to rehearſe the Lords praier, the beleefe, and tenne commandements, (without vnderſtanding of the wordes, and without affection) is the true and whole worſhip of God. III. That a man may ſeeke to wizzards and ſoothſaiers without offence, becauſe God hath prouided a ſalue for euery ſore. IV. That to ſweare by good things and in the way of truth, is not a ſinne. V. That a man going about his ordinarie affaires at home or abroad on the Sabbath day, may as well ſerue God as they which heare all the ſermons in the world. VI. That religion and the practiſe thereof, is nothing but an affected preciſenes: that couetouſnes the roote of euill, is nothing but wordlines: that pride is nothing but a care of honeſtie and cleanlines: that ſingle fornication is nothing but the tricke of youth: that ſwearing and blaſpheming argue the courageous minde of a braue gentleman. VII. That a man may doe with his owne what he will, and make as much of it as he can; Hence ariſe all the frauds and bad practiſes in traffick betweene man and man.

The ſecond thing required, is the knowledge of the iudiciall ſentence of the lawe, which reſolutely pronounceth that a curſe is due to man for euery ſinne, Galat. 3. 10. Very fewe are reſolued of the truth of this point, and very fewe doe vnfainedly beleeue it, becauſe mens mindes are poſſeſſed with a contrarie opinion, that though they ſinne againſt God, yet they ſhall eſcape death and damnation. Dauid ſaith, The wicked man (that is, euery man naturally) bleſſeth himſelfe, Pſal. 10. 3. and he maketh a league with hell and death. Eſay 28. 15. This appeareth alſo by experience. Let the miniſters of the Goſpell reproue ſinne, and denounce Gods iudgements againſt it, according to the rule of Gods word, yet men will not feare: ſtones will almoſt as ſoone moue in the walls, and the pillers of our Churches, as the flintie heartes of men. And the reaſon hereof is, becauſe their mindes are foreſtalled with this abſurd conceit, that they are not in danger of the wrath of god, though they offend. And the opinion of our common people is hereunto anſwerable, who thinke that if they haue a good meaning, and doe no man any hurt, God will haue the excuſed both in this life & in the day of iudgement.

The third, is a iuſt and ſerious examinatiõ of the cõſciẽce by the law, that we may ſee what is our eſtate before God. And this is a dutie vpon which the Prophets ſtand very much. Lam. 3. 40. Man ſuffereth for his ſinne: let vs ſearch and trie our hearts, and turne againe to the Lord. Zeph. 2. 1. Fanne your ſelues, fanne you, O nation, not worthie to be beloued. In making examination we muſt ſpecially take notice of that which doth now lie or may hereafter lie vpon the conſcience. And after due examination hath beene made, a man comes to a knowledge of his ſinnes in particular, and of his wretched and miſerable eſtate. When one enters into his houſe at midnight, he findes or ſees nothing out of order: but let him come in the day time when the ſunne ſhineth, and he ſhall then eſpie many faults in the houſe, and the very motes that flie vp and downe: ſo let a man ſearch his heart in the ignorance and blindneſſe of his minde, he wil ſtraightway thinke al is well: but let him once begin to ſearch himſelfe with the light and lanterne of the law, and he ſhall finde many foule corners in his heart, & heapes of ſinnes in his life.

The fourth, is a ſorrow in reſpect of the puniſhment of ſinne, ariſing of the three former actions. And though this ſorrow be no grace, for it befals as well the wicked as the godly: yet may it be an occaſion of grace, becauſe by the apprehenſion of Gods anger, we come to the apprehenſion of his mercie. And it is better that conſcience ſhould grieue and wound vs and doe his worſt againſt vs in this life, while remedie may be had, then after this life, when remedie is paſt.

Thus much of preparation: nowe followes the remedie, and the application of it. The remedie is nothing elſe but the blood or merits of Chriſt, who ſpecially in conſcience felt the wrath of God, as when he ſaid, My ſoule is heauie vnto death: and his agonie was not ſo much paine and torment in bodie, as the apprehenſion of the feare and anger of God in conſcience: and when the holy Ghoſt ſaith, That he offered vnto God praiers with ſtrong cries and was heard from feare, he directly notes the diſtreſſe and anguiſh of his moſt holy conſcience for our ſinnes. And as the blood of Chriſt is an all-ſufficient remedie, ſo is it alſo the alone remedie of all ſores and woundes of conſcience. For nothing can ſtanch or ſtay the terrours of conſcience, but the blood of the immaculate lambe of God: nothing can ſatisfie the iudgement of the conſcience, much leſſe the moſt ſeuere iudgement of God, but the onely ſatisfaction of Chriſt. In the application of the remedie, two things are required: the Goſpell preached, and faith; the Goſpel is the hand of God, that offereth grace to vs; and faith is our hand whereby wee receiue it.

That wee indeede by faith may receiue Chriſt with all his benefits, wee muſt put in practiſe 2. leſſons. The firſt is, vnfainedly to humble our ſelues before god for all our wants, breaches, and woundes in conſcience: which, beeing vnto vs a Paradiſe of God, by our default wee haue made as it were a little hell within vs. This humiliation is the beginning of all grace and religion: pride and good conſcience can neuer goe together. And ſuch as haue knowledge in religion and many other good giftes without humiliation, are but vnbrideled, vnmortified, and vnreformed perſons. This humiliation containes in it two duties, the firſt is confeſſion of our ſinnes, eſpecially of thoſe that lie vpon our conſciences: wherewith muſt be ioyned the accuſing and condemning of our ſelues: for wee put conſcience out of office, and diſpatch that labour before our God in this life, which conſcience would performe to our eternall damnation after this life. The ſecond dutie is Deprecation, which is a kind of praier made with grones and deſires of heart, in which wee intreat for nothing but for pardon of our ſinnes, & that for Chriſts ſake, till ſuch time as the conſcience be pacified.

To this humiliation ſtanding on theſe two parts, excellent promiſes of grace and life euerlaſting are made. Prou. 28.13. Hee that hideth his ſinnes, ſhall not proſper: but hee that confeſſeth and forſaketh them ſhall finde mercie. 1. Ioh. 1. 6. If wee acknowledge our ſinnes, hee is faithfull and iuſt to forgiue vs our ſinnes, and to cleanſe vs from all vnrighteouſneſſe. Luke. 1. 35. Hee hath filled the hungrie with good things, and ſent the rich emptie away. VVhich are alſo verified by experience in ſundrie examples. 2. Sam. 12. 13. Dauid ſaide to Nathan, I haue ſinned againſt the Lord. And Nathan ſaide to Dauid, The Lord alſo hath put away thy ſinne. 2. Chro. 33. 13. When Manaſſes was in tribulation, hee praied to the Lord his God, and humbled himſelfe greatlie before the God of his fathers; and praied vnto him: and God heard his praier. Luke. 23. 43. And the thiefe ſaide to Ieſus, Lorde remember mee when thou commeſt to thy kingdome. Then Ieſus ſaide vnto him. Verilie I ſaie vnto thee, to day ſhalt thou bee with mee in paradiſe. By theſe and many other places it appeares, that when a man doeth truely humble himſelfe before God, hee is at that inſtant reconciled to God, and hath the pardon of his ſinnes in heauen: & ſhal afterward haue the aſſurance thereof in his owne conſcience.

The ſecond leſſon is, when wee are touched in conſcience for our ſinnes, not to yeilde to naturall doubtings and diſtruſt; but to reſiſt the ſame, and to indeauour by Gods grace to reſolue our ſelues that the promiſes of ſaluation by Chriſt, belong to vs particularly: becauſe to doe thus much, is the very commandement of God.

Good conſcience a fruite of faith.

The third thing is, the reformation of conſcience; which is, when it doth ceaſe to accuſe and terrifie, and begins to excuſe & teſtifie vnto vs by the holy Ghoſt; that we are the children of God and haue the pardon of our ſinnes. And this it will doe after that men haue ſeriouſly humbled themſelues, and praied earneſtly and conſtantly with ſighes and grones of ſpirit for reconciliation with God in Chriſt. For then the Lord will ſende downe his ſpirit into the conſcience by a ſweete and heauenly teſtimonie to aſſure vs that wee are at peace with God.

Thus wee ſee howe good conſcience is gotten: & becauſe it is ſo pretious a iewel, I wiſh all perſons, that as yet neuer laboured to get good conſcience, now to begin. Reaſons to induce men thereto may bee theſe: I. You ſeeke day and night from yeare to yeare for honours, riches, and pleaſures, which ye muſt leaue behinde you: much more therefore ought you to ſeeke for renewed and reformed conſciences, conſidering that conſcience will bee with you in this life, in death, at the laſt iudgement, and for euer. II. He that wants a conſcience purged in the blood of Chriſt, can neuer haue any true and laſting comfort in this life. Suppoſe a man arraied in eloath of tiſhue, ſet in a chaire of eſtate, before him a table furniſhed with all daintie prouiſion: his ſeruants, Monarches, and Princes; his riches the chiefeſt treaſures & kingdomes in the world: but withall ſuppoſe one ſtanding by, with a naked ſword to cut his throat, or a wild beaſt readie euer and anon to pull him in peeces: nowe, what can wee ſay of this mans eſtate, but that all his happineſſe is nothing but woe and miſerie? And ſuch is the eſtate of all men that abounding with riches, honours, and pleaſures, carrie about them an euill conſcience, which is as a ſword to ſlay the ſoule, or as a rauenous beaſt ready to ſucke the bloud of the ſoule, and to rende it in peeces. III. He which wants good conſcience can doe nothing but ſinne: his very eating and drinking, his ſleeping and waking, and all he doeth, turnes to ſinne: the conſcience muſt firſt be good, before the action can be good; if the root be corrupt, the fruits are anſwerable. IV. An euill conſcience is the greateſt enemie a man can haue, becauſe it doeth execute all the parts of iudgement againſt him. It is the Lords ſergeant. God neede not ſend out proceſſe by any of his creatures for man: the conſcience within man will arreſt him, and bring him before God. It is the Iayler to keepe man in priſon in bolts and irons, that hee may be forth comming at the day of iudgement. It is the witneſſe to accuſe him, the iudge to condemne him, the hangman to execute him, and the flaſhings of the fire of hell to torment him. Againe, it makes a man to be an enemie to God: becauſe it accuſeth him to God, and makes him flie from God, as Adam did when he had ſinned. Alſo hee makes a man to be his owne enemie, in that it doeth cauſe to lay violent handes vppon himſelfe, and beecome his owne hangman, or his owne cutthroat. And on the contrarie, a good conſcience is a mans beſt friend: when all men intreat him hardly, it will ſpeake him faire and comfort him: it is a continual feaſt, and a Paradiſe vppon earth. V. The ſcripture ſheweth that they which neuer ſeeke good conſcience, haue terrible endes. For either they die blockes, as Nabal did; or they die deſperate, as Caine, Saul, Achitophel, Iudas. VI. We muſt conſider often the terrible day of iudgement, in which euery man muſt receiue according to his doings. And that wee may then be abſolued, the beſt way is to ſeeke for a good conſcience: for if our conſcience be euill, and condemne vs in this life, GOD will much more condemne vs. And whereas wee muſt paſſe through three iudgements; the iudgement of men, the iudgement of our conſcience, and the laſt iudgement of God; wee ſhall neuer be ſtrengthened againſt them, and cleared in them all; but by the ſeeking of a good conſcience.

After that a man hath got good conſcience, his ſecond dutie is to keepe it. And as in the gouerning the ſhip on the ſea, the pilote holding the helme in his hand, hath alwaies an eie to the compaſſe; ſo wee likewiſe, in the ordering of our liues and conuerſations, muſt alwaies haue a ſpeciall regard to conſcience. 3 3. Mans ſecond dutie to keepe good conſcience.

That wee may keepe good conſcience, we muſt doe two things; auoide the impediment thereof, and vſe conuenient preſeruations.

Impediments of good conſcience, are either in vs or forth of vs. In vs, our owne ſinnes and corruptions. When mens bodies lie dead in the earth, there breede certaine wormes in them, vvhereby they are conſumed. For of the fleſh come the worms which conſume the fleſh: but vnleſſe wee take great heed, out of the ſinnes and corruptions of our hearts, there will breede a worme a thouſand fold more terrible, euen the worme of conſcience that neuer dieth; which will in a lingring manner waſte the conſcience, the ſoule, and the whole man; becauſe hee ſhall be alwaies dying and neuer dead. Theſe ſinnes are ſpecially three; Ignorance, vnmortified affection, worldly luſts.

Touching the firſt, namely ignorance, it is a great and vſuall impediment of good conſcience. For when the minde erreth or miſconceiueth, it doeth miſleade the conſcience, and deceiue the whole man. The way to auoide this impediment is, to doe our indeauour that wee may daily increaſe in the knowledge of the word of God, that it may dwell in vs plentifully: to this end we muſt pray with Dauid, that he would open our eyes, that wee might vnderſtand the wonders of his lawe: and withall we muſt daily ſearch the ſcriptures for vnderſtanding, as men vſe to ſearch the mines of the earth for golde ore, Prou. 2. 4. Laſtly we muſt labour for ſpiritual wiſedome, that we might haue the right vſe of Gods word in euery particular action: that beeing by it directed, we may diſcerne what we may with good conſcience doe or leaue vndone.

The ſecond impediment, is vnſtaied and vnmortified affections: which, if they haue their ſwing, as wilde horſes ouerturne the chariot with men and all, ſo they ouerturne and ouercarrie the iudgement and and conſcience of man: and therefore when they beare rule, good conſcience takes no place. Now to preuent the daunger that comes here by, this courſe muſt be followed. When we would haue a ſword or a knife not to hurt our ſelues or others, we turne the edge of it. And ſo, that we may preuent our affections from hurting & annoying the conſcience, we muſt turne the courſe of them, by directing them from our neighbours to our ſelues and our owne ſinnes, or by inclining them to God and Chriſt. For example: choller and anger directs it ſelfe vpon euerie occaſion againſt our neighbour, and thereby greatly indamageth the conſcience. Now, the courſe of it is turned, when we begin to be diſpleaſed and to be angrie with our ſelues for our owne ſinnes. Our loue ſet vpon the worlde is hurtfull to the conſcience, but when we once begin to ſet our loue on God in Chriſt, and to loue the blood of Chriſt aboue all the world, then contrariwiſe it is a furtherance of good conſcience.

The third impediment, is worldly luſts, that is, the loue and exceeding deſire of riches, honours, pleaſures. Euerie man is as Adam, his good conſcience is his paradiſe; the forbidden fruite, is the ſtrong deſire of theſe earthly things; the ſerpent is the olde enemie the deuil: who if he may be ſuffered to intangle vs with the loue of the word, will ſtraight way put vs out of our Paradiſe and barre vs from all good conſcience. The remedie is to learne the leſſon of Paul, Phil. 4. 12. which is, in euerie eſtate in which God ſhall place vs to be content eſteeming euermore the preſent condition the beſt for vs all. Now that this leſſon may be learned, we muſt further labour to be reſolued of Gods ſpeciall prouidence towards vs in euerie caſe and condition of life: and when we haue ſo well profited in the ſchoole of Chriſt, that we can ſee and acknowledge Gods prouidence and goodneſſe, as well in ſickeneſſe and health, in pouertie as in wealth, in hunger as in fulneſſe, in life as in death, we ſhall be very well content, whatſoeuer any way befals vnto vs.

The preſeruatiues of good conſcience are two, the firſt is to preſerue and cheriſh that ſauing faith whereby we are perſwaded of our reconciliation with God in Chriſt, for this is the roote of good conſcience, as hath beene ſhewed. Nowe this faith is cheriſhed and confirmed by the daiely exerciſe of inuocation and repentance: which be, to humble our ſelues, to bewaile and confeſſe our ſinnes to God, to condemne our ſelues for them, to pray for pardon & ſtrength againſt ſinne, to praiſe God and giue him thankes for his daily benefits. And by the vnfained and ſerious practiſe of theſe duties, repentance and faith are daiely renewed and confirmed. The ſecond preſeruatiue is the maintaining of the righteouſneſſe of a good conſcience: which righteouſneſſe (as I haue ſaid) is nothing els but a conſtant indeauour & deſire to obey the wil of God in all things. That this righteouſnes may be kept to the end, we muſt practiſe three rules. The firſt is, that we are to carrie in our hearts [a] a purpoſe neuer to ſinne againſt God in any thing: for where a purpoſe is of committing any ſin wittingly aud willingly, there is neither good faith nor good conſcience. The ſecond is to walke with God as Enoch did, Gen. 5, 24. which is, to order the whole courſe of our liues as in the preſence of God, deſiring to approoue all our doings euer vnto him. Now this perſwaſion that whereſoeuer we are, we do ſtand in the preſence of God, is a notable meanes to maintaine ſinceritie. Gen. 17. 1. I am God all-ſufficient, walke before mee and bee perfect. And the want of this is the occaſion of many offences: as Abraham ſaid; becauſe I thought ſurely the feare of God is not in this place, they will ſlaye me for my wiues ſake, Gen. 20. 11. The third rule is careſully to walke in our particular callinges, doing the duties thereof to the glorie of God, to the good of the common-wealth, and the edification of the Church: auoiding therein fraud, couetouſneſſe, and ambition, which cauſe men oftentimes to ſet their conſciences on the tenters, and make them ſtretch like cheuerill.

[a] Conſc. bona non ſtat cum proposito peccandi.

Thus we ſee how good conſeience may be preſerued. Reaſons to induce hereunto are many. I. Gods ſtraight commaundement. 1. Tim. 1. 19. Keepe faith and good cõſcience. And Prou. 4. 23. Keepe thine heart with all diligence. II. The good conſcience is the moſt tender part of the ſoule, like to the apple of the eye; which being perced by the leaſt pinne that may be, is not only blemiſhed, but alſo loeſeth his ſight. Therfore as God doeth to the eie, ſo muſt wee deale with the conſcience. God giues to the eie certaine lids of fleſh, to defend and couer it from outwarde iniuries: and ſo muſt wee vſe meanes to auoid whatſoeuer may offend or annoy conſcience. III.

Manifolde

Manifold benefites redound vnto vs in keeping good conſcience. Firſt ſo long as we haue care to keepe it, we keepe and inioy all other gifts of Gods ſpirit. Good cõſcience and the reſt of Gods graces are as a paire of turtle doues, when the one feedes, the other feedeth; when the one likes not, the other likes not; when the one dies, the other dies: ſo where good conſcience is maintained, there are many other excellent gifts of God flouriſhing: and where conſcience decaies, they alſo decay. Againe, good conſcience giues alacritie vnto vs, & boldneſſe in calling on GODS name. 1 Iohn. 3.21. If our heart condemne vs not, we haue boldneſſe towardes God. Thirdly, it makes vs patient in afflictions, and comforts vs greatly: & when by reaſon of the grieuouſneſſe of our affliction, we are conſtrained to kneele on both knees and take vp our croſſe, regenerate conſcience as a ſweete companion, or like a good Simon, laies to his ſhoulder and helpes to beare one end of it. Laſtly, when none can comfort vs, it will be an amiable comforter, and a friend ſpeaking ſweetly vnto vs, in the verie agonie and pang of death. IV. Not to preſerue the conſcience without ſpot, is the way to deſperation. It is the pollicie of the deuill to vſe meanes to caſt the conſcience into the ſleepe of ſecuritie, that he may the more eaſily bring man to his owne deſtruction. For as diſeaſes, if they be long neglected become incurable, ſo the conſcience much and often wounded, admits little or no comfort. Neither will it alwaies boote a man after many yeares to ſay at the laſt caſt, Lord be mercifull to me, I haue ſinned. Though ſome be receiued to mercy in the time of death, yet farre more periſh in deſperation, that liue in their ſinnes wittingly and willinglie againſt their own cõſcience. Pharao, Saul, and Iudas cried all peccaui, I haue ſinned againſt God: yet Pharao is hardned more and more and periſheth: Saul goeth on in his ſinne and deſpaireth: Iudas made away himſelfe. And no maruell, for the multitude of ſins oppreſſe the conſcience, and make the heart to ouerflow with ſuch a meaſure of griefe that it can faſten no affiance in the mercie of God. Laſtly they that ſhall neglect to keepe good conſcience, procure many hurts, and dangers, & iudgements of God to themſelues. When a ſhip is on the ſea, if it be not well gouerned, or if there be a breach made into it; it drawes water and ſincks: and ſo both men and wares and all in likelihood are caſt away. Nowe we are all as paſſengers; the world is an huge ſea through which wee muſt paſſe: our ſhip is the conſcience of euerie man, 1. Tim. 1. 19. and 3.12. the wares are our religion and ſaluation and all other gifts of God. Therefore it ſtands vs in hand to be alwaies at the helme, and to carrie our ſhip with as euen a courſe as poſſiblie we can, to the intended port of hapines which is the ſaluatiõ of our ſoules. But if ſo be it we grow careleſſe and make breaches in the ſhip of conſcience, by ſuffering it to daſh vpon the rockes of ſinne, it is a thouſand to one, that wee in the end ſhall caſt away our ſelues and all we haue. And in the mean ſeaſon, as conſcience decaies, ſo proportionally al graces & goodneſſe goe from vs: Gods cõmaundements begin to be vile vnto vs; the knowledge thereof, as alſo faith, hope, & the inuocatiõ of Gods name, decay. Experience ſheweth that men of excellent gifts by vſing badde conſcience, loſe them all.

TO THE RIGHT WORSHIPfull, Sir William Bowes Knight, &c.

Grace and peace.

RIght Worshipfull, it is a notable policie of the Deuill, which he hath put into the heads of sundrie men in this age, to thinke that our Religion and the Religion of the present Church of Rome are all one for substance: and that they may be reunited as (in their opinion) they were before. Writings to this effect are spread abroad in the French tongue, and respected of English Protestants more then is meete, or ought to be. For, let men in shew of moderation, pretend the peace and good estate of the Catholike Church as long as they will; this Vnion of the two Religions can neuer be made, more then the vnion of light and darknes. And this shall appeare, if we doe but a little consider, how they of the Romane Church haue rased the foūdation. For though in words they honour Christ, yet in deede they turne him to a Pseudo-Christ and an Idol of their owne braine. They call him our Lord, but with this condition, that the Seruant of Seruants of this Lord may change and adde to his commaundements: hauing so great a power, that he may open and shut heauen to whom he will; and bind the very conscience with his owne lawes, and consequently be partaker of the spirituall kingdome of Christ. Againe, they call him a Sauiour, but in Vo: in that he giues this grace vnto vs, that by our merits, we may partake in the merits of the Saints. And they acknowledge that he died and suffered for vs, but with this caueat, that the Fault beeing pardoned, we must satisfie for the temporall punishment either in this world or in Purgatorie. In a word, they make him our Mediatour of Intercession vnto God: but withall his Mother must be the Queene of Heauen, and by the right of a Mother command him there. Thus, in word they crie Osanna, but in deede they crucifie Christ. Therefore we haue good cause to blesse the name of God, that hath freed vs from the yoke of this Romane bondage, and hath brought vs to the true light and libertie of the Gospel. And it should be a great height of vnthankfulnesse in vs, not to stand out against the present Church of Rome, but to yeeld our selues to plottes of reconciliation. To this effect and purpose I haue penned this little Treatise, which I present to your Worship, desiring it might be some token of a thankfull mind, for vndeserued loue. And I craue withall, not onely your Worshipfull (which is more common) but also your learned protection; beeing well assured, that by skill and arte you are able to iustifie whatsoeuer I haue truly taught. Thus wishing to you and yours the continuance and the increase of faith and good conscience, I take my leaue. Cambridge, Iune 28. 1597.

THE AVTHOR TO

the Christian Reader.

BY a Reformed Catholike, I vnderstand anie one that holds the same necessarie heads of religion with the Romane Church: yet so, as he parts off and reiects all errours in doctrine whereby the said religion is corrupted. How this may be done, I haue begun to make some little declaration in this small Treatise: the intent whereof is to shew how neere wee may come to the present Church of Rome in sundrie points of religion: and wherein we must for euer dissent.

My purpose in penning this small discourse is threefold. The first is, to confute all such Politikes as bolde and maintaine, that our religion, and that of the Romane Church differ not in substance, and consequentlie that they may be reconciled: yet my meaning is not here to condemne anie Pacification that tendes to perswade the Romane Church to our religion. The second is, that the Papists which thinke so basely of our religion, may be wonne to a better liking of it: when they shall see how neere we come vnto them in sundrie points. The third: that the common Protestant might in some part see and conceiue the point of difference betweene vs and the Church of Rome: and know in what manner and how farre forth, we condemne the opinions of the said Church,

I craue pardon for the order which I vse, in handling the seuerall points. For I haue set them downe one by one, as they came to minde, not respecting the lawes of method. If any Papist shall say that I haue not alleadged their opinions aright, I answere, that their bookes be at hand, and I can iustifie what I haue said.

Thus crauing thine acceptation for this my paines, and wishing vnto thee the increase of knowledge and loue of pure and sound religion, I take my leaue and make an end.

Reuelat. 18. 4.

And I heard another voice from heauen say, Goe out of her my people, that ye be not partakers of her sinnes, and receiue not of her plagues.

IN the former chapter S. Iohn sets down a description of the whore of Babylon, and that at large as he saw her in a vision described vnto him. In the sixteenth v. of the same chapter, he foretels her destruction: and in the three first verses of this 18. chapter, he goeth on to propound the saide destruction yet more directly and plainely: with all alleaging arguments to prooue the same, in all the verses following. Now in this fourth verse is set down a caueat seruing to forewarne all the people of God, that they may escape the iudgment which shall befall the whore: and the words containe two parts: a commandement, and a reason. The commandement, Come out of her my people, that is, from Babylon. The reason, taken from the euent, least yee be partakers, &c. Touching the commandement, first I will search the right meaning of it, and then set downe the vse thereof and doctrine flowing thence. In histories therefore are three Babylons mentioned: one is, Babylon of Assyria standing on the riuer Euphrates, where was the confusion of Languages, and where the Iewes were in captiuitie: which Babylon is in Scripture reproached for Idolatrie and other iniquities. The second Babylon is in Egypt standing on the riuer Nilus, and it is now called Cayr: of that mention is made. 1. Pet 5. 13. (as some thinke) though indeede it is as likely and more commonly thought, that there is meant Babylon of Assyria. The third Babylon is mysticall, whereof Babylon of Assyria was a type and figure; and that is Rome, which is without question here to be vnderstood. And the whore of Babylon, as by all circumstances may be gathered, is the state or regiment of a people that are the inhabitants of Rome and appertaine thereto. This may be prooued by the interpretation of the holy Ghost: for in the last verse of the 17. chapter the woman that is the whore of Babylon is said to be a citie which raigneth ouer the kings of the earth: now in the daies when S. Iohn penned this booke of Reuelation, there was no cittie in the world that ruled ouer the kings of the earth but Rome; it then being the seat where the Emperour put in execution his Imperiall authoritie. Againe in the seuenth verse shee is said to sit on a beast hauing seuen heades and ten hornes: which seuen heads be seuen hills, v. 9. whereon the woman sitteth, and also they be seuen kings. Therefore by the whore of Babylon is meant a cittie standing on seuen hills. Now it is well known, not onely to learned men in the Church of God, but euen to the heathen themselues, that Rome alon is the citie built on seuen distinct hills called Celius, Auentinus, Exquilinus, Tarpeius, or Capitolinus, Viminalis, Palatinus, Quirinalis. Papists to helpe themselues, doe alleadge that old Rome stood on seuen hills, but now is remooued further to Campus Martius. I answer, that howsoeuer the greatest part of the citie in regard of habitation be not now on seuen hils, yet in regard of regiment and practise of religion it is: for euen to this day vpon these hills are seated certaine Churches and Monasteries and other like places where the Papal authoritie is put in execution: aud thus Rome being put for a state and regiment: euen at this day, it stands vpon seuen hills. And though it be come to passe that the harlot in regard of her latter daies euen changed her seat, yet in respect of her yonger times in which she was bred and borne, she sate vpon the seuen hills. Others, because they feare the wounding of their owne heads, labour to frame these wordes to an other meaning, and say, that by the whore is meant the company of all wicked men in the world whatsoeuer, the deuill beeing the head thereof. But this exposition is flat against the text for in the second verse of the 17. chapter, shee is opposed to the kings of the earth with whome ſhe is ſaide to commit fornication: and in the laſt verſe ſhe is called a cittie ſtanding on ſeuen hilles and raigning ouer the kings of the earth (as I haue ſaid,) and therefore muſt needes be a ſtate of men in ſome particular place. And the Papiſts themſelues perceiuing that this ſhift will not ſerue their turne, make two Romes, heatheniſh Rome, and that wherof the pope is head, now (ſay they) the whore ſpoken of is heatheniſh Rome, which was ruled by cruel tyrants, as Nero, Domitian, and the reſt: and that Rome whereof nowe the Pope is head, is not here ment. Behold a vaine and fooliſh diſtinction: for Eccleſiaſticall Rome in reſpect of ſtate, princely dominion, and crueltie in perſecuting the Saintes of God, is all one with the heatheniſh Empire: the See of the Biſhop beeing turned into the Emperours court, as all hiſtories doe manifeſt. But let the diſtinction be as they ſuppoſe, yet by their leaues, hereby the whore muſt be vnderſtood not only heatheniſh Rome, but euen the Papall or Eccleſiaſticall Rome: for v. 3. of this chapter the holy ghoſt ſaith plainly, that ſhe hath made all nations drunke with the wine of the wrath of her fornication: yea it is added, that ſhee hath committed fornication with the kinges of the earth, whereby is ſignified that ſhee hath endeauoured to intangle all the nations of the earth in her ſpirituall idolatrie, and to bring the kings of the earth to her religion. Which thing can not be vnderſtood of the heatheniſh Rome, for that left all the kings of the earth to their owne religion and idolatrie: neither did they labour to bring forraine Kings to worſhip their Gods, Again chap. 17. v. 16. it is ſaid, that the ten hornes which be ten kings, ſhall hate the whore and make her deſolate and naked, which muſt not bee vnderſtood of heatheniſh Rome, but of Popiſh Rome: for whereas in former times all the Kings of the earth did ſubmit themſelues to the whore, nowe they haue begun to withdraw themſelues, and make her deſolate: as the king of Bohemia, Denmarke, Germany, England, Scotland, and other parts: therefore this diſtinction is alſo friuolous. They further alleadge that the whore of Babylon is drunke with the blood of the Saints and Martyrs, chap. 17. 6. ſhedde not in Rome, but in Ieruſalem, where the Lord was crucified: and the two Prophetes beeing ſlaine lie there in the ſtreetes. Reuelat. 11. 8, But this place is not meant of Hieruſalem, as Hierome hath fully taught, but it may well be vnderſtoode of Rome: Chriſt was crucified there, either becauſe the authoritie, whereby he was crucified was from the Romane Empire, or els becauſe Chriſt in his members was and is there daiely crucified, though locally in his owne perſon hee was crucified at Ieruſalem. And thus, notwithſtanding all which hath beene ſaide, wee muſt here by the whore vnderſtand the ſtate and Empire of Rome, not ſo much vnder the heathen Emperours as vnder the head thereof the Pope: which expoſition, beſides the authoritie of the text, hath the fauour and defence of auncient and learned men. Bernard ſaith, They are the miniſters of Chriſt, but they ſerue Antichriſt. Againe, The beaſt ſpoken of in the Apocalyps to which a mouth is giuen to ſpeake blaſphemies, and to make warre with the Saints of God, is nowe gotten into Peters chaire, as a Lyon prepared to his pray. It will be ſaide, that Bernard ſpeakes theſe latter words of one that came to the Popedome by intruſion or vſurpation. It is true indeede: but wherefore was hee an vſurper? Hee rendreth a reaſon thereof in the ſame place: becauſe the Antipope called Innocentius was choſen by the Kings of Almaine, France, England, Scotland, Spaine, Hieruſalem, with conſent of the whole Cleargie and people in theſe nations, and the other was not. And thus Bernard hath giuen his verdict, that not onely this vſurper, but all the Popes for this many yeares are the beaſts of the Apocalyps. becauſe now they are onely choſen by the colledge of Cardinals. To this agreeth the decree of Pope Nicolas the ſecond, ann. 1059. that the Pope ſhall afterward be created by the ſuffrages of the Cardinall Biſhops of Rome, with the conſent of the reſt of the cleargie and people, and the Emperour himſelfe: and all Popes are excommunicate and accurſed as Antichriſts, that enter otherwiſe, as all now doe. Ioachimus Abbas ſaith, Antichriſt was longe ſince borne in Rome, and ſhall be yet aduanced higher in the Apoſtolicke See. Petrarch ſaith, Once Rome, now Babylon. And Ireneus lib. 5. cap. laſt, ſaid before all theſe, that Antichriſt ſhould be Lateinus, a Romane.

Reform. Iuelle. 2. Theſ. 2.

Againe, this commaundement muſt not ſo much be vnderſtoode of a bodily departure in reſpect of cohabitation and preſence, as of a ſpirituall ſeparation in reſpect of faith and religion. And the meaning of the holy Ghoſt is, that men muſt depart.

depart from the Romish Church, but gaue iudgement, and determined in the case of their faith and the worship of God in Rome. Thus then we see that the word is ioyned to a commandement from God, as it vrgeth his Church and people to make a seperation from Babylon. Whence I obserue, That all those that will be saued, must depart and seperate themselues from the faith and religion of the present Church of Rome. And whereas they are charged with schisme that seperate on this maner, the truth is they are not schismatickes that doe so, because they haue the commandement of God for their warrant: & that parte is the schismaticke, in whome the cause of this separation lieth: and thus the Church of Rome, namely the cup of abomination in the whores hand, which is, their heresies and schismaticall religion.

Now touching the duty of seperation I meane to speake at large, not standing so much to proue the same, because it is euident by the text, as to shew the manner & measure of making that seperation: and therein I will handle two things. First how far forth we may ioyne with them in the matter of religion: & secondly how farforth and wherein we must stifly stand and depart from them. And for this cause I purpose to make choise of certaine points of religion, and to speake of them in good order that I can, shewing in each of them our consent and difference; and the rather, because some harpe much vpon this string, that a Vnion may be made of our two religions, and that we differ not in substance but in points of circumstance.

The first point wherewith I meane to beginne shall bee the point of Freewill, though it be not the principall.

I. Our consent.

Freewill both by them and vs is taken for a mixt power in the minde and will of man; whereby discerning what is good & what is euill, hee doth accordingly choose or refuse the same.

I. Conclus. Man must be considered in a foure-fold estate, as he was created, as he was corrupted, as he is renewed, as he shall be glorified. In the first estate we ascribe to mans will libertie of nature in which he could will or nill either good or euill: in the third, libertie of grace: in the last libertie of glorie. All the doubt is of the second estate; and yet therein also we agree, as the conclusions following will declare.

II. Conclus. The matters whereabout mans will is occupied are principally three, to wit, naturall, ciuill, and spirituall. Naturall actions are such as are common to men with brutish creatures, to eate, drinke, sleepe, heare, see, smell, taste, and to moue from place to place: in all which we ioyne with the Papists, and hold that man hath freewill, and euen since the fall of Adam by naturall power of the mind doth freely performe any of these actions or the like.

III. Conclus. Humane actions are such as are common to all men good and bad, as to speake and vse reason, the practise of all mechanicall and liberall artes, and the outward performance of ciuill and Ecclesiasticall duties, as to come to the Church, to speake and preach the word, to reach out the hand to receiue the Sacrament, and to lend the eare to listen outwardly to that which is taught. And hither wee may referre the outward actions of ciuill vertues, as namely iustice, temperance, gentlenes, and liberalitie. And in these also we ioyne with the Church of Rome and say (as experience teacheth) that men haue a naturall freedome of will, to put them or not to put them in execution. Paul saith, Rom. 2. 14. The gentils that haue not the law, doe the things of the law by nature: that is, by naturall strength and life of himselfe, that before his conuersion touching the right vse of the law, he was vnblameable, Phil. 3. 6. And for this externall obedience, naturall men receiue rewards in temporall things, Matth. 6. 5. Ezech. 29. 19. And yet herein some causes must be remembred: 1. That in humane actions man will is weake and feeble, and his vnderstanding dimme and darke: and thereupon he often failes in them. And in all such actions with Augustine I vnderstand the will of man to bee onely wounded or halfe dead. 2. That the will of man is vnder the will of God and therefore to bee ordered by it; as Ieremie saith, chap. 10. 23. O Lord I know that the way of man is not in himselfe; neither is it in man to walke or direct his steps.

IV. Conclus. The third kind of actions are spirituall more neerely concerning the heart or conscience, and these be twofold: they either concerne the kingdome of darkenesse, or else the kingdome of God. Those that concerne the kingdome of darknes are sinnes properly: and in these we likewise ioyne with the Papists & teach that in sinfull or euill actions man hath freedome of wil. Some peraduenture will say, that we sinne necessarily, because hee that sinneth cannot but sinne: and that freewill and necessitie cannot stand together. Indeed the necessitie of compulsion or coaction, and freewill cannot agree; but there is an other kinde of necessitie which may stand with freedome of will: for some things may bee done necessarily and also freely. A man that is in close prison, must needs there abide and cannot possibly get forth and walke where he will; yet can hee moove himselfe freely and walke within the prison: so likewise though mans will be chained naturally by the bondes of sin, and therefore cannot but sin: and thereupon sinneth necessarily, yet doth it also sinne freely.

V. Conclus. The second kind of spirituall actions or things, concerne the kingdome of god: as repentance, faith, the conuersion of a sinner, new obedience, and such like; in which we likewise in part ioyne with the Church of Rome & say that in the first conuersion of a sinner, mans freewill concurres with Gods grace, as a fellow or coworker in some sort. For in the conuersion of a sinner three things are required: the word, Gods spirit, and mans will: for mans will is not passiue in all and euery respect, but hath an action in the first conuersion and change of the soule. When any man is conuerted, this worke of God is not done by compulsion, but he is conuerted willingly: and at the verie time whe he is conuerted, by Gods grace he willes his conuersion. To this ende said Augustine, Serm. 15. de verb. Apost. He which made thee without thee, will not saue thee without thee. Againe, That is certen, that our will is required in this, that wee may doe any good thing well: but wee haue it not from our owne power but God worker to will in us. For looke at what time God giues grace, at the same time hee giueth a will to desire and will the same grace: as for example, when GOD workes faith, at the same time he workes also vpon the will causing it to desire faith and willingly to receiue the gift of beleeuing. God makes of the vnwilling will a willing will: because no man can receiue grace vtterly against his will, considering will constrained is no will. But here wee must remember, that howsoeuer in respect of time the working of grace by Gods spirit, and the willing of it in man goe together: yet in regarde of order, grace is first wrought, and mans will must first of all be acted and moued by grace, and then it also heeth, willeth, and mooueth it selfe. And this is the last point of consent betweene vs and the Romane Church touching freewill: neither may we proceede further with them.

Posse velle, & actu velle recipere.

II. The diffent or difference.

The point of difference standeth in the cause of the freedoe of mas will in spirituall matters, which concerne the kingdome of God. The Papists say, mans will concurreth and worketh with Gods graces in the first conuersion of a sinner by it selfe, and by it owne naturall power: and is onely helped by the holy Ghost. Wee say, that mans will worketh with grace in the first conuersion, yet not of it selfe, but by grace. Or thus: They say will hath a naturall cooperation: wee deme it, and say it hath cooperation onely by grace, beeing in it self not actiue but passiue, willing well only as it is mooued by grace, whereby it must first be acted & moued, before it can act od will. And that wee may the better conceiue the difference, I will vse this comparison: The Church of Rome sets forth the estate of a sinner by the condition of a prisoner, and so doe we: marke then the difference. It supposeth the said prisoner to lie bound hand and foote with chaines and fetters, and withall to bee sicke and weake, yet not wholly dead but liuing in part: it supposeth also that being in this case, he stirreth not himselfe for any helpe, and yet hath abilitie and power to stirre. Hereupon if the keeper come and take away his bolts and fetters, and hold him by the hand, and helpe him vp, hee can and will of himselfe stand and walke and goe out of prison: euen so (say they) is a sinner bound hand and foote with the chaine of his sins: and yet hee is not dead but sicke, like to the wounded man in the way betweene Ierico & Ierusalem. And therefore doth he not will and affect that which is good: but if the holy Ghost come and doe but vntie his bands, and reach him his hand of grace, then can hee stand of himselfe, and will his owne saluation, or any thing els that is good. We in like manner graunt, that a prisoner fitly resembeth a naturall man, but yet such a prisoner must hebbe, as is not only sicke and weake, but euen starke dead, which cannot stir though the keeper vntie his bolts and chaines, nor nor heare though hee ſound a trumpet in his eare: and if the ſaid keeper would haue him to mooue and ſtirre, he muſt giue him not onely his hand to helpe him, but euen ſoule and life alſo: and ſuch a one is euery man by nature: not onely chained and fettered in his ſinnes, but ſtarke dead therein: as one that lyeth rotten in the graue, not hauing any abilitie or power to mooue or ſtirre: and therefore he cannot ſo much as deſire or doe any thing thas is truelie good of himſelfe, But God muſt firſt come and put a new ſoule into him, euen the ſpirit of grace to quicken and reuiue him: and then being thus reuiued, the will beginneth to will good things at the verie ſame time, when God by his ſpirit firſt infuſeth grace. And this is the true difference betweene vs and the Church of Rome in this point of freewill.

III. Our reaſons.

Now for the confirmation of the doctrine we hold, namely, that a man willeth not his owne conuerſion of himſelfe by nature either in whole or in part, but by grace wholy and alone: theſe reaſons may be vſed. The firſt is taken from the nature and meaſure of mans corruption, which may be diſtinguiſhed into two parts. The firſt is the want of that original righteouſneſſe, which was in man by creation: the ſecond, is a proneneſſe and inclination to that which is euill, and to nothing that is truely good. This appeareth, Gen. 8. 21. The frame of mans heart (ſaith the Lord) is euill from his childehood: that is, the diſpoſition of the vnderſtanding, will, affections, with all that the heart of man deuiſeth, formeth or imagineth, is wholly euill And Paul ſaith, Rom. 8. 7. The wiſdome of the fleſh is enmitie againſt God: which words are very ſignificant: for the worde tranſlated wiſdome, ſignifieth that the beſt thoughts, the beſt deſires, affections and indeauors that be in any natural man, euē thoſe that come moſt neare to true holines, are not only contrary to God, but euen enmitie it ſelfe. And hence I gather, that the very heart it ſelfe, that is, the will and minde from whence theſe deſires and thoughts doe come, are alſo enmitie vnto God. For ſuch as the action is, ſuch is the facultie whence it proceedeth: ſuch as the fruite is, ſuch is the tree: ſuch as the braunches are, ſuch are the rootes: By both theſe places it is euident, that in man there is not onely a want, abſence, or depriuation of originall righteouſnes, but a pronenes alſo by nature vnto that which is euil: which pronenes includes in it an inclination not to ſome fewe, but to all and euerie ſinne, the verie ſin againſt the Holy Ghoſt not excepted. Hence therefore, I reaſon thus:

If euery man by nature doth both want originall iuſtice, and be alſo prone vnto all euill, then wanteth he natural freewill to will that which is truely good:

But euery man by nature wants original iuſtice, and is alſo prone vnto all euill.

Ergo. Euerie man naturally wants freewill, to will that which is good.

Reaſon. II. 1. Cor. 2. 14. The naturall man perceiueth not the things of the ſpirit of God: for they are fooliſhneſſe vnto him, neither can know them becauſe they are ſpiritually diſcerned. In theſe wordes Saint Paul ſets down theſe points: I. that a naturall man doth not ſo much as thinke of the thinges reuealed in the Goſpel. II. that a man hearing, & in mind conceiuing them, cannot giue conſent vnto them, and by naturall iudgement approoue of them: but contrariwiſe thinketh them to bee fooliſhnes. III. that no man can giue aſſent to the things of God vnleſſe he be enlightened by the ſpirit of God. And hence I reaſon thus:

If a man by nature doth not know and perceiue the thinges of God, and when hee ſhall knowe them, cannot by nature giue aſſent vnto them: then hath he no power to will them:

But the firſt is euidently true. Ergo.

For firſt the minde muſt approue and giue aſſent, before the will can chooſe or will: and when the mind hath not power to conceiue or giue aſſent, there the will hath no power to will.

Reaſon. III. Thirdly the holy Ghoſt auoucheth, Ephe. 2. 1. Coloſſ. 2. 13. that all men by nature are dead in ſinnes and treſpaſſes: not as the Papiſts ſay, weake, ſicke, or halfe dead. Hence I gather, that man wanteth naturall power not to will ſimplie, but freely & frankly to wil that which is truly good. A dead man in his graue can not ſtir the leaſt finger, becauſe hee wants the very power of life, ſenſe, and motion: no more can he that is dead in ſinne, will the leaſt good: nay, if he could either will or doe any good, he could not be dead in ſinne. And as a dead man in the graue, cannot riſe but by the power of God; no more can he that is dead in ſinne riſe, but by the power of Gods grace alone, without of any power of his owne.

Reason IV. Fourthly, in the conuersion and saluation of a sinner, the Scripture ascribeth all to God, and nothing to mans free will. Ioh. 3.3. Except a man be borne againe hee cannot see the kingdome of God, Eph. 2,10, Wee are his workemanship created in Christ Iesus to good workes. And. 4. v. 24, the newe man is created to the Image of God. Now to be borne againe, is a worke of no lesse importance then our first creation: and therefore wholly to be ascribed to God as our creation is. Indeede Paul, Philip. 2.12.13. biddeth the Philippians worke out their saluation with feare and trembling: not meaning to ascribe vnto them a power of doing good by themselues: And therefore in the next verse he addeth, It is God that worketh both the will and the deede: directly excluding all naturall free-will in things spirituall: and yet withall hee acknowledgeth that mans will hath a worke in doing that which is good, not by nature but by grace. Because when God giues man power to will good things, then hee can will them; and when hee giueth him a power to doe good, then he can doe good, and he doth it. For though there be not in mans conuersion a naturall cooperation of his will with Gods spirit, yet is there a supernaturall cooperation by grace, enabling man when he is to be conuerted, to will his conuersion: according to which Saint Paul saith. 1. Cor. 15.10. I haue laboured in the faith. but least any man should imagine, that this was done by any naturall power, therefore he addeth, yet not I that is, not by any thing in mee, but Gods grace in me, enabling my will to doe the good I doe.

Reason V. The iudgment of the auncient Church. August. The will of the regenerate is kindled onely by the Holy Ghost: that they may therefore bee able because they will thus: and they will thus, because GOD works in them to will. And, We haue lost our free-will to loue God by the greatnesse of our sinne. Serm. 2: on the wordes of the Apostles. Man when he was created, receiued great strenght in his free-will: but by sinninge he lost it. Fulgentius, God giueth grace freely to the vnworthie whereby the wicked man being iustified is enlightened with the gift of good will, and with a facultie of doing good: that by mercie preuenting him, hee may begin to will well, and by mercie comming after, hee may doe the good he will. Bernard saith, It is wholly the grace of God that wee are created, healed, saued. Concil. Arausic. 2. cap. 6. To beleeue and to will is giuen from aboue by infusion, and inspiration of the holy Ghost. More testimonies and reasons might be alleadged to proue this conclusion, but these shall suffice: now let vs see what reasons are alledged to the contrarie.

III. Obiections of the Papists.

Obiect. I. First they alledge that man by nature may doe that which is good, and therefore will that which is good: for none can doe that which he neither willeth nor thinketh to doe, but first we must will and then doe. Now (say they) men can do good by nature, as giue almes, speake the trueth, doe iustice, and practise other duties of ciuill vertue: and therefore wil that which is good. I answere, that a naturall man may do good workes for the substance of the outward work: but not in regard of the goodnes of the manner: these are two diuerse things. A man without supernatural grace may giue almes, doe iustice, speake the truth, &c. which bee good things considered in themselues; as God hath commanded them; but he cannot doe them well. To thinke good thinges and to doe good things are naturall workes: but to thinke good things in a good manner, and to doe them wel, so as God may accept the action done, are works of grace. And therfore the good thing done by a natural man is sin in respect of the doer: because it failes both for his right beginning, which is a pure heart, good conscience, & faith vnfained; as also for his end which is the glorie of God.

Obiect. II. God hath commanded all men to beleeue and repent: therefore they haue naturall free-will: by vertue wherof (being helped by the spirit of God) they can beleeue and repent. A. The reason is not good: for by such commandements God sheweth not what men are able to doe, but what they should doe, and what they cannot doe. Again, the reason is not well framed, it ought rather to be thus: Because God giues men commandement to repent and beleeue: therefore they haue power to repent and beleeue, either by nature or by grace, and then we hold with them. For when God in the Gospell commaundeth men to repent and to beleeue, at the same time by his grace hee enableth them both to will or desire to beleeue and repent, as also actually to repent and beleeue.

Obiect. III. If man haue no free-will to sinne ſinne or not to ſinne, then no man is to be punished for his ſinnes: becauſe he ſinneth by a neceſſity not to be auoided. Anſ. The reaſon is not good: for though man cannot but ſinne, yet is the fault in himſelfe, and therefore hee is to bee puniſhed; as a bankrupt is not therefore freed from his debts, becauſe he is not able to pay them: but the bils againſt him ſtand in force, becauſe the debt comes through his owne default.

The ſecond point: of Originall ſinne.

The next point to bee handled, is concerning Originall ſinne after baptiſme that is, how farre forth it remaineth after baptiſme. A point to be well conſidered, becauſe hereupon depend many points of popetie.

I. Our Conſent.

1. Concluſ. They ſay, naturall corruption after baptiſme is aboliſhed, and ſo ſay we: but let vs ſee how farre it is aboliſhed. In originall ſinne are three thinges; I. the puniſhment, which is the firſt and ſecond death. II. Guiltineſſe, which is the binding vp of the creature vnto puniſhment. III. the fault or the offending of God, vnder which I comprehend our Guiltineſſe in Adams firſt offence, as alſo the corruption of the heart: which is a naturall inclination and proneneſſe to any thing that is euill or againſt the lawe of God. For the firſt wee ſay, that after baptiſme in the regenerate, the puniſhment of Originall ſinne is taken away: There is no condemnation (ſaith the Apoſtle) to them that be in Ieſus Chriſt. Rom. 8.1. For the ſecond, that is, guiltineſſe, wee further condeſcend and ſay: that is alſo taken away in them that are borne anew: for conſidering there is no condemnation to them, there is nothing to binde them to puniſhment. Yet this caueat muſt bee remembred, namely that the guiltineſſe is remooued from the perſon regenerate, not from the ſinne in the perſon: but of this more afterward. Thirdly, the guilt in Adams firſt offence is pardoned. And touching the corruption of the heart, I auouch two thinges: I. That the very power or ſtrength whereby it raigneth in man, is taken away in the regenerate. II. That this corruption is aboliſhed (as alſo the fault of euery actuall ſinne paſt) ſo farre forth as it is the fault and ſinne of the man in whom it is. Indeede it remaines till death, and it is ſinne conſidered in it ſelfe, ſo long as it remaines, but it is not imputed vnto the perſon: and in that reſpect is as though it were not: it being pardoned.

II. The diſſent or difference.

Thus farre we conſent with the church of Rome: now the difference betweene vs ſtandes not in the aboliſhment, but in the manner, and the meaſure of the aboliſhment of this ſinne.

Papiſts teach, that Originall ſinne is ſo farre forth taken away after baptiſme, that it ceaſeth to bee a ſinne properly: and is nothing elſe but a want, defect, and weakeneſſe, making the heart fitte and readie to conceiue ſinne: much like tinder, which though it be not fire of it ſelfe, yet is it very apt and fitte to conceiue fire. And they of the Church of Rome denie it to bee ſinne properly, that they might vpholde ſome groſſe opinions of theirs, namely, that a man in this life may fulfill the law of God: and doe good workes void of ſinne: that he may ſtand righteous at the bar of Gods iudgement by them.

But we teach otherwiſe, that though originall ſin be taken away in the regenerate, and that in ſundry reſpects: yet doth it remaine in them after baptiſme, not onely as a want and weakeneſſe, but as a ſinne, and that properly: as may by theſe reaſons be prooued.

Reaſon I. Rom. 7.17. Paul ſaith, directly: It is no more I that doe it, but ſinne that dwelleth in me: that is, originall ſinne. The Papiſts anſwer againe, that it is ſo called improperly: becauſe it commeth of ſinne, and alſo is an occaſion of ſinne to bee done. But by the circumſtances of the Text, it is ſinne properly: for in the words following, S. Paul ſaith, that this ſin dwelling in him, made him to doe the euil which he hated. And v. 24. he crieth out, O wretched man that I am, who ſhall deliuer mee from this body of death? whence I reaſon thus:

That which once was ſinne properly, and ſtill remaining in man maketh him to ſinne, and intangleth him in the puniſhment of ſinne, and makes him miſerable: that is ſin properly.

But originall ſinne doeth all theſe. Ergo.

Reaſon. II. Infants baptized and regenerate, die the bodily death before they come to the yeares of diſcretion: therfore originall ſinne in them is ſinne properly: or elſe they ſhould not die, hauing no cauſe of death in them: for death is the wages of ſinne, as the Apoſtle ſaith. Roma. 6.23. and Roman. 5.12. Death entred into the world world by sinne. As for actuall sinne they haue none, if they die presently after they are borne before they come to any vse either of reason or affection.

Reason III. That which lusteth against the spirit, and by lusting tempteth, and in tempting intiseth and draweth the heart to sinne, is for nature sinne it selfe: but concupiscence in the regenerate lusteth against the spirit, Galath. 5. 17. and tempteth as I haue saide, Iam. 1. 14. God tempteth no man, but euery man is tempted when hee is drawne away by his owne concupiscence, and is intised: then when lust conceiueth, it bringeth foorth sinne. And therefore it is sinne properly: such as the fruite is, such is the tree[a] Auguſt. Concupiscence against which the spirit lusteth is sinne, because in it there is disobedience against the rule of the minde: and it is the punishment of sinne, because it befalls man for the merits of his disobedience: and it is the cause of sinne.

[a] Aug. contra Iul. l. 5. c. 3.

Reason IV. The iudgement of the auncient Church Auguſt. Epist. 29. Charitie in some is more, in some lesse, in some none: the highest degree of all, which cannot bee increased, is in none, as long as man liues vpon earth. And as long as it may be increased, that which is lesse then it should be, is in fault: by which fault it is, that there is no iust man vpon earth that doth good and sinneth not; by which fault none liuing shall bee iustified in the sight of God. For which fault, if wee say wee haue no sinne, there is no truth in vs: for which also, though we profit neuer so much, it is necessary for vs to say, forgiue vs our debts, though all our wordes, deedes, and thoughts bee already forgiuen in baptisme. Indeede Auguſt. in sundry places seemes to denie concupiscence to bee sinne after baptisme: but his meaninings is, that concupiscence in the regenerate is not the sinne of the person in whom it is. For thus he expounds himselfe, [a] This is not to haue sinne, not to be guilty of sinne. And [b] the law of sinne in baptisme is remitted and not ended. And, [c] Let not sinne raigne: he saith not, let not sinne be, but let it not raigne. For as long as thou liuest, of necessitie sinne will be in thy members: at the least looke it raigne not in thee, &c.

Obiections of Papists.

The arguments which the Church of Rome alleadgeth to the contrarie, are these Obiect. I. In baptisme men receiue perfect and absolute pardon of sinne: and sinne beeing pardoned is taken quite away: and therefore originall sinne after baptisme ceaseth to bee sinne. Answ. Sinne is abolished two waies: first in regard[d] of imputation to the person: secondly in regard of[e] existing and beeing. For this cause, God vouchsafeth to man two blessings in baptisme, Remission of sinne, and Mortification of the same. Remission or pardon aboliſheth sinne wholly in respect of any imputation thereof vnto man, but not simply in regard of the beeing thereof. Mortification therefore goeth further, and aboliſheth in all the powers of bodie and soule, the very concupiscence or corruption it selfe in respect of the being thereof. And because mortification is not accomplished till death, therefore originall corruption remaineth till death, though not imputed.

Obiect. II. Euery sinne is voluntarie: but originall sin in no man after baptisme is voluntarie: and therefore no sinne. Answ. The proposition is a politick rule pertaining to the courts of men, and must bee vnderstoode of such actions as are done of one man to another: and it doth not belong to the Court of conscience, which God holdeth and keepeth in mens hearts, in which euery want of conformitie to the lawe is made a sinne. Secondly I answer, that originall sinne was voluntarie in our first parent Adam: for hee sinned, and brought this misery vppon vs willingly: though in vs it bee otherwise vppon iust cause. Actuall sinne was first in him, and then originall corruption: but in vs originall corruption is first, and then actuall sinne.

Obiect. III. Where the forme of any thing is taken away, there the thing it selfe ceaseth also: but after baptisme in the regenerate, the forme of originall sinne, that is, the guilt is quite remooued: and therefore sin ceaseth to be sinne. Answ. The guilt or obligation to punishment, is not the forme of originall corruption, but (as wee say in schooles) an accident or necessary cõpanion thereof. The true forme of originall sinne, is a defect and depriuation of that which the lawe requireth at our hands in our minde, will, affections, and in all the powers both of soule and body. But they vrge this reason further saying: where the guilt and punishment is taken away, there is no fault remaining: but after baptisme the guilt and punishment is remooued: and therefore, though originall corruption remaine, it is not as a fault to make vs guiltie before God, but onely as a weakenes. Answ. Guilt is remooued, and not remooued. It is remooued from the perſon regenerate, which ſtands not guilty for any ſinne originall or actuall; but Guilt is not remooued from the ſinne it ſelfe; or as ſome anſwer, there be two kindes of guilt, actuall and potentiall. The actuall guilt is, whereby ſinne maketh man ſtand guiltie before God; and that is remooued in the regenerate. But the potentiall guilt, which is an aptneſſe in ſinne, to make a man ſtande guilty if hee ſinne, that is not remooued; and therefore ſtill ſinne remaineth ſinne. To this or like effect ſaith Auguſtine, Wee ſay that the guilt of concupiſcence, not whereby it is Guiltie (for that is not a perſon) but that whereby it made man guilty from the beginning, is pardoned, and that the thing it ſelfe is euill ſo as the regenerate deſire to bee healed of this plague.

Obiect. III. Laſtly, for our diſgrace they alleage that we in our doctrine teach that originall ſinne after baptiſme is onely clipped or pared, like the haire of a mans head, whoſe rootes ſtill remaine in the fleſh, growing and increaſing after they are cut, as before. Anſ. Our doctrine is abuſed; for in the paring of any thing; as in cutting of the haire, or in lopping a tree, the roote remaines vntouched, and therevpō multiplieth as before. But in the mortification of originall ſinne after baptiſme, we hold no ſuch paring: but teach, that in the very firſt inſtant of the conuerſion of a ſinner, ſinne receiueth his deadly wound in the roote, neuer afterward to be recouered.

The third point: Certentie of ſaluation.

I. Our Conſent.

I. Concl. We hold and beleeue that a man in this life, may be certain of ſaluation; and the ſame thing doth the Church of Rome teach and holde.

II. Concl. Wee holde and beleeue that a man is to put a certaine affiance in Gods mercie in Chriſt for the ſaluation of his ſoule; and the ſame thing by common cōſent holdeth the foreſaid church: this point maketh not the difference betweene vs.

III. Concl. We hold that with aſſurance of ſaluation in our hearts is ioyned doubting; and there is no man ſo aſſured of his ſaluation, but hee at ſometime doubteth thereof, eſpecially in the time of temptation; and in this the Papiſts agree with vs, and we with them.

IV. Concl. They goe further and ſay, that a man may be certen of the ſaluation of men, or of the Church by Catholike faith: and ſo ſay we.

V. Concl. Yea they holde that a man by faith may be aſſured of his owne ſaluation through extraordinarie reuelation, as Abraham and others were, and ſo doe we.

VI. They teach that wee are to be certaine of our ſaluation by ſpeciall faith in regard of God that promiſeth: though in regard of our ſelues and our indiſpoſition we can not; and in the former point they conſent with vs. Bellar. l. 3. p. 1 329. ch.

II. The diſſent or difference.

The very maine point of difference lies in the manner of aſſurance.

I. Concl. We hold that a mā may be certen of his ſaluation in his owne conſcience euen in this life and that by an ordinary and ſpeciall faith. They hold that a man is certain of his ſaluatiō only by hope: both of vs hold a certainty, we by faith they by hope.

II. Concl. Further, wee hold and avouch that our certentie by true faith is vnfallible: they ſay, their certentie is onely probable.

III. Concluſ. And further though both of vs ſay, that we haue confidence in Gods mercy in Chriſt for our ſaluation: yet wee doe it with ſome difference. For our confidence commeth from certaine and ordinary faith: theirs from hope, miniſtring (as they ſay) but a coniecturall certenty.

Thus much of the difference: nowe let vs ſee the reaſons too and fro.

III. Obiections of Papiſts.

Obiect. I. Where there is no word there is no faith for theſe two are relatiues: but there is no word of God, ſaying, Cornelius beleeue thou, Peter beleeue thou, and thou ſhalt be ſaued, And therefore there is no ſuch ordinarie faith to beleeue a mans owne particular ſaluation. Anſ. The propoſition is falſe, vnleſſe it be ſupplied with a clauſe on this manner: Where there is no word of promiſe, nor any thing that doth conuertuale a particular promiſe, there is no faith. But (ſay they) there is no ſuch particular word. It is true, God doth not ſpeake to men particularly, Beleeue thou, and thou ſhalt be ſaued. But yet doth he that which is anſwerable hereunto, in that hee giueth a generall promiſe, with a commaundement to applie the ſame: and hath ordained the holy miniſterie of the word to applie the ſame to the perſons of the hearers in his owne name: and that is as much as if the Lorde himſelfe ſhould ſpeake ſpeake to men particularly. To ſpeake more plainly: in the Scripture the promiſes of ſaluation bee indefinitely propounded: it ſaith not any where, if Iohn will beleeue, he ſhall be ſaued, or if Peter will beleeue he ſhall be ſaued; but whoſoeuer beleeueth ſhall be ſaued. Nowe then comes the miniſter of the word, who ſtanding in the roome of God, & in the ſtead of Chriſt himſelfe, takes the indefinite promiſes of the Goſpell, and laies them to the hearts of euery particular man: and this in effect is as much as if Chriſt himſelfe ſhould ſay, Cornelius beleeue thou, and thou ſhalt be ſaued: Peter beleeue thou, and thou ſhalt be ſaued. It is anſwered, that this applying of the Goſpell is vppon condition of mens faith and repentance, and that men are deceiued touching their owne faith and repentance: and therefore faile in applying the word vnto themſelues. Anſ. Indeede this manner of applying is falſe in all hypocrites, heretickes, and vnrepentant perſons: for they apply vpon carnal preſumption, and not by faith. Neuertheleſſe it is true in all the elect hauing the ſpirit of grace, and praier: for when God in the miniſterie of the worde beeing his owne ordinance, ſaith, Seeke ye my face: the heart of Gods children truely anſwereth, O Lord, I will ſeeke thy face, Pſal. 17. 8. And when God ſhall ſay, Thou art my people, they ſhall ſay againe, The Lord is my God, Zach. 13. 6. And it is a truth of God, that he which beleeueth knoweth that he beleeueth: and he that truelie repenteth knoweth that hee repenteth: vnleſſe it bee in the beginning of our conuerſion, and in the time of diſtreſſe & temptation. Otherwiſe what thankfulneſſe can there be for grace receiued?

Obiect. 11. It is no article of the Creed, that a man muſt beleeue his owne ſaluation: and therefore no man is bound thereto, Anſwer. By this argument it appeares plainely, that the very pillars of the church of Rome doe not vnderſtand the Creede: for in that which is commonly called the Apoſtles Creed, euery article implieth in it this particular faith. And in the firſt article, I beleeue in God, are three things contained: the firſt, to beleeue that there is a God, the ſecond to beleeue the ſame God to bee my God, the third to put my confidence in him for my ſaluation: and ſo much containe the other articles, which are concerning God. When Thomas ſaide, Ioh. 20. 28. My God, Chriſt anſwered, Thou haſt beleeued Thomas. Where we ſee that to beleeue in God, is to beleeue God to bee our God. And Pſal. 78. 22. to beleeue in God and to put truſt in him are all one, They beleeued not in God, and truſted not in his helpe. And the articles concerning Remiſſion of ſinnes and Life euerlaſting, doe include, and we in them acknowledge our ſpeciall faith concerning our owne ſaluation. For to beleeue this or that, is to beleeue there is ſuch a thing, and that the ſame thing belongs to mee: as when Dauid ſaide, I ſhould haue fainted except I had beleeued to ſee the goodnes of the Lord in the land of the liuing. Pſa. 27. 13. It is anſwered, that in thoſe articles wee onely profeſſe our ſelues to beleeue remiſſion of ſinnes, and life euerlaſting to bee vouchſafed to the people and Church of God. Anſw. This indeede is the expoſition of many, but it ſtandes not with common reaſon. For if that bee all the faith that is there confeſſed, the deuill hath as good a faith as wee. Hee knoweth and beleeueth that there is a God: and that this God imparteth remiſſion of ſinnes and life euerlaſting to his Church. And to the ende that wee being Gods children, may in faith goe beyond all the deuils in hell, wee muſt further beleeue, that remiſſion of ſinnes and life euerlaſting belong vnto vs: and vnleſſe we doe particularly apply the ſaid articles vnto our ſelues, we ſhall little or nothing differ from the deuil, in making confeſſion of faith.

Obiect. III. We are taught to pray for the pardon of our ſinnes day by day, Mat. 6. 12. and all this were needeleſſe, if wee could be aſſured of pardon in this life. Anſ. The fourth petition muſt be vnderſtoode not ſo much of our olde debts or ſinnes, as of our preſent and newe ſinnes: for as we goe on from day to day, ſo wee adde ſinne to ſinne: and for the pardon of them muſt we humble our ſelues and pray. I anſwere againe, that wee pray for the pardon of our ſinnes; not becauſe wee haue no aſſurance thereof, but becauſe our aſſurance is weake and ſmall: we grow on from grace to grace in Chriſt, as children doe to mans eſtate by little and little. The heart of euery beleeuer is like a veſſell with a narrowe necke, which beeing caſt into the ſea is not filled at the firſt: but by reaſon of the ſtraight paſſage, receiueth water drop by droppe. God giueth vnto vs in Chriſt euen a ſea of mercie, but the ſame on our parts is apprehended and receiued only by little and little, as faith groweth from age to age: and this is the cauſe why men hauing aſſu-

rance pray for more.

Our reaſons to the contrarie.

Reaſon I. The firſt reaſon may be taken from the nature of faith, on this manner. True faith is both an vnfallible aſſurance and a particular aſſurance of the remiſſion of ſinnes and of life euerlaſting. And therefore by this faith, a man may be certenly and particularly aſſured of the remiſsion of ſinnes and life euerlaſting. That this reaſon may be of force, two things muſt be proued: firſt that true faith is a certaine aſſurance of Gods mercy to that partie in whom it is. Secondly that faith is a particular aſſurance thereof. For the firſt, that faith is a certaine aſſurance, Chriſt ſaith to Peter, Math. 14. 31. O thou of little faith wherefore diddeſt thou doubt? Where he maketh an oppoſition betweene faith and doubting: thereby giuing vs directly to vnderſtand, that to be certaine, and to giue aſſurance, is of the nature of faith. Rom. 4. 20. 22. Paul ſaith of Abraham, that hee did not doubt of the promiſe of God through vnbeleefe: but was ſtrengthened in faith, and gaue glorie to God, being fully aſſured, that hee which had promiſed was able to doe it: where I obſerue firſt, that doubting is made a fruit of vnbeleefe: and therfore vnfallible certentie and aſſurance, being contrary to doubting muſt needes proceede from true faith: conſidering that contrary effects come of contrary cauſes: and contrary cauſes produce contrary effects. Secondly, I note that the ſtrength of Abrahams faith, did ſtand in fulneſſe of aſſurance: for the text ſaith, he was ſtrengthened in the faith, being fully aſſured: and againe, Heb. 11. 1. true ſauing faith is ſaide to be the ground and ſubſiſtance of things hoped for: and the euidence or demonſtration of thinges that are not ſeene: but faith can be no ground or euidence of thinges, vnleſſe it be for nature certentie it ſelfe; and thus the firſt point is manifeſt. The ſecond, that ſauing faith is a particular aſſurance, is proued by this, that the propertie of faith is to apprehend and apply the promiſe, and the thing promiſed, Chriſt with his benefits. Ioh. 1. 12. As many, ſaith S. Iohn, as receiued him, to them he gaue power to be the ſonnes of God, namely to them that beleeue in his name. In theſe wordes to beleeue in Chriſt, & to receiue Chriſt, are put for one and the ſame thing. Now to receiue Chriſt, is to apprehend and apply him with all his benefits vnto our ſelues, as hee is offered in the promiſes of the Goſpell. For in the ſixt chapter following, firſt of all hee ſets forth himſelfe not onely as a Redeemer generally, but alſo as the bread of life and the water of life: ſecondly, he ſets forth his beſt hearers as eaters of his bodie and drinkers of his blood; and thirdly hee intendes to prooue this concluſion, that to eate his bodie and to drinke his bloode, and to beleeue in him, are all one. Nowe then if Chriſt be as food, and if to eate and drinke the bodie and blood of Chriſt bee to beleeue in him, then muſt there be a proportion betweene eating and beleeuing. Looke then as there can bee no eating without taking or receiuing of meate, ſo no beleeuing in Chriſt without a ſpirituall receiuing and apprehending of him. And as the body hath his hand, mouth, and ſtomacke whereby it taketh, receiueth, and digeſteth meate for the nouriſhment of euery part: ſo likewiſe in the ſoule there is a faith, which is both hand, mouth, and ſtomack to apprehend, receiue, and applie Chriſt and all his merits for the nouriſhment of the ſoule. And Paul ſaith yet more plainly, that through faith we receiue the promiſe of the ſpirit. Gal. 3. 14.

Now as the propertie of apprehending and applying of Chriſt belongeth to faith, ſo it agreeth not to hope, loue, confidence, or any other gift or grace of God. But firſt by faith we muſt apprehend Chriſt & applie him to our ſelues before wee can haue any hope or confidence in him. And this applying ſeemes not to be done by any affection of the will, but by a ſupernaturall act of the mind, which is to acknowledge, ſet downe, and beleeue that remiſſion of ſinnes, and life euerlaſting by the merit of Chriſt, belong to vs particularly. To this which I haue ſaide agreeth Auguſtine. Tract. 25. on Iohn. Why prepareſt thou teeth and belly? beleeue and thou haſt eaten: and Tract. 50. How ſhall I reach my hand into heauen that I may hold him ſitting there? Send vp thy faith and thou laieſt hold on him. And Barnard ſaith, homil. in Cant. 16. Where hee is thou canſt not come nowe——: yet go to follow him and ſeeke him——; beleeue and thou haſt found him: for to beleeue is to finde. Chryſoſt. on Mark. homil. 10. Let vs beleeue and we ſee Ieſus preſent before vs. Ambroſe on Luk. lib. 6. c. 8. By faith Chriſt is touched, by faith Chriſt is ſeene. Tertull. de reſur. car. He muſt be chewed by vnderſtanding, and be digeſted by faith.

Reaſon II. Whatſoeuer the holy Ghoſt teſtifieth vnto vs, that wee may, yea that wee muſt certainly by faith beleeue: but the the holy Ghoſt doeth particularly teſtifie vnto vs our adoption, the remiſſion of our ſinnes, and the ſaluation of our ſoules: and therefore wee may and muſt particularly and certainely by faith beleeue the ſame. The firſt part of the reaſon is true, & cannot be denied of any. The ſecond part is prooued thus: S. Paul ſaith, Rom. 8.15. We haue not receiued the ſpirit of bondage to feare: but the ſpirit of adoption, whereby wee crie Abba, father: adding further, that the ſame ſpirit beareth witneſſe with our ſpirits, that we are the children of God. Where the Apoſtle maketh two witneſſes of our adoption: the ſpirit of God, and our ſpirits, that is, the cõſcience ſanctified by the holy Ghoſt. The Papiſts to elude this reaſon, alleadge that the ſpirit of God doeth indeede witneſſe of our adoption, by ſome comfortable feelings of Gods loue & fauour, being ſuch as are weake and oftentimes deceitfull. But by their leaues, the teſtimonie of the ſpirit is more then a bare ſenſe or feeling of Gods grace: for it is called the pledge and earneſt of Gods ſpirit in our hearts, 2. Cor. 1.22. and therefore it is fit to take away al occaſion of doubting of our ſaluation: as in a bargaine the earneſt is giuen between the parties to put all out of queſtion. Bernard ſaith, that the teſtimonie of the ſpirit is a moſt ſure teſtimonie. Epiſt. 107.

Reaſon. III. That which we muſt pray for by gods commandement, that we muſt beleeue: but euery man is to pray for the pardon of his owne ſinnes, and for life euerlaſting; of this there is no queſtion: therefore he is bound to beleeue the ſame. The propoſition is moſt of all doubtfull: but it is prooued thus. In euery petition there muſt be two things: a deſire of the things we aske, & a particular faith whereby we beleeue, that the thing we aske ſhall be giuen vnto vs. So Chriſt ſaith, Whatſoeuer ye deſire when you pray, beleeue that you ſhal haue it, and it ſhall be giuen vnto you. Mar. 11,24 And S. Iohn further noteth out of this particular faith, calling it our aſſurance that God will giue vnto vs, whatſoeuer wee aske according to his will. 1. Ioh. 5.14 And hence it is, that in euery petition there muſt be two grounds: a commandement to warrant vs in making a petition, and a promiſe to aſſure vs of the accompliſhment therof. And vpõ both theſe followes neceſſarily an application of the things which we aske to our ſelues.

Reaſon. IV. Whatſoeuer God commaundeth in the Goſpell, that a man muſt and can performe: but God in the Goſpel commandeth vs to beleeue the pardon of our owne ſinnes, and life euerlaſting: and therefore we muſt beleeue thus much, and may be aſſured thereof. This propoſition is plaine by the diſtinction of the cõmaundements of the lawe, and of the Goſpell. The commaundements of the lawe ſhewe vs what we muſt doe, but miniſter no power to performe the thing to be done: but the doctrine and commandements of the Goſpell doe otherwiſe: and therefore they are called ſpirit and life: God with the cõ- Ioh. 6,63 maundement giuing grace that the thing preſcribed may bee done. Nowe this is a commandement of the Goſpell, to beleeue remiſſion of ſinnes: for it was the ſubſtãce of Chriſts miniſterie, repent and beleeue the Goſpell. And that is not generally to beleeue that Chriſt is a Sauiour, and that the promiſes made in him are true (for ſo the deuils beleeue with trembling) but it is particularly to beleeue that Chriſt is my Sauiour, and that the promiſes of ſaluation in Chriſt belong in ſpeciall to me, as S. Iohn ſaith: This is his commaundement, that we beleeue in the name of Ieſus Chriſt: nowe to beleeue in Chriſt is to put confidence in him: which none can doe, vnleſſe hee be firſt aſſured of his loue and fauour. And therefore in as much, as we are inioyned to put our confidence in Chriſt, wee are alſo ioyned to beleeue our reconciliation with him, which ſtandeth in the remiſſion of our ſinnes, and our acceptation to life euerlaſting.

Reaſon V. Whereas the Papiſts teach, that a man may be aſſured of his ſaluation by hope: euen hence it followes, that hee may be vnfallibly aſſured thereof. For the property of true and liuely hope is neuer to make a man aſhamed. Rom. 5.5. And true hope followeth faith & preſuppoſeth certaintie of faith; neither can any man truly hope for his ſaluation vnleſſe by faith hee be certainely aſſured thereof in ſome meaſure.

The Popiſh doctors make exception to theſe reaſons on this manner. Firſt they ſay, it cannot be prooued that a man is as certaine of his ſaluation by faith, as he is of the articles of the Creede, I anſwere. Firſt they prooue thus much, that wee ought to be as certain of the one as of the other. For looke, what commaundement we haue to beleeue the articles of our faith: the like we haue inioyning vs to beleeue the pardon of our owne ſinnes, as I haue prooued. Secondly, condly, theſe arguments proue it to bee the nature or eſſentiall propertie of faith, as certainely to aſſure man of his ſaluation, as it doth aſſure him of the articles which hee beleeueth. And howſoeuer commonly men doe not beleeue their ſaluation as vnfallible, as they doe their articles of faith: yet ſome ſpeciall men doe, hauing Gods word applyed by the ſpirit as a ſure ground of their faith, whereby they beleeue their owne ſaluation, as they haue it for a ground of the articles of their faith. Thus certainely was Abraham aſſured of his owne ſaluation: as alſo the Prophets and Apoſtles, and the martyrs of God in all ages: whereupon without doubting they haue beene content to lay down their liues for the name of Chriſt: in whome they were aſſured to receiue eternall happineſſe. And there is no queſtion, but there bee many now, that by long and often experience of Gods mercie, and by the inward certificate of the holy ghoſt, haue attained to full aſſurance of their ſaluation.

II. Exception. Howſoeuer a man may be aſſured of his preſent eſtate, yet no man is certaine of his perſeuerance vnto the ende. Anſ. It is otherwiſe: for in the ſixt petition, Leade vs not into temptation, wee pray that God would not ſuffer vs to bee wholly ouercome of the deuill in any tẽptation: and to this petition wee haue a promiſe anſwerable, 1, Cor, 10. That God with temptation will giue an iſſue: and therefore howſoeuer the deuill may buffet, moleſt, and wound the ſeruants of God, yet ſhall he neuer bee able to ouercome them. Againe, hee that is once a member of Chriſt, can neuer be wholly cut off. And if any by ſinne were wholly ſeuered from Chriſt for a time, in his recouerie hee is to be baptized the ſecond time: for baptiſme is the ſacrament of initiation or ingrafting into Chriſt. By this reaſon we ſhould as often be baptized as we fall into any ſin, which is abſud. Againe S. Iohn ſaith, 1, Iohn. 2. 19, They went out from vs, but they were not of vs: for if they had beene of vs, they would haue continued with vs. Where hee taketh it for granted, that ſuch as bee once in Chriſt ſhall neuer wholly be ſeuered or fall from him. Though our communion with Chriſt may bee leſſened, yet the vnion and the bond of coniunction is neuer diſſolued.

III. Exception. They ſay, we are indeede to beleeue our ſaluation on Gods part: but we muſt needs doubt in regard of our ſelues: becauſe the promiſes of remiſſion of ſinnes are giuen vpon condition of mans faith and repentance. Now we cannot (ſay they) be aſſured that we haue true faith and repentãce, becauſe we may lie in ſecret ſinnes; and ſo want that indeede, which we ſuppoſe our ſelues to haue, Anſ. I ſay againe, he that doth truely repent and beleeue, doeth by Gods grace knowe that hee doth repent and beleeue: for elſe Paul would neuer haue ſaide: Proue your ſelues whither you bee in the faith or not: and the ſame Apoſtle faith. 2. Cor. 12: Wee haue not receiued the ſpirit of the world; but the ſpirit which is of God, that wee might know the things which are giuen of God: which things are not onely life euerlaſting, but iuſtification, ſanctification, and ſuch like. And as for ſecret ſinnes, they cannot make our repentance voide: for hee that truely repenteth of his knowne ſinnes, repenteth alſo of ſuch as be vnknowne, and receiueth the pardon of them all. God requireth not an expreſſe or ſpeciall repentance of vnknowne ſinnes: but accepts it as ſufficient, if wee repent of them generally: as Dauid ſaith, Pſal. 19. Who knowes the errours of this life? forgiue me my ſecret ſinnes. And whereas they adde that faith and repentance muſt be ſufficient: I anſwere, that the ſufficiencie of our faith and repentance, ſtandes in the truth and not in the meaſure or perfection thereof; and the trueth of both, where they are, is certenly diſcerned.

Reaſon. IV. The iudgement of the auncient (a) Church: Auguſt. Of an euill ſeruant thou art made a good: therefore preſume not of thine owne dooing, but of the grace of Chriſt: it is not arrogancie but faith; to acknowledge what thou haſt receiued, is not pride but deuotion. And, Let no man aske another man, but returne to his owne heart: if he finde charity there, he hath ſecuritie for his paſſage from life to death. Hilar. on Math. 5. The kingdome of Heauen which our Lord profeſſed to be in himſelfe, his will is that it muſt bee hoped for without any doubtfulneſſe of vncertaine will. Otherwiſe there is no iuſtification by faith, if faith it ſelfe bee made doubtfull. Bernard in his Epiſt. 107. Who is the iuſt man but hee that being loued of God, loues him againe: which comes not to paſſe but by the ſpirit reuealing by Faith the eternall purpoſe of God of his ſaluation to come. Which reuelation is nothing elſe but infuſion of ſpirituall grace: by which, when the deedes of the fleſh are mortified the man is prepared to the kingdome of heauen——. Together receiuing in one spirit that whereby he may presume that he is loued and also loue againe——.

To conclude, the Papists haue no great cause to dissent from vs in this point. For they teach and professe, that they doe by a speciall faith beleeue their owne saluation certenly and vnfallibly in respect of God, that promiseth. Now the thing which hindreth them is their owne disposition and vnworthinesse (as they say) which keepes them from being certen otherwise then in a likely hope. But this hinderance is easily remooued, if men will iudge indifferently. For first of all in regarde of our selues and our disposition we cannot bee certen at all, but must despaire of saluation euen to the verie death. We cannot be sufficiently disposed so long as we liue in this world, but must alwaies say with Iacob, I am lesse then all thy mercies, Gen. 32. and with Dauid, Enter not into iudgement with thy seruant, O Lord; for none liuing shall bee iustified in thy sight: and with the Centurion, Lord, I am not worthy that thou shouldest come vnder my roofe: Math, 8, Secondly, God in making promise of saluation respects not mens worthinesse, For he chose vs to life euerlasting when we were not: he redeemed vs from death beeing enemies; and intitles vs to the promise of saluation, If we acknowledge our selues to be sinners, mat. 9, if we labour and trauell vnder the burden of them. Matth. 11. If we hunger and thirst after grace. Ioh. 7. 37. And these things we may certenly and sensibly perceiue in our selues, and when wee finde them in vs, though our vnworthinesse be exceeding great, it should not hinder our assurance. For God makes manifest his power in our weakenes, 2. Cor. 12, and he wil not breake the bruised reed, nor quench the smoaking flaxe, Isa. 42. Thirdly if a man loue God for his mercies sake, and haue a true hope of saluation by Christ, hee is in Chtist and hath fellowship with him: and he that is in Christ, hath all his vnworthinesse & wants laid on Christ, and they are couered and pardoned in his death; and in respect of our selues thus considered As wee are in Christ, wee haue no cause to wauer, but to be certen of our saluation, and that in regard of our selues.

The fourth point: touching the iustification of a sinner.

That we may see how farre wee are to agree with them and where to differ, first I will set downe the doctrine on both parts, and secondly the maine differences wherein we are to stand against them, euen to death.

Our doctrine touching the iustification of a sinner, I propound in foure rules.

Rule. I. That iustification is an action of God, whereby he absolueth a sinner, & accepteth him to life euerlasting for the righteousnes and merit of Christ.

Rule. II. That iustification standes in two things: first in the remission of sinnes by the merit of Christ his death: secondly, the imputation of Christ his righteousnes; which is another action of God whereby he accounteth and esteemeth that righteousnes which is in Christ, as the righteousnes of that sinner which beleeueth in him. By Christ his righteousnesse we are to vnderstād two things, first his sufferings specially in his death & passion, secondly his obedience in fulfilling the law: both which goe togither: for Christ in suffering obeied, and obeying suffered. And the very shedding of his bloode to which our saluation is ascribed, must not onely be considered as it is passiue; that is, a suffering, but also as it is actiue; that is, an obedience, in which he shewed his exceeding loue both to his father and vs, and thus fulfilled the law for vs. This point if some had well thought on, they would not haue placed all iustification in remission of sinnes as they doe.

Rule III. That iustification is frō Gods meere mercie & grace, procured onely by the merit of Christ.

Rule, IV. That man is iustified by faith alone: becanse faith is that alone instrument created in the hart by the holy ghost whereby a sinner layeth hold of Christ his righteousnesse, and applieth the same vnto himselfe. There is neither hope, nor loue, nor any other grace of God within man, that can do this but faith alone.

The doctrine of the Romane Church touching the iustification of a sinner is on this manner.

I. They hold that before iustification there goes a preparation therunto which is an action wrought partely by the Holie ghost, and partly by the power of naturall freewill, wherby a man disposeth himselfe to his owne future iustification.

In the preparation they consider of the ground of iustification, and things proceeding from it. The ground is faith, which they they define to bee a generall knowledge, whereby wee vnderſtand and beleeue that the doctrine of the worde of God is true. Thinges proceeding from this faith, are theſe; a ſight of our ſinnes; a feare of hell, hope of ſaluation, loue of God; repentance and ſuch like, all which, when men haue attained, they are then fully diſpoſed, (as they ſay,) to their iuſtification.

This preparation being made, then comes iuſtification it ſelfe: which is an action of God, whereby he maketh a man righteous. It hath two parts: the firſt, and the ſecond. The firſt is when a ſinner of an euill man is made a good man. And to effect this. two thinges are required: firſt the pardon of ſinne, which is one part of the firſt iuſtification: ſecondly the infuſion of inward righteouſneſſe, whereby the heart is purged & ſanctified, & this habite of righteouſnes ſtands ſpecially in hope & charitie.

After the firſt iuſtification, followeth the ſecond; which is, when a man of a good or iuſt man is made better and more iuſt: and this, ſay they, may proceede from workes of grace: becauſe he which is righteous by the firſt iuſtification, can bringe forth good workes: by the merit whereof he is able to make himſelfe more iuſt and righteous: & yet they graunt that the firſt iuſtification commeth only of Gods mercie by the merit of Chriſt.

I. Our conſent and difference.

Now let vs come to the points of difference betweene vs and them touching iuſtification.

The firſt maine difference is the matter thereof, which ſhall bee ſeene by the aunſwere both of Proteſtant and Papiſt to this one queſtion What is the very thing, that cauſeth a man to ſtand righteous before God, and to be accepted to life euerlaſting; we aunſwer. Nothing but the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt. which conſiſteth partly in his ſufferings. and partly in his actiue obedience in fulfilling the rigour of the law. And here let vs conſider, howe neere the Papiſts come to this anſwer, and wherein they diſſent.

Conſent. I. They graunt that in iuſtification ſinne is pardoned by the merits of Chriſt, and that none can bee iuſtified without remiſſion of ſinnes, and that is well.

II. They graunt, that the righteouſnes, wnerby a man is made righteous before God, commeth from Chriſt, and from Chriſt alone.

III. The moſt learned among them ſay, that Chriſt his ſatisfaction, and the merit of his death is imputed to euery ſinner that doth beleeue, for his ſatisfaction before God: and hitherto we agree. Bellarm. de iuſtif. lib. 2 cap. 7.

The verie point of difference is this: we hold that the ſatisfaction made by Chriſt in his death, and obedience to the lawe is imputed to vs and becomes our righteouſneſſe. They ſay, it is our ſatisfaction; and not our righteouſneſſe, whereby wee ſtand righteous before God: becauſe it is inherent in the perſon of Chriſt as a ſubiect. Now the anſwer of the Papiſt to the former queſtion is on this manner: The thing (ſaith he) that maketh vs righteous before God, and cauſeth vs to be accepted to life euerlaſting, is remiſſion of ſins, & the habite of inward righteouſnes; or charitie with the fruits therof. We condiſcend and graunt that the habite of righteouſneſſe, which we cal ſanctification, is an excellent gift of God, and hath his reward of God; & is the matter of our iuſtification before man; becauſe it ſerueth to declare vs to be reconciled to God, and to be iuſtified; yet we denie it to be the thing, which maketh vs of ſinners to become righteous or iuſt before God.

And this is the firſt point of our diſagreement in the matter of iuſtification: which muſt be marked: becauſe if there were no more points of difference between vs, this one alone were ſufficient to keepe vs from vniting of our religions: for hereby the Church of Rome doth raſe the very foundation.

Now let vs ſee by what reaſons we iuſtifie our doctrine: and ſecondly anſwere the contrarie obiections.

Our reaſons.

Reaſon. I. That verie thing which muſt bee our righteouſnes before God, muſt ſatisfie the iuſtice of the law, which ſaith, doe theſe things and thou ſhalt liue. Nowe there is nothing can ſatisfie the iuſtice of the law but the righteouſnes or obedience of Chriſt for vs. If any alleadge ciuill iuſtice, it is nothing: for Chriſt ſaith. Except your righteouſneſſe exceede the righteouſneſſe of the Scribes and Phariſes, yee cannot enter into the kingdome of Heauen. What? ſhall wee ſay that workes doe make vs iuſt? that cannot be: for all mens workes are defectiue in reſpect of the iuſtice of the law. Shal we ſay our ſanctification, whereby we are renewed to the image of God in righteouſ-neſſe and true holineſſe? that alſo is imperfect and cannot ſatisfie Gods iuſtice required in the lawe: as Iſai hath ſaid of himſelfe and the people, All our righteouſneſſe is as a menſtruous cloath. To haue a cleare conſcience before God is a principall part of inward righteouſnes: and of it Paul in his owne perſon ſaith thus. I am priuy to nothing by my ſelfe, yet am I not iuſtified thereby. 2. Cor 4.4. Therefore nothing can procure vnto vs an abſolution and repentance to life euerlaſting, but Chriſts imputed righteouſnes. And this will appeare, if we doe conſider, how we muſt come one day before Gods iudgement ſeat, there to bee iudged in th: rigour of iuſtice: for then wee muſt bring ſome thing that may counteruaile the iuſtice of God; not hauing onely acceptation in mercie, but alſo approbation in iuſtice: God being not onely mercifull, but alſo a iuſt iudge.

II, Reaſon, 2: Cor, 5.21. He which knewe no ſinne, was made ſinne for vs, that wee might be made the righteouſnes of God which is in him. Whence I reaſon thus: as Chriſt was made ſinne for vs, ſo are we made the righteouſneſſe of God in him: but Chriſt was made ſinne, or, ſinner by imputation of our ſinnes, hee beeing in himſelfe moſt holy: therefore a ſinner is made righteous before God, in that Chriſtes righteouſneſſe is imputed and applied vnto him. Now if any ſhall ſay, that man is iuſtified by righteouſneſſe infuſed: then by like reaſon. I ſay Chriſt was made ſin for vs by infuſion of ſinne, which to ſay, is blaſphemie. And the expoſition of this place by Saint Hierome is not to bee deſpiſed. Chriſt (ſaith he) being offered for our ſinnes tooke the name of ſinne, that wee might bee made the righteouſneſſe of GOD in him, Not ours nor in vs. If this righteouſneſſe of God be neither ours nor in vs, then it can be no inherent righteouſneſſe, but muſt needes be righteouſneſſe imputed. And Chryſoſtome on this place ſaith, It is called Gods righteouſneſſe, becauſe it is not of Workes and becauſe it muſt be without all ſtaine or want; and this cannot be inherent righteouſneſſe. Anſelme ſaith, Hee is made ſinne as we are made iuſtice: not ours but Gods: not in vs but in him: as he is made ſinne not his owne but ours: not in himſelfe, but in vs.

Reaſon. III. Rom. 5.19. As by one mans diſobedience many were made ſinners: ſo by the obedience of one, ſhall many bee made righteous: marke, heere is a compariſon betweene the firſt and the ſecond Adam. And here I reaſon thus. As by the diſobedience of the firſt Adam men were made ſinners: ſo by the obedience of the ſecond Adam, are we made righteous. Now we are not onely made ſinners by propagation of natural corruption, but by imputation. For Adams firſt ſinne was the eating of the forbidden fruit: which verie act is no perſonal offece, but is imputed to all his poſteritie, in whome we haue all ſinned. The (a) Fathers call this verie ſinne Adams hand writing, making vs debters vnto God. And therefore in like manner the obedience of Chriſt is made the righteouſneſſe of euerie beleeuer, not by infuſion but by imputation.

(a) Iren. li. 5. c. 17. Chryſoſt. homil. 20 Neoph.

IV. Reaſon. A ſatisfaction made for the want of that iuſtice or obediēce which the lawe requires at our handes, is accepted of God as the iuſtice it ſelf. But Chriſts obedience is a ſatisfaction made for the want of that iuſtice or obedience which the law requires, as the Papiſts themſelues auouch. Therefore this ſatisfaction is our iuſtice. And me thinks, the Papiſts vpon this conſideration haue little cauſe to diſſent from vs. For if they make Chriſts obedience their ſatisfaction, why ſhould they not fully cloſe handes with vs, and make it their iuſtice alſo.

V. Reaſon. The conſent of the auncient Church. Bernard ſaith, epiſt. 190. The iuſtice of another is aſſigned vnto man, who wanted his owne: man was indebted and man made paiment. The ſatisfaction of one is imputed to all. And, why may not iuſtice bee from another, as well as guiltineſſe is from another? And in Cant. ſerm. 25. It ſufficeth me for all righteouſneſſe, to haue him alone mercifull to me, againſt whome I haue ſinned. And. Not to ſinne is Gods iuſtice, mans iuſtice is the mercifulneſſe of God. And ſerm. 61, Shall I ſing mine owne righteouſneſſe? Lorde I will remember thy righteouſneſſe alone: for it is mine alſo: in that euen thou art made vnto me righteouſneſſe of God. What, ſhall I feare leaſt that one bee not ſufficient for vs both? it is not a ſhort cloke that cannot couer two: it will couer both thee and me largely, being both a large and eternall iuſtice. Auguſt. on Pſal. 22. Hee prayeth for our faults, and hath made our faults his faults, that he might make his iuſtice our iuſtice.

Obiections of Papiſts.

Obiections of the Papiſts prooving inherent righteouſneſſe to be in the matter of our iuſtice before God, are theſe. I. Obiect. It is abſurd, that one man ſhould be made righteous by the righteouſnes nes of an other: for it is as much as if one man were made wiſe by the wiſdome of an other. Anſw. It is true, that no man can be made righteous by the perſonall righteouſnes of another, becauſe it pertaines only to one man. And becauſe the wiſedome that is in one man, is his altogether wholly, it cannot be the wiſdome of an other: no more then the health and life of one bodie, can be the health of another. But it is otherwiſe with the righteouſneſſe of Chriſt: it is his indeede, becauſe it is inherent in him as a ſubiect: it is not his alone, but his and ours together by the tenour of the couenāt of grace. Chriſt as he is a Mediatour is giuen to euerie beleeuer as really and truly, as land is giuen from man to man: and with him are giuen all thinges that concerne ſaluation: they being made ours by Gods free gift; among which, is Chriſt his righteouſnes. By it therefore, as being a thing of our owne, wee may bee iuſtified before God, and accepted to life euerlaſting.

II. Obiect: If a ſinner bee iuſtified by Chriſt his righteouſnes, then euery beleeuer ſhall be as righteous as Chriſt: & that cannot be. Anſw. The propoſition is falſe: for Chriſt his righteouſneſſe is not applied to vs according as it is in Chriſt: neither according to the ſame meaſure: nor the ſame manner. For his obedience in fulfilling the lawe, is aboue Adams righteouſnes, yea aboue the righteouſnes of all Angels. For they were all but creatures, and their obedience is the obedience or righteouſnes of God: ſo tearmed Rom. 1. 17. 18. 2, Cor. 5. 21. not onely becauſe God accepted of it, but becauſe it was in that perſon, which is verie God. When Chriſt obeied, God obeyed: and when hee ſuffered, God ſuffered; not becauſe the godhead ſuffered or performed any obedience, but becauſe the perſon which according to one nature is God, performed obedience and ſuffered. And by this meanes his righteouſnes is of infinite value, price, merit, and efficacie. Hence alſo it commeth to paſſe, that this obedience of Chriſt ſerueth not only for the iuſtifying of ſome one perſon (as (a) Adams did) but of all and euerie one of the Elect: yea it is ſufficient to iuſtifie many thouſand worldes. Now to come to the point, this righteouſneſſe that is in Chriſt, in his largeneſſe and meaſure: is pertaining to vs in a more narrow ſkantling: becauſe it is only receiued by faith (b) ſo farre forth, as it ſerueth to iuſtifie any particular beleeuer. But they vrge the reaſon further, ſaying: If Chriſt his righteouſnes be the righteouſnes of euerie beleeuer, then euerie man ſhould be a Sauiour: which is abſurd. Anſ. I anſwere as before and yet more plainly thus: Chriſt his righteouſnes is imputed to the perſon of this or that man, not as it is the price of redemption for all mankind, but as it is the price of redemption for one particular man: as for example, Chriſt his righteouſneſſe is imputed to Peter, not as it is the price of redemption for all, but as it is the price of redemption for Peter. And therefore Chriſt his righteouſneſſe is not applyed to any one ſinner in that largenes and meaſure, in which it is in the perſon of Chriſt: but onely ſo farre forth as it ſerueth to ſatisfie the law for the ſaid ſinner, and to make his perſon accepted of God as righteous, and no further.

III. Obiect. If wee bee made righteous by Chriſt his righteouſnes truely, then Chriſt is a ſinner truely by our ſinnes; but Chriſt is not indeede a ſinner by our ſinnes Anſ: Wee may with reuerence to his Maieſtie in good manner ſay, that Chriſt was a ſinner and that truly: not by any infuſion of ſinne into his moſt holy perſon, but becauſe our ſinnes were laide on him; thus ſaith the holy Ghoſt, hee which knew no ſinne was made ſinne for vs, and hee was counted with ſinners. Iſa. 53. 12. yet ſo, as euen then in himſelfe he was without blot, yea more holy then all men and Angels. On this manner ſaid Chryſoſtome, 2, Cor. 3, God permitted Chriſt to be condemned as a ſinner. Againe, He made the iuſt one to bee a ſinner: that he might make ſinners iuſt. A

IV. Obiect. If man bee made righteous by imputation, then God iudgeth ſinners to be righteous: but God iudgeth no ſinner to bee righteous, for it is abomination to the Lord. Anſ. When God iuſtifieth a ſinner by Chriſt his righteouſneſſe, at the ſame time he ceaſeth in regard of guiltines to be a ſinner: and to whome God imputeth righteouſnes, them hee ſatisfieth at the very ſame inſtant by his holy Spirit: giuing alſo vnto originall corruption his deadly wouud.

V. Obiect. That which Adam neuer loſt, was neuer giuen by Chriſt: but hee neuer loſt imputed righteouſnes: therefore it was neuer giuen vnto him. Anſwer. The propoſition is not true: for ſauing faith, that was neuer loſt by Adam, is giuen to vs in Christ: and Adam neuer had this priuiledge; that after the first grace should follow the (a) second: and therfore being left to himselfe: he fell from God: and yet this mercie is vouchsafed to all beleeuers, that after the first conuersion God will still confirme them with new grace: and by this meanes, they perseuere vnto the ende. And whereas they say, that Adam had not imputed righteousnesse. I answer, that he had the same for substance, though not for the manner of applying by imputation.

(a) we haue & posse & velle, he had no more but posse si vellet, & he wanted velle quod posset. August de corrept & grat. cap. 11.

VI. Obiect. Iustification is eternall; but the imputation of Christ his righteousnesse is not eternall, for it ceaseth in the ende of this life: therefore it is not that which iustifieth a sinner. Answ. The imputation of Christs righteousnesse is euerlasting: for he that is esteemed righteous in this life by Christ his righteousnesse, is accepted as righteous for euer: & the remission of sins granted in this life, is for euer continued. And though sanctification bee perfect in the world to come, yet shall it not iustifie: for we must conceiue it no otherwise after this life, but as a fruit springing from the imputed righteousnesse of Christ, without which it could not be. And a good childe will not cast away the first garment, because his father giues him a second. And what if inward righteousnesse bee perfect in the ende of this life, shall wee therefore make it the matter of our iustification? God forbid. For the righteousnesse whereby sinners are iustified, must be had in the time of this life, before the pangs of death.

II. Difference about the manner of iustification.

All, both Papists and Protestants agree, that a sinner is iustified by faith. This agreement is onely in word, and the difference betweene vs is great indeede. And it may be reduced, to these three heads. First the papist saying that a man is iustified by faith: vnderstandeth a general or a Catholike faith, whereby a man beleeueth the articles of religion to be true. But we hold that the faith whit hiustifieth, is a particular faith wherby we applie to our selues the promises of righteousnesse and life euerlasting by Christ. And that our opinion is the trueth; I haue prooued before: but I will adde a reason or twaine.

I. Reason. The faith whereby we liue, is that faith whereby we are iustified: but the faith whereby wee liue spiritually, is a particular faith whereby wee apply Christ vnto our selues, as Paul saith, Gal. 2. 20. I liue, that is, spiritually, by the faith of the son of God, which faith he sheweth to be a particular faith in Christ, in the very wordes following, who hath loued mee and giuen himselfe for me particularly: & in this maner of beleeuing Paul was and is an example to all that are to be saued. 1. Tim. 1. 16. and Phil. 3. 15.

II. Reason. That which we are to aske of God in prayer, we must beleeue it shall be giuen vs, as we aske it; but in prayer we are to aske the pardon of our owne sins, & the merit of Christs righteousnesse for our selues; therefore we must beleeue the same particularly. The proposition is a rule of Gods word, requiring that in euery petition we bring a particular faith, whereby we beleeue, that the thing lawfully asked, shal be giuen accordingly, Math. 11. 24. The minor is also euident, neither can it be denied: for we are taught by Christ himselfe to pray on this manner, Forgiue vs our debts: and to it we say, Amen, that is, that our petitions shall without doubt bee graunted vnto vs. Aug, serm. de Temp. 182.

And here note, that the church of Rome in the doctrine of iustification by faith cuts off the principall part and propertie therof. For in iustifying faith two thinges are required; first knowledge reuealed in the word touching the meanes of saluation: secondly an applying of things known vnto our selues, which some call affiance. Nowe the first they acknowledge, but the second which is the very substance and principall part thereof they denie.

III. Reason. The iudgement of the auncient Church, August. I demand now, doest thou beleeue in Christ, O sinner? Thou sayest, I beleeue. What beleeuest thou? that all thy sinnes may freely bee pardoned in him. Thou hast that which thou beleeuest, Bernard. The Apostle thinketh that a man is iustified freely by faith. If thou beleeuest that thy sinnes cannot be remitted but by him alone against whome they were committed: but goe further and beleeue this too, that by him thy sinnes are forgiuen thee. This is the testimony which the holy Ghost giueth in the heart: saying, thy sinnes are forgiuen thee. Cyprian God promiseth thee immortality, when thou goest out of this world, and doest thou doubt? This is indeede not to know God, and this is for a member of the Church in the house of faith not to haue faith. If wee beleeue in Christ, let vs beleeue his wordes and promises promiſes, and wee ſhall neuer die. and ſhall come to Chriſt with ioyfull ſecuritie with him to raigne for euer.

The II. difference touching faith in the act of iuſtification, is this. The Papiſt ſaith, wee are iuſtified by faith, becauſe it diſpoſeth a ſinner to his iuſtification after this manner: By faith, (ſaith hee) the minde of man is inlightened in the knowledge of the Law & the goſpell: knowledge ſtirres vp a feare of hell with a conſideration of the promiſe of happineſſe, as alſo the loue and feare of God, and hope of life eternall. Nowe when the heart is thus prepared, God infuſeth the habite of charitie and other vertues, whereby a ſinner is iuſtified before God. We ſay otherwiſe, that faith iuſtifieth becauſe it is a ſupernaturall Inſtrument created by God in the heart of man at his conuerſion, whereby he apprehendeth and receiueth Chriſts righteouſnes for his iuſtification.

In this their doctrine is a twofold errour: I. that they make faith which iuſtifieth, to goe before iuſtification it ſelfe, both for order of nature, as alſo for time: whereas by the word of God, at the very inſtant, when any man beleeueth firſt, he is then iuſtified and ſanctified. For he that beleeueth, eateth and drinketh the bodie and blood of Chriſt, and is alreadie paſſed from death to life. Ioh. 6. 54. The ſecond is, that faith beeing nothing els with them but an illumination of the minde, ſtirreth vp the will: which beeing mooued and helped, cauſeth in the heart many ſpirituall motions: and thereby diſpoſeth man to his future iuſtification. But this indeede is as much as if we ſhould ſay, that dead men onely helped, can prepare themſelues to their future reſurrection. For wee are all by nature dead in ſinne, and therefore muſt not onely bee inlightened in minde, but alſo renewed in will, becauſe we can ſo much as will and deſire that which is good Now we (as I haue ſaid) teach otherwiſe: that faith iuſtifieth as it is an inſtrument to apprehend and applie Chriſt with his obedience; which is the matter of our iuſtification. This is the truth, I proone it thus. In the couenant of grace two things muſt be conſidered: the ſubſtance thereof, and the condition. The ſubſtance of the couenant is, that righteouſneſſe and life euerlaſting is giuen to Gods Church and people by Chriſt. The condition is, that we for our parts, are by faith to receiue the foreſaide benefits: and this condition is by grace as well as the ſubſtance. Now then, that we may attaine to ſaluation by Chriſt, hee muſt bee giuen vnto vs really, as he is propounded in the tenour of the foreſaide couenant. And for the giuing of Chriſt, God hath appointed ſpeciall ordinances, as the preaching of the word; and the adminiſtration of the Sacraments. The word preached is the power of God to ſaluation to euerie one that beleeues: and the ende of the ſacraments is to communicate Chriſt with all his benefites to them that come to bee partakers thereof: as is moſt plainely to be ſeene in the ſupper of the Lord, in which the giuing of bread and wine to the ſeuerall communicants, is a pledge and ſigne of Gods particular giuing of Chriſts bodie and bloode with all his merites, vnto them. And this giuing on Gods part cannot be effectuall without receiuing on our parts: and therefore faith muſt needes be an inſtrument or hand to receiue that which God giueth, that we may find comfort by this giuing.

The III. Difference concerning faith is this: the Papiſt ſaith, that a man is iuſtified by faith; yet not by faith alone, but alſo by other vertues, as hope, loue, the feare of God, &c. The reaſons which are brought to maintaine their opinion are of no moment.

I. Reaſon. Luk. 7. 47. Many ſinnes are forgiuen her, (d) becauſe ſhee loued much. Whence they gather that the woman here ſpoken of, was iuſtified and had the pardon of ſins by loue. Anſ. In this text, loue is not made an impulſiue cauſe to mooue God to pardon her ſinnes, but onely a ſigne to ſhewe and manifeſt that God had alreadie pardoned them. Like to this is the place of Iohn, who ſaith, 1. Iohn. 3. 14. Wee are tranſlated from death to life, becauſe we loue the brethren: where loue is no cauſe of the change, but a ſigne and conſequent thereof.

(d) Particula non cauſalis, ſed illatiua vel rationalis.

III. Reaſon. Gal. 5. 6. Neither circumciſion, nor vncircumciſion auaileth any thing, but faith that worketh by loue. Hence they gather that faith doth iuſtifie together with loue. Anſ. The propertie of true faith is, to apprehend and receiue ſomething vnto it ſelfe: and loue, that goes alwaies with faith, as a fruite and vnſeparable companion thereof, is of another nature: For it doth not receiue in, but as it were giue out it ſelfe in all the duties of the firſt and ſecond table towards God and man: and thus thing faith by it ſelfe cannot doe; and therefore for Paul ſaith, that faith worketh by loue. The hand hath a propertie to reach out it ſelfe, to lay holde of any thing, and to receiue a gift: but the hand hath no propertie to cut a peece of wood of it ſelfe, without ſaw or knife, or ſome like inſtrument: and yet by helpe of them, it can either diuide or cut. Euen ſo it is the nature of faith, to goe out of it ſelfe and to receiue Chriſt into the heart: as for the duties of the firſt and ſecond table, faith cannot of it ſelfe bring them forth; no more then the hand can deuide or cut: yet ioyne loue to faith, and then can it practiſe duties commanded concerning God and man. And this I take to be the meaning of this text which ſpeaketh not of iuſtification by faith, but onely of the practiſe of common duties, which faith putteth in execution by the helpe of loue.

III. Reaſon. Faith is neuer alone, therefore it doth not iuſtifie alone. Anſw. The reaſon is naught, and they might as well diſpute thus. The eie is neuer alone from the head, and therefore it ſeeth not alone: which is abſurd. And though in regard of ſubſtance the eie is neuer alone, yet in regard of ſeeing it is alone: and ſo though faith ſubſiſt not without loue and hope & other graces of God, yet in regard of the act of iuſtification it is alone without them all.

IV. Reaſon. If faith alone doe iuſtifie, then we are ſaued by faith alone: but we are not ſaued by faith alone; and therefore not iuſtified by faith alone. Anſw. The propoſition is falſe: for more things are requiſite to the maine end, then to the ſubordinate meanes. And the aſſumption is falſe: for we are ſaued by faith alone, if we ſpeake of faith as it is an inſtrument apprehending Chriſt for our ſaluation.

V. Reaſon. We are ſaued by hope: therfore not by faith alone. Anſw. We are ſaued by hope, not becauſe it is any cauſe of ſaluation. Pauls meaning is only this: that we haue not ſaluation as yet in poſſeſſion, but wait patiently for it, in time to come to bee poſſeſſed of vs, exſpecting the time of our full deliuerance: that is all, that can iuſtly be gathered hence.

Nowe the doctrine which wee teach on the contrary is, That a ſinner is iuſtified before God by faith: yea, by faith alone. The meaning is that nothing within man, and nothing that man can doe, either by nature or by grace, concurreth to the act of iuſtification before God, as any cauſe thereof either efficient, materiall, formall, or finall, but faith alone: all other gifts and graces, as hope, loue, the feare of God, are neceſſarie to ſaluation, as ſignes therof, & conſequents of faith. Nothing in any man concurs as anie cauſe to this worke but faith alone. And faith it ſelfe is no principall but onely an inſtrumentall cauſe whereby we receiue, apprehend, and apply Chriſt and his righteouſnes for our iuſtification.

Reaſon I. Ioh. 3. 14. 15. As Moſes lift vp the ſerpent in the wilderneſſe, ſo muſt the ſonne of man bee lift vp: that whoſoeuer beleeueth in him ſhall not periſh but haue euerlaſting life. In theſe wordes Chriſt makes a compariſon on this manner: when any one of the Iſraelites were ſtung to death by fierie ſerpents, his cure was not by any phyſicke ſurgerie, but onely by the caſting of his eies vp to the brazen ſerpent: which Moſes had erected by Gods commandement: euen ſo in the cure of our ſoules, when we are ſtung to death by ſinne, there is nothing required within vs for our recouerie, but onely that wee caſt vp and fixe the eye of our faith on Chriſt and his righteouſnes.

Reaſon II. The excluſiue formes of ſpeech vſed in ſcripture proue thus much: wee are iuſtified freely, not of the law, not by the law, without the lawe, without workes, not of workes, not according to works, not of vs, not by the workes of the law but by faith. Galat. 2. 16. All boaſting excluded, onely beleeue. Luk. 8. 50. Theſe diſtinctions, whereby workes and the lawe are excluded in the worke of iuſtification, doe include thus much, that faith alone doth iuſtifie.

Reaſon III. Very reaſon may teach thus much: for no gift in man is apt and fit as a ſpirituall hand to receiue and apply Chriſt and his righteouſnes vnto a ſinner, but faith. Indeede loue, hope, the feare of God, & repentance, haue their ſeueral vſes in men, but none ſerue for this end to apprehend Chriſt & his merits; none of them all haue this receiuing property: and therfore there is nothing in man, that iuſtifieth as a cauſe but faith alone.

Reaſon IV. The iudgement of the auncient Church. Ambr. on Rom. 4. They are bleſſed to whome vvithout anie labour or worke done, iniquities are remitted and ſinne couered: no workes or repentance required of them, but onely that they beleeue. And cap. 3. Neither working any thing, nor requiting the like, are they iuſtified by faith alone through the gift of God. And 1. Cor.

III. Difference.

The third difference about iuſtification is concerning this point, namely how farforth good works are required thereto.

The doctrine of the Church of Rome is, that there bee two kindes of iuſtification: the firſt and the ſecond, as I haue ſaid. The firſt is, when one of an euill man is made a good man: and in this, works are wholly excluded, it beeing wholly of grace. The ſecond is, when a man of a iuſt man is made more iuſt. And this they will haue to proceede from workes of grace: for (ſay they) as a man when he is once borne can by eating and drinking make himſelfe a bigger man, though he could not at the firſt make himſelfe a man: euen ſo, a ſinner hauing his firſt iuſtification, may afterward by grace make himſelfe more iuſt. Therefore they holde theſe two thinges: I. that good works are meritorious cauſes of the ſecond iuſtification, which they terme Actuall. II. that good workes are meanes to increaſe the firſt iuſtification, which they call Habituall.

Now let vs ſee how farre forth wee muſt ioyne with them in this point. Our conſent therefore ſtandes in three concluſions.

I. That good workes done by them that are iuſtified doe pleaſe God, and are approoued of him, and therefore haue a reward.

II. Good works are neceſſarie to ſaluation two waies: firſt, not as cauſes thereof, either conuerſant, adiuuant, or procreant; but onely as conſequents of faith; in that they are inſeparable companions and fruits of that faith, which is indeede neceſſary to ſaluation. Secondly they are as neceſſary as markes in a way, and as the way it ſelfe directing vs vnto eternall life.

III. We hold & beleeue, that the righteous man, is in ſome ſort iuſtified by works: for ſo the holy Ghoſt ſpeaketh plainely and truly, Iam. 2. 21. That Abraham was iuſtified by works.

Thus farre we ioyne with them: and the very difference is this. They ſay, we are iuſtified by workes, as by cauſes thereof: we ſay, that wee are iuſtified by workes as by ſignes and fruites of our iuſtification before God, and no otherwiſe: and in this ſenſe muſt the place of Saint Iames bee vnderſtoode, that Abraham was iuſtified, that is, declared and made manifeſt to bee iuſt indeede by his obedience, and that euen before God. Now that our doctrine is the truth, it will appeare by reaſons on both parts.

Our reaſons.

I. Rom. 3. 28. Wee conclude that a man is iuſtified by faith without the workes of the law. Some anſwere, that ceremoniall workes be excluded here; ſome, that morall works; ſome, workes going before faith. But let them deuiſe what they can for themſelues, the truth is, that Paul excludeth all workes whatſoeuer, as by the very text will appeare. For v. 24. hee ſaith, Wee are iuſtified freely by his grace: that is, by the meere gift of God: giuing vs to vnderſtand, that a ſinner in his iuſtification is meerely paſſiue, that is, doing nothing on his part, whereby God ſhould accept him to life euerlaſting. And v. 27. he ſaith, iuſtification by faith excludeth all boaſting: and therefore all kinde of workes are thereby excluded; and ſpecially ſuch as are moſt of all the matter of boaſting, that is, good workes. For if a ſinner, after that hee is iuſtified by the merit of Chriſt, were iuſtified more by his owne works, then might he haue ſome matter of boaſting in himſelf. And that we may not doubt of Pauls meaning, conſider and read Eph. 2. 8. 9. By grace (ſaith he) yee are ſaued through faith: and that not of your ſelues, it is the gift of God: not of workes leaſt any man ſhould boaſt himſelfe. Here Paul excludes all and euery worke, and directly workes of grace themſelues, as appeares by the reaſon following; For wee are his workemanſhippe created in Chriſt Ieſus vnto good workes: which God hath ordained that we ſhould walke in them. Nowe let the Papiſts tell mee, what bee the workes which God hath prepared for men to walke in, and to which they are regenerate, vnleſſe they be the moſt excellent workes of grace, and let them marke howe Paule excludes them wholy from the worke of iuſtification and ſaluation.

II. Gala. 5. 3. If yee be circumciſed, ye are bound to the whole law, and ye are abolished from Chriſt. Heere Paul diſputeth againſt ſuch men as would bee ſaued partly by Chriſt, and partly by the workes of the lawe; hence I reaſon thus. If any man will be iuſtified by workes, he is bound to fulfill the whole law, according to the rigour thereof: that is Pauls ground. I now aſſume; no man can fulfill the Lawe according to the rigour thereof: for the liues and workes of moſt righteous men are imperfect, and ſtained with ſinne: and therefore they are taught euery day to ſay on this manner: forgiue vs our debts. Againe our knowledge is imperfect, and therefore our faith, repentance, and ſanctification is anſwerable. And laſtly the regenerate man is partly fleſh and partly ſpirit: and therefore his beſt workes are partly from the fleſh, and in part onely ſpirituall. Thus then for any man to be bound to the rigour of the whole law, is as much as if hee were bound to his owne damnation.

III. Election to ſaluation is of grace without works; therfore the iuſtification of a ſinner is of grace alone without workes. For it is a certaine rule, that the cauſe of a cauſe is the cauſe of a thing cauſed. Nowe grace without workes is the cauſe of election, which election is the cauſe of our iuſtification: and therefore grace without works is the cauſe of iuſtification.

IV. A man muſt firſt bee fully iuſtified before hee can doe a good worke: for the perſon muſt firſt pleaſe GOD before his works can pleaſe him. But the perſon of a ſinner cannot pleaſe GOD till hee be perfectly iuſtified: and therefore till hee be iuſtified, hee cannot doe ſo much as one good worke. And thus good workes cannot be any meritorious cauſe of iuſtification, after which they are, both for time, and order of nature. In a word, whereas they make two diſtinct iuſtifications: wee acknowledge that there be degrees of ſanctification, yet ſo as iuſtification is onely one, ſtanding in remiſſion of ſins, and Gods acceptation of vs to life euerlaſting by Chriſt: and thus iuſtification hath no degrees but is perfect at the very firſt.

Obiections of Papiſts.

Pſal. 7. 8. Iudge me according to my righteouſnes. Hence they reaſon thus, if Dauid be iudged according to his righteouſnes then may he be iuſtified thereby: but Dauid deſires to bee iudged according to his righteouſnes: and therfore he was iuſtified thereby. Anſ. There bee two kindes of righteouſnes, one of the perſon, the other of the cauſe or action. The righteouſneſſe of a mans perſon, is whereby it is accepted into the fauour of God into life eternall. The righteouſnes of the action or cauſe is, when the action or cauſe is iudged of God to bee good and iuſt. Now Dauid in this Pſalme, ſpeaketh onely of the righteouſnes of the action, or innocencie of his cauſe, in that he was falſely charged to haue ſought the kingdome. In like manner it is ſaid of Phineas, Pſalm. 106. 31. that his fact in killing Zimri and Cosbi, was imputed to him for righteouſnes: not becauſe it was a ſatisfaction to the law, the rigour whereof could not be fulfilled in that one worke: but becauſe God accepted of it as a iuſt worke, and as a token of his righteouſneſſe and zeale for Gods glory.

II. Obiect. The ſcripture ſaith in ſundry places, that men are bleſſed which do good works. Pſalm. 119. 1. Bleſſed is the man that is vpright in heart, and walketh in the lawe of the Lord. Anſ. The man is bleſſed that indeauoureth to keepe Gods commaundements. Yet is he not bleſſed ſimply, becauſe he doeth ſo; but becauſe he is in Chriſt, by whom he doth ſo: and his obedience to the law of God is a ſigne thereof.

III. Obiect. When man confeſſeth his ſinnes and humbleth himſelfe by prayer and faſting, Gods wrath is pacified and ſtaied: therfore prayer and faſting are cauſes of iuſtification before God. Anſw. Indeede men, that truely humble themſelues by prayer and faſting, doe appeaſe the wrath of God: yet not properly by theſe actions, but by their faith expreſſed and teſtified in them, whereby they apprehend that which appeaſeth Gods wrath, euen the merits of Chriſt in whom the Father pleased: and for whose sake alone he is wel pleased with vs.

IV. Obiect. Sundry persons in Scripture are commended for perfection: as Noe, and Abraham, Zacharie, and Elizabeth: and Christ biddeth vs all be perfect, and where there is any perfectiō of works, there also workes may iustifie. Answere. There be two kindes of perfection: perfection in part, and perfection in degrees. Perfection in part is, when being regenerate, and hauing the seedes of all necessarie vertues, we indeauour accordingly to obey God, not in some fewe, but in all and euery part of the lawe: as Iosias turned vnto God according to all the law of Moses. Perfection in degrees is, when a man keepeth euery commandement of God, & that according to the rigour thereof, in the very highest degree. Nowe then whereas we are commaunded to be perfected, and haue examples of the same perfection in scripture: both commandements and examples must bee vnderstoode of perfection in part, and not of perfection in degrees, which cannot bee attained vnto in this life; though wee for our parts must daily striue to come as neere it as possibly we can.

V. Obiect. 2. Cor. 4. 17. Our momentany afflictions worke vnto vs a greater measure of glory: now if afflictions work our saluation, then works also do the same. Anſ. Afflictions worke saluation not as causes procuring it, but as meanes directing vs thereto. And thus also must we esteem of works, in matter of our saluation, as of a certaine way, or a mark therein, directing vs to glory, not causing & procuring it: as Bernard saith, they are via Regni, non causa regnandi. The way to the kingdome, not the cause of reigning there.

Ib. de gratia lib. arbit

VI. Obiect. VVee are iustified by the same thing whereby wee are iudged: but we are iudged by our good workes: therefore iustified also. Answ. The proposition is false: for iudgement is an act of God, declaring a man to bee iust that is alreadie iust: and iustification is another distinct act of God, whereby he maketh him to be iust, that is by nature vniust. And therefore in equity the last iudgement is to proceede by workes: because they are the fittest meanes to make triall of euery mans cause, and serue fitly to declare whom God hath iustified in this life.

VII. Obiect. Wicked men are condemned for euill workes: and therefore righteous men are iustified by good workes. Answ. The reason holdeth not: for there is great difference betweene euill and good works. An euill worke is perfectly euil, and so deserueth damnation: but there is no good worke of any man that is perfectly good: and therefore cannot iustifie.

VIII. Obiect. To beleeue in Christ is a worke and by it wee are iustified: and if one worke doe iustifie; why may wee not be iustified by all the workes of the lawe? Answ. Faith must be considered two waies: first, as a worke, quality, or vertue: secondly as an instrument, or hand reaching out it selfe to receiue Christs merit. And wee are iustified by faith, not as it is a worke, vertue, or quality: but as it is an instrument to receiue and apply that thing whereby wee are iustified. And therefore it is a figuratiue speech to say, We are iustified by faith. Faith considered by it selfe maketh no man righteous: neither doth the action of faith, which is to apprehend, iustifie: but the obiect of faith, which is Christs obedience apprehended.

These are the principall reasons commonly vsed: which as we see, are of no moment. To conclude therefore, wee holde, that workes concurre to iustification, and that we are iustified thereby as by signes & effects, not as causes: for both the beginning, middle, and accomplishment of our iustification is onely in Christ: and heerevpon Iohn saith, If any man (being already iustified) sinne, wee haue an aduocate with the father Iesus Christ, and he is the propitiation for our sinnes. And to make our good workes meanes or causes of our iustification, is to make euery man a Sauiour to himselfe.

The V. point: Of merits.

By merit, we vnderstand any thing or any worke, whereby Gods fauor and life euerlasting is procured: and that for the dignity and excellencie of the work or thing done: or, a good worke done, binding him that receiueth it to repay the like.

Our consent.

Touching merits wee consent in two conclusions with them. The first conclusion, that merits are so farre forth necessary, that without them there can bee no saluation.

The second, that Christ our Mediatour and Redeemer, is the root and fountaine of all merit.

The

The diſſent or difference.

The Popiſh Church placeth merits within man, making two ſorts thereof: the merit of the perſon, and the merit of the worke. The merit of the perſon, is a dignitie in the perſon, whereby it is worthie of life euerlaſting. And this (as they ſay) is to be found in Infants dying after baptiſme, who though they want good workes, yet are they not void of this kinde of merit, for which they receiue the kingdome of heauen. The merit of the worke, is a dignitie or excellencie in the worke, whereby it is made fitte and inabled to deſerue life euerlaſting for the doer. And workes (as they teach) are meritorious two waies: firſt, by couenant, becauſe God hath made a promiſe of reward vnto them; ſecondly, by their owne dignitie: for Chriſt hath merited that our works might merit. And this is the ſubſtance of their doctrine. From it we diſſent in theſe points.

I. Wee renounce all perſonall merits, that is, all merits within the perſon of any meere man. II. And we renounce all merit of workes, that is, all merit of any worke done by any meere man whatſoeuer. And the true merit whereby we looke to attaine the fauour of God, and life euerlaſting, is to bee found in the perſon of Chriſt alone: who is the ſtorehouſe of all our merits: whoſe prerogatiue it is, to be the perſon alone in whom God is well pleaſed. Gods fauour is of infinite dignitie, and no creature is able to doe a worke that may counteruaile the fauour of God, ſaue Chriſt alone: who by reaſon of the dignitie of his perſon, beeing not a meere man, but God-man, or Man-god, he can doe ſuch workes as are of endleſſe dignitie, euery way anſwerable to the fauour of God: and therefore ſufficient to merit the ſame for vs. And though a merit or meritorious worke agree onely to the perſon of Chriſt, yet is it made ours by imputation. For as his righteouſnes is made ours, ſo are his merits depending thereon: but his righteouſnes is made ours by imputation, as I haue ſhewed. Hence ariſeth another point, namely that as Chriſts righteouſneſſe is made ours really by imputation to make vs righteous: ſo wee by the merit of his righteouſnes imputed to vs doe merit and deſerue life euerlaſting. And this is our doctrine. In a word, the Papiſt maintaineth the merits of his owne workes: but wee renounce them all, and reſt onely on the merit of Chriſt. And that our doctrine is truth, and their falſhood, I will make manifeſt by ſundry reaſons; and then anſwere their arguments to the contrary.

Our reaſons

The firſt ſhall bee taken from the properties and conditions that muſt bee in a worke meritorious, and they are foure. I. A man muſt doe it of himſelfe, and by himſelfe: for if it be done by another, the merit dooth not properly belong to the doer. II. A man muſt doe it of his owne free will and pleaſure, not of due debt: for when we doe that which wee are bound to doe, wee doe no more but our dutie. III. The worke muſt bee done to the profit of another, who thereupon muſt bee bound to repay the like. IV. The reward and the worke muſt bee in proportion equall for if the reward bee more then the worke, it is not a reward of deſert, but a gift of good will. Hence followes a notable concluſion: That Chriſts manhood conſidered a part from his Godhead, cannot merit at Gods hand: though it bee more excellent euery way then all both men and Angels. For beeing thus conſidered, it doth nothing of it ſelfe, but by grace receiued from the godhead: though it alſo be without meaſure. Secondlie Chriſts manhood is a creature, and in that regard bound to doe whatſoeuer it doth. Thirdly, Chriſt as man cannot giue any thing to God, but that which he receiued from God: therefore cannot the manhood properly by it ſelfe merit, but onely as it is perſonally vnited vnto the godhead of the Sonne. And if this be ſo, then much leſſe can any meere man, or any Angel merit: yea it is a madnes to thinke, that either our actions or perſons ſhould bee capable of any merit whereby we might attaine to life eternall.

Reaſon II. Exod. 20. 8. And ſhew mercie vpon thouſands in them that loue mee, and keepe my commandements. Hence I reaſon thus: where reward is giuen vpon mercie, there is no merit: but reward is giuen of mercy to them that fulfill the law: therefore no merit. What can we any way deſerue, when our full recompence muſt be of mercy? And this appeares further by Adam: if he had ſtood to this day, hee could not by his continuall & perfect obedience, haue procured a further increaſe of fauour at Gods hand, but ſhould onely haue continued that happy eſtate in which hee was firſt created.

Reaſon III. Scripture directlie condemneth merit of workes. Rom. 6. 23. The wages wages of ſinne is death: but the gift of God is eternall life through Ieſus Chriſt our Lorde. The proportion of the argument required that S. Paul ſhould haue ſaide: The reward of good works is eternall life, if life euerlaſting could be deſerued, which cannot; becauſe it is a free gift. Againe, Tit. 3. 5. We are ſaued not by workes of righteouſneſſe which we haue done, but according to his mercie he ſaued vs. And Eph. 2. 8. 10. By grace you are ſaued through faith, and that not of your ſelues, it is the gift of God: not of workes which GOD hath prepared that wee ſhoulde walke in them. If any workes be crowned, it is certen that the ſufferings of Martyrs ſhal be rewarded: now of them Paul ſaith, Rom. 8. 18. The ſufferings of this life are not worthie of the glorie to come. VVhere then is the value and dignitie of other workes? To this purpoſe Ambroſe ſaith, The iuſt man though hee bee tormented in the braſen bull is ſtill iuſt, becauſe he iuſtifieth God, and ſaith he ſuffereth leſſe then his ſinnes deſerue.

Reaſon. IV. Whoſoeuer will merit, muſt fulfill the whole law: but none can keepe the whole law: For if we ſay, we haue no ſinne, we deceiue our ſelues, 1. Ioh. 1. And he that ſinnes againſt one commandement is guiltie of the whole law. And what can he merit that is guiltie of the breach of the whole law?

Reaſon V. VVe are taught to pray on this maner, Giue vs this daie our daylie bread: wherein we acknowledge euery morſel of bread to be the meere gift of God without deſert: and therefore muſt we much more acknowledge life eternal to be euery way the gift of God. It muſt needes therefore be a Satanicall inſolency for any man to imagine, that hee can by his workes merit eternall life, who cannot merit bread.

Reaſon VI. Conſent of the auncient Church. (c) Bernard, Thoſe which we call our merits, are the waie to the kingdome, and not the cauſe of raigning. Auguſt. Manuel chapter. 22. All my hope is in the death of my Lord. His death was my merit: my merit is the paſſion of the Lord. I ſhall not bee void of merits ſo long as Gods mercies are not wanting. Baſil on Pſal. 114. Eternall reſt is reſerued for them, which haue ſtriuen lawfully in this life: not for the merits of their doings, but vpon the grace of the moſt bountifull God, in which they truſted. Auguſt on Pſal. 120 Hee crowneth thee, becauſe he crowneth his owne gifts, not by merits. And Pſalm 142. Lorde thou wilt quicken me in thy iuſtice, not in mine not becauſe I deſerued it, but becauſe thou haſte compaſſion.

(c) De interpellatione Danid. 4 vel Pſa. 72

Obiections of Papiſts.

Obiect. I. In ſundrie places of Scripture, promiſe of reward is made to them that beleeue and doe good workes: therefore our works do merit: for a reward and merit be relatiues. An: Reward is twofold: of debt, and of mercie. Life euerlaſting is not a reward of debt but of mercie, giuen of the good wil of god, without any thing done of man. Secondly, the kingdome of heauen is properly an inheritance giuen of a father to a child, & therfore it is called a reward not properly, but by a figure or by reſemblance. For as a workeman hauing ended his labour, receiueth his wages; ſo after men haue lead their liues and finiſhed their courſe in keeping faith and good conſcience, as dutifull children, God giueth them eternall life. And hereupon it is tearmed a reward. Thirdly, if I ſhould graunt that life euerlaſting is a deſerued reward, it is not for our workes, but for Chriſts merit imputed to vs, cauſing vs thereby to merit: and thus the relation ſtands directly betweene the Reward and Chriſts Merit applied vto vs.

Obiect. II. Chriſt by his death merited that our workes ſhould merit life euerlaſting. An. That is falſe: all we find in ſcripture is, that Chriſt by his merit procured pardon of ſinne, imputation of righteouſnes, and life euerlaſting: and it is no where ſaide in the word of God, that Chriſt did merit, that our workes ſhould merit: it is a dotage of their owne deuiſing. Hee died not for our good workes to make them able to ſatisfie GODS anger; but for our ſinnes that they might be pardoned. Thus much ſaith the Scripture, and no more. And in that Chriſt did ſufficiently merit life eternall for vs, by his owne death; it is a ſufficient proofe that he neuer intended to giue vs power of meriting the ſame: vnles wee ſuppoſe that at ſome time he giues more then is needefull. Againe Chriſt in the office of mediation as hee is a King, Prieſt, and Prophet, admitteth no deputie or fellow: for he is a moſt perfect Mediatour, doing all things by himſelfe, without the helpe of any. And the miniſters that diſpence the word are not his deputies, but reaſonable and voluntarie inſtruments, which he vſeth. But if men by workes can merite increaſe of grace and happines for themſelues, then hath Chriſt partners in the worke of redemption: men doing that by him which he doth of himselfe, in procuring their saluation. Nay, if this might stand that Christ did merit that our works should merit, thē Christ should merit that our stained righteousnesse beeing for this cause not capable of merit, should neuertheless merit. I call it stained; because we are partly flesh and partly spirit: & therefore in our selues deseruing the curse of the lawe, though wee be regenerate. Againe for one good worke we doe, we haue many euill, the offence whereof defaceth the merite of our best deedes and makes them to light in the ballance of the law.

Obiect. III. Our workes merit by bargaine or couenant, because god hath promised to reward them, Anſ. The word of God sets downe two couenāts: one legal, the other euangelicall. In the legall couenant life euerlasting is promised to works, for that is the condition of the law; do these thinges and thou shalt liue. But on this manner can no man merite life euerlasting, because none is able to doe all that the law requires; whether wee respect the manner, or the measure of obedience. In the euangelicall couenant, the promises that are made are not made to any worke or vertue in man, but to the worker: not for any merit of his own person or worke, but for the person & merit of Christ. For example, it is a promise of the Gospell, Bee faithfull vnto death, and I will giue thee the crowne of life. Reuelat. 2. 10. Here the promise is not made to the vertue of fidelitie, but to the faithfull person; whose fidelitie is but a token that hee is in Christ: for the merit of whose obedience GOD promiseth the crowne of life: and therefore Christ saith further, I come quickly and will giue to euerie man according to his workes: marke, hee saith not to the worke, or for the worke; but to the worker according to his workes. And thus the bond of al other promises of the Gospell, in which God willingly binds himselfe to rewarde our workes, doth not directly concerne vs, but hath respect to the person, and obedience of Christ, for whose sake alone God binds himselfe as debter vnto vs, and giues the recompence or rewarde, according to the measure of our faith testified by our works. And therefore it cannot bee truly gathered, that workes doe merit by any promise or couenant, passed on Gods part to man. Some may say, if workes merit not why are they mentioned in the promise? I answer, not because they merit, but because they are tokens, that the doer of thē works, is in Christ, for whose merit the promise shall be acomplished.

Obiect. IV. Good workes are perfect and without fault for they are the works of the Holy Ghost, who cannot sinne: therefore they merit. Anſ. If workes did proceede onely and immediately from the holy Ghost, there could not bee any fault in thē: but our workes come from the holy ghost in and by the will & vnderstanding of man: and by this means they are tainted with sinne; as water in the fountaine is both cleare and sweete, yet the streames thereof passing through the filthie channell are defiled thereby. Againe they reason thus: That which we are bound to do hath no fault in it: but wee are bound to doe good workes: therefore they are perfect. Anſ. The proposition must bee expounded: that which we are bound to doe, in it selfe, according to the intention of the commander hath no fault: or, that which we are boūd to do according as we are bound to do it, hath no fault, yet in regard of the intētiō of the doer, or in regard of our manner of doing, it may be faultie.

Obiect. V. Christ saith, Reuel, 3, 4. that the faithfull in the Church of Sardis shall walke with him in white, for they are worthie: therefore beleeuers merit. Anſw. Euerie beleeuer is worthie to walke with Christ; yet not worthie in himselfe, but in Christ, to whome he is vnited, and made bone of his bone, and flesh of his flesh. And by reason of this coniunction it is, that men are saide to be worthie, because they are inriched with Chists merits & righteousnes.

Obiect. VI. 2. Tim. 4. 8. Euerlasting life is tearmed a crowne, & a crowne of righteousnes to be giuen of a iust iudge: therfore man for his part by his workes deserues the same. Anſ. Euerlasting life is called a crowne onely in resemblāce: for as he which runneth a race, must continue and runne to the ende, & then be crowned; euē so must we continue and walke in good workes vnto the end, and then receiue eternall life And it is called a crowne of righteousnes, not because it belongs to any man by due and desert; but because God hath bound himselfe by a promise to giue it, in performing whereof he is tearmed iust: and by vertue of this promise it is obtained, & no otherwise. These are the principall obiections, by which we may iudge what the rest are. And thus we see what is the truth, namely that merit is necessarie to saluation: yet neither merit of any mans worke, or person, but the merit of Christ imputed to vs, whereby we being in him doe procure and deserue the fauour of God and life eternall.

name-

The sixt point, of satisfaction.

Our consent.

Conclus. I. First wee acknowledge and hold Ciuill or Politike satisfaction, that is, a recompence for iniuries, and damages offered any way to our neighbours. This Zacheus practised, when at his conuersion hee restored foure-fold things gotten by forged cauilation. Againe by ciuill satisfaction I vnderstand, the imposition of fines, mulcts, and penalties vppon offenders, and the inflicting of death vpon malefactours. For all these are satisfactions to the law, and societies of men when they are wronged. All these we mantaine as necessarie, for neither Church nor commonwealth can be without them: considering they are notable meanes to vphold ciuill peace and otherwhiles they are fruites of true faith, as the satisfaction of Zacheus was.

Conclus: II. We acknowledge canonicall or Ecclesiasticall satisfaction: and that is when any hauing giuen offence to the Church of God or any part thereof, doe make an open and publike testimonie of their repentance. Miriam for murmuring against Moses, was striken with leprosie, and afterward by his praier shee was clensed, and yet for all that shee must goe seuen daies out of the tent and congregation, that she might make a kind of satisfactiō to the people for her trespasse. And in the olde testament, sackcloth and ashes were signes of their satisfaction.

Conclus. III: We hold that no man can be saued, vnlesse he make a perfect satisfaction to the iustice of God for all his sinnes: because God is infinite in iustice, and therfore will euer exact an euerlasting punishment, or satisfaction for the same.

The diffent or difference,

The points of our difference an dissent are these. The Church of Rome teacheth and beleeueth, that Christ by his death hath made a satisfaction for all the sinnes of men; and for the eternall punishment of them all: yet so, as they themselues must satisfie the iustice of God for the temporal punishment of their offences, either on earth or in purgatorie. Wee teach and beleeue that Christ by his death and passion hath made a perfect and al-sufficient satisfaction to the iustice of God for all the sinnes of men, and for the whole punishment thereof both eternall and temporall. Thus we differ, and herein wee for our parts must for euer stand at difference with them: so as if there were no more points of variance but this one, it should be sufficiet to keepe vs alwaies from vniting our religions, and cause vs to obey the voyce of Christ, Come out of her my people. For as in the former points, so in this also, the Papists erre, not in circumstance, but in the verie foundation and life of religion.

Our reasons.

I. A satisfaction that is made imperfect either directly or by consequent, is indeed no satisfaction at all. But the Papists make Christs satisfaction imperfect, in that they doe adde a supply by humane satisfactiōs; and thus much a learned scholeman, Biel in plaine words confessed; Although (saith he) the passion of Christ bee the principall merit, for which grace is conferred, the opening of the kingdome and glory; yet is it neuer the alone and totall meritorious cause: It is manifest, because alwaies with the merit of Christ, there concurreth some worke, as, the merit of congruity or dignity of him that receiueth grace or glory, if he be of yeares and haue the vse of reason: or of some other for him, if hee want reason. For, that which admits a supplie by an other, is imperfect in it selfe. Therefore humane satisfactions cannot stand. Learned Papists make answere, that Christs satisfaction and mans may stand well together. For (say they) Christs satisfaction is sufficient in it selfe to answere the iustice of God for all sinnes & punishment: but it is not sufficient to this or that man till it be applyed: and it must be applyed by our satisfactiō made to god for the temporall punishment of our sins. But I say againe, that mans satisfaction can be no meanes to apply the satisfaction of Christ, and I proue it thus. The meanes of applying Gods blessings and graces vnto man are twofold; some respect God himselfe, and some respect man. Those which respect God, are such whereby God on his part doth offer and conuey his mercies in Christ vnto man: of this sort are the preaching of the word, Baptisme, and the Lords supper: and these are as it were the hand of God wherby hee reacheth downe and giueth vnto vs Christ with all his benefits. The other means of applying on mans part, are those whereby the said benefits are receiued. Of this sort there is only one namely faith, whereby we beleeue that Christ with all his benefits belongs vnto vs, and this is the hand of man whereby he receiueth Christ as he is offered, or exhibited by God in the worde and Sacramēts. As for other means beside these in Scripture we find none. Foolish therefore is the answer of the Papists, that make mens satisfactions meanes to applie the satisfaction of Christ vnto vs: for by humane satisfactions, Christ is neither offered on Gods part, nor yet receiued on mans part: let them proove it if they can. Others, not contented with this their former answer say; that our satisfactions doe nothing derogate from the satisfaction of Christ: Because our works haue their dignity & merit frō Christs satisfactiō: he meriting that our works should satisfie Gods iustice for temporall punishmentes. But this is also absurd and false, as the former was: For if Christ did satisfie that man might satisfie, then Christ doth make euery beleeuer to be a Christ, a Iesus, a redeemer, and a Priest in the same order with his owne selfe. But to make sinnefull man his owne redeemer though it bee but from temporall punishmentes, is a doctrine of deuills. For the holy Ghost teacheth that the priesthood of Christ is incōmunicable, and cannot passe from him to any other. Now to make satisfaction for sinne or any part of the punishment thereof, is a duties or a part of Christ his priesthood, & therefore to make a satisfaction is a worke that cannot passe from his person to the person of any man. Againe, if Christ by his satisfaction giue power to man to satisfie, then man doth satisfie by Christ, and Christ besides his owne satisfaction vpon the crosse, must daily satisfie in man to the ende of the world: but this cannot be: for Christ vpon the Crosse, when death was vpon him said, It is finished, that is, I haue fully satisfied for all the sinnes of mankinde, both in respect of the fault and punishment. As for Christs buriall and resurrection which followed his death, they serued not to satisfie but to confirme the same. Again Paul saith, 2. Cor. 5. 12. He that knew noe sinne, was made sinne for vs, that is the punishment of sinne, for vs: but if the Church of Rome say true, that Christ doth daily satisfie, then Paul spake too short, and should haue saide further, that Christ was made sinne for vs, and in vs too: and that GOD was not onely in Christ but also in vs, reconciling the worlde to himselfe. But Paul neuer knew this learning; and therefore let them turne themselues which way they will, by putting a supplemēt to Christs satisfaction, they doe indeede annihilate the same.

Heb. 7. 24.

Reason. II. In sundrie places of Scripture, especially in the Epistle of Paul, wee are said to bee redeemed, iustified, and saued freely: which word freely. doth import that we are iustified and saued without any thing done on our part or by our selues in the matter of our saluation: and if this be so, then can we doe nothing at all that may satisfie the iustice of God for the least punishment of our sinnes. If we satisfie in our owne persons, wee are not saued freely: and if we be saued freely, we make no satisfaction at all.

Reason. III. Wee pray daily forgiue vs our sinnes: now to plead pardon, and to satisfie for our sinnes, bee contrarie: and for all things, for which wee can make satisfaction, we neede not craue a pardon: but we are taught in the foresaide petition wholy and onely to vse the plea of pardon for our sinnes, and therefore we acknowledge that we cannot make any satisfaction at all.

Reason IV. The iudgement of the auncient Church. Tertul. de Baptif. Guiltinesse being taken away, the punishment is also taken away. (a) Augustine, Christ by taking vpon him the punishment and not the fault, hath done away both fault and the punishment: Tom. 10. Hom. 5. he saith, When wee are gone out of the world, there will remaine no compunction or satisfaction. Some new Editions haue foisted in the worde (aliqua) & so haue turned the sense on this manner: There wil remaine no compunction or some satisfaction. But this is flat against Augustines meaning, who saith a little before, that when the way is ended, there is no compounding of our cause with any. Chry. proem. in Esa. Say not to me, I haue sinned: how shall I bee freed from so many sinnes? Thou canst not: but thy God can. Yea, and hee will so blot out thy sinnes that there shall remaine no print of them: which thing befalls not to the body, for when it is healed their remaines a skarre: but God so soone as hee exempts thee from punishment, hee giueth thee iustice. Ambrose saith ſaith, I read of Peters teares, but I read not of his ſatisfaction. Againe, Lette vs adore Chriſt that he may ſay vnto vs, Feare not thy ſinnes of this world, nor the waues of bodily ſufferings: I haue remiſſion of ſinnes. Hierom ſaith in Pſal. 31. The ſinne that is couered is not ſeene, the ſinne that is not ſeene is not imputed, that which is not imputed, is not puniſhed. Chryſoſtome in Mathew, homil. 44. Among all men, ſome indure puniſhment in this life and the life to come: others in this life alone: others alone in the life to come: others neither in this life nor in the life to come: There alone, as Dives, who was not lord ſo much as of one droppe of water. Here alone, the inceſtuous man among the Corinthians. Neither here nor there, as the Apoſtles and Prophets, as alſo Iob and the reſt of this kinde: for they iodured no ſufferings for puniſhment, but that they might be known to be conquerours in this fight.

(a) Serm. 11. de verbis Apost.

Luc. 22. Petrus, negat. Debono mor.

Obiections of Papiſts.

I. Obiect. Levit. 4. Moſes according to Gods cõmandement preſcribed ſeuerall ſacrifices for ſeuerall perſons; and they were meanes of ſatisfaction for the temporall puniſhments of their dayly ſinnes. Anſ. Thoſe ſacrifices were onely ſignes and types of Chriſts ſatisfaction to be offered to his father in his alone ſacrifice vpon the croſſe: and whoſoeuer offered any ſacrifice in the old teſtament, did thus and no otherwiſe eſteeme of it, but as a type, and figure of better things. Secõdly, the ſaid ſacrifices were ſatisfactions to the Church, whereby men did teſtifie their repentance for their offences, and likewiſe their deſire to be reconciled to God and men. And ſuch kind of ſatisfactions, we acknowledge.

II. Obiect. Men, whoſe ſinnes are all pardoned, haue afterward ſundrie croſſes and afflictions laide vpon them, vnto the ende of their daies: therefore in all likelihood they make ſatisfaction to God for temporall puniſhments. As for example, the Iſraelites for murmuring againſt the Lorde in the wilderneſſe were barred all from the land of promiſe: and the like befell Moſes and Aaron for not glorifying God as they ſhould haue done at the waters of ſtrife. Anſ. Man muſt bee conſidered in a two-fold eſtate, as hee is vnder the lawe, and as he is vnder grace. In the firſt eſtate, all afflictions are curſes or legall puniſhments, be they little or greate: but to them that are in the ſecond eſtate and beleeue in Chriſt, though the ſame afflictions remaine, yet doe they change their habite or condition, and are the actions of a Father ſeruing to be trialls, corrections, preuentings, admonitions, 1. Cor. 11. 32. When we are iudged, we are nurtered of the Lord and, Heb. 12. 7. If ye indure chaſtiſement, God offereth himſelfe vnto you as children. And Chryſoſtome ſaith, 1. Cor. hom. 28. When we are corrected of the Lorde, it is more for our admonition then damnation, more for a medicine then for a puniſhment: more for a correction then for a penaltie. And whereas God denied the beleeuing Iſraelites, with Moſes and Aaron to enter into the land of Canaan, it cannot be prooued that it was a puniſhment or penaltie of the lawe vpon them. The Scripture ſaith no more but that is was an admonition to all men in all ages following, to take heed of like offences, as Paul writeth, All theſe things came vnto them for enſamples, and, were written for our admonition. 1. Corinthians. 10 11.

III. Obiect. Dauid was puniſhed after his repentance for his adulterie, for the child died, and he was plagued in his own kinde, in the inceſt of Abſolon: and when he had numbred the people hee was yet puniſhed in the death of his people after his owne repentance. Anſ. I anſwer as before that the hand of God was vpon Dauid after his repentanee, but yet the iudgements which befell him were not curſes vnto him properly, but corrections for his ſinnes, and trialls of his faith, and meanes to preuent further ſinne, and to renewe both his faith and repentance: as alſo they ſerued to admoniſh others in like caſes; for Dauid was a publike perſon & his ſinnes were offenſiue, both within the Church of God, and without.

IV. Obiect. The Prophets of GOD, when the people are threatned with the plague, famine, ſword, captiuitie, &c. exhort them to repent and to humble themſelues in ſackcloath & aſhes: and thereby they turned away the wrath of God that was then comming forth againſt them. Therefore by temporall humiliation, men may eſcape the temporall puniſhments of the Lord Anſ. Famine, ſword, baniſhmẽt, the plague, and other iudgements ſent on Gods people, were not properly puniſhments of ſinne but onely the corrections of a father whereby he humbleth thẽ that they might repent: or thus, they were puniſhments tending to correction, not ſeruing for ſatisfactiõ. And the puniſhments of God are turned from them, not becauſe they ſatisfie the iuſtice of GOD in their owne ſufferings, but becauſe by faith they lay hold on the ſatisfaction of the Meſſias, and teſtifie the ſame by their humiliation & repentance.

Obiect. V. Dan. 4. 24. Daniel giueth this counſell to Nebuchadnezar, Redeeme thy ſinnes by iuſtice, and thine iniquities by almes deedes. Be hold (ſay they) almes deedes are made a meanes to ſatisfie for mans iniquities. Anſ. The word, which they trãſlate to redeeme, (as the moſt learned in the Chalde tongue with one conſent auouch) doeth properlie ſignifie to breake off: as if the Prophet ſhoulde ſay; O King, thou art a mightie Monarch, and to inlarge thy kingdome thou haſt vſed much iniuſtice and crueltie, therefore now repent of thine iniquitie, and breake off theſe thy ſinnes, teſtifie thy repentance by dooing iuſtice, and giue almes to the poore whome thou haſt oppreſſed. Therefore here is nothing ſpoken of ſatisfaction for ſinne, but onely of teſtification of repentance by the fruits thereof.

Obiect. VI. Matth. 3. 2. Doe penance; and bring forth fruits worthy of penance, which (ſay they) are workes of ſatisfaction inioyned by the prieſt. Anſ. This text is abſurd: for the worde μετανοειτε, ſignifieth thus much, change your mindes from ſinne to God, and teſtifie it by good workes, that is, by doing the duties of the morall lawe: which muſt bee done, not becauſe they are meanes to ſatisfie GODS iuſtice for mans ſinne, but becauſe they are fruites of that faith and repentance which lies in the heart.

Obiect. VII. 2. Cor. 7. 10. Paul ſetteth downe ſundrie fruits of repentance: whereof the laſt is reuenge, whereby repentant perſons puniſh themſelues, thereby to ſatisfie Gods iuſtice for the temporall puniſhment of their ſinnes. Anſ. A repentant ſinner muſt take reuenge of himſelfe, and that is onely to vſe all meanes which ſerue to ſubdue the corruption of nature, to bridle carnall affections, & to mortifie ſinne: and theſe kindes of actions are reſtrainments properly, & not puniſhments: and are directed againſt the ſinne, and not againſt the perſon.

Laſtly, they make three works of ſatisfaction, prayer, faſting, and almes deedes. For the firſt, it is meere foliſhnes to thinke, that man by prayer can ſatisfie for his ſinnes. It is all one, as if they had ſaid, that a begger by asking of almes ſhoulde deſerue his almes: or, that a debter by requeſting his creditour to pardon his debt, ſhould thereby pay his debt. Secondly, faſting is a thing indifferent, of the ſame nature with eating and drinking, and of it ſelf conferreth nothing to the obtainment of the kingdome of heauen, no more then eating and drinking dooth. Thirdly and laſtly, almes deedes cannot bee workes of ſatisfaction for ſinnes. For when we giue them as wee ought, wee do but our dutie, whereunto we are bound. And we may as well ſay, that a man by paying one debt may diſcharge another; as to ſay that by doing his dutie hee may ſatisfie Gods iuſtice for the puniſhment of his ſinnes. Theſe wee confeſſe be fruits of faith, but yet are they no workes of ſatisfaction: but the onely and all-ſufficient ſatisfaction made to Gods iuſtice for our ſinnes, is to be found in the perſon of Chriſt, beeing procured by the merit of his death, and his obedience. And thus our doctrine touching ſatisfaction is cleared: and it is to bee learned carefully of our common people, becauſe the opinion of humane ſatisfaction is naturall and ſticks faſt in the heart of naturall men. Hereupon when any haue ſinned, and feele touch of conſcience any way, their manner is, then to performe ſome outward humiliation & repentance, thinking thereby to ſtoppe the mouth of conſcience, and by doing ſome ceremoniall duties to appeaſe the wrath of God for their ſinnes. Yea manie thinke to ſatisfie Gods iuſtice by repeating the Creede, the Lords prayer, and the tenne Commandements, ſo fooliſh are they in this kind.

The ſeaueuth point:

Of Traditions.

Traditions, are doctrines deliuered frõ hand to hand, either by word of mouth, or by writing, beſide the written VVord of God.

Our conſent.

Concluſ. I. Wee hold that the very word of God, hath beene deliuered by tradition. For firſt God reuealed his will to Adam by word of mouth: and renewed the ſame vnto the Patriarks, not by writing, but by ſpeech, by dreams, and other inſpirations and thus the VVord of God went from man to man for the ſpace of two thouſand and foure hundred yeares, vnto the time of Moſes who was the pen-man of holy Scripture. For as touching the prophecie of Enoch, we commonly hold is was not penned by Enoch, but by ſome Iewe vnder his name. And for the ſpace of this time, men worſhipped God, and held the articles of their faith by traditiō, not from men but immediately from God himſelfe. And the hiſtorie of the newe teſtament (as ſome ſay) for eightie yeares, as ſome others thinke, for the ſpace of twentie yeres and more, went from hand to hand by tradition, till penned by the Apoſtles, or being penned by others was approued by them.

Concluſ. II. We hold that the prophets, our Sauiour Chriſt, & his Apoſtles, ſpake and did many things good and true which were not written in the Scripture; but came either to vs, or to our ancetours onlie by tradition. As 2. Tim. 3. 8. it is ſaide, Iannes and Iambres were the Magitians that withſtood Moſes: nowe in the bookes of the old teſtament we ſhal not find them once named, and therefore it is like, that the Apoſtle had their names by tradition, or by ſome writings then extant among the Iewes. So Hebr. 12. 21. the author of the Epiſtle recordeth of Moſes, that when he ſaw a terrible ſight in Mount Sinai, hee ſaid, I tremble, and am afraid: which wordes are not to bee found in all the bookes of the old teſtament. In the epiſtle of Iude mention is made, that the diuill ſtroue with Michael the Archangell about the bodie of Moſes: which point (as alſo the former) cōſidering it is not to be found in holy writ, it ſeemes the Apoſtle had it by tradition from the Iewes. That the Prophet Eſay was killed with a fullers club is receiued for trueth, but yet not recorded in ſcripture: and ſo likewiſe that the virgin Marie liued & died a virgin. And in Eccleſiaſticall writers many worthy ſayings of the Apoſtles and other holie men are recorded, and receiued of vs for trueth, which neuertheles are not ſet down in the books of the old or newe teſtament. And manie thinges we hold for trueth, not written in the worde, if they bee not againſt the word.

Concluſ. III. We hold that the church of God hath power to preſcribe ordinances, rules, or traditions, touching time and place of Gods worſhippe, and touching order and comelineſſe to bee vſed in the ſame: and in this regard Paul, 1. Cor. 11. 2. commendeth the Church of Corinth for keeping his traditions, and Acts. 15. the Counſell at Ieruſalem decreed that the Churches of the Gentiles ſhould abſtaine from blood, and from thinges ſtrangled. This decree is tearmed a tradition, and it was in force among them ſo long as the offence of the Iewes remained. And this kind of traditions whether made by generall coūcels or particular Synods, we haue care to maintaine and obſerue: theſe caueats beeing remembred: firſt that they preſcribe nothing childiſh or abſurd to bee done: ſecondly that they bee not impoſed as any parts of Gods worſhip: thirdly, that they be ſeuered from ſuperſtition or opinion of merit: laſtly that the Church of God be not burdened with the multitude of them. And thus much wee hold touching Traditions.

The difference.

Papiſts teach, that beſide the written word, there be certaine vnwritten traditions, which muſt be beleeued as profitable and neceſſary to ſaluation. And theſe they ſay are twofold; Apoſtolical, namely ſuch as were deliuered by the Apoſtles & not written; and Eccleſiaſticall, which the Church decreeth as occaſion is offered. We hold that the Scriptures are moſt perfect, containing in them all doctrines needfull to ſaluation, whether they concerne faith or manners: and therefore wee acknowledge no ſuch traditiōs beſide the written word, which ſhall be neceſſarie to ſaluation: ſo as he which beleeueth thē not cannot be ſaued.

Our reaſons.

Teſtimonie I. Deut. 4. 2. Thou ſhalt not adde to the wordes that I command thee, nor take any thing there from: therefore the written word is ſufficient for all doctrines pertaining to ſaluation. If it bee ſaide that this commandement is ſpoken as well of the vnwritten as of the writtē word, I anſwer: that Moſes ſpeaketh of the written word onely: for theſe very words are a certaine preface which he ſet before a long commentarie made of the written lawe, for this ende to make the people more attentiue, and obedient.

Teſtimonie II. Iſaie. 8. 20. To the lawe & to the teſtimonie. If they ſpeake not according to this worde, it is becauſe there is no light in them. Here the Prophet teacheth what muſt be done in caſes of difficultie. Men muſt not run to the wizard or ſouthſayer, but to the lawe & teſtimony, & here he commends the written worde, as ſufficient cient to resolue all doubts and scruples in conscience whatsoeuer.

Testimonie III. Iohn. 20. 31. Those things were written that ye might beleeue that Iesus is the Christ, and in beleeuing might haue euerlasting life. Here is set downe the ful end of the Gospell, and of the whole written word: which is to bring men to faith and consequently to saluation: and therefore the whole scripture alone is sufficient to this ende without traditions. If it bee said, that this place must bee vnderstood of Christs miracles onely: I answer, that miracles without the doctrine of Christ, & knowledge of his sufferings, can bring no man to life euerlasting, and therfore the place must be vnderstood of the doctrine of Christ and not of his miracles alone, as Paul teacheth, Gal. 1. 8. If we or an angel from heauen preach vnto you anie thing beside that which we haue preached, let him be accursed. And to this effect hee blames them that taught but a diuers doctrine to that which he had taught, 1. Tim. 1. 3.

Testimonie IV. 2. Tim. 3. 16. 17. The whole Scripture is giuen by inspiration of God, and is profitable to teach, to improoue, to correct, and to instruct in righteousnesse, that the man of God may bee absolute, beeing made perfect vnto euery good worke. In these wordes be contained two arguments, to prooue the sufficiencie of Scripture without vnwritten verities. The first: that which is profitable to these foure vses: namely, to teach all necessarie truth, to confute all errours, to correct faults in manners, and to instruct in righteousnes, that is, to informe all men in all good duties, that is sufficient to saluation. But scripture serueth for all these vses: and therefore it is sufficient: and vnwritten traditions are superfluous. The second: that which can make the man of God, that is, Prophets, and Apostles, and the ministers of the worde, perfect in all the duties of their callings, that same word is sufficient to make all other men perfect in all good works. But Gods word is able to make the man of God perfect. Therefore it is sufficient to prescribe the true & perfect way to eternall life, without the helpe of vnwritten traditions.

V. The iudgement of the Church, Tertul. saith, (a) Take from heretickes the opinions which they maintaine with the heathen, that they may defend their questions by Scripture alone, and they cannot stand. Againe, VVee need no curiositie after Christ Iesus, nor inquisition after the Gospell. When we beleeue it, we desire to beleeue nothing beside: for this we first beleeue that there is nothing more which we may beleeue. Hierom. on Math. 23. writting of an opinion that Iohn Baptist was killed, because he foretold the cõming of Christ, saith thus: This, because it hath not authoritie from Scriptures, maye as easily be contemned as approoued. In which wordes there is a conclusion with a minor, and the maior is to be suplied by the rules of Logicke thus: That which hath not authoritie from Scriptures, may as easily bee contemned as approued: but this opinion is so: therefore: Behold a notable argumẽt against all vnwritten traditions. August. booke, 2. cap. 9. de doct. Christ. In those thinges which are plainely set downe in Scripture, are found all those pointes which containe faith and manners of liuing well. Vincentius Lirenen. saith, the Canon of the scripture is perfect, and fully sufficient in it selfe for all things.

Beside these testimonies, other reasons there be that serue to proue this point. I. The practise of Christ and his Apostles, who for the confirmation of the doctrine which they taught, vsed alwaies the testimonie of Scripture, neither can it be proued, that they euer cõfirmed any doctrine by tradition. Act. 26. 22. I continue vnto this day witnessing both to small and great, saying none other thinges then those which the prophets & Moses did say should come. And by this we are giuen to vnderstand, that wee must alwaies haue recourse to the written word as being sufficiẽt to instruct vs in matters of saluation. II. If the beleeuing of vnwritten traditions were necessarie to saluation, then wee must as well beleeue the writings of the auncient fathers, as well as the writings of the Apostles, because Apostolicall traditions are not else where to bee found but in their bookes. And we may not beleeue their sayings as the word of God, because they often erre beeing subiect to errour: and for this cause their authoritie when they speake of traditions, may be suspected: & we may not alwaies beleeue them vpon their word.

Obiections for Traditions.

First they alleadge, 2. Thessalo. 2. 15. where the Apostle bids that Church keep the ordinances which hee taught them either by word or letter. Hence they gather, that besids the writtẽ word, there be vnwrittẽ traditions, that are indeed necessarie to bee kept and obeyed. Ans. It is very likely, that this

(a) de resurrect. carnis.

this Epiſtle to the Theſſalonians was the firſt that euer Paul writ to any Church, though in order it haue not the firſt place: and therefore at that time whē this Epiſtle was pēned it might well fall out, that ſome things needfull to ſaluation were deliuered by word of mouth, not beeing as yet writtē by any Apoſtle. Yet the ſame things were afterward ſet downe in writing, either in the ſecond Epiſtle or in the Epiſtles of Paul.

Obiect. II. That Scripture is Scripture, is a point to be beleeued; but that is a tradition vnwritten: and therfore one tradition there is not written, that we are to beleeue. Anſ. That the bookes of the old & newe Teſtament are Scripture, it is to bee gathered and beleeued not vpon bare tradition, but from the verie bookes themſelues, on this maner. Let a man that is indued with the ſpirit of diſcerning, read the ſeuerall bookes, withall let him conſider the profeſſed author thereof which is God himſelfe, and the matter therein contained, which is moſt diuine and abſolute truth full of pietie: the manner and forme of ſpeach, which is full of maieſtie in the ſimplicitie of wordes; the ende whereat they wholly aime, which is the honour and glory of God alone, &c. and he ſhall be reſolued that Scripture is Scripture, euen by the Scripture it ſelfe. Yea & by this means he may diſcerne any part of ſcripture, from the writings of men whatſoeuer. Thus thē ſcripture prooues it ſelfe to be ſcripture: and yet wee diſpiſe not the vniuerſall conſent or tradition of the Church in this caſe; which though it doe not perſwade the conſcience, yet is it a notable inducement to mooue vs to reuerence and regard the writings of the prophets and Apoſtles. It will bee ſaid, where is it witten that ſcripture is ſcripture? I anſwere, not in any one particular place or booke of Scripture, but in euerie line and page of the whole Bible to him that can reade with the ſpirit of diſcerning, and can diſcerne the voyce of the true paſtour, as the ſheepe of Chriſt can doe.

Obiect. III. Some bookes of the canon of the Scripture are loſt, as the booke of the warres of God, Num. 21.14. the booke of the iuſt. Ioſhua. 10.13. the bookes of Chronicles of the kings of Iſrael and Iuda. 1. Kin 14.19. the books of certaine prophets, Nathan, Gad. Idea, Ahiah. and Semiah: and therefore the matter of theſe bookes muſt come to vs by traditiō. Anſ. Though it be graunted that ſome bookes of Canonicall ſcripture be loſt: yet the ſcripture ſtill remaines ſufficiēt: becauſe the mater of thoſe bookes (ſo farre forth as it was neceſſarie to ſaluation) is contained in theſe bookes of ſcripture that are now extant. Again, I take it to be a truth (though ſome thinke otherwiſe) that no part of the Canon is loſt: for Paul ſaith, whatſoeuer things were written afore time, were written for our learning, that we through patience and comfort of the ſcriptures, &c. Rom. 15,4. Where hee takes it for granted, that the whole Canon of holy ſcripture was then extant. For if he had thought, that ſome books of ſcripture had beene loſt, he would haue ſaid: whatſoeuer was written and is now extant, was written for our learning and comfort. For bookes that are loſt ſerue neither for learning nor comfort. Againe to hold that any bookes of Scripture ſhould be loſt, calls into queſtion Gods prouidence, and the fidelitie of the Church, who hath the bookes of God in keeping, and is therefore called the pillar and ground of truth. And touching the bookes before mentioned, I anſwere thus: The booke of the warres of God, Num. 21.14. might be ſome ſhort bill or narration of things done among the Iſraelites, which in the daies of Moſes went frō hand to hand. For ſometimes a booke in Scripture ſignifieth a roule or catalogue, as the firſt chapter of Mathew, which containeth the genealogie of our Sauiour Chriſt, is called the booke of the generation of Ieſus Chriſt. Againe the booke of the iuſt, and the bookes of the Chronicles, which are ſaid to be loſt, were but as the Chronicles of England are with vs; euen politicke recordes of the acts and euents of things, in the kingdome of Iuda and Iſraell: out of which the Prophets gathered thinges neceſſarie to be knowne, and placed them in holy Scripture. As for the books of Iddo, Ahiah, Semiah, Gad, and Nathan, they were contained in the bookes of the Kings & Chronicles, and in the bookes of Samuel, which were not written by him alone, but by ſundrie Prophets. 1. Chr. 29.29, 29 alſo was the booke of Iudges. As for the books of Salomon which are loſt, they did not concern religion & matters of ſaluation, but were cōcerning matters of Philoſophy and ſuch like things.

Obiect. IV. Moſes in Mount Sina, beſide the written law, receiued from God a more ſecret doctrine, which hee neuer writ, but deliuered by tradition or word of of mouth to the Prophets after him: and this the Iewes haue now ſet downe in their cabala. Anſ. This indeede is the opinion of ſome of the Iewes, whome in effect and ſubſtance ſundrie Papiſts follow: but we take it for noe better then a Iewiſh dotage. For if Moſes had known any ſecret doctrine beſide the written lawe, hee would neuer haue giuen this commandement of the ſaid lawe, thou ſhalt not adde any thing therto.

Obiect. V, Heb. 5.12, Gods word is of two ſorts, milke and ſtrong meate. By milke we muſt vnderſtand the word of god written where in God ſpeakes plainely to the capacitie of the rudeſt: but ſtrong meate is vnwritten traditions, a doctrine not to bee deliuered vnto all, but to thoſe that growe to perfection. Anſ. We muſt know, that one & the ſame word of God is milke and ſtrong meate, in regard of the manner of handling and propounding of it. For being deliuered generally and plainely to the capacitie of the ſimpleſt, it is milke: but beeing handled particularly and largely, and ſo fitted for all men of more vnderſtanding, it is a ſtrong meate. As for example, the doctrine of the creation, of mans fall, and redemption by Chriſt, when it is taught ouerly and plainly, it is milke: but when the depth of the ſame is throughly opened, it is ſtrong meate. And therefore it is a conceit of mans braine, to imagine that ſome vnwritten word is meant by ſtrong meate.

Obiect. VI. Sundrie places of Scripture be doubtfull; and euerie religion hath his ſeuerall expoſition of them, as the Papiſts haue theirs, & the Proteſtants theirs. Now then ſeeing there can be but one truth, whē queſtion is of the interpretation of Scripture, recourſe muſt be had to the tradition of the Church, that the true ſenſe may bee determined and the queſtion ended. Anſ. It is not ſo: but in the doubtful places ſcripture it ſelfe is ſufficient to declare his owne meaning: firſt by the analogie of faith, which is the ſum of religion gathered out of the cleareſt places of ſcripture: ſecondly, by the circumſtances of the place and the nature and ſignification of the words: thirdly by conference of place with place. By theſe and like helps contained in ſcripture, wee may iudge which is the trueſt meaning of any place. Scripture it ſelfe is the text and the beſt gloſſe. And the ſcripture is falſely tearmed the matter of ſtrife, it beeing not ſo of it ſelfe, but by the abuſe of man.

Aug de doct. Chriſt. l. 1, & 2.

And thus much for our diſſent concerning traditions, wherein wee muſt not bee wauering but ſtedfaſt: becauſe notwithſtanding our renouncing of Poperie, yet popiſh inclinations and diſpoſitions bee rife among vs. Our common people marueilouſly affect humane traditions: yea mans nature is inclined more to be pleaſed with them, then with the worde of God. The feaſt of the natiuitie of our Sauiour Chriſt is onely a cuſtome and tradition of the Church, and yet men are commonly more carefull to keepe it then the Lords daie, the keeping whereof ſtandes by the morall lawe. Poſitiue lawes are not ſufficient to reſtraine vs from buying and ſelling on the Sabboth: yet within the twelue daies no man keepes market. Againe ſee the truth of this in our affection to the miniſterie of the word: let the preacher alleadge Peter and Paul, the people count it but common ſtuffe, ſuch as any man can bring; but let men come and alleadge Ambroſe, Auſtine, and the reſt of the fathers: oh, hee is the man, he is alone for them. Againe, let any man be in danger any way, and ſtraight he ſendeth to the wiſe man or wizzard: Gods worde is not ſufficient to comfort and direct him. All this argues that popery denied with the mouth, abides ſtill in the heart: and therefore we muſt learne to reuerence the written worde by aſcribing vnto it all manner of perfection.

The eight point:

Of Vowes.

Our conſent.

Touching Vowes this muſt be knowne that we doe not cōdemne them altogether, but onely labour to reſtore the puritie of doctine touching this point, which by the Church of Rome from time to time hath beene corrupted and defaced. Wee hold therefore that a vowe is a promiſe made to God touching ſome duties to bee performed vnto him: and it is twofold, general, or ſpeciall. The generall vowe is that which concernes all beleeuers: and it is made in the couenant both of the law, and of the Goſpell. I will here onely ſpeake of the vow which is made in the couenant of the goſpell, in which there be two actions: one of God, the other of man. God in mercie on his part promiſeth to men the remiſſion of ſinnes and life euerlaſting:

and

and man againe for his part promiſeth to beleeue in Chriſt, and to obey God in all his commandements. All men euer made this vowe vnto God, as the Iewes in circumciſiõ: which alſo they renewed ſo oftẽ as they receiued the Paſſeouer: and in the newe teſtament all that are baptized doe the like. And in Baptiſme this vowe is called the ſtipulation of a good conſcience, whereby wee purpoſe to renounce our ſelues, to beleeue in Chriſt, and to bring forth the fruits of true repentance: and it ought to be renewed ſo oft as wee are partakers of the ſupper of the Lord. This vowe is neceſſarie and muſt be kept as a part of the true worſhip of God; becauſe it is a promiſe wherein wee vowe to performe all duties commanded of God either in the law or in the Goſpell. It may be demaunded, conſidering we are bound to obedience, how wee bind our ſelues in Baptiſme thereto. Anſw. Though wee bee allready bound partly by nature and partly by the written word, yet may we renew the ſame bond in a vowe, and hee that is bound may further bind himſelfe, ſo it bee for this ende, to help his dulneſſe for want of zeale, & to make him more forward in duties of loue to men and the worſhip of God: to this ende Dauid ſware to keepe the law of God. Pſal. 119.116. Though he were bound vnto it by nature and by the written law it ſelfe.

The ſpeciall vowe is that which doth not reach to the perſon of all beleeuers, but onely concerne ſome ſpeciall men vpon ſome ſpeciall occaſions. And this kind of vowe is twofold, The firſt, is the vowe of ceremoniall dutie in the way of ſeruice to God: and it was in practice in the Church of the Iewes vnder the old teſtament: examples hereof are two eſpecially, the firſt was the vow of the Nazarites. whereto no kind of men were bound by Gods commandement, but they bound themſelues: God onely preſcribing the manner and order of keeping the ſame with rites pertaining therto, as abſtinence from wine, the not cutting of their haire, and ſuch like. The ſecond example is of the Iewes, when of their owne accordes, they vowed to giue God houſe or land, ſheepe or oxen, or any like things for the maintenance of the legall worſhip: and of this alſo God preſcribeth certaine rules, Leuit. 27. Nowe theſe vowes were part of the Iewiſh pedagogue or ceremoniall law where in God trained vp the Iewes in the old teſtament: and beeing obſerued of them, they vvere parts of Gods vvorſhip: but nowe vnder the Goſpell they vvere not: beeing all aboliſhed vvith the ceremoniall lawe, to which Chriſt put an ende at his death vpon the croſſe. It is true, Paul made a vowe, and ſince kept the ſame, in the time of the nevve teſtament, Acts. 18. yet not as a part of Gods worſhip: but as a thing indifferent for the time, vvherein he only condiſcended to the weakenes of the Iewes, that by this meanes hee might bring them the better vnto Chriſt. And wheras Chriſt is called a Nazarite, Math. 2.23. we may not thinke he was of that very order, becauſe he did not abſtaine from wine: but he was ſo tearmed becauſe hee was the veritie & accompliſhment of this order. For by it was ſignified that GODS Church was a peculier people ſeuered or choſen out of the world, and that Chriſt in reſpect of holineſſe was alſo ſeperated from all ſinners. And the words in S. Mat. he ſhall be called a Nazarite, are borrowed from the booke of Iudges, cap. 13. vvhere they are properlie ſpoken of Sampſon, & in tipe or figure of Chriſt. For as Sampſon ſaued Iſrael by his death, ſo did Chriſt ſaue his Church. And as Sampſon killed his enemies more by death then by life, ſo did Chriſt. It is plaine therefore that this kind of vow bindeth not vs: for there are no more ceremonies to be kept vnder the Goſpell for parts of Gods worſhip but the outward rites of baptiſme & the Lords ſupper. Vowes cõcerning meates, drinkes, attire, touching, taſting, times, daies, were proper to the Iewes.

The ſecond time of ſpecial vowe is that whereby a man promiſeth freely to performe ſome outward and bodily exerciſe, for ſome good ende: and this vowe alſo (if it be made accordingly) is lawfull and belonges both to the church of the old & newe teſtament. In the olde wee haue the example of the Rekabites, Ier. 35. who by the appointment of Ionadab their father abſtained from ſtrong drinke, and wine, frõ plãting vineyards & orchards: wherby Ionadab intended only to breake them before hand, & to acquaint thẽ with their future condition and ſtate, that they ſhould bee ſtrangers in a forraine land: that ſo they might prepare themſelues to indure hardneſſe in the time to come. And now in the newe teſtament wee haue warrant in like manner to vowe: as if a man by drinking of wine or ſtrong drinke, finde himselfe prone to drunkennesse, he may vowe with himselfe to drinke no more wine nor strong drinke for so long time, as he feeles the drinking thereof will stirre vp his infirmitie, and minister occasion of sinning. Of this kind also are the vowes in which we purpose and promise to God, to keepe set times of fasting, to taske our selues in praier in reading of holy Scriptures, and to giue set almes for speciall causes knowne to our selues, and to doe sundrie like duties. and that wee be not deceiued in making such vowes, certaine rules must be remembred: I. that the vow be agreeable to Gods wil and word: for if it bee otherwise, the making as also the keeping thereof is sinne. Vowes must not be the bondes of iniquitie, II. It must so be made, that it may stand with Christian libertie. For wee may not make such things necessary in conscience, which god hath made free. Nowe Christian libertie allows vnto vs the freevse of al things indifferēt so it be out of the case of offēce. Hence it followes that vowes must bee made and kept or not kept, so farre forth as in conscience they may stand or not stand with our libertie purchased by Christ. III. The vowe must bee made with consent of superiours, if we be vnder gouerment. Thus among the Iewes the vowe of a daughter might not stand, vnlesse the consent of Parents came therunto. IV. It must bee in the power and abilitie of the maker thereof, to doe or not to doe A vowe made of a thing impossible, is no vowe. V. It must bee agreeable to the calling of him that maketh it: that is, both to his generall calling as he is a Christian, and to that particular calling wherein hee liueth. If it be against either one or both, it is vnlawfull. VI. It must be made with deliberation. Rash vowes be not lawefull, though the thinges vowed may bee done lawefully. VII. The ende must bee good which is to preserue and exercise the gifts of faith, praier, repentance, obedience, and other vertues of the minde; also to testifie our thankefulnes vnto God for blessings receiued. These are the principall rules that must be obserued in making of vows: and here withall must be remembred, that vowes made on this manner, are by themselues no part of Gods worship, but onelie helpes and furtherances thereunto: and thus are we to esteeme of all the vowes of the newe testament. And thus much of speciall vowes, and of our consent herein.

The dissent or difference.

The points of difference betweene us touching vowes are especially three. I. The Church of Rome teacheth that in the newe Testament wee are as much bound to make vowes, as was the Church of the Iewes, & that euen in externall exercises. We say no: considering the ceremoniall lawe is now abolished: and we haue onely two ceremonies by commandement to be obserued, Baptisme, and the Supper of the Lorde. Againe we are not so much bound to make or keepe vowes as the Iewes were; because they had a commandement so to doe, and we haue none at all. But they alleadge to the contrary the prophet Esay, chap. 19. 20. who speaking of the time of the Gospel, saith. The Egyptians shall knowe the Lorde, and shall vowe vnto him and keepe it. I answer two waies: first, that the prophet in this place expresseth and signifieth the spirituall worshippe of the newe testament by ceremoniall worship then vsed: as hee doeth also in the last chapter where he calleth the ministers of the newe testament Priests and Leuites. Secōdly, we grant, the Chuch of the new testament makes vowes vnto GOD, but they are of morall and euangelicall duties; which must not bee left vndone: and if vowing will indeede further them it is not to be neglected. And therfore so oft as we come to the Lords table, we in heart renewe the vow and promise of obedience. And though vowes be made of things & actions indifferent, yet are they not any parts of Gods worship, which is the point to be prooued.

Againe they alleadge, Psal. 75. 11. Vowe vnto God and performe it. And they say that this commandement bindes all men. Ans. That commandement first bindes the Iewes to the making of ceremonial vows. Againe Dauid here speakes of the vowing of praise and thanksgiuing vnto God: and so hee expoundes himselfe, Psal, 56. 12. My vowes are vpon me, I will offer praises vnto God: and this vowe indeede concerneth al men, because it respects a morall dutie, which is to set forth the praise of God.

II. Point of difference. They also hold, that vowes made euen of things not commanded, as meates, drinkes, attire. &c. are parts of Gods worship, yea that they tend to a state of perfection, in that the keeping of them brings man to an higher estate then the keeping of the law can doe. We flatly say no, holding that lawefull vowes

be certaine ſtaies and proppes of Gods worſhip, and not the worſhip it ſelfe. For Paul ſaith plainely. 1. Tim. 4. 8. Bodily exercise profiteth little, but godlineſſe is profitable for much. Againe as Gods kingdome is, ſo muſt his worſhip be: and Gods kingdome ſtandeth not in outward things, as in eating, drinking, and ſuch like actions: & therefore his worſhip ſtandeth not in outward things.

III. Point of difference. They maintaine ſuch vowes to be made, as are not agreeable to the rules before named: and herein alſo we are to diſſent from them. The firſt and principall is, the vowe of continencie, whereby a man promiſeth to god to keep chaſtitie alwaies in ſingle life, that is, out of the eſtate of wedlocke. This kind of vowe is flat againſt the word of God: and therefore vnlawfull. For Paul ſaith. 1. Corinth. 7. 9. If they cannot containe, let them marrie. 1. Tim. 4. 1. It is a doctrine of deuils to forbid to marrie. Heb. 13. 4. Marriage is honourable among all, and the bed vndefiled. Againe, this vowe is not in the power of himſelfe that voweth: for continencie is the gift of God, who giueth not it vnto all, but to whome he wil, and when he wil, and as long as he will. They alleadge, that in the want of continencie, faſting and praier obtaine it. Anſw. It is not ſo: Gods gifts bee of two ſorts: ſome are common to all beleeuers, as the gift of faith, repentance and the feare of God, &c. others are peculiar to ſome onely, as the gift of continencie. 1. Corinth. 7. 7. I would that all men were as I my ſelfe am, but euerie man hath his proper gift of God, one this way, another that way. Nowe if wee faſt and pray for the increaſe of the common gifts of God, as faith, repentance, and all ſuch as are needfull to ſaluation, wee may obtaine them in ſome meaſure, but the like cannot be ſaid of particular gifts. The child of God may pray for health or wealth, and not obtaine either of them in this world; becauſe it is not the will of God to vouchſafe theſe bleſſings to all men: and Paul praied three times to be deliuered from a temptation, and yet obtained not his ſuit. And ſo may wee likewiſe pray for chaſtitie in ſingle eſtate, and yet neuer obtaine it: becauſe, it may bee, it is the will of God to ſaue vs without it. This vowe therefore we abhor as a thing that hath heretofore and doeth ſtill bring forth innumerable abominatiõs in the world. Yet here marke in what mãner we doe it. Firſt of all, though wee miſlike the vowe: yet wee like and commend ſingle life. Marriage indeede is better in two reſpects: firſt becauſe GOD hath ordained it to be a remedy of incõtinencie to all ſuch perſons as cannot containe: ſecondly, becauſe it is the ſeminarie both of Church and common wealth: and it bringeth forth a ſeede of God for the inlarging of his kingdome. Yet ſingle life in them that haue that gift of continencie, is in ſome reſpects to be preferred. Firſt, becauſe it bringe libertie in perſecution. Thus Paul ſaith, 1. Corinth. 7. 26. I ſuppoſe it to bee good for the preſent neceſſitie for a man ſo to be. Secondly, becauſe it frees men from the common cares, moleſtations, and diſtractions that bee in the familie, verſ. 28. Such ſhall haue trouble in the fleſh, but I ſpare you. Thirdly becauſe ſingle parties doe commonly with bodilie eaſe and libertie worſhip God: it beeing ſtill preſuppoſed, that they haue the gift of continencie. v. 34. The vnmarried woman careth for the things of the Lord, that ſhee may be holy both in bodie and ſpirit.

Againe though wee miſlike the vowe, yet we hold & teach, that men or women beeing aſſured that they haue the gift of continencie, may conſtantly reſolue and purpoſe with themſelues to liue and lead a ſingle life. 1. Cor. 7. 37. Hee that ſtandeth firme in his owne heart that he hath no need, but hath power of his owne will, and hath ſo decreed in his heart that hee will keepe his virgine, hee doeth well. And wee embrace the ſaying of Theodoret on. 1. Tim. chap. 4. For hee doth not (ſaith he) blame ſingle life or continencie, but he accuſeth them that by lawe inacted compell men to followe theſe. And men made themſelues chaſte for the kingdome of heauen, Math. 19. 12. not by vowe, but by a purpoſe of heart, which is farre leſſe then a vowe, and may be changed vpon occaſion, whereas a vow cannot, vnleſſe it do euidently appeare to be vnlawfull.

Thirdly, for ſuch perſons as are able to containe, to liue ſingle for the ends before named, indeed we hold it to be no counſel of perfection, yet dooe we not denie it to be a counſell of expedience, or outward eaſe according to that which Paul ſaith, v. 25. I giue mine aduiſe——, and 35. I ſpeake this for your commoditie not to intangle you in a ſnare.

Laſtly wee thinke that if any hauing the gift of continencie, dooe make a vowe to liue ſingle, and yet afterward marrie (the ſaid gift remaining) they haue ſinned. Yet not becauſe they are married, but becauſe their vow is broken. And thus ſaid Auguſtine of widdowes that married after their vowe, lib. de bono viduit. cap. 9.

The ſecond is the vow of pouertie and monaſticall life, in which men beſtow all they haue on the poore: & giue themſelues wholly and onely to praier and faſting. This vowe is againſt the will of God. Act. 20. 35. It is a more bleſſed thing to giue then to receiue. Prou. 28. 7. Giue me neither riches nor pouertie. Deut. 28. 22. Pouertie is numbred among the curſes of the lawe: none whereof are to be vowed. And it is the rule of the holy Ghoſt. 2. Theſſ. 3. 10. He that will not labour, namely in ſome ſpeciall and warrantable calling, muſt not eate. And, v. 12. I exhort that they worke with quietneſſe and eate their own bread. Now when as men liue apart from others, giuing themſelues onely to praier and faſting, they liue in no calling. And it is againſt the generall vowe made in baptiſme, becauſe it freeth men from ſundrie duties of the morall lawe, and changeth the proper ende of mans life. For euery man muſt haue two callings. The firſt is a generall calling of a Chriſtian, by vertue of which hee performeth worſhip vnto God, and dueties of loue to men. The ſecond is a particular calling, wherein according to his gift hee muſt doe ſeruice to men in ſome function, pertaining either to the Church or common wealth wherof he is a member. And the firſt of theſe twaine muſt be performed in the ſecond: and the ſecond in and with the firſt. The ende of mans life is, not onely to ſerue God by the dueties of the firſt table, but by ſeruing of man in the duties of the ſecond table, to ſerue GOD. And therefore the loue of our neighbour is called the fulfilling of the whole lawe. Rō. 13. 10. becauſe the law of God is practiſed not apart, but in & with the loue of our neighbour. This being ſo, it is manifeſt that vowed pouerty in monkiſh life makes many vnprofitable members both of Church & common-wealth.

And though we miſlike this vowe alſo, yet wee doe it, holding theſe concluſions. I. That a man may forſake all his goods vpon ſpeciall calling, as the Apoſtles did, when they were ſent to preach the Goſpell through the whole world. Secondlie goods may be forſaken, yea wife, children, parents, brethren, and all, in the caſe of confeſſion, that is, when a man for the religion of Chriſt is perſecuted and conſtrained to forſake all hee hath. For then the ſecond table giues place to the duties of the firſt Mark. 10. 29. II. That, for the time of perſecution, men may withdraw themſelues (iuſt occaſion offered) and goe apart to wilderneſſes or like places, Heb. 11. 37. yet for the time of peace I ſee no cauſe of ſolitarie life. If it bee alleaged that men goe apart for contemplation and ſpirituall exerciſes, I ſay againe that Gods grace may as well be exerciſed in the familie as in the cloiſter. The familie is indeede as it were a Schoole of God, in which they that haue but a ſparke of grace, may learne and exerciſe manie vertues; the acknowledgement of God, inuocation, the feare of God, loue, bountifulneſſe, patience, meekneſſe, faithfulneſſe, &c. Nay here be more occaſions of doing or taking good, then bee or can bee in a cloiſter. III. That, wee condemne not the olde and auntient Monkes, though we like not euery thing in them. For they liued not like idle-bellies, but in the ſweat of their owne browes, as they ought to doe: and many of them were married: & and in their meat, drinke, apparrell, rule, vowe, and whole courſe of life, differed from the Monks of this time; euen as heauen from earth. Zonar. in a Epiph. bar. 78. Aug. de Mon. Eccl. l. 1. c. 31 & decem. Monach. cap. 17.

The third vow is of regular obedience, whereby men giue themſelues to keepe ſome deuiſed rule or order, ſtanding moſt commonly in the obſeruation of exerciſes in outward things, as meates, and drinkes and apparell, &c. This vowe is againſt Chriſtian libertie, whereby is graunted a free vſe of all things indifferent, ſo it bee without the caſe of offence. Gal. 5. 1. Stand faſt in the libertie wherein Chriſt hath made you free. Colloſſ. 2. 16. Let no man iudge you in meat and drinke. To conclude, whereas the Papiſts magnifie theſe their vowes, and yet make no ſuch account of the vow in Baptiſme: wee for our parts muſt be contrarie to them, not onely in iudgement, but alſo in practiſe: and we ought to haue ſpeciall care to make good the vowes wee haue plight to God according to his cōmandement. In our creation we made a vow of obedience: and beeing receiued into the couenant of grace, wee vowed to beleeue in Chriſt, and to bring foorth fruits of newe obedience, and this vowe is renued as oft as we come to the Lords table: our dutie therefore is, to performe thē alſo to God, as Dauid ſaith, Vow vnto

God and keepe it: and if we keepe them not, all turnes to our shame and confusion. Men stand much on the keeping of that word which they haue passed to men, and it is taken for a point of much honesty, as it is indeede. Nowe then, if there bee such care to keepe couenant with men, much more should we haue care to keepe couenant with God.

The ninth point. Of Images

Our consent.

Conclus. I. We acknowledge the ciuill vse of images as freely and truely as the Church of Rome doth. By ciuill vse I vnderstand, that vse which is made of them in the common societies of men, out of the appointed places of the solemne worship of God. And this to bee lawfull, it appeareth; because the arts of painting and grauing are the ordinance of God: and to be skilfull in them is the gift of God, as the example of Bezaleel, and Aholiab declare Exod. 35,30. This vse of Images may bee in sundry things, I. In the adorning and setting forth of buildings: Thus Salomon beautified his throne with the image of lyons. And the Lord commanded his temple to bee adorned with images of palme trees, of pomegranates, of bulls, cherubes, and such like. II. It serues for the distinction of coines; according to the practise of Emperours and Princes of all nations. When Christ was asked, Math, 22. whether it was lawful to giue tribute to Cæsar or not? he called for a pennie, and said, Whose image or superscription is this? they said, Cæsars: he then said; Giue to Cæsar the things that are Cæsars: not condemning but approouing the stampe or image vpon his coyne. And though the Iewes were forbidden to make images in way of representatiō, or worship of the true God; yet the Sycle of the sanctuarie, which they vsed, specially after the time of Moses, was stamped with the image of the Almond tree, and the potte of Manna. III. Images serue to keep in memorie friendes deceased, whome we reuerence. And it is like that hence came one occasiō of the images that are now in vse in the Roman Church. For in the dayes of the Apostles men vsed priuately to keep the pictures of their frieds departed: & this practise after crept into the open congregation; and at the last superstition getting head, images began to be worshipped.

Concl. II. We hold the historicall vse of images to be good and lawful: and that is, to represent to the eye the actes of histories whether they be humane, or diuine: and thus we thinke the Hlstories of the Bible may be painted in priuate places.

Conclus. III. In one case it is lawfull to make an Image to testifie the presence or the effects of the maiesty of God, namely when God himselfe giues any speciall cōmandement so to doe. In this case Moses made and erected a brasen serpent, to be a type, signe, or image to represent Christ crucified. Ioh. 3.14. And the Cherubes ouer the mercie seat serued to represent the maiestie of God, to whome the Angels are subiect. And in the second commandement it is not simply said, Thou shalt not make a grauē image: but with limitation, Thou shalt not make to thy selfe, that is, on thine owne head vppon thine owne will and pleasure.

Conclus. IIII. The right images of the newe Testament which we holde and acknowledge, are the doctrine and preaching of the Gospell, and all thinges that by the word of God pertaine thereto. Gal. 3. Who hath bewitched you that yee should not obey the truth, to whome Iesus Christ was before described in your sight & among you crucified? Hence it follows that the preaching of the word is as a most excellent picture in which Christ with his benefits are liuely represented vnto vs. And we dissent not from Origen, contra. Cels. lib. 8. who saith, We haue no images framed by any base workeman but such as are brought fourth and framed by the word of God, namely patternes of vertue, and frames resembling Christians. He meanes that Christians themselues are the images of Christians.

The difference.

Our dissent from them touching Images stands in three points. I. The Church of Rome holdes it lawfull for them to make images to resemble god, though not in respect of his diuine nature; yet in respect of some properties and actions. Wee on the contrarie hold it vnlawfull for vs to make any image, any way to represent the true God: or, to make any image, of any thing in way of religion, to worshipp God, much lesse the creature thereby. For the second commandement saith plainely, Exod. 20.4. Thou shalt not make to thy selfe any grauen image, or the likenes of any thing in heauen, &c. The Papists say, the commandement is meant of the images of false GODS.

But, wil they nill they, it must bee vnderstood of the images of the true Iehouah; & it forbids vs[a] to resemble God, either in his nature, properties, or workes, or to vse any resemblance of him for any secret vse: as to helpe the memorie, when wee are about to worship God. Thus much the holy Ghost, who is the best expounder of himselfe, teacheth most plainely, Deut. 4. 15.16. Thou sawest no image at all (either of false or true God) and therefore thou shalt not make any likenes of any thing. And again the prophet Esai. chap. 40.18. reprooving idolaters, asketh to whome they will liken God: or, what similitude will they sette vpon him? and v.21. Know yee nothing? haue you not heard? hath it not beene told you from the beginning? As if hee should say, haue yee forgotten the second commandemēt, that God gaue vnto your fathers? And thus he flatly reprooues all them that resemble the true God in images. But they say further, that by Images in the second commandement are meant idols, that is (say they) such things as men worship for Gods. Answ. If it were so wee should confound the first and second commandements. For the first, Thou shalt haue no other Gods before my face, forbids all false Gods, which man wickedlie frames vnto himselfe by giuing his heart and principall affections thereof, to them: & therefore idols also are here forbidden, when they are esteemed as Gods. And the distinction they make that an Image is the representation of true things, an Idol of things supposed, is false: Tertullia saith, that euerie forme, or representation is to be termed an Idole. And[b] Isidore saith that the heathen vsed the names of image and idol indifferently in one & the same signification. And Saint Steuen in his apologie, Act.7.41. calls the golden calfe an idole.[c] Hierome saith, that Idols are images of dead men. Auncient deuines accord with all this which I haue said. Lactantius saith, Inst. lib.2. cap. 19. Where images are for religions sake, there is no religion. The councel of Elibera, can. 36. decreed, that nothing should be painted on the walls of Churches, which is adored of the people.[d] Origen. We suffer not any to worshippe Iesus at altars, images, and tables: because it is written, Thou shalt haue none other Gods. And[e] Epiphanius saith, it is against the authoritie of the scriptures to see the image of Christ or of any Saints hanging on the Church. In the seuenth Councell of Constantinople, these words of Epiphanius are cited against the Encratitæ; Be mindefull beloued children not to bring images into the Church, nor set them in the places where the Saints are buried, but alwaies carie God in your hearts: neither let them bee suffered in any common house: for it is not meete that a Christiā should be occupied by the eyes, but by the meditation of the minde.

So saith Romane Catech. on 1 Command.

Arguments of the Papists.

The reasons which they vse to defend their opinions are these. I. In Salomons temple were erected Cherubins, which were images of Angels, on the Mercie-seate where God was worshipped: and thereby was resembled the Maiestie of God: therefore it is lawfull to make images to resemble God. Answ. They were erected by speciall commandement from God, who prescribeth the very forme of them and the place where they must bee set: and thereby Moses had a warrant to make them; otherwise hee had sinned: let thē shew the like warrant for their images if they can. Secondly the Cherubines were placed in the holy of holies in the most inward place of the Temple, & consequently were remooued from the sight of the people, who onelie heard of them: and none but the high Priest sawe them, and that but once a yeare. And the cherubins without the vayle, though they were to be seene, yet were they not to be worshipped, Exod.20.4. Therefore they serue nothing at all to iustifie the images of the Church of Rome.

Obiect. II. God appeared in the forme of a man to Abraham, Gen, 18, 1. 13. and to Daniel, who saw the auntient of dayes sitting on a throne. Dan. 9. Now as God appeared, so may he be resembled: therefore (say they) it is lawfull to resemble God in the forme of a man or any like image, in which he shewed himself to men, Ans. In this reason the proposition is false: for God may appeare in whatsoeuer form it pleaseth his Maiestie; yet doth it not follow, that men should therefore resemble God in those formes: man hauing no libertie to resemble him in any forme at all; vnlesse he bee commanded so to doe. Againe, when God appeared in the forme of a man, that forme was a signe of Gods presence onelie for the time when God appeared and no longer; as the bread and Wine in the Sacrament are signes of Christs body and bloud, not for euer, but for the time of administration: for afterward ward they become againe as common bread and wine. And when the holy Ghost appeared in the likenesse of a doue, that likenesse was a signe of his presence no longer then the holie Ghost so appeared. And therefore he that wold in these forms represent the Trinitie, dooth greatlie dishonour God, and doe that, for which hee hath no warrant.

Obiect. III. Man is the image of God, but it is lawfull to paint a man, and therefore to make the image of God. Ans. A very cauill: for first a man cannot be painted, as he is the image of God, which stands in the spirituall gifts of righteousnesse & true holinesse. Againe, the image of a man may be painted for ciuill or historicall vse, but to paint any man for this end to represent God, or in the way of religiō, that we may the better remember and worship God, it is vnlawfull. Other reasons which they vse are of small moment, and therefore I omit them.

II. Differ. They teach and maintaine, that images of God and of Saints may bee worshipped with religious worship, specially the crucifixe. For [a] Thomas of Watering saith, Seeing the crosse doeth represent Christ who died vpon a crosse, and is to be worshipped with diuine honour: it followeth that the crosse is to be worshipped so too. VVee on the contrarie, hold they maye not. Our principall ground is the second commandement, which containeth two parts: the first forbiddeth the making of images to resemble the true God: the second forbids the worshipping of them, or God in them: in these wordes, Thou shalt not bow downe to them. Now there can be no worship done to any thing lesse then the bending of the knee. Againe the brasen serpent was a type or image of Christ crucified, Ioh. 3. 14. appointed by God himselfe: yet when the people burned incense to it. 2. King. 18. 4. Hezechias brake it in pieces, & is therfore commended. And when the deuil bad our Sauiour Christ, but to bowe downe the knee vnto him, and hee would giue him the whole world: Christ relects his offer, saying, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him onely shalt thou serue, Mathew. 4. 10. Againe it is lawefull for one man to worship another with ciuill worship, but to worship man with religious honor is vnlawful. For all religious worship is prescribed in the first table: and the honour due to man is onely prescribed in the second table, and the first commandement therof, Honour thy father, which honour is therefore ciuil and not religious. Now the meanest man that can be, is a more excellent image of God, then all the images of God or of Saints that are deuised by men. Augustine, and long after him Gregorie, in plain tearms denieth images to be adored.

[a] Somm. part. 3. que 25. art. 3.

The Papists defend their opinions by these reasons. I. Psal. 99. 5. Cast downe your selues before his footestoole. Ans. The words are thus to be read: Bow at his footestoole: that is, at the Arke & Mercyseat, for there he hath made a promise of his presence: the wordes therefore say not, bowe to the Arke, but to God at the Arke.

IIII. Obiect. Exod. 3. 5. god said to Moses, Stand afarre off and put off thy shooes, for the place is holy. Now if holy places must be reuerenced, then much more holie images as the crosse of Christ, and such like. Ans. God commanded the ceremonie of putting of the shoes, that he might therby strike Moses with a religious reuerence, not of the place but of his owne Maiestie, whose presence made the place holy. Let them shewe the like warrant for images.

V. Obiect. It is lawefull to kneele downe to a chaire of estate in the absence of the King or Queene: therefore much more to the images of God and of Saints in heauen glorified being absent from vs. Answer. To kneele to the chaire of estate, is no more but a ciuill testimonie, or signe of ciuil reuerence, by which all good subiects when occasion is offered, shew their loyaltie and subiection to their lawefull princes. And this kneeling beeing on this manner and to no other ende, hath sufficiēt warrāt in the word of god. But kneeling to the image of any Saint departed, is religious, and consequently more then ciuill worship, as the Papists thēselues confesse. The argument then prooueth nothing, vnlesse they wil keepe themselues to one and the same kind of worship.

III. Difference. The Papists also teach, that God may bee lawefully worshipped in images, in which he hath appeared vnto men: as the Father in the image of an old man: the son in the image of a man crucified: and the holy Ghost in the likenesse of a doue, &c. But wee holde it vnlawfull to worship God, in, by, or at any image: for this is the thing which (as I haue prooued before) the second commādement forbiddeth. And the fact of the Israelites. Exod. 32. in worshipping the golden calfe is condemned as flat idolatry; albeit they worshipped not the calfe, but God in the calfe; for v. 5. Aaron saith, To morrowe shall be the solemnitie of Iehouah: whereby hee doeth giue vs to vnderstand, that the calfe was but a signe of Iehouah whome they worshipped. Obiect. It seemes the Israelites worshipped the calfe. For Aaron saith, v. 4. These be thy gods (O Israel) that brought thee out of Egypt. Anſ. Aarons meaning is nothing else, but that the golden calfe was a signe of the presence of the true God. And the name of the thing signified is giuen to the signe, as vpon a stage hee is called a king that represents the king. And Augustine saith, that images are woont to be called by the names of thinges whereof they are images, as the counterfait of Samuel is called Samuel. And wee must not esteeme them all as madde men to thinke that a calfe made of their earings, being but one or two daies old, should be the God that brought them out of Egypt with a mighty hand many daies before.

ad Simplic. lib. 2. q. 3.

And these are the points of difference touching images; wherein wee must stand at variance for euer with the Church of Rome. For they erre in the foundation of religion, making indeede an idol of the true God, & worshipping another Christ then we doe; vnder new tearmes, maintaining the idolatrie of the heathen. And therefore haue wee departed from them: and so must we still doe because they are Idolaters; as I haue prooued.

The tenth point. Of reall presence.

Our Consent.

1. We hold and beleeue a presence of Christs bodie and blood in the sacrament of the Lords supper: and that no fained, but a true and reall presence which must be considered two waies: first in respect of the signes, secondly in respect of the communicants. For the first we hold and teach that Christs body & blood, are truely present with the bread and wine, being signes in the sacrament: but how? not in respect of place or coexistence; but by Sacramentall relation on this manner. When a word is vttered, the sound comes to the eare; and at the same instant, the thing signified comes to the minde; and thus by relation the word & the thing spoken of, are both present together. Euen so at the Lordes table bread and wine must not bee considered barely, as substances & creatures, but as outward signes in relation to the bodie and blood of Christ & this relation, arising from the very institution of the sacrament, stands in this, that when the elements of bread and wine are present to the hand and to the mouth of the receiuer; at the very same time the body and blood of Christ are presented to the mind: thus and no otherwise is Christ truely present with the signes. The secõd presẽce is in respect of the communicants, to whose beleeuing harts he is also really presẽt. It will be said, what kind of presence is this; Anſ. Such as the communion in the sacrament is, such is the presence, & by the communion must we iudge of the presence. Nowe the communion is one this manner: god the father according to the tenour of the Euangelicall couenant, giues Christ in his sacrament as really and truely, as any thing can be giuen vnto man, not by part and peece-meale (as we say) but whole Christ God & man, on this sort. In Christ their bee two natures, the godhead, and manhood. The godhead is not giuen in regard of substance, or essence: but onely in regard of efficacie, merits, and operation conueied thence to the manhood. And further in this sacrament Christs whole manhood is giuen both bodie and soule, in this order. First of all is giuen the very manhood in respect of substance, and that really: secondly the merits and benefits thereof, as namely, the satisfaction performed by and in the manhood to the iustice of God. And thus the intire manhood with the benefits thereof, are giuen wholly and ioyntly together. For the two distinct signes of bread and wine signifie not two distinct giuings of the bodie apart and the blood apart; but the full and perfect nourishment of our soules. Againe the benefits of Christs manhood are diuersly giuen, some by imputation, which is an action of God accepting that which is done by Christ as done by vs: and thus it hath pleased God to giue the passion of Christ and his obedience. Some againe are giuen by a kinde of propagation which I cannot fitly expresse in tearmes, but I resemble it thus. As one candle is lighted by another, and one torch or candle-light is conuaied to twentie candles euen so the inherent righteousnesse of euery beleeuer, is deriued from the store house of righteousnesse, which is in the manhoode of Christ; for the righteousnesse of all the members, is but the fruit thereof, thereof, euen as the naturall corruption in all mankind, is but a fruit of that originall ſinne which was in Adam. Thus we ſee how God for his part giues Chriſt: and that really. To proceed, when God giues Chriſt, hee giues withall at the ſame time the ſpirit of Chriſt, which ſpirit creates in the heart of the receiuer the inſtrument of true faith, by which the heart doth really receiue Chriſt giuen of God, by reſting vpon the promiſe which God hath made that he will giue Chriſt and his righteouſneſſe to euery true beleeuer. Now then, when God giues Chriſt with his benefits, and man for his part by faith receiues the ſame as they are giuen, there riſeth that vnion which is betweene euery good receiuer and Chriſt himſelfe. Which vnion is not forged, but a real, true, and neare coniunction: nearer then which, none is or can bee: becauſe it is made by a ſolemne giuing and receiuing that paſſeth between God and man: as alſo by the bond of one and the ſame ſpirit. To come then to the point, conſidering there is a reall vnion, and conſequently a reall communion betweene vs and Chriſt, (as I haue prooued) there muſt needes bee ſuch a kinde of preſence wherin Chriſt is truly and really preſent to the heart of him that receiues the ſacrament in faith. And thus farre doe we conſent with the Romiſh church touching reall preſence.

The diſſent.

We differ not touching the preſence it ſelfe, but onely in the manner of preſence: For though wee holde a reall preſence of Chriſts body and bloud in the ſacrament, yet do we not take it to bee locall, bodily, or ſubſtantiall, but ſpirituall and myſticall, to the ſignes by ſacramentall relation, and to the communicants by faith alone. On the contrarie the Church of Rome maintaines tranſubſtantiation, that is, a locall, bodily, and ſubſtantial preſence of Chriſts bodie and bloud, by a change and conuerſion of the bread and wine into the ſaid bodie and bloud.

Our reaſons.

I This corporall preſence ouerturnes ſundrie articles of faith. For wee beleeue that the body of Chriſt was made of the pure ſubſtance of the Virgin Marie, and that but once, namely when he was conceiued by the holy Ghoſt, and borne. But this cannot ſtand, if the body of Chriſt bee made of bread and his bloud of wine, as they muſt needes be, if there be no ſucceſſion or annihilation, but a reall conuerſion of ſubſtances in the ſacrament: vnleſſe wee muſt beleeue contrarieties, that his bodie was made of the ſubſtance of the Virgin and not of the Virgin; made once, and not once but often. Againe if his bodie and blood bee vnder the formes of bread and wine, then is he not as yet aſcended into heauen, but remaines ſtill among vs. Neither can he be ſaid to come from heauen at the day of iudgement: for hee that muſt come thence to iudge the quicke & dead, muſt be abſent from the earth. And this was the auncient faith. Auguſtine ſaith, that Chriſt according to his maieſtie and prouidence and grace is preſent with vs to the ende of the world: but according to his aſſumed fleſh hee is not alwaies with vs. Cyril ſaith, Hee is abſent in bodie and preſent in vertue, whereby all thinges are gouerned. Vigilius ſaith, That he is gone from vs according to his humanitie: he hath left vs in his humanitie: in the forme of a ſeruant abſent from vs: when his fleſh was on earth, it was not in heauen: being on earth, he was not in heauen: and being now in heauen, hee is not on earth. Fulgentius ſaith, One and the ſame Chriſt according to his humane ſubſtance, was abſent from heauen when he was on earth: and left the earth when hee aſcended into heauen.

Lib. 9. in Ioh. c. 2. Cōtr. Eutic. l. 2. & 4.

Lib. 2. ad Thraſimundum.

Reaſon II. This bodilie preſence ouerturnes the nature of a true bodie, whoſe common nature or eſſentiall propertie it is, to haue length, breadth, and thicknes, which beeing taken away, a bodie is no more a body. And by reaſon of theſe three dimenſions, a bodie can occupie but one place at once, as Ariſtole ſaid, the propertie of a bodie is to be ſeated in ſome place, ſo as a man may ſay where it is. They therefore that hold the bodie of Chriſt to be in many places at once do make it no bodie at all; but rather a ſpirit, and that infinite. They alleadge that God is almightie: that is true indeede, but in this and like matters wee muſt not diſpute what God can doe, but what he will doe. And I ſay further becauſe God is omnipotent, therefore there be ſome thinges which he cannot do, as for him to denie himſelfe, to ly, and to make the parts of a contradiction to be both true at the ſame time. To come to the point, if god ſhould make the very bodie of Chriſt to be in many places at once, he ſhould make it to be no bodie while it remaines a bodie: & to be circumſcribed in ſome one place, and not circumſcribed, becauſe it is in many places at the same time: to be visible in heauen and inuisible in the sacrament; and thus should he make contradictions to be true: which to doe, is against his nature, and argues rather impotencie then power. Augustine De Symb. ad Catech. l. 1. c. 1. sayth to this purpose. If he could lie, deceiue, be deceiued, speake vniustly, he should not bee omnipotent. And, Therefore he is omnipotent, because he cannot doe these things. Againe, He is called omnipotent by doing that which he will, and not by doing that which hee will not: which if it should befall him he should not be omnipotent.

Cap. de. cātegor. quit.

Reason III. Transubstantiation ouerturnes the verie supper of the Lord. For in euerie sacrament there must be a signe, a thing signified and a proportion or relation betweene them both. But Popish reall presence takes all awaie: for when the bread is really turned into Christs bodie, and the wine into his bloude, then the signe is abolished, and there remaines nothing but the outward formes or appearance of bread and wine. Againe it abolisheth the endes of the sacrament, whereof one is to remember Christ till his coming againe, who being present in the sacrament bodilie, needes not to bee remembred because helps of remembrance are of things absent. Another ende is to nourish the soule vnto eternall life: but by transubstantiation the principall feeding is of the bodie and not of the soule, which is onely fedde with spirituall foode: for though the bodie may bee bettered by the food of the soule, yet cannot the soule bee fedde with bodily foode.

Reason IV. In the sacrament the bodie of Christ is receiued as it was crucified, and his blood as it was shedde vppon the crosse: but now at this time Christs bodie crucified, remaines still as a bodie, but not as a bodie crucified; because the acte of crucifying is ceased. Therefore it is faith alone, that makes Christ crucified to bee present vnto vs in the sacrament. Againe, that blood which ran out of the feete and hands and side of Christ vppon the crosse, was not gathered vp againe and put into the veines: nay, the collection was needeles, because after the resurrection, he liued no more a naturall but a spirituall life: and none knows what is becom of this blood. The Papists therefore cannot say it is present vnder the forme of wine locally: and we may better say it is receiued spiritually by faith whose property is to giue a being to things which are not.

Reason V. 1. Cor. 10, 3. The fathers of the old Testament did eat the same spirituall meate, and drinke the same spirituall drinke: for they dranke of the rock which was Christ. Now they could not eate his body which was crucified, or drinke his blood shedde bodily, but by faith: because then his body and blood were not in nature. The Papists make answer, that the fathers did eate the same meate, and drink the same spirituall drink with themselues, not with vs. But their answer is against the text. For the Apostles intent is to proue, that the Iewes were euery way equal to the Corinthians, because they did eate the same spirituall meate, and dranke the same spirituall drinke with the Corinthians; otherwise his reason proues not the point which he hath in hand, namely that the Israelites were nothing inferiour to the Corinthians.

Reason VI. As it is said, the Sabboath was made for man, and not man for the Sabboath: so it may be said, that the sacrament of the Lords supper was made for man, and not man for it: and therefore man is more excellēt then the sacramēt. But if the signes of bread and wine bee really turned into the body and bloud of Christ, then is the sacrament infinitely better then man, who in his best estate is onely ioyned to Christ, and made a member of his mysticall bodie: whereas the bread and wine are made very Christ. But the sacrament or outward elements indeede are not better then man: the end beeing alwayes better then the thing ordained to the end. It remaines therefore that Christs presence is not corporall but spirituall. Againe, in the supper of the Lord, euery beleeuer receiueth whole Christ, God and man, though not the godhead: now by this carnall eating, wee receiue not whole Christ, but onely a part of his manhood: and therefore in the sacrament there is no carnall eating, and consequently no bodily presence.

Reason VII. The iudgement of the auncient Church. Theodoret saith, The same Christ who called his naturall bodie food and bread, who also called himselfe a vine, bee vouchsafed the visible signes the name of his owne bodie, not changing nature, but putting grace to nature, whereby hee meanes consecration. And The mysticall signes after sanctification loose not their proper nature. For they remaine in their first nature, and keepe their first figure and forme: and as before,

fore, may bee touched and ſeene: and that which they are made, is vnderſtood, beleeued, adored. Gelaſius ſaith, Bread and wine paſſe into the ſubſtance of the bodie and blood of Chriſt, yet ſo as the ſubſtance or nature of bread and wine ceaſeth not. And they are turned into the diuine ſubſtance, yet the bread and wine remaine ſtill in the propertie of their nature. Lumbard ſaith, If it bee asked what conuerſion this is, whether formall or ſubſtantiall, or of any other kinde, I am not able to define. And that the fathers held not tranſubſtantiation, I proue it by ſundrie reaſons. Firſt they vſed in former times to burn with fire that which remained after the adminiſtration of the Lordes ſupper. Secondly by the ſacramentall vnion of the bread and wine with the bodie and blood of Chriſt, they vſed to confirme the perſonall vnion of the manhood of Chriſt with the Godhead againſte heretickes: which argument they would not haue vſed, if they had beleeued a popiſh reall preſence. Thirdly it was a cuſtome in Cõſtantinople, that if any parts of the ſacrament remained after the adminiſtration thereof was ended, that yong children ſhould be ſent for from the ſchoole to eate them; who neuertheleſſe were barred the Lordes table. And this argues plainely that the Church in thoſe daies, tooke the bread after the adminiſtration was ended, for common bread. Againe it was once an order in the Romane Church, that the wine ſhould be conſecrated by dipping into it bread, which had beene conſecrated. But this order cannot ſtand with the reall preſence, in which the bread is turned both into the bodie and blood. Nicholaus Cabaſilus ſaith, After he hath vſed ſome ſpeech to the people, he erects their mindes, and lifts their thoughts from earth, & ſaith, Surſum corda, Let vs lift vp our hearts, let vs thinke on thinges aboue, and not on thinges that are vpon the earth. They conſent and ſaie, that they lift vp their hearts thither, where is their treaſure, & where Chriſt ſits at the right hand of his father.

Obiections of Papiſts

I. Their firſt reaſon is, Ioh. 6. 55. My fleſh is meat indeed, and my blood is drinke indeede: therefore (ſay they) Chriſts body muſt be eaten with the mouth & his blood drunke accordingly. Anſw. The chapter muſt be vnderſtood of a ſpirituall eating of Chriſt: his bodie is meate indeede, but ſpirituall meate, and his blood ſpirituall drinke, to be receiued not by the mouth, but by faith. This is the verie point that Chriſt here intendes to prooue, namely that to beleeue in him is to eate his fleſh & to drinke his blood are all one. Againe this chapter muſt not bee vnderſtood of that ſpeciall eating of Chriſt in the ſacrament: for it is ſaide generally, v. 53. Except ye eate the fleſh of Chriſt, and drinke his blood ye haue no life in you: and if theſe very wordes (which are the ſubſtance of the chapter) muſt bee vnderſtood of a ſacramentall eating, no man beefore the comming of Chriſt was ſaued: for none did bodily eate or drinke his bodie or blood; conſidering it was not then exiſting in nature, but only was preſent to the beleeuing heart by faith.

II. Obiect. Another argument is taken from the wordes of the inſtitution, This is my bodie Anſw. Theſe wordes muſt not be vnderſtood properly but by a figure: his bodie beeing put for the ſigne and ſeale of his bodie. It is obiected, that when any make their laſt wills and teſtaments, they ſpeak as plainly as they cã; now in this ſupper Chriſt ratifies his laſt wil and teſtamẽt: & therefore he ſpake plainly, without any figure. An. Chriſt here ſpeaketh plainly and by a figure alſo; for it hath been alwaies the vſuall maner of the lord in ſpeaking of the ſacramẽts, to giue the name of the thing ſignified to the ſigne: as Gen. 17. 10. circumſion is called the couenant of God: & in the next verſe in the way of expoſitiõ, the ſigne of the couenant. And Exod. 21. 12. the paſchall lambe is called the ãgels paſſing by or ouer the houſes of the Iſraelits whereas indeed it was but a ſigne thereof: and 1. Cor. 10. 4. The rocke was Chriſt. 1. Cor. 5. 7. The paſſeouer was Chriſt. And the like phraſe is to bee found in the inſtitution of this ſacrament concerning the cup, which the Papiſts themſelues cõfeſſe to be figuratiue: when it is ſaid, Luk. 22. This cup is the new teſtament in my blood, that is, a ſigne, ſeale, & pleadge thereof. Againe the time whẽ theſe words were ſpokẽ muſt be cõſidered, & it was before the paſſion of Chriſt whereas yet his bodie was not crucified nor his blood ſhed: & conſequently neither of thẽ could be receiued in bodily manner, but by faith alone. Again, Chriſt was not onely the authour, but the miniſter of this ſacramẽt at the time of inſtitution therof: & if the bread had beene truely turned into his bodie, and the wine into his blood, Chriſt with his own hands ſhould haue taken his owne bodie and blood, and hath giuen it to his Diſciples, nay which is more, hee ſhould with his owne hands, haue taken his owne fleſh, and drunken his owne blood, and haue eaten himſelfe. For Chriſt himſelfe did eate the bread and drinke the wine, that hee might with his owne perſon conſecrate his laſt ſupper, as he had conſecrated baptiſme before. And if theſe wordes ſhould be properly vnderſtood, euery mā ſhould be a manſlaier in his eating of Chriſt. Laſtly by meanes of popiſh reall preſence, it comes to paſſe, that our bodies ſhould bee nouriſhed by naked qualities without any ſubſtance which in all philoſophie is falſe and erroneous. to helpe this and the like abſurdities, ſome Papiſts make nine wonders in the ſacrament. The firſt, that Chriſts bodie is in the Euchariſt in as large a quantitie as he was vpon the croſſe and is now in heauen, and yet excludes not the quantitie of the bread. The ſecond, that there bee accidents without a ſubiect. The third, that bread is turned into the bodie of Chriſt, and yet it is not the matter of the bodie, nor reſolued to nothing. The fourth, that the bodie increaſeth not by conſecration of many hoſts, and is not diminiſhed by often receiuing. The fifth, that the bodie of Chriſt is vnder many conſecrated hoſts. The ſixt, that when the hoſt is deuided, the bodie of Chriſt is not deuided, but vnder euerie part thereof is whole Chriſt. The ſeauenth, that when the prieſt holds the hoſt in his hand, the bodie of Chriſt is not felt by it ſelfe nor ſeene, but the formes of bread and wine. The eight, that when the formes of bread and wine ceaſe, the bodie and blood of Chriſt ceaſeth alſo to be there. The ninth, that the accidents of bread and wine haue the ſame effects with the bread and wine it ſelfe, which are to nouriſh and fill. On this manner it ſhall bee eaſie for any man to defend the moſte abſurd opinion that is or can be, if he may haue libertie to anſwer the argumēts alleadged to the cōtrary by wonders.

Ioh. de Cōbis comp. Theolog. lib. 6. cap. 14

To conclude ſeeing there is a real communion in the ſacrament betweene Chriſt and euery beleeuing heart, our duty therfore is, to beſtowe our hearts on Chriſt, endeauouring to loue him, and to reioyce in him, and to leng after him aboue all thinges: all our affiance muſt be in him, and with him; wee beeing nowe on earth muſt haue our conuerſation in heauē. And this is the true reall preſence, which the aunciēt church of God hath commended vnto vs for in al theſe liturgies theſe words are vſed, and are yet extant in the Popiſh maſſe, Lift vp your hearties: wee lift them vp vnto the Lord, By which wordes the communicants were admoniſhed to direct their mindes and their faith to Chriſt ſitting at the right hand of God. Thus ſaide Auguſtine If wee celebrate the aſcenſion of the Lord with deuotion, lette vs aſcend with him, and lift vp our hearts. Againe, they which are alreadie riſen with Chriſt in faith and hope are inuited to the great table of heauen, to the table of angels, where is the bread

Serm. de Aſcenſ. 1.

Serm. 14. ſer. paſce.

The eleuenth point. Of the ſacrifice in the Lords Supper, which the Papiſts call the ſacrifice of the Maſſe.

Touching this point, firſt I will ſette downe what muſt be vnderſtood by the name Sacrifice. A ſacrifice is taken properly, or improperly. Properly it is a ſacred or ſolemne action. in which man offereth and conſecrateth ſome outward bodilie thing vnto God for this end, to pleaſe and honour him thereby. Thus all the ſacrifices of the old teſtament, and the oblation of Chriſt vpon the croſſe in the newe teſtament are ſacrifices. Improperly, that is, onely by the way of reſemblance, the duties of the morall law are called ſacrifices. and in handling this queſtion, I vnderſtād a ſacrifice both properly and improperly by way of reſemblance.

Our Conſent.

Our conſent I propound in two concluſions. Concluſ. I. That the ſupper of the Lord is a ſacrifice, and may truly be ſo called as it hath been in former ages; and that in three reſpects. I. Becauſe it is a memoriall of the reall ſacrifice of Chriſt vppon the croſſe, and containes withall a thanksgiuing to god for the ſame, which thanksgiuing is the ſacrifice and calues of our lips, Heb. 13. 15. II. Becauſe euery communicant doth there preſent himſefe body and ſoule a liuing, holy, and acceptable ſacrifice vnto God. For as in this ſacrament God giues vnto vs Chriſt, with his benefits: ſo we anſwerable giue our ſelues vnto God as ſeruants to walke in the practiſe of all dutifull obedience. III. It is called a ſacrifice in reſpect of that which was ioyned with the ſacrament, namely the almes giuen to the poore as a teſtimonie of our thankefulneſſe vnto God. And in this regard alſo, the auncient fathers haue called the ſacrament, an vnbloodie ſacrifice, and the table, an altar; and the miniſters, prieſts: and the whole action an oblation, not to God but to the congregation, and not by the prieſt alone but by the people. A canon of a certaine councill ſaith, We decree that euerie Lordes day the oblation of the altar be offered of euerie man and woman both for bread and wine. And Auguſtine ſaith, that women offer a ſacrifice at the alter of the Lord, that it might be offered by the prieſt to God. And vſually in auncient writers the communion of the whole bodie of the cõgregation is called the ſacrifice or oblation.

the

Concil Matiſc. 2 c 4. Epiſt. 121.

Concluſ. II. That the very bodie of Chriſt is offered in the Lords ſupper. For as wee take the bread to bee the bodie of Chriſt ſacramentally by reſemblance and no otherwiſe: ſo the breaking of bread is ſacramentally the ſacrificing or offering of Chriſt vpon the croſſe. And thus the fathers haue tearmed the Euchariſt an immolation of Chriſt becauſe it is a commemoration of his ſacrifice vpon the croſſe. Aug. Epiſt. 23. Neither doth he lie which ſaith Chriſt was offered. For if ſacraments had not the reſemblance of thinges whereof they are ſacraments, they ſhould in no wiſe be ſacraments: but from a reſemblance, they often take their names. Againe Chriſt is ſacrificed in the laſt ſupper, in regard of the faith of the communicants, which makes a thing paſt and done as preſent. Auguſtine ſaith, When we beleeue in Chriſt he is offered for vs daily. And, Chriſt is then ſlaine for euery one, when he beleeues that he is ſlaine for him. Ambroſe ſaith, Chriſt is ſacrificed daily in the mindes of beleeuers, as vppon an altar, Hierome ſaith, He is alwaies offered to the beleeuers.

Lib. 2 quæſt. vet. & Nov. Teſtam. Rom. Lib. 2. de Virg. Ad Damaſ.

II. The difference.

They make the Euchariſt to bee a reall, externall, or bodilie ſacrifice offered vnto God: holding and teaching, that the miniſter is a prieſt properlie: and that in this ſacrament he offers Chriſts body & blood to God the father really and properly vnder the formes of bread and wine. Wee acknowledge no reall, outward, or bodilie ſacrifice for the remiſſion of ſinnes, but onely Chriſts oblation on the croſſe once offered. Here is the maine difference betweene vs, touching this point and it is of that waight and moment, that they ſtiffely maintaining their opinion (as they dooe) can be no Church of God. For this point raſeth the foundatiõ to the very bottome. And that it may the better appeare that we touch the truth, firſt I will confirme our doctrine by Scripture, and ſecondly confute the reaſons which they bring for theſelues.

III. Our reaſons.

Reaſon I. Heb. 9. 15. and 26. and cap. 10. 10. the holy Ghoſt ſaith, Chriſt offered himſelfe but once. Therefore not often: and thus there can be no reall or bodily offering of his bodie and blood in the ſacrament of his ſupper: the text is plaine. The Papiſts anſwer thus: The ſacrifice of Chriſt (ſay they) is one for ſubſtance, yet in regard of the manner of offering it is either bloodie or vnbloody, and the holy Ghoſt ſpeakes onely of the bloodie ſacrifice of Chriſt: which was indeede offered but once. Anſ. But the author of this epiſtle takes it for graunted, that the ſacrifice of Chriſt is onely one, and that bloodie ſacrifice. For he ſaith. Heb. 9. 25. Chriſt did not offer himſelfe often, as the high prieſts did and verſe. 26. For then he muſt haue often ſuffered ſince the foundation of the world: but now in the ende he hath appeared once to put away ſinne by the ſacrifice of himſelfe. and verſ. 22 without ſhedding of blood is no remiſſion of ſinnes. By theſe wordes it is plaine, that the ſcripture neuer knewe the two fold manner of ſacrificing of Chriſt. And euery diſtinction in diuinitie not founded in the written worde, is but a forgerie of mans braine. And if this diſtinction be good, how ſhall the reaſon of the Apoſtle ſtand. Hee did not offer himſelfe but once, becauſe he ſuffered but once.

Reaſon II. The Romiſh Church holds that the ſacrifice in the Lords ſupper is all one for ſubſtance, with the ſacrifice which he offered on the croſſe: if that be ſo, then the ſacrifice in the Euchariſt, muſt either bee a continuance of that ſacrifice which was begunne on the croſſe, or elſe an alteratiõ or repetitiõ of it. Now let thẽ chooſe of theſe twaine which they will: if they ſay it is a continuance of the ſacrifice on the croſſe, Chriſt beeing but the beginner and the prieſt the finiſher thereof, they make it imperfect: for to continue a thing till it bee accompliſhed, is to bring perfection vnto it: but Chriſts ſacrifice on the croſſe was then fully perfected as by his owne teſtimonie appeares, when hee ſaid, Conſummatum eſt, it is finiſhed. Againe, if they ſay, it is a repetition of Chriſts ſacrifice, thus alſo they make it imperfect: for that is the reaſon which the holy ghoſt vseth to proove that the sacrifices of the old Testament were imperfect, because they were repeated.

Reason III. A reall and outward sacrifice in a sacrament, is against the nature of a sacrament and especially the supper of the Lord: for one end thereof is to keepe in memorie the sacrifice of Christ. Now euery remembrance must bee of a thing absent, past, and done; and if Christ bee daily and really sacrificed, the sacrament is no fit memoriall of his sacrifice. Againe, the principall ende for which the Sacrament was ordained is, that God might giue and we receiue Christ with his benefits: and therefore to giue and take, to eat and drinke, are here the principall actions. Now in a reall sacrifice God doth not giue Christ and the Priest receiue him of God; but contrariwise he giues & offers Christ vnto God, and God receiues some thing of vs. To helpe the matter they say, that this sacrifice serues not properly to make any satisfaction to God, but rather to apply vnto vs the satisfaction of Christ beeing alreadie made. But this answere still maketh against the nature of a sacrament, in which God giues Christ vnto vs: whereas in a sacrifice God receiues from man, and man giues something to God: a sacrifice therefore is no fit meanes to applie any thing vnto vs, that is giuen of God.

Reason IV. Hebru. 7. 24. 25. The holy Ghost makes a difference between Christ the highe Priest of the new Testament and all leuiticall priests in this, that they were many, one succeeding another: but He is onely one, hauing an eternall priesthood, which cannot passe from him to any other. Now if this difference be good then Christ alone in his owne very person must be the Priest of the new Testament, and no other with, or, vnder him: otherwise in the new Testament there should be more priests in number then in the olde. If they say, that the whole action remains in the person of Christ, and that the Priest is but an instrument vnder him (as they say,) I say againe it is false; because the whole oblation is acted or done by the priest himselfe: and he which dooth all, is more then a bare instrument.

Reason V. If the Priest doo offer to God Christs reall body, and blood for the pardon of our sinnes, then man is become a mediatour betweene God and Christ. Now the Church of Rome saith, that the priest in his masse is a priest properly, and his sacrifice a reall sacrifice, differing onely in the manner of offering from the sacrifice of Christ vpon the crosse: and in the very canon of the masse they insinuate thus much, when they request God to accept their gifts and offerings, namely Christ himselfe offered as he did the sacrifices of Abel and Noe. Now it is absurd, to thinke that any creature should bee a mediatour betweene Christ and God. Therefore Christ cannot possibly bee offered by any creature vnto God.

Reason VI. The iudgement of the auncient Church. A certaine Councill held at Toledo in Spaine, reproueth the Ministers that they offered sacrifice often the same day without the holy communion. The wordes of the Canon are these: Relation is made vnto vs that certaine priests doe not so many times receiue the grace of the holy communion, as they offer sacrifices in one day: but in one day, if they offer many sacrifices to God, in all the oblations, they suspend themselues from the communion——. Here marke that the sacrifices in auncient Masses were nothing else but formes of diuine seruice; because none did communicate, no not the priest himselfe. And in another Councill the name of the Masse is put onely for a forme of praier. It hath pleased vs, that praiers, supplications, Masses, which shall be allowed in the Councill——, be vsed. And in this sense it is taken when speach is vsed of the making or compounding of Masses: for the sacrifice propitiatorie of the bodie and blood of Christ admits no composition. Abbat Paschasius saith, Because we sinne daily Christ is sacrificed for vs mystically, and his passion is giuen in misterie. These his wordes are against the reall sacrifice: but yet hee expoundes himselfe more plainely, cap. 10. The blood is drunke in mysterie spiritually: and, it is all spirituall which we eate. and. c. 12. The priest—— distributes to euery one not as much as the outward sight gineth but as much as faith receiueth. cap. 13. The full similitude is outwardly, and the immaculate flesh of the lambe is faith inwardly——, that the truth be not wanting to the sacrament, and it bee not ridiculous to Pagans that we drinke the blood of a killed man. cap. 6. One eates the flesh of Christ spiritually and drinkes his blood, another seemes to receiue not so much as a morsell of bread from the hand of the priest: his reason is, because they come vnprepared. Now then considering in all these places he makes no receiuing but spirituall, neither

IV. Obiections of Papiſts.

I. Gen. 14. v. 18. When Abraham was comming from the ſlaughter of the kings, Melchizedech mette him, and brought forth bread and wine: and he was a prieſt of the moſt high God. Nowe this bread and wine (ſay they) he brought forth to offer for a ſacrifice; becauſe it is ſaid he was a prieſt of the moſt high God: and they reaſon thus; Chriſt was a prieſt after the order of Melchizedek: therefore as Melchizedek offered bread and wine, ſo Chriſt vnder the formes of bread and wine offers himſelfe in ſacrifice vnto God. Anſw. Melchizedek was no type of Chriſt in regard of the act of ſacrificing, but in regard of his perſon, and things pertaining therto, which all are fully expounded, Heb. 7. the ſumme whereof is this: I. Melchizedek was both king and prieſt: ſo was Chriſt. II. He was a prince of peace and righteouſnes: ſo was Chriſt. III. He had neither father or mother: becauſe the Scripture in ſetting downe his hiſtorie makes no mention of either beginning or ending of his daies: and ſo Chriſt had neither father nor mother, no father, as he was man; no mother, as hee was God. IV. Melchizedek beeing greater then Abraham bleſſed him, and Chriſt by vertue of his prieſthood bleſſeth, that is, iuſtifieth and ſanctifieth all thoſe that bee of the faith of Abraham. In theſe things onely ſtands the reſemblance, and not in the offering of bread and wine. Againe the ende of bringing forth the bread and wine, was not to make a ſacrifice, but to refreſh Abraham and his ſeruants that came frō the ſlaughter of the Kings. And he is called there a prieſt of the moſt high God not in regard of any ſacrifice; but in conſideration of his bleſſing of Abraham, as the order of the words teacheth, And he was the prieſt of the moſt high God, and therefore he bleſſed him. Thirdly, though it were graunted, that he brought forth bread and wine to offer in ſacrifice, yet will it not follow, that in the ſacrament Chriſt himſelfe is to be offered vnto GOD vnder the naked formes of bread and wine. Melchizedeks bread and wine were abſurd types of no-bread and no wine, or of formes of bread and wine in the Sacrament.

II. Obiect. The paſchal lambe was both a ſacrifice and a ſacrament: now the Euchariſt comes in roome thereof. Anſ. The paſchal lambe was a ſacrament, but no ſacrifice. indeed Chriſt ſaith to his diſciples, Goe and prepare a place to ſacrifice the Paſſeouer in, Mark. 14. 12. but the words to offer, or to ſacrifice, doe often ſignifie no more but to kill. As when Iacob & Laban made a couenant it is ſaid, Iacob ſacrificed beaſts, and called his brethren to eate bread, Gen. 31. 54. Which words muſt not bee vnderſtood of killing for ſacrifice, but of killing for a feaſt: becauſe hee could not in good conſcience inuite them to his ſacrifice, that were out of the couenant, beeing (as they were) of another religion: ſecondly it may be called a ſacrifice, becauſe it was killed after the manner of a ſacrifice. Thirdly, when Saul ſought his fathers aſſes, and aſked for the Seer, a maid bids him goe vp in haſt: for (ſaith ſhee) there is an offering of the people this day in the high place, 1. Sam. 9. 12. where the feaſt that was kept in Rama, is called a ſacrifice: in all likelihood becauſe at the beginning thereof, the prieſt offered a ſacrifice to God: & ſo the Paſſeouer may bee called a ſacrifice becauſe ſacrifices were offered within the compaſſe of the appointed feaſt or ſolemnitie of the Paſſouer: and yet the thing it ſelfe was no more a ſacrifice then the feaſt in Rama was. Againe, if it were graunted that the Paſſeouer was both, it wil not make much againſt vs: for the ſupper of the Lord ſucceeds the Paſſeouer onely in regard of the maine ende thereof, which is the increaſe of our communion with Chriſt. Deut. 18. 2.

III. Obiect. Malac. 1. 11. The prophet foretelleth of a cleane ſacrifice that ſhal be in the new teſtament: and that (ſay they) is the ſacrifice of the Maſſe. Anſ. This place muſt bee vnderſtood of a ſpirituall ſacrifice, as we ſhall plainely perceiue if wecōpare it with 1. Tim. 2. 8. where the meaning of the Prophet is fitly expounded. I will (ſaith Paul) that men pray in all places, lifting vp pure hands, without wrath or doubting. And this is the cleane ſacrifice of the Gentiles. Thus Iuſtin Martyr ſaith, That ſupplications and thankſgiuing are the onely perfect ſacrifices pleaſing God, and that Chriſtians haue learned to offer them alone. And Tertullian ſaith, We ſacrifice for the health of the Emperour —— : as God hath commanded with pure prayer. And Ireneus ſaith, that this cleane offering to be offered in euery place, is the praiers of the Saints. Dialog. cum Tryph. Ad Scapulā. Lib. 4. c. 35.

IV. Obiect. Hebr. 13. 10. We haue an altar, whereof they may not eate, which ſerue in the tabernacle. Now (ſay they) if wee haue vseth to proove that the sacrifices of the old Testament were imperfect, because they were repeated.

Reason III. A reall and outward sacrifice in a sacrament, is against the nature of a sacrament and especially the supper of the Lord: for one end thereof is to keepe in memorie the sacrifice of Christ. Reason VI. The iudgement of the auncient Church. A certaine Councill held at Toledo in Spaine, reproueth the Ministers that they offered sacrifice often the same day without the holy communion. The wordes of the Canon are these; Relation is made vnto vs that certaine priests doe not so many times receiue the grace of the holy communion, as they offer sacrifices in one day: but in one day, if they offer many sacrifices to God, in all the oblations, they suspend themselues from the communion——. Here marke that the sacrifices in auncient Masses were nothing else but formes of diuine seruice; because none did communicate, no not the priest himselfe. And in another Councill the name of the Masse is put onely for a forme of praier. It hath pleased vs, that praiers, supplications, Masses, which shall be allowed in the Councill——, be vsed. And in this sense it is taken when speach is vsed of the making or compounding of Masses: for the sacrifice propitiatorie of the bodie and blood of Christ admits no composition. Abbat Paschasius saith, Because we sinne daily Christ is sacrificed for vs mystically, and his passion is giuen in misterie. These his wordes are against the reall sacrifice: but yet hee expounds himselfe more plainely, cap. 10. The blood is drunke in mysterie spiritually: and, it is all spirituall which we eate. and c. 12. The priest—— distributes to euery one not as much as the outward sight gineth but as much as faith receiueth. cap. 13. The full similitude is outwardly, and the immaculate flesh of the Lambe is faith inwardly——, that the truth be not wanting to the sacrament, and it bee not ridiculous to Pagans that we drinke the blood of a killed man. cap. 6. One eates the flesh of Christ spiritually and drinkes his blood, another seemes to receiue not so much as a morsell of bread from the hand of the priest: his reason is, because they come vnprepared. Now then considering in all these places he makes no receiuing but spirituall, neither ther doth hee make any ſacrifice but ſpirituall.

IV. Obiections of Papiſts.

I. Gen. 14. v. 18. When Abraham was comming from the ſlaughter of the kings, Melchizedech mette him, and brought forth bread and wine: and he was a prieſt of the moſt high God. Nowe this bread and wine (ſay they) he brought forth to offer for a ſacrifice; becauſe it is ſaid he was a prieſt of the moſt high God: and they reaſon thus; Chriſt was a prieſt after the order of Melchizedek: therefore as Melchizedek offered bread and wine, ſo Chriſt vnder the formes of bread and wine offers himſelfe in ſacrifice vnto God. Anſw. Melchizedek was no type of Chriſt in regard of the act of ſacrificing, but in regard of his perſon, and things pertaining therto, which all are fully expounded, Heb. 7. the ſumme whereof is this: I. Melchizedek was both king and prieſt: ſo was Chriſt. II. He was a prince of peace and righteouſnes: ſo was Chriſt. III. He had neither father or mother: becauſe the Scripture in ſetting downe his hiſtorie makes no mention of either beginning or ending of his daies: and ſo Chriſt had neither father nor mother, no father, as he was man; no mother, as hee was God. IV. Melchizedek beeing greater then Abraham bleſſed him, and Chriſt by vertue of his prieſthood bleſſeth, that is, iuſtifieth and ſanctifieth all thoſe that bee of the faith of Abraham. In theſe things onely ſtands the reſemblance, and not in the offering of bread and wine. Againe the ende of bringing forth the bread and wine, was not to make a ſacrifice, but to refreſh Abraham and his ſeruants that came frō the ſlaughter of the Kings. And he is called there a prieſt of the moſt high God not in regard of any ſacrifice; but in conſideration of his bleſſing of Abraham, as the order of the words teacheth, And he was the prieſt of the moſt high God, and therefore he bleſſed him. Thirdly, though it were graunted, that he brought forth bread and wine to offer in ſacrifice, yet will it not follow, that in the ſacrament Chriſt himſelfe is to be offered vnto GOD vnder the naked formes of bread and wine. Melchizedeks bread and wine were abſurd types of no-bread and no wine, or of formes of bread and wine in the Sacrament.

II. Obiect. The paſchal lambe was both a ſacrifice and a ſacrament: now the Euchariſt comes in roome thereof. Anſ. The paſchal lambe was a ſacrament, but no ſacrifice. indeed Chriſt ſaith to his diſciples, Goe and prepare a place to ſacrifice the Paſſeouer in, Mark. 14. 12. but the words to offer, or to ſacrifice, doe often ſignifie no more but to kill. As when Iacob & Laban made a couenant it is ſaid, Iacob ſacrificed beaſts, and called his brethren to eate bread, Gen. 31. 54. Which words muſt not bee vnderſtood of killing for ſacrifice, but of killing for a feaſt: becauſe hee could not in good conſcience inuite them to his ſacrifice, that were out of the couenant, beeing (as they were) of another religion: ſecondly it may be called a ſacrifice, becauſe it was killed after the manner of a ſacrifice. Thirdly, when Saul ſought his fathers aſſes, and aſked for the Seer, a maid bids him goe vp in haſt: for (ſaith ſhee) there is an offering of the people this day in the high place, 1. Sam. 9. 12. where the feaſt that was kept in Rama, is called a ſacrifice: in all likelihood becauſe at the beginning thereof, the prieſt offered a ſacrifice to God: & ſo the Paſſeouer may bee called a ſacrifice becauſe ſacrifices were offered within the compaſſe of the appointed feaſt or ſolemnitie of the Paſſouer: and yet the thing it ſelfe was no more a ſacrifice then the feaſt in Rama was. Againe, if it were graunted that the Paſſeouer was both, it wil not make much againſt vs: for the ſupper of the Lord ſucceeds the Paſſeouer onely in regard of the maine ende thereof, which is the increaſe of our communion with Chriſt. Deut. 16. 2.

III. Obiect. Malac. 1. 11. The prophet foretelleth of a cleane ſacrifice that ſhal be in the new teſtament: and that (ſay they) is the ſacrifice of the Maſſe. Anſ. This place muſt bee vnderſtood of a ſpirituall ſacrifice, as we ſhall plainely perceiue if wecōpare it with 1. Tim. 2. 8. where the meaning of the Prophet is fitly expounded. I will (ſaith Paul) that men pray in all places, lifting vp pure hands, without wrath or doubting. And this is the cleane ſacrifice of the Gentiles. Thus Iuſtin Martyr ſaith, That ſupplications and thankſgiuing are the onely perfect ſacrifices pleaſing God, and that Chriſtians haue learned to offer them alone. And Tertullian ſaith, We ſacrifice for the health of the Emperour —— : as God hath commanded with pure prayer. And Ireneus ſaith, that this cleane offering to be offered in euery place, is the praiers of the Saints. Dialog. cum Tryph. Ad Scapulā. Lib. 4. c. 35.

IV. Obiect. Hebr. 13. 10. We haue an altar, whereof they may not eate, which ſerue in the tabernacle. Now (ſay they) if wee haue an altar, then we must needs haue a prieſt; and alſo a reall ſacrifice. Anſ. Here is ment not a bodily, but a ſpirituall altar; becauſe the altar is oppoſed to the materiall Tabernacle; and what is meant thereby is expreſſed in the next verſe, in which hee prooues that we haue an altar. The bodies of the beaſtes, whoſe blood was brought into the holy place by the high prieſt for ſinne, were burnt without the campe: ſo Chriſt Ieſus, that he might ſanctifie the people with his owne blood, ſuffered without the gate. Now lay the reaſon or proofe to the thing that is prooued, and we muſt needs vnderſtand Chriſt himſelf, who was both the altar, the prieſt, and the ſacrifice.

V. Obiect. Laſtly, they ſay, where alteration is both of lawe and couenant, there muſt needes be a new prieſt and a new ſacrifice. But in the newe teſtament there is alteration both of lawe and couenant: and therefore there is both new prieſt and new ſacrifice. Anſ. All may be graunted: in the new Teſtament there is both newe prieſt, and ſacrifice: yet not any popiſh prieſt, but onely Chriſt himſelfe both God and man. The ſacrifice alſo is Chriſt as hee is man: and the altar, Chriſt as hee is God, who in the new teſtament offered himſelfe a ſacrifice to his Father for the ſinnes of the world. For though he were the lambe of God ſlaine from the beginning of the world, in regard of the purpoſe of God, in regard of the value of his merit, and in regard of faith which maketh thinges to come, as preſent, yet was hee not actually offered till the fulneſſe of time came; and once offering of himſelfe, hee remaineth a prieſt for euer, and all other prieſts beſide him are ſuperfluous: his one offering once offered, being all-ſufficient.

The twelfth point Of faſting.

Our conſent.

Our conſent may be ſet downe in three concluſions. I. Wee doe not condemne faſting, but maintaine three ſortes thereof: to wit, a morall, ciuil, and a religious faſt. The firſt being morall, is a practiſe of ſobrietie or temperance, when as in the vſe of meates and drinkes, the appetite is reſtrained, that it doe not exceede moderation. And this muſt bee vſed of all Chriſtians in the whole courſe of their liues. The ſecond beeing ciuill, is when vpon ſome particular and politike conſiderations men abſtaine from certaine meates: as in this our common wealth the law inioines vs to abſtaine from fleſh meate at certaine ſeaſons of the yeare, for theſe ſpeciall ends; to preſerue the breed of cattell, and to maintaine the calling of the fiſhermen. The third, namely a religious faſt, is when the duties of religion, as the exerciſe of praier & humiliation are practiſed in faſting. And I do now ſpecially entreat of this kind.

Concluſ. II. We ioyne with them in the allowance of the principall and right ends of a religious faſt, and they are three. The firſt is, that thereby the mind may become attentiue in meditation of the duties of godlines to be performed. The ſecond is that the rebellion of the fleſh may bee ſubdued: for the fleſh pampered becomes an inſtrument of licentiouſneſſe. The third, and (as I take it) the chiefe end of a religious faſt is, to profeſſe our guiltineſſe, and to teſtifie our humiliation before God for our ſinnes: and for this end in the faſt of Niniuie, the very beaſt was made to abſtaine.

Concluſ. III. We yeild vnto them, that faſting is an helpe and furtherance to the worſhip of God; yea and a good worke alſo if it bee vſed in a good manner. For though faſting in it ſelfe beeing a thing indifferent, as eating and drinking are, is not to bee tearmed a good worke; yet beeing applyed, and conſidered in relation to the right ends before ſpoken of, and practiſed accordingly, it is a worke allowed of God, and highly to bee eſteemed of all the ſeruants and people of God.

The difference or diſſent.

Our diſſent from the Church of Rome in the doctrine of faſting ſtands in three things. They appoint and preſcribe ſet times of faſting, as neceſſarie to be kept; but we hold and teach that to preſcribe the time of a religious, faſt, is in the libertie of the Church and the gouernours thereof, as ſpeciall occaſion ſhall bee offered. When the diſciples of Iohn asked Chriſt, why they & the Phariſies faſted often, but his diſciples faſted not, he anſwered, Can the children of the mariage chamber mourne as long as the bridegroome is with them? but the dayes will come when the bridegroome ſhall bee taken away from them, and then ſhall they faſt, Math. 9, 15. where he giues them to vnderſtand, that they muſt faſt, as occaſiõs of mourning are offered. Where alſo I gather, that a ſet time of faſting is no more to be enioyned then a ſet time of mour-

mourning. It was the opinion of Augustine, that neither Christ nor his Apostles appointed any times of fasting. And Tertullian saith, that they of his time fasted of their owne accordes freely, without law or commandement, as occasion and time serued. And Eusebius saith that Montanus was the first that made lawes of fasting. It is obiected, that there is a set time of fasting prescribed Leuit. 16, 29. Answ. This set and prescribed fast was commaunded of God as a part of the Legall worship which had his ende in the death of Christ: Therefore it doth not iustifie a set time of fasting in the new Testament, where God hath left man to his owne libertie without giuing the like cõmandement. It is againe alleadged, that Zacharie, 7, 5 there were set times appointed for the celebration of religious fasts vnto the Lord, the fifth and the seauenth moneths. Answ. They were appointed vpon occasion of the present afflictions of the Church in Babylon, and they ceased vpon their deliuerance. The like vpon like occasion may we appoint. It is further obiected, that some Churches of the Protestants obserue set times of fasting. Answ. In some Churches there be set dayes and times of fasting, not vpon necessity or for conscience or religions sake, but for politicke or ciuill regards, whereas in the Romish Church it is held a mortall sin to defer the set time of fasting till the next day following.

Hist. l. 5. c. 17.

Secondly wee dissent from the Church of Rome touching the manner of keeping a fast. For the best learned among them allow the drinking of wine, water, electuaries, and that often within the compasse of their appointed fast: yea they allow the eating of one meale on a fasting day at noonetide, and vpon a reasonable cause, one houre before: the time of fasting not yet ended. But this practise indeede is absurde, and contrarie to the practise of the olde Testament: yea it doth frustrate the ende of fasting. For the bodily abstinence is an outward meanes and signe whereby wee acknowledge our guiltinesse and vnworthines of any of the blessings of God. Againe they prescribe a difference of meates, as whit-meate onely to be vsed on their fasting dayes, and that of necessity, & for conscience sake in most cases. But wee holde this distinction of meates both to bee foolish and wicked. Foolish; because in such meates as they prescribe, there is as much filling and delight, as in any other meates: as namely in fish, fruites, wine, &c. which they permit. And it is against the end of a religious fast to vse any refreshing at all; so farre as necessitie of health and comlinesse will permit. Thus the Church in times past vsed to abstaine not onely from meate and drinke, but frõ all delights whatsoeuer, euen from soft apparrell and sweete oyntments. Ioel. 2. 15. ——— Sanctifie a fast ———: lette the bridegroome goe foorth of his chamber and the bride out of her bride chamber. Dan. 10. 3. I eate no pleasant bread, neither came flesh nor wine within my mouth, neither did I annoint my selfe at all, till three weekes of daies were fulfilled. 1. Cor. 7. 5. Defraud not one another, except it be with consent for a time, that ye may giue your selues to fasting & prayer.

Mola tract 3. c. 11 a Navar c. 21.

Num. 27 Iud 20. 26 1. Sã. 12.

Againe wee holde this practise to bee wicked, because it taketh away the liberty of Christians: by which vnto the pure all things are pure. And the Apostle, Gala. 5. biudes vs to stand fast in this libertie, which the Church of Rome would thus abolish. For the better vnderstanding of this, let vs consider how the Lord himselfe hath from the beginning kept in his owne handes as a master in his owne house, the disposition of his creatures for the vse of man, that he might depend on him & his word for temporall blessings. In the first age, he appointed vnto him for meate euery hearb of the earth bearing seede, and euery tree wherein there is the fruite of a tree bearing seede, Gen. 1, 29. And as for flesh, whether GOD gaue vnto him libertie to eate or not eate, wee holde vncerten. After the flood the Lorde renewed his graunt of the vse of the creatures, and gaue his people libertie to eate the flesh of liuing creatures: yet so as hee made some thinges vncleane, and forbad the eating of them: among the rest, the eating of blood. But since the comming of Christ hee hath inlarged his word, and giuen libertie to all both Iewes and Gentiles, to eate of all kindes of flesh. This word of his wee rest vpon; holding it a doctrine of diuills, for men to commaund an abstinence from meats, for conscience sake; which the Lord himselfe hath created to be receiued with thanksgiuing. Socrates a Christian historiographer saith, that the Apostles left it free to euery one to vse what kinde of meate they would on fasting daies and other times. Spiridion in lent dressed swines flesh, and set it before a stranger, eating himselfe and bidding

Act. 10 6. 1. Tim. 4.

the ſtranger alſo to eate: who refuſing and profeſſing himſelfe to be a Chriſtian, therefore (ſaith he) the rather muſt thou doe it: for to the pure all thinges are pure, as the worde of God teacheth vs.

But they obiect. Ier. 35. where Ionadab commanded the Rechabites to abſtaine from wine: which commandement they obeyed, and are commended for dooing well in obeying of it: therefore (ſay they) ſome kinde of meates maye lawfully bee forbidden. Anſw. Ionadab gaue this commandement not in awe of religion, or merit, but for other wiſe and politicke regardes. For he inioyned his poſteritie not to drinke wine, nor to build houſes nor to ſow ſeeed or plant vineyards, or to haue any in poſſeſſion: but to liue in tents; to the ende they might be prepared to beare the calamities, that ſhould befall them in time to come. But the popiſh abſtinence from certaine meates, hath reſpect to conſcience and religion: and therefore is of an other kinde, and can haue no warrrant thence.

II. Obiect. Dan. 10. 3. Daniel beeing in heauines for three weeks of daies, abſtained from fleſh: and his example is our warrant. Anſ. It was the maner of the holy men in auncient times, when they faſted many dayes togither of their own accords freely to abſtaine from ſundrie things; and thus Daniel abſtained from fleſh. But the popiſh abſtinence from fleſh is not free, but ſtandes by commandement, and the omitting of it, is mortall ſinne. Againe, if they will follow Daniel in abſtaining from fleſh, why doe they not alſo abſtaine from all pleaſant bread & wine; yea from oyntments and why will they eate any thing in the time of their faſt: where as they can not ſhewe that Daniel ate any thing at all till euening? And Molanus hath noted that our ancetours abſtained from wine and dainties, and that ſome of them ate nothing for two or three yayes together.

Tract. 3. c. 11. conc. 8.

Thirdly they alleadge the diet of Iohn Baptiſt, whoſe meat was Locuſts and wild honie: and of Timothy, who abſtained frō wine An*ſ.* Their kind of diet, and that abſtinence which they vſed, was onely for temperance ſake; not for cōſcience, or to merit any thing thereby: let them prooue the cōtrarie if they can.

Thirdly and laſtly wee diſſent from them touching certaine ends of faſting. For they make abſtinence it ſelfe in a perſon fitly prepared, to be a part of the worſhip of God: but we take it to bee a thing indifferent in it ſelfe, and therefore no part of Gods worſhip: and yet with all, beeing well vſed, wee eſteeme it as a proppe or furtherance of the worſhip, in that wee are made the fitter by it to worſhip God. And hereupon ſome of the more learned ſort of them ſay, Not the worke of faſting done, but the deuotion of the worker, is to be reputed the ſeruice of God. Againe, they ſay, that faſting in, or, with deuotion, is a worke of ſatisfaction to Gods iuſtice for the temporall puniſhment of our ſinns. Wherein we take it they do blaſphemouſly derogate from Chriſt our Sauiour, who is the whole and perfect ſatisfaction for ſinne both in reſpect of fault and puniſhment. Here they alleadge the example of the Nineuites, and Achabs faſting, whereby they turned away the iudgementes of God denounced againſt them by his Prophets. Wee anſwer that Gods wrath was appeaſed towardes the Nineuites, not by their faſting, but by faith laying holde on Gods mercie in Chriſt, and thereby ſtaying his iudgement. Their faſting was only a ſigne of their repentance: their repentance a fruit and ſigne of their faith whereby they beleued the preaching of Ionas. As for Ahabs humiliation, it is nothing to the purpoſe: for it was in hypocriſie: if they get any thing thereby, lette them take it to themſelues. To conclude, we for our parts doe not condemne this exerciſe of faſting, but the abuſe of it: and it were to be wiſhed that faſting were more vſed of all Chriſtians in all places: conſidering the Lord doth daily giue vs new & ſpecial occaſions of publike and priuate faſting.

Mat. 4.

The XIII. point. Of the ſtate of perfection.

Our conſent.

Our conſent I will ſette downe in two concluſions. I. All true beleeuers haue a ſtate of true perfection in this life: Matth. 5. 48 Be you perfect as your father in heauen is perfect, Ge. 6. 9. Noah was a iuſt & perfect man in his time, & walked with God. Gen. 17. 1. Walke before me and be perfect. And ſundrie kings of Iudah are ſaid to walke vprightly before God with a perfect heart, as Dauid, Ioſias, Hezekias, &c. and Paul accounteth himſelfe with the reſt of the faithfull to be perfect, ſaying, Lette vs all thus that are perfect to be thus minded. Phil. 3, 15. Nowe this perfection hath two parts. The first is imputation of Christs perfect obedience, which is the ground and fountaine of all our perfection whatsoeuer. Heb. 10. 14. By one offering, that is by his obedience in his death and passion, hath he consecrated or made perfect, for euer them that beleeue. The second part of Christian perfection is synceritie, or, vprightnes, standing in two thinges. The first is, to acknowledge our imperfection and vnworthinesse in respect of our selues: and hereupon, though Paul had said hee was perfect, yet he addeth further that he did account of himselfe, not as though hee had attained to perfection: but did forget the good thinges behinde, and indeauoured himselfe to that which was beefore. Here therefore it must be remembred, that the perfection whereof I speake, may stand with sundrie wants and imperfections. It is saide of Asa that his heart was perfect with God all his daies and yet hee pulled not downe the high places, and beeing diseased in his feete he put his trust in the physition & not in the Lord. Secondly this vprightnes standes in a constant purpose, endeauour, and care to keepe not some fewe, but all and euerie commandement of the lawe of God, as Dauid saith, Psalm. 119. 6. Then shall I not be confounded, when I haue respect to all thy commandements. And this indeauour is a fruite of perfection, in that it proceedes from a man regenerate. For as all men through Adams fall, haue in them by nature the seede of all sinne, none excepted, no not the sin against the holy ghost: so by grace of regeneratiō through Christ, all the faithfull haue in them likewise the seedes of all vertues needfull to saluation: and hereupon they both can and doe indeauour to yeeld perfect obedience vnto God, according to the whole lawe. And they may be tearmed perfect, as a child is called a perfect man: though it want perfection of age and stature and reason: yet hath it perfection of partes: because it hath all and euerie part and faculties both of body & soule that is required to a perfect mā.

Phil. 3. 13. & 15.

1. Chr. 15 27. & 16. 12.

Conclus. II. There bee certaine workes of supererogation: that is, such workes as are not onely answerable to the lawe, and thereupon deserue life euerlasting: but goe beyond the law, and merit more then the lawe by it selfe can make any man to merit. But where may we find these works not in the person of any meere man, or angel, nor in all men and angels: but onely in the person of Christ God and man: whose workes are not onely answearable to the perfection of the lawe, but goe farre beyond the same. For first the obedience of his life considered alone by it selfe, was answerable euē to the rigour of the lawe: and therefore the suffering of his death and passion, were more then the lawe could require at his hand: considering it requireth no punishment of him, that is a doer of all thinges contained therein. Secondly the very rigour of the lawe requireth obedience onely of them that are meere men: but the obedience of Christ was the obedience of a person that was both God and man. Thirdly, the lawe requires personall obedience, that is, that euery man fulfill the law for himselfe, and it speakes of no more. Christ obeyed the law for himselfe, not because he did by his obedience merit his owne glorie: but because he was to be a perfect & pure high priest, not onely in nature but also in life; and as he was a creature, he was to bee conformable to the lawe. Now the obedience which Christ performed, was not for himselfe alone, but it serueth also for all the elect: and considering it was the obedience of God (as Paul signified when he saide, feede the Church of God, which he purchased with his blood) it was sufficient for manie thousand worlds: and by reason the law requireth no obedience of him that is God: this obedience therefore may truly bee tearmed a worke of supererogation. This one we acknowledge, and beside this we dare acknowledge none. And thus farre we agree with the Church of Rome, in the doctrine of the estate of perfection; and further we dare not goe.

The difference.

The Papists hold (as the writings of the learned among them teach) that a man being in the state of grace, may not onely keepe all the commandements of the lawe, and thereby deserue his owne saluation; but also goe beyond the law and do works of supererogation which the law requireth not: as to performe the vowe of single life, and the vow of regular obedience, &c. And by this meanes (they say) men deserue a greater degree of glorie then the law can afford. Of perfection they make two kinds: one they call necessarie perfection, which is the fulfilling of the law in euery commandement, whereby eternal life is deserued. The second, is profitable per- fection, when men doe not onely such things as the Lawe requires, but ouer and besides, they make certain vowes, and performe certaine other duties which the law inioynes not: for the doing whereof they shall bee rewarded with a greater measure of glorie, then the law designeth. This they make plaine by comparison: Two souldiers fight in the fielde vnder one and the same captaine: the one onely keepes his standing, and thereby deserues his pay: the other in keeping of his place, doth also winne the enemies standard; or doe some other notable exp'oit: now this man besides his pay deserues some greater reward. And thus (say they) it is with all true Catholikes in the state of grace: they that keepe the law shall haue life eternall; but they that do more thē the law, as works of supererogation, shall bee crowned with greater glorie. This is their doctrine. But we on the contrarie teach, that albeit wee are to striue to a perfection as much as we can, yet no man can fulfill the law of God in this life: much lesse doe workes of supererogation: for the confirmation whereof, these reasons may bee vsed. I, In the morall lawe two thinges are commanded. First, the loue of God and man. Secondly, the manner of this loue: now the manner of louing God, is to loue him with all our heart and strength. Luke, 10, 27. Thou shalt loue the Lord thy God with al thy heart, and with all thy soule, & with all thy strength, and with all thy thought, &c. As Bernarde saide, The measure of louing God, is to loue God without measure, and that is to loue him with the greatest perfection of loue that can befall a creature. Hence it followes that in louing God no man can possibly doe more then the law requireth: and therefore the performance of all vowes whatsoeuer, and al like duties, comes short of the intention or scope of the law.

II. Reason. The compasse of the law is large, and comprehendeth in it more then the mind of man can at the first conceiue: for euery commandement hath two parts the negatiue, and the affirmatiue. In the negatiue is forbidden not onely the capitall sinne named, as murther, theft, adulterie, &c. but all sinnes of the same kind, with all occasions and prouocations thereto. And in the affirmatiue is commanded not onely the contrarie vertues, as the loue of God, and the loue of our neighbours honour, life, chastitie, goods, good name, but the vse of all helpes and meanes, whereby the said vertues may be preserued, furthered and practised. Thus hath our sauiour Christ himselfe expounded the law, Math. 5.6. vpon this plaine ground I conclude, that all duties pertaining to life and manners, come within the list of some morall commandement. And that the Papists making their works of supererogatiō means to further the loue of God and man, must needes bring them under the compasse of the law. Vnder which, if they be, they cannot possibly goe beyond the same.

Reason III. Luke. 17. 10. When wee haue done all those thinges that are commanded vs we are vnprofitable seruantes: we haue done that which was our dutie to doe. The Papists answer that we are vnprofitable to GOD, but not to our selues: but this shift of theirs is beside the very intent of the place. For a seruant in doing his dutie is vnprofitable euen to himselfe, and doth not so much as deserue thāks at his maisters hād, as Christ saith, v 9. Doth he thanke that seruant? Secondly they answer, that wee are vnprofitable seruants in doing thinges commanded: yet when we doe things prescribed in the way of counsell, wee may profit our selues, and merit thereby. But this answer doth not stand with reason. For things cōmanded, in that they are commanded, are more excellent then thinges left to our libertie; because the will & commandement of God giues excellency and goodnes vnto them. Againe counsells are thought to be harder then the commandements of the law: and if men cannot profit themselues by obedience of morall precepts, which are more easie; much lesse shall they bee able to profit themselues by counsels which are of greater difficultie.

Reason IV. If it bee not in the abilitie and power of man to keep the lawe, then much lesse hee is able to dooe any worke that is beyond and aboue al the law requireth: but no man is able to fulfill the law, and therefore no man is able to supererrogate. Here the Papists denie the proposition: for (say they) though wee keepe not the law, yet we may doe things of counsel aboue the law, and thereby merit. But by their leaues, they speake absurdly: for in common reason, if a man faile in the lesse, he cannot but faile in the greater. Now (as I haue said) in popish doctrine, it is easier to obey the morall lawe then to performe the counsells of perfection.

Obiections of Papists.

I. Isa. 56. 4. The Lord saith vnto Eunuches

nuches that keepe his sabbath, and choose the thing that pleaseth him, will he giue a place & name better then the sonnes and daughters. Now (say they) an Eunuch is one that lines a single life, and keepes the vow of chastitie, and hereupon he is said to deserue a greater measure of glory. An. If the words be well considered, they proove nothing lesse: for honour is promised to Eunuchs, not because they make and performe the vowe of single life, but because (as the text saith) they obserue the Lords Sabbath, and choose the thing that pleaseth God, and keep his couenant, which is to beleeue the word of God and to obey the commaundements of the morall lawe.

Obiect. III. Matth. 19. 12. Christ saith, There are some which haue made themselues chast for the kingdome of heauen: therefore the vowe of single life is warrantable, and is a worke of speciall glorie in heauen. Answ. The meaning of the text is, that some hauing receiued the gift of continencie, dooe willingly content themselues with single estate, that they may with more libertie without distraction further the good estate of the Church of God, or, the kingdome of grace in themselues and others. This is that can bee gathered out of this place; hence therefore cannot bee gathered the merit of euerlasting glory by single life.

Obiect. III. Math. 19. 21. Christ saith to the young man. If thou wilt be perfect goe sell that thou hast and giue to the poore, and thou shalt haue treasure in heauen. Therefore say they, a man by forsaking all may merit not onely heauen, but also treasure there, that is, an exceeding measure of glorie. Anf. This young man being in likelihood a strickt Pharisee, thought to merit eternal life by the workes of the lawe, as his first question importeth, Good master, what shall I doe to bee saued? and therefore Christ goeth about to discouer vnto him the secret corruption of his heart. And hereupon the words alleadged are a commandement of triall not common to all, but especially to him. The like commandement gaue the Lord to Abraham saying, Abraham take thine onely sonne Isaac, & offer him vpon the mountaine which I shall shew thee, Genesis. 12. 2.

IV. Obiect. 1 Cor. 7. 8. Paul saith, It is good for to be single as he was: and verse. 38. he saith, It is better for virgins not to marry; and, this he speakes by permission not by commandement, v. 26. Anf. Here the single life is not preferred simply, but onely in respect of the present necessity, because the church was then vnder persecution: and because such as liue a single life, are freed from the cares and distractions of the world.

V. Obiect. 1. Cor. 9. 15. 17. 18. Paul preached the Gospel freely, and that was more then he was bound to dooe: and for so doing he had a reward. Anf. It was generally in Pauls libertie to preach the gospel freely or not to doe it: but in Corinth vpon special circumstances, he was bound in conscience to preach it freely as hee did; by reason of the false teachers, who would otherwise haue taken occasion to disgrace his ministerie, and haue hindred the glorie of God. Nowe it was Pauls dutie by all meanes to preuent the hinderances of the Gospel and the glory of God: & if hee had not so done, he had abused his libertie. v. 18. Therefore he did no more in that case thē the lawe it selfe required. For an action indifferent or an action in our libertie, ceaseth to be in our libertie, and becomes morall in the case of offence. What is more free and indifferent then to eate flesh? yet in the case of offence Paul said he would not eate flesh as long as the world stood 1. Cor. 8. 13.

The XIV. point. Of the worshipping of Saints, specially of Inuocation.

Our consent.

Conclus. I. The true Saints of GOD, as Prophets, Apostles, and Martyrs, and such like, are to be worshipped and honoured, and that three waies: I. by keeping a memorie of them in godly manner. Thus the Virgin Mary as a Propheteſſe foretelleth, that all nations shall call her blessed, Luke. 1. 48. VVhen a certaine woman powred a boxe of oyntment, on the head of Christ, he saith, this fact shall be spoken in remembrance of her, whersoeuer that Gospell shold be preached through out the world Mark. 14. 9. This duetie also was practised by Dauid towardes Moses, Aaron, Phineas, and the rest that are commended, Psal. 105. and 106. and by the author of the epistle to the Ebrewes, vpon the Patriarkes and prophets, and many others that excelled in faith in the times of the old and newe testament. II. They are to be honoured by giuing of thanks to God for them, and the benefits that God vouch- chap. 11.

vouchsafed by them vnto his Church. Thus Paul saith, that when the Churches heard of his conuersion, they glorified God for him, or in him. Gal. 1. 13. And the like is to be done for the Saints departed. III. They are to be honoured by imitation of their faith, humilitie, meekenesse, repentance, the feare of God, and all good vertues wherein they excelled. For this cause the examples of godly men in the old and newe testament, are called a cloud of witnesses by allusion: for as the cloud did guide the Israelites through the wildernesse to the land of Canaan: so the faithfull nowe are to be guided to the heauenly Canaan by the examples of good men, that haue beleeued in God before vs, and haue walked the strait way to life euerlasting Conclus II. Againe their true Reliques, that is, their vertues and good examples left to all posteritie to bee followed wee keepe and respect with due reuerence. Yea if any man can shewe vs the bodilie relique of any true Saint: and prooue it so to be, though we wil not worship it, yet wil we not dispise it but keepe it as a monument, if it may cõueniently be done without offence. And thus farre wee consent with the Church of Rome. Further wee must not goe.

The dissent.

Our difference standes in the manner of worshipping of Saints. The Papists make two degrees of religious worshippe. The highest they call Latria, whereby God himselfe is worshipped, and that alone. The second lower then the former is called Dulia, whereby the Saints and angels that be in the speciall fauour of God, and glorified with euerlasting glorie in heauen, are worshipped. This worship they place in outward adoration, in bending of the knee, and bowing of the bodie to them beeing in heauen: in inuocation whereby they call vpon them: in dedication of Churches and houses of religion vnto them: in sabboths and festiual dayes: lastly in pilgrimages vnto their reliques & images. Wee likewise distinguish adoration or worship: for it is either religious or ciuill. Religious worship, is that which is done to him that is Lord of all things, the searcher and trier of the heart, omnipotẽt, euery where present, able to heare & helpe them that call vpon him euerie where, the author and first cause of euerie good thing: and that simply for himselfe, because he is absolute goodnesse it selfe. And this worship is due to God alone, beeing also commaunded in the first and second Commandement of the first table. Ciuill worship is the honour done to men set aboue vs by God himselfe, either in respect of their excellẽt gifts or in respect of their offices and authoritie whereby they gouerne others. The right end of this worship is to testifie and declare that we reuerence the giftes of God, and that power which He hath placed in those that bee his instruments. And this kind of worship is commaunded only in the second table and in the first commandement thereof, Honour thy father and mother. Vpon this distinction wee may iudge, what honour is due to euery one. Honour is to bee giuen to God and to whome hee commaundeth. Hee commaundeth that inferiours should honour or worship their betters. Therefore the vnreasonable creatures, and among the rest images are not to bee worshipped, either with ciuill or religious worship: beeing indeede farre baser then man himselfe is. Againe vncleane spirits the enemies of God, must not be worshipped: yea to honour them at all is to dishonour God. Good angels, because they excell men both in nature and giftes, when they appeared were lawefully honoured: yet so, as when the least signification of honour was giuen that was proper to God they refused it. And because they appeare not nowe as in former times, not so much as ciuill adoration in anie bodily gesture is to be done vnto them. Lastly gouernours and Magistrates haue ciuill adoration as their due: and it cannot be omitted without offence. Thus Abraham worshipped the Hittites, Gen. 23. and Ioseph his brethren, Gen. 50. To come to the very point, vpon the former distinction, we denie against the Papists that any ciuill worship in the bending of the knee or prostrating of the bodie, is to be giuen to the Saints, they beeing absent from vs: much lesse anie religious worship, as namely inuocation signified by any bodily adoratiõ. For it is the very honour of God himselfe: let them call it latria, or dulia, or by what name they will.

Our reasons.

Reason I. All true inuocation and praier made according to the wil of God, must haue a double foundation: a commaundement, and a promise. A commandement, to mooue vs to pray: and a promise, to assure vs that we shal be heard. For all & euery uery prayer muſt bee made in Faith: and without a commaundement or promiſe there is no Faith. Vpon this vnfallible ground I conclude, that we may not pray to ſaints departed: for in the ſcripture ther is no word, either commanding vs to pray vnto them, or aſſuring vs that wee ſhall be heard when we pray. Nay we are commanded, onely to call vpon God: him only ſhalt thou ſerue. Math, 4 10. And How ſhall we call vpon him in whome wee haue not beleeued? Rom. 10. 14. And wee haue no promiſe to bee heard but for Chriſts ſake. Therefore praiers made to ſaints departed are vnlawfull. Anſwer is made, that inuocation of Saints, is warranted by miracles and reuelations which are anſwerable to commandements and promiſes. Anſ. But miracles and reuelations had an ende before this kinde of inuocation tooke anie place in the Church of God: and that was about three hundred yeeres after Chriſt. Again to iudge of any point of doctrine by miracles, is deceitfull; vnleſſe three things concur: the firſt is, doctrine of faith & pietie to be confirmed: the ſecõd is prayer vnto God, that ſomething may be done for the ratifying of the ſaid doctrine: the third is the manifeſt edification of the Church by the two former. Where any of theſe three are wanting, miracles may be ſuſpected: becauſe otherwhiles falſe prophets haue their myracles to trie men whether they will cleaue vnto God or no. Deut, 13 1, 3. Againe miracles are not done, or to be done for them that beleeue, but for infidels that beleeue not: as Paul ſaith, 1. Cor, 14. 22. Tongues are a ſigne not to them that beleeue, but to vnbeleeuers. And to this agree Chryſoſtome, Ambroſe, & Iſidore, who ſaith, Behold a ſigne is not neceſſarie to beleeuers which haue already beleeued, but to infidels that they may be conuerted. Laſtly, our faith is to be confirmed not by reuelations and apparitions of dead men, but by the writings of the Apoſtles & Prophets, Luk, 16, 29.

Reaſon. II. To pray vnto Saints departed, to bowe the knee vnto them while they are in Heauen, is to aſcribe that vnto them which is proper to God himſelfe: namely, to knowe the heart, with the inward deſires and motions thereof: and to know the ſpeeches and behauiours of all men in all places vpon earth at all times. The Papiſts anſwer, that Saints in Heauen ſee and heare all things vpon earth, not by themſelues (for that were to make them Gods) but in God, and in the glaſſe of the Trinitie, in which they ſee mens prayers reuealed vnto them. I anſwer firſt, that the Saints are ſtill made more then creatures; becauſe they are ſaid, to know the thoghts and all the doings of all men at all times, which no created power can well comprehend at once. Secondly I anſwer, that this glaſſe in which all thinges are ſaide to bee ſeene, is but a forgerie of mans braine: and I proouе it thus. The angels themſelues, who ſee further into God, then man can do, neuer knewe all things in God: which I confirme on this manner. In the temple vnder the lawe, vpon the arke were placed two Cherubins ſignifying the good angels of God: and they looked downward vpon the mercieſeate couering the arke, which was a figure of Chriſt; & their looking downward figured their deſire to ſee into the miſterie of Chriſts incarnation & our redemption by him: as Peter alluding, no doubt, to this type in the olde Teſtament ſaith, 1. Pet. 1. 12. which things the angels deſire to behold: and Paul ſaith, Eph. 3. 10. The manifold wiſedome of God is reuealed by the Church vnto principalities and powers in heauenly places, that is to the angels: but howe and by what meanes? by the Church; and that two wayes, firſt by the Church as by an example, in which the angels ſawe the endleſſe wiſedome & mercie of god in calling the Gentiles. Secondly by the Church, as it was founded and honoured by the preaching of the Apoſtles. For it ſeemes that the Apoſtolicall miniſterie in the newe teſtament reuealed things touching Chriſt, which the angels neuer knewe, before that time: thus Chryſoſtome vpon occaſion of this text of Paul ſaith, that the angels learned ſome thing by the preaching of Iohn Baptiſt. Againe Chriſt ſaith, that they know not the houre of the laſt iudgement, Math. 24. 23. much leſſe doe the Saints know all thinges in God. And hence it is that they are ſaid to be vnder the altar, where they crie: How long Lorde holie and true! wilt thou not auenge our blood? as beeing ignorant of the daye of their full deliuerance. And the Iewes in affliction confeſſe Abraham was ignorant of them and their eſtate. Iſa. 63. 19.

Prolog. in Ioh.

Reu. 9. 6.

Reaſon. III. Math. 4. 10. Chriſt refuſed ſo much as to bowe the knee to Sathan vpon this ground, becauſe it was written thou ſhalt worſhip the Lord thy God, and him only ſhalt thou ſerue. Hence it was, that Peter would not ſuffer Cornelius ſo much as to kneele vnto him, though Cornelius intended not to honour him as God. Therefore neither Saint nor Angel is to be honoured so much as with the bowing of the knee: if it carrie but the least signification of diuine or religious honour.

Reason IV. The iudgement of the auncient Church. August. We honour the Saints with charitie, and not by seruitude: neither doe we erect Churches to them. And Let it not be religion for vs to worship dead men. And, They are to bee honoured for imitation, and not to be adored for religion. Epiphan. Neither Tecla nor any Saint is to bee adored, for that auncient errour may not ouerrule vs, that wee shoulde leaue the liuing God, and adore things made by him. Again, Let Marie be in honour: let the Father, Sonne and the holy Ghost be adored: let none adore Marie; I meane neither woman nor man. Againe, Marie is beautifull, holy, and honoured, yet not to adoration. VVhen Iulian obiected to the Christians that they worshipped their Martyrs as God, Cyrill graunts the memory and honour of them, but denies their adoration: and of inuocation, he makes no mention at all. Ambrose on Rom. 1. Is any so mad that he will giue to the earle the honour of the King——? yet these men doe not thinke themselues guiltie, who giue the honour of Gods name to a creature, and leauing the Lord, adore their fellow seruantes, as though there were any thing more reserued for God.

de vera relig. cap. 35. haereti. 79.

Obiections of Papists.

I. Gen. 48. 16. Let the angel that kept me Blesse the children. Here (say they) it is a praier made to angels. Answ. By the angel is meant Christ, who is called the angel of the couenant, Malac. 3. 1. and the angell that guided Israel in the wildernes, 1. Cor. 10. 9. compared with Exod. 23. 20.

Obiection. II. Exod. 23. 13. Moses praieth that God would respect his people, for Abrahams sake, and for Isaac and Israel his seruantes, which were not then liuing. Answ. Moses praieth God to be merciful to the people, not for the intercession of Abraham, Isaac, and Iacob, but for his couenants sake which hee had made with them, Psal. 125. 10. 11. Againe by popish doctrine the fathers departed knewe not the estate of men vpon earth, neither did they pray for them: because then they were not in heauen but in Limbo Patrum.

III. Obiect. One liuing man makes intercession to God for another: therefore much more doe the Saints in glorie, that are filled with loue pray to God for vs; & we pray to them no otherwise then wee desire liuing men to pray for vs. Answ. The reason is naught: for we haue a commandement, one liuing man to pray for another, and to desire others to pray for vs: but there is no warrant in the worde of God, for vs to desire the prayers of men departed. Secondly there is a great difference betweene these two: To requeste our friend either by worde of mouth or by letter to pray for vs: and by Inuocation to requeste them that are absent from vs and departed this life to pray for vs: for this is indeede a worship, in which is giuen vnto them a power to heare and helpe all that call vpon them, at what place or time soeuer, yea though they be not present in the place in which they are worshipped: and consequently the seeing of the heart, presence in all places, and infinit power to helpe all that praie vnto thē; which things agree to no creature but GOD alone. Thirdly when one liuing man requests an other to pray for him, he onely makes him his companion and fellow member in his praier made in the name of our mediatour Christ: but when men inuocate Saints in heauen, they being then absent, they make them more then fellow members, euen mediatours betweene Christ and them.

The XV. point. Of intercession of Saints.

Our consent.

Our consent with them I will set down in two conclusions. Conclus. I. The Saints departed pray vnto God, by giuing thāks vnto him for their owne redemption, and for the redemption of the whole Church of God vpon earth, Reuel. 5. 8. The foure beasts and the foure and twentie elders fell downe before the Lambe,——9 and they sung a new song, Thou art worthie to take the booke, and to open the seales thereof because thou wast killed and hast redeemed vs to God ——13. And all the creatures which are in heauen——, heard I saying, Praise and honour and glorie and power bee vnto him that sitteth vpon the throne, and vnto the lamb for euermore.

II. Conclus. The Saintes departed pray generally for the estate of the whol church. Reu. 6. 9. And I saw vnder the altar, the soules of them that were killed for the worde of God——, and they cried, 10. How long Lord holy and true! doest thou not iudge and auenge

auenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth? whereby we see they desire a finall deliuerance of the Church, and a destruction of the enemies thereof; that they thē-selues with al the people of God might be aduanced to fulnesse of glory in bodie and soule: yea the dumbe creatures, Rom. 8. 23. are said to grone and sigh, waiting for the adoption, euen the redemptiō of our bodies: much more then doe the Saints in heauen desire the same. And thus farre we consent.

The dissent or difference.

They hold and teach, that the Saints in heauen, as the Virgin Marie, Peter, Paul, &c do make intercession to God for particular men, according to their seuerall wants: and that hauing receiued particular mens praiers, they present them vnto god. But this doctrine we flatly renounce vpon these grounds and reasons.

I. Isa. 63. 16. The Church saith to God, doubtlesse thou art our Father, though Abraham be ignorant of vs, and Israell know vs not. Now if Abraham knewe not his posteritie, neither Marie, nor Peter, nor any other of the Saints departed know vs and our estate: and consequently they cannot make any particular intercession for vs. If they say that Abraham and Iacob were then in Limbo, which they will haue to bee a part of hel: what ioy could Lazarus haue in Abrahams bosome? Luk. 16 25. and with what comfort could Iacob say on his death bed: O Lord I haue waited for thy saluation? Gen. 46. 18.

II. Reason. 2. King. 22. 20. Huldah. the Prophetesse telleth Iosias, he must be gathered to his fathers, and put in his graue in peace, that his eyes may not see all the euill which God would bring vpon this place. Therefore the Saints departed see not the state of the Church on earth, much lesse dooe they know the thoughts and prayers of men. This conclusion Augustine confirmeth at large.

III. Reason. Noe creature, Saint, or Angel can bee a mediatour for vs to God, sauing Christ alone, who is indeede the onely Aduocate of his Church. For in a true and sufficient Mediatour there must be three properties. First of all, the word of God must reueale and propound him vnto the Church, that we may in conscience be assured that praying to him & to God in his name, we shal be heard. Now there is no Scripture that mentioneth either saints or Angels as Mediatours in our behalfe, saue Christ alone. Secondly, a mediatour must bee perfectly iust so as no sinne bee found in him at all, 1. Ioh. 2. 1. If any man sinne, we haue an aduocate with the father, Iesus Christ the righteous. Nowe the Saints in heauen, howsoeuer they be fully sanctified by Christ, yet in themselues they were cōceiued and borne in sinne: and therefore must needes eternally stand beefore God by the mediation and merit of another. Thirdly a mediatour must bee a propitiatour, that is, bring something to God, that may appease & satisfie the wrath & iustice of God for our sinne: therefore Iohn. addeth, and he is a propitiation for our sinnes. But neither Saint nor Angel can satisfie for the least of our sinnes: Christ onely is the propitiation for them all. The virgin Marie and the rest of the Saintes being sinners, could not satisfie so much as for thē-selues.

IV. Rea. The iudgement of the Church. Augustine, All Christian men commended each other in their praiers to God. And who praies for all, and for whome none praies, he is that our and true mediatour. And, This saith thy Sauiour, thou hast no whither to goe but to me, thou hast no waie to goe but by me. Chrysostome, Thou hast no neede of Patrons to God, or much discourse that thou shouldest sooth others: but though thou bee alone and want a Patron, and by thy selfe pray vnto God, thou shalt obtaine thy desire. And on the saying of Iohn, If any sinne, &c. Thy prayers haue no effect vnlesse they bee such as the Lord commends vnto thy father. And Augustine on the same place hath these words, He being such a man said not, ye haue an Aduocate, but if any sinne we haue: hee said not ye haue, neither said he, ye haue me.

Obiections of Papists.

I. Reue. 5. 8. 9. The foure and twentie elders fall downe before the Lambe, hauing euery one harpes and golden vyals full of odours, which are the praiers of the Saints. Hence the Papists gather, that the Saints in heauen receiue the praiers of men on earth, and offer them vnto the father. Ans. There by praiers of the Saints, are meant their owne praiers, in which they sing praises to God and to the Lambe, as the verses following plainely declare. And these praiers are also presented vnto God onely from the hand of the Angel, which is Christ himselfe.

chap. 8. 4.

II. Obiect. Luke. 16. 27. Dives in hell praieth for his brethren vpon earth, much more doe the Saints in heauen pray for vs.

Ans.

Anſ. Out of a parable nothing can be gathered, but that which is agreeable to the intent and ſcope thereof: for by the ſame reaſon it may as well be gathered that the ſoule of Dives beeing in hel had a tongue. Againe, if it were true which they gather, we may gather alſo that the wicked in hell haue compaſſion and loue to their brethren on earth, and a zeale to Gods glory: all which are falſe.

III. Obiect. The angels in heauen know euery mans eſtate: they knowe when any ſinner repenteth and reioyce thereat: and pray for particular men: therefore the Saints in heauen doe the like, for they are equall to the good angels, Luke. 20. 36.

Anſ. The place in Luke is to bee vnderſtood of the eſtate of holy men at the daie of the laſt iudgement: as appeares, Math. 22. 30. where it is ſaid, that the ſeruants of God in the reſurrection are as the angels in heauen. Secondly they are like the angels not in office and miniſtery, by which they are miniſtring ſpirits for the good of men: but they are like them in glorie.

Secondlie, we diſſent from the Papiſts: becauſe they are not cõtent to ſay that the Saints departed pray for vs in particular: but they adde further, that they make interceſſion for vs by there merits in heauen. Newe Ieſuits denie this; but let them heare Lumbard, I thinke (ſaith he, ſpeaking of one that is but of meane goodneſſe) that he as it were paſſing by the fire ſhall bee ſaued by the merits and interceſſions of the heauenly Church: which doe alwaies make interceſſion for the faithfull by requeſt and merit, till Chriſt ſhall be compleate in his members. And the Romane Catechiſme ſaith as much. Saints are ſo much the more to be worſhipped and called vpõ, becauſe they make prayer daily for the ſaluation of men: and God for their merit and fauour beſtowes many benefits vpon vs. We denie not, that men vppon earth haue helpe and benefit by the faith and pietie which the Saints departed ſhewed, whẽ they were in this life. For God ſhews mercie on them that keepe his commandements to a thouſand generations. And Auguſtine ſaith it was good for the Iewes, that they were loued of Moſes, whome God loued. but wee vtterly denie that wee are helped by merits of Saints either liuing or departed. For Saints in glorie haue receiued the full rewarde of all their merits; if they could merit: and therefore there is nothing further that they can merit.

q. 140. ſuper Exod.

The 16. point of Implicite or infolded faith.

Our Conſent.

Wee hold that there is a a kind of implicite, or vnexpreſſed faith: yea that the faith of euery man in ſome part of his life, as in the time of his firſt conuerſion, and in the time of ſome grieuous temptation or diſtreſſe, is implicite or infolded. The Samaritans are ſaid to beleeue, Ioh. 4. 14. becauſe they tooke Chriſt for the Meſſias and thereupon were content to learne and obey the glad tidings of ſaluation. And in the ſame place, v. 51. the Ruler with his family is ſaid to beleeue, who did no more but generally acknoweledge that Chriſt was the Meſſias, and yeelded himſelfe to beleeue and obey his holy doctrine; being mooued thereunto by a miracle wrought vpon his young ſonne. And Rahab, Heb. 11. 13. is ſaide to beleeue, yea ſhe is commended for faith euen at the time when ſhee receiued the ſpies. Now in the word of God we cannot find, that ſhee had any more but a confuſed, generall, or infolded faith, whereby ſhe beleeued that the God of the Hebrues was the true God, and his word to bee obeyed. And this faith (as it ſeemes) was wrought in her by the report and relation of the miracles done in the land of Egypt, whereby ſhee was mooued to ioyne her ſelfe vnto the people of God, and to beleeue as they did. By theſe examples then it is manifeſt, that in the very ſeruants of God, there is and may be for a time an implicite faith. For the better vnderſtanding of this point, it is to be conſidered that faith may bee infolded two waies firſt in reſpect of knoweledge of things to be beleeued: ſecondly in reſpect of the apprehenſion of the obiect of faith namely Chriſt and his benefits. Now faith is infolded in reſpect of knowledge, when as ſundrie things that are neceſſarie to ſaluation are not as yet diſtinctly knowne. Though Chriſt commended the faith of his Diſciples, for ſuch a faith, againſt which the gates of hell ſhould not preuaile; yet was it vnexpreſſed or wrapped vp in regard of ſundrie points of religion: for firſt of all, Peter that made confeſſion of Chriſt in the name of the reſt, was at that time ignorant of the particular means whereby his redemption ſhoulde bee wrought. For after this, he went about to diſſwade his maſter from the ſuffering of death at Ieruſalem, whereupon Chriſt ſharpe-ſharpely rebuked him, ſaying, Come behind mee Satban, thou art an offence vnto me. Againe, they were all ignorant of Chriſts reſurrection, till certaine women, who firſt ſawe him after hee was riſen againe, had told them: and they by experience in the perſon of Chriſt had learned the trueth. Thirdly, they were ignorant of the aſcenſion: for they dreamed of an earthly kingdome at the very time when hee was about to aſcend: ſaying, Wilt thou at this time reſtore the kingdome of Iſrael? Act. 1.6. And after Chriſts aſcenſion, Peter knewe nothing of the breaking downe of the partition wall betweene the Iewes and Gentiles, till God had better ſchooled him in a viſion, Act. 10.14. And no doubt, we haue ordinarie examples of this Implicite faith in ſundrie perſons among vs. For ſome there be, which are dull and hard both for vnderſtanding and memorie, and therevpon make no ſuch proceedings in knowledge as many others doe: & yet for good affection and conſcience in their doings, ſo farre as they know, they come not ſhort of any; hauing withall a continuall care to increaſe in knowlegde, and to walke in obedience according to that which they knowe. And ſuch perſons, though they bee ignorant in many thinges, yet haue they a meaning of true fayth: and that which is wanting in knowledge, is ſupplied in affection: and in ſome reſpects they are to bee preferred before many that haue the glib tongue, and the braine ſwimming with knowledge. To this purpoſe Melancthon ſaide well, We muſt acknowledge the great mercie of God, who puts a difference betweene ſinnes of ignorance, and ſuch as are done wittingly; and forgiues manifold ignorances to them, that knowe but the foundation and bee teachable; as may bee ſeene by the Apoſtles, in whome there was much want of vnderſtanding before the reſurrection of Chriſt. But as hath bin ſaid, he requires that we be teachable, and he will not haue vs to bee hardened in our ſluggiſhneſſe and dulneſſe. As it is ſaid Pſal. 1. bee meditateth in his lawe day and night.

Epitom. phil. moral de grad. delict.

The ſecond kind of implicite faith is in regard of Apprehenſion; when as a man cannot ſay diſtinctly and certainely, I beleeue the pardon of my ſinnes, but I doo vnfainedly deſire to beleeue the pardon of them all and I deſire to repent. This caſe befalls many of Gods children, when they are touched in conſcience for their ſinnes. But where men are diſpleaſed with themſelues for their offences, and doe withall conſtantly from the heart deſire to beleeue, and to be reconciled to God, there is faith and many other graces of God infolded: as in the little and tender budde, is infolded the leafe, the bloſſome, and the fruite. For though a deſire to repent and to beleeue be not faith and repentance in nature, yet in Gods acceptation it is, God accepting the will for the deede. Iſa. 42.3. Chriſt will not quench the ſmoaking flaxe, which as yet by reaſon of weakeneſſe giues neither light nor heate. Chriſt ſaith, Mat. 5.6. Bleſſed are they that hunger and thirſt after righteouſnes, for they ſhall be ſatisfied: where by perſons hungring and thirſting are meant all ſuch, as feele with griefe their owne want of righteouſneſſe, and withall deſire to be iuſtified and ſanctified. Rom. 8.26. God heares and regards the verie grones and ſighs of his ſeruantes: yea, though they be vnſpeakeable by reaſō they are oftentimes little, weake, and confuſed: yet God hath reſpect vnto them, becauſe they are the worke of his own ſpirit. Thus then wee ſee that in a touched heart deſiring to beleeue, there is an infolded fayth. And this is the faith which manie of the true ſeruants of God haue: and our ſaluation ſtandes not ſo much in our apprehending of Chriſt, as in Chriſts comprehending of vs: and therefore Paul ſaith, Phil. 3.12. he followeth, namely after perfection, if that he might comprehend that, for whoſe ſake hee is comprehended of Chriſt. Now if any ſhall ſay, that without a liuely faith in Chriſt none can be ſaued: I anſwer, that God accepts the deſire to beleeue for liue liefaith, in the time of temptation, & in the time of our firſt conuerſion, as I haue ſaid. Put caſe, a man that neuer yet repented falls into ſome grieuous ſickeneſſe, and then beginnes to be touched in conſcience for his ſinnes, and to bee truely humbled: herevpon hee is exhorted to beleeue his owne reconciliation with God in Chriſt, and the pardon of his owne ſinnes. And as he is exhorted, ſo he endeauoureth according to the meaſure of grace receiued, to beleeue, yet after much ſtriuing he cannot reſolue himſelfe, that he doth diſtinctlie & certenly beleeue the pardon of his owne ſinnes: onely this he can ſay, that he doeth heartilie deſire to beleeue: this he wiſheth aboue all thinges in the world: and hee eſteemes all thinges as dongue for Chriſt: and thus he dies. I demand now, what ſhal we ſay of him? ſurely, we may ſay nothing, but that he died the child of God, & is vndoubtedly saued. For howsoeuer it were an happie thing if mē could come to that fulnesse of faith which was in Abraham, & many seruants of God: yet certen it is, that God in sundrie cases accepts of this desire to beleeue, for true faith indeed. And look as it is in nature, so is it in grace: in nature some dye when they are children, some in olde age, and some in full strength, and yet all dye men: so againe, some dye babes in Christ, some of more perfect faith: and yet the weakest hauing the seedes of grace, is the child of God; and faith in his infancie is faith. All this while, it must be remembred, I say not, there is a true faith without all apprehension, but without a distinct apprehension for some space of time: for this verie desire by faith to apprehende Christ and his merits, is a kind of apprehension. And thus we see the kinds of implicite or infolded faith.

This doctrine is to be learned for two causes: first of all it serues to rectifie the consciences of weake ones, that they be not deceiued touching their estate. For if we thinke that no faith can saue, but a full perswasion, such as the faith of Abraham was, many truly bearing the Name of Christ must bee put out of the role of the children of God: Wee are therefore to know that there is a growth in grace, as in nature: and there be differēces & degrees of true faith, and the least of them al is this infolded faith. This in effect is the doctrine of M. Caluin: that, when wee beginne by faith to know somewhat, and haue a desire to learn more, this may be tearmed an vnexpressed faith. Secondly this point of doctrine serues to rectifie and in part to expound sundry Catechismes in that they seeme to propound faith vnto men at so high a reach, as fewe can attaine vnto it defining it to be a certaine and ful perswasion of Gods loue and fauour in Christ; whereas, though euery faith be for his nature a certaine perswasion, yet onely the strong faith is the full perswasion. Therefore faith is not onely in generall tearmes to be defined, but also the degrees & measures thereofare to bee expounded, that weake ones to their comfort may be trulie informed of their estate. And though we teach there is a kinde of implicite faith, which is the beginning of true and liuely faith: yet none must hereupon take an occasion to content themselues therewith, but labour to increase and goe one from faith to faith: and so indeed will euery one do that hath any beginnings of true faith, be they neuer so litle. And hewhich thinks he hath a desire to beleeue, and contents himself therewith; hath indeed no true desire to beleeue.

Instit. lib. 3. c. 5.

The difference.

The pillars of the Romish Church laie downe this ground: that faith in his owne nature, is not a knowledge of things to be beleeued; but a reuerent assent vnto them whether they be knowne or vnknowne. Hereupon they build: that if a man knowe some necessarie points of religion, as the doctrine of the Godhead, of the Trinitie, of Christs incarnation, & of our redemption, &c. it is needlesse to knowe the rest by a particular or distinct knowlede, and it sufficeth to giue his cōsent to the church and to beleeue as the Pastours beleeue. Behold a ruinous building vpon a rotten foundation: for faith containes a knowe-ledge of things to be beleeued, & knowledge is of the nature of faith: and nothing is beleeued that is not knowne. Isa. 53. 11. The knowledge of my righteous seruant, shall iustifie many And Ioh. 17. 2. This is eternall life, to knowe the eternall God, and whome thou hast sent Iesus Christ, In these places, by knowledge is meant fayth grounded vpon knowledge, whereby we knowe and are assured that Christ and his benefits belong vnto vs. Secondly this kind of assent is the mother of ignorance. For when men shall be taught, that for sundry points of religion they may beleeue as the church beleeues: [a] that the studie of the Scriptures is not to be required of them: yea that to their good they may bee barred the reading of them, so be it they knowe some principall thinges contained in the articles of faith; that [b] common beleeuers are not bound expressely to beleeue all the articles of the Apostles creede: [c] that it sufficeth them to beleeue the articles by an implicite fayth: by beleeuing as the Church beleeueth fewe or none will haue care to profit in knowledge. And yet Gods commandement is that wee should growe in knowledge, and that his worde should dwell plenteously in vs, Col 3. 16. Againe the Papists say, that the deuotion of the ignorant, is often service better accepted then that which is done vpon knowledge. Such (say they) as pray in latin, pray with as great consolation of spirit, with as little tedious nes, with as great deuotiō & affection, & oftentimes more then the other, and alwaies more thē any schismaticke or heretick in his owne language. To conclude, they teach that some articles of faith are beleeued generally of the whole Church onely by a simple or implicite faith, which afterward by the authoritie of a generall counsel are propounded to be beleeued of the Church by expresse faith. Rossensis against Luther giues an example of this, when he confesseth that Purgatorie was little knowne at the first, but was made knowne partly by Scripture, and partly by reuelation in processe of time. This implicite faith touching articles of religion we reiect; holding that all things concerning faith and manners necessarie to saluation, are plainely expressed in Scripture, and accordingly to be beleeued.

The 17. point. Of Purgatorie.

Our Consent.

Wee hold a Christian Purgatorie, according as the word of god hath set down the same vnto vs. And first of all by this Purgatorie wee vnderstand the afflictions of Gods children here on earth. Ier. 3. The people afflicted say, thou hast sent a fire into our bones. Psal. 65. 12. We haue gone through water and fire. Mal. 3. 3. The children of Leui must be purified in a purging fire of affliction. 1. Pet. 1. 7. Afflictions are called the fire triall, whereby men are cleansed from their corruptions, as golde from the droste by the fire. Secondly the blood of Christ is a purgatorie of our sinnes. 1. Iohn. 1. 7. Christs blood purgeth vs from all our sinnes. Heb. 9. 14. It purgeth our consciences from dead workes. And Christ baptizeth with the holy Ghost and with fire: because our inward washing is by the blood of Christ: and the holy Ghost is as fire to consume and abolish the inward corruption of nature. To this effect sayth Origen, Without doubt, wee shall feele the vnquenchable fire, vnlesse wee shall now intreat the Lord to send downe from heauen a purgatorie fire vnto vs whereby worldly desires may bee vtterly consumed in our mindes, August. Suppose the mercy of God is thy purgatorie.

n Leuit. l. 9 pud. Cy l. e. Act. celic. cap 1.

The difference or dissent.

Wee differ from the Papists touching purgatorie in two things. And first of all, for the place. They hold it to bee a part of hell into which an entrance is made onely after this life: wee for our parts denie it, as hauing no warrant in the word of god: which mentioneth onely two places for men after this life, heauen and hell, with the two-fold condition thereof, ioy and torment, Luke. 16. 25. 26. Iohn. 5. 36. Apoc. 22. 14. 15. and 21. 7. 8. Matth. 8. 11. Nay we finde the contrarie. Reu. 14. 13. they that die in the Lord are said to rest from their labours: which cannot be true, if any of them goe to purgatorie. And to cut off all cauils: it is further sayde their workes, that is, the reward of their workes, follow them, euen at the heeles, as an Acoluth or seruant doth his master. Augustine saith well, After this life there remaines no cõpunction or satisfactiõ. And, Here is all remission of sinne: here be temptations: that moone vs to sinne: lastly here is the euil from which we desire to bee deliuered: but there is none of all these. And, We are not here without sinne, but we shal goe hence without sinne. Cyril saith, They which are once dead can adde nothing to the things which they haue done, but shal remaine as they were left and waite for the time of the last iudgement. Chrysostom. After the end of this life there be no occasions of merits.

Hom. 50. ad Pop. Antioch. Enchir. cap 110. de verb Apost. serm 31. lib. 3. in Es. ad Pop. Antioch. ho. 28.

Secondly, wee differ from them touching the meanes of Purgation. They say, that men are purged by suffering paine in Purgatorie, whereby they satisfie for their veniall sinnes, & for the temporall punishment of their mortall sinnes. We teach the contrarie, holding that nothing can free vs from the least punishment of the smallest sinne, but the sufferings of Christ, and purge vs frõ the least taint of corruption, saue the blood of Christ. Indeede they say, that our sufferings in themselues considered, doe not purge and satisfie, but as they are made meritorious by the sufferings of Christ: but to this I oppose one text of Scripture, Hebr. 1. 3. where it is saide, that Christ hath purged our sinnes by himselfe; where the last clause cuts the throate of all humane satisfaction and merits; and it giueth vs to vnderstand, that whatsoeuer thing purgeth vs from our sinnes, is not to bee found in vs but in Christ alone: otherwise it shoulde haue bin sayde, that Christ purgeth the sinnes of men by themselues, as well as by himselfe: & he would merit by his death, that we should become our owne Sauiours in part.

To this place I may well referre prayer for the dead: of which I will propound two conclusions affirmatiue, and one negatiue. Conclus. I. Wee hold that Christian charity is to extēd it ſelfe to the very dead: & it muſt ſhew it ſelfe in their honeſt buriall, in the preſeruatiō of their good names, in the helpe and releefe of their poſteritie, as time and occaſion ſhal be offered. Ruth 1.8. Ioh.19.23.

II. Concluſ. Wee pray further in general manner for the faithful departed, that god would haſten their ioyfull reſurrection, & the faithfull accompliſhment of their happineſſe, both for the bodie and the ſoule: & thus muſt we aske in ſaying Thy kingdome come, that is, not only thy kingdome of grace, but alſo the kingdome of glorie in heauen. Thus fatre we come: but neater the gates of Babylō we dare not approch.

III. Concluſ. To praie for particular men departed, & to pray for their deliuerance out of purgatorie, wee thinke it vnlawfull: becauſe wee haue neither promiſe nor commandement ſo to doe.

The eighteenth point. Of the Supremacie in cauſes Eccleſiaſticall.

Our conſent.

Touching the point of Supremacie Eccleſiaſticall, I will ſet down how neere we may come to the Romane Church, in two concluſions. Concluſ. I. For the founding of the Primitiue Church, the miniſterie of the word was diſtinguiſhed by degrees not only of order but alſo of power, & Peter was called to the higheſt degree. Eph. 4.11. Chriſt aſcended vppe on high and gaue gifts vntomen, for the good of his Church: as ſome to bee Apoſtles, ſome Prophets, ſome Euangeliſts, ſome Paſtours and Doctours. Now howſoeuer one Apoſtle, bee not aboue another, or one Euangeliſt aboue an other, or one Paſtour aboue an other: yet an Apoſtle was aboue an Euangeliſt: and an Euangeliſt aboue all Paſtours and teachers. And Peter was by calling an Apoſtle, and therefore aboue all Euangeliſts & Paſtours; hauing the higheſt roome in the miniſtery of the newe teſtament both for order and authoritie.

Concluſ. II. Among the twelue Apoſtles Peter had a threefold priuiledge or prerogatiue. I. The prerogatiue of authoritie II. Of primacie. III. Of principalitie. For the firſt, by the priuiledge of authoritie, I meane a preheminence in regard of eſtimation, whereby hee was had in reuerence aboue the reſt of the twelue Apoſtles, for Cephas with Iames and Iohn are called Pillers, and ſeemed to bee geate. Gal.2.6.9. Againe hee had the preheminence of primacie, becauſe he was the firſt named, as the foreman of the queſt. Matth 10.2. The names of the twelue Apoſtles are theſe, the firſt is Simon, called Peter. Thirdly he had the preheminence of principalitie among the twelue, becauſe in regard of the meaſure of grace, hee excelled the reſt: for when Chriſt asked his diſciples whome they ſaide he was; Peter as beeing of greateſt abilitie & zeale, anſwered for them all. Math.16.16. I vſe this clauſe, among the twelue, becauſe Paul excelled Peter euerie waie, in learning, zeale, vnderſtāding as far as Peter excelled the reſt. and thus neere we come to popiſh ſupremacy.

The difference.

The Church of Rome giues to Peter a ſupremacie vnder Chriſt aboue all cauſes and perſons: that is, full power, to gouerne and order the Catholike Church vpon the whole earth both for doctrine and regiment. This ſupremacie ſtandes (as they teach) in a power, or iudgement, to determine of the true ſence of all places of Scripture: to determine all cauſes of faith: to aſſemble generall councels: to ratifie the decrees of the ſaide councels: to excōmunicate any man vpon earth, that liues within the Church, euē princes & nations: properly to abſolue and forgiue ſinnes: to decide cauſes brought to him by appeale from all the parts of the earth: laſtlie to make lawes that ſhall bind the conſcience. This fulnes of power with one conſent is aſcribed to Peter, & the Biſhops of Rome that follow him in a ſuppoſed ſucceſſion. Nowe we holde on the contrary, that neither Peter nor any Biſhop of Rome hath anie ſupremacie ouer the Catholike Church: but that all ſupremacie vnder Chriſt is pertaining to kinges and princes within their dominions. And that this our doctrine is good, & theirs falſe & forged, I will make it manifeſt by ſundrie reaſons. I. Chriſt muſt be conſidered of vs as a king two waies. Firſt as he is God: and ſo is hee an abſolute king ouer all things in heauen and earth, with the father and the holie Ghoſt by the right of creation. Seconolie he is a king as hee is a redeemer of mankind: and by the right of redemption he is a ſoueraigne king ouer the whole Church, and that in ſpeciall manner. Nowe as Chriſt is God with the father & the holie ghoſt, hee hath his deputies on earth to gouerne the world: as namelie kinges and princes, who are therefore in Scriptures called Gods. But as Chriſt is Mediatour, and conſequently a King ouer his redeemed ones, he hath neither fellow, nor deputie. No fellowe: for then he ſhould be an imperfect mediatour. No deputie: for no creature is capable of this office to doe in the roome & ſtead of Chriſt that which he himſelfe dooth: becauſe euery work of the Mediatour is a compound worke, ariſing of the effects of two natures concurring in one and the ſame action, namely the Godhead & the manhood: and therefore to the effecting of the ſaid work there is required an infinite power, which farre exceeds the ſtrēgth of anie created nature. Againe, Heb, 7, 24. Chriſt is ſaid to haue a Prieſt-hood which cannot paſſe from his perſon to anie other: whence it followes, that neither his kingly nor his prophetical office can paſſe from him to anie creature, eyther in whole or in part: becauſe the three offices of mediation in this regarde be equall. Nay, it is a needleſſe thing for Chriſt to haue a deputie, to put in execution any part of his Mediatourſhip: conſidering a deputie onely ſerueth to ſupply the abſence of the principall. whereas Chriſt is alwayes preſent with his Church by his Word and Spirit: for where two or three be gathered together in his name, he is in the middeſt among them. It may be ſaid that the Miniſters in the worke of the miniſtery are deputies of Chriſt: I anſwer, that they are no deputies, but actiue inſtruments. For in the preaching of the Word there be two actions: the firſt is the vttering or propounding of it to the eare: the ſecond is, the inward operation of the holy Ghoſt in the heart: which indeed is the principall and belongs to Chriſt alone: the action of ſpeaking in the miniſter beeing onely inſtrumentall. Thus likewiſe the Church of God in cutting off any member by excommunication, is no more but an inſtrument performing a miniſterie in the name of Chriſt, and that is to teſtifie & pronounce whome Chriſt himſelfe hath cutt off from the kingdome of Heauen: whome he alſo wil haue for this cauſe, to be ſeuered from the companie of his own people til he repent. And ſo it is in all eccleſiaſticall actions. Chriſt hath no deputy, but onely inſtruments: the whole entire actiō beeing perſonall in reſpect of Chriſt. This one concluſion ouerthrowes not only the Popes ſupremacie, but alſo many other points of poperie.

Reaſon. II. All the Apoſtles in regard of power and authoritie were equall: for the commiſſion Apoſtolicall both for right & execution was giuen equally to them all, as the verie wordes import. Matth. 28. 19. Goe teach all nations baptizing them, &c. & the promiſe, I will giue to thee the keyes of the kingdome of heauen, is not Priuate to Peter, but is made in his perſon to the reſt, according as his confeſſion was in the name of the reſt. Thus ſaith Theophylact, They haue the power of committing & binding that receiue the gift of a Biſhoppe as Peter. And Ambr. ſaith, What is ſaid to Peter is ſaid to the Apoſtles. Therefore Peter had no ſupremacie ouer the reſt of the Apoſtles in reſpect of right to the cōmiſſion: which they ſay belongeth to him onely, and the execution thereof to the reſt. But let all be graunted, that Peter was in commiſſion aboue the reſt, for the time of his life: yet hence may not any ſuperioritie bee gathered for the Biſhops of Rome: becauſe the authoritie of the Apoſtles was perſonall, and conſequently ceaſed with them, without being conueiued to any other: becauſe the Lord did not vouchſafe the like honour to any after them. For firſt of all, it was the priuiledge of the Apoſtles to be called immediately, and to ſee the Lorde Ieſus. Secondly, they had power to giue the gift of the holy Ghoſt by the impoſition of hands. Thirdly, they had ſuch a meaſure of the aſſiſtance of the ſpirit, that in their publike ſermons, and in writing of the worde, they could not erre: and theſe writings were all denied to thoſe that followed after thē. And that their authority ceaſed in their perſons, it ſtands with reaſon alſo becauſe it was giuen in ſo ample a manner for the founding of the Church of the new teſtament: which beeing once founded, it was needfull onely, that there ſhould bee paſtours and teachers for the building of it vppe vnto the ende of the world.

Reaſon. III. When the ſonnes of Zebedeus ſued vnto Chriſt for the greateſt roomes of honour in his kingdome (deeming he ſhould be an earthly king) Chriſt anſwers them againe, Yee knowe that the Lords of the Gentiles haue dominion, and they that are great, exerciſe authoritie ouer them: but it ſhall not be ſo with you. Bernard applieth theſe verie words to Pope Eugenius on this manner. It is plaine, ſaith he, that here dominion is forbidden the Apoſtles. Goe to then: dare if you wil, to take vpon you ruling and Apostleship, or in your Apostleship rule or dominion: if will haue both alike, you shal loose both. Otherwise you must not thinke your selfe exempted from the number of them, of whome the Lord complaineth thus: they haue raigned but not of me: they haue beene, but I haue not knowne them.

Reason. IV. Eph. 4. Mention is made of gifts which Christ gaue to his Church after his ascension, whereby some were Apostles, some Prophets, some Euangelists, some pastours and teachers. Now if there had beene an office in which men as deputies of Christ shoulde haue gouerned the whole church to the end of the world, the calling might here haue beene named fitly with a gift therto pertaining: & Paul (no doubt) would not here haue concealed it, where he mentioneth callings of lesser importance.

Reason. V. The Popes supremacie was iudged by sentences of scripture, and condemned long before it was manifest in the world: the spirit of prophesie foreseeing & foretelling the state of things to come. 2. Thess. 2. 3. 4. The man of sinne (which is that Antichrist) shall exalt himselfe aboue all that is called God. &c. Nowe this whole chapter with all the circumstances thereof, most fitly agrees to the Sea of Rome & the Head thereof: and the thing which then staied the reuealing of the man of sin, v. 6. is of most expounded to bee the Romane Emperour. I will alleadge one testimonie in the roome of many. Chrysostom saith on this place, As long as the Empire shall be had in awe, no man shall straightly submit himselfe to Antichrist: but after that the Empire shall be dissolued, Antichrist shall inuade the state of the Empire standing void, & shall labour to pull vnto himselfe the Empire both of man and God And this wee finde now in experience to be true: for the Sea of Rome neuer flourished, till the Empire decaied, & the seate thereof was remooued from the citie of Rome. Againe, Reu. 13. mention is made of two beasts, one cõming out of the sea, whome the Papists confesse to bee the heathenish Romane Emperour: the second comming out of the earth; which doeth all that the first beast could doe before him: and this fitly agreeth to the Popes of Rome, who dooe and haue done all thinges that the Emperour did or could doe, and that in his verie sight.

Reason. VI. The iudgement of the ancient Church. Cyprian saith, Doubtlesse the same were the rest of the Apostles that Peter was: indued with equall fellowship both of honour and of power: but a beginning is made of vnitie that the Church may appeare to bee one. Gregorie saith, If one bee called vniuersall Bishop, the vniuersall church goeth to decaie. And chap. 144. I say boldly, that whosoeuer calleth or desireth to call himselfe vniuersall priest, in his pride is a forerunner of Antichrist. And, behold, in the preface of the Epistle which yee directed vnto me you caused to be set a proud title, calling mee vniuersall Pope. Bernard. Consider that thou art not a Lord of Bishops, but one of them. Churches are maimed, in that the Romane Bishoppe draweth all power to himselfe. Againe, Gregorie himselfe beeing Pope saith to the Emperour, I which am subiect to your cõmandement ——; haue euerie way discharged that which was due, in that I haue performed mine allegiance to the Emperour, and haue not concealed what I thought on GODS behalfe. And Pope Leo the fourth after Gregorie 200. yeares, acknowledged the Emperour Lotharius for his soueraigne prince, and professed obedience without gainsaying to his imperiall commaundements.

To conclude, whereas they say, that there is a double head of the Church, one imperiall, which is Christ alone, the other ministeriall, which is the Pope, gouerning the whole Church vnder Christ; I answer this distinction robbeth Christ of his honour, because in setting vp their ministeriall head, they are faine to borrowe of Christ thinges proper vnto him, as the priuiledge to forgiue sinnes (a) properlie, and the power to gouerne the whole earth by making of laws, that shall as truely bind conscience as the lawes of God, &c.

The nineteenth point. Of the efficacie of the Sacraments.

Our consent.

Conclus. I. Wee teach and beleeue that the sacramentes are signes to represent Christ with his benefits vnto vs.

Conclus. II. Wee teach further, that the Sacraments are indeed instruments where-

by by God offereth and giueth the foreſaid benefits vnto vs. Thus farre wee conſent with the Romane Church.

The difference.

The difference betweene vs ſtandes in ſundrie points. Firſt of all, the beſt learned among them teach, that Sacraments are phyſicall inſtruments, that is, true & proper inſtrumentall cauſes, hauing force and efficacie in them to produce and giue grace. They vſe to expreſſe their meaning by theſe compariſons: When the ſcriuener takes the pen into his hand and writes, the action of writing comes from the penne, mooued by the hand of the writer: and in cutting of wood or ſtone, the diuiſion comes from the ſawe, mooued by the hand of the workman: euen ſo the grace (ſay they) that is giuen by God, is conferred by the ſacrament it ſelfe. Now we for our parts hold, that ſacramẽts are not phyſicall, but meere voluntarie inſtrumentes. Voluntarie, becauſe it is the will and appointment of God, to vſe them as certaine outward meanes of grace. Inſtrumentes; becauſe when wee vſe them aright according to the inſtitution; God then anſwerably conferres grace from himſelfe. In this reſpect onely take we them for inſtruments and no otherwiſe.

The ſecond difference is this. They teach that the very action of the miniſter diſpenſing the ſacrament as it is a worke done, giues grace immediately, if the party be prepared: as the very waſhing or ſprinkling of water in baptiſme, and the giuing of bread in the Lords ſupper: euen as the orderly mooving of the pen vpon the paper by the hand of the writer cauſeth writing. We hold the contrarie: namely, that no action in the diſpenſation of a Sacrament conferreth grace as it is a worke done, that is, by the efficacie and force of the very ſacramental action it ſelfe, though ordained of GOD: but for two other waies. Firſt by the ſignification therof. For God teſtifies vnto vs his will and good pleaſure partly by the word of promiſe, & partly by the ſacrament: the ſignes repreſenting to the eyes that which the worde doth to the eares: beeing alſo types and certaine images of the verie ſame thinges, that are promiſed in the worde and no other. Yea the elements are not general and confuſed, but particular ſignes to the ſeuerall communicants, and by the vertue of the Inſtitution: for when the faithful receiue the ſignes from God by the hands of the Miniſter, it is as much as if God himſelfe with his owne mouth ſhould ſpeake vnto them ſeuerally, and by name promiſe to them remiſſion of ſinnes. And things ſayd to men particularly, doe more affect, and more take away doubting, then if they were generally ſpoken to an whole companie. Therefore ſignes of grace are as it were an applying and binding of the promiſe of ſaluation to euery particular beleeuer: and by this meanes, the oftner they are receiued, the more they helpe our infirmitie, and confirme our aſſurance of mercie.

Againe the ſacrament conferres grace, in that the ſignes thereof confirmes faith as a pledge, by reaſon it hath a promiſe annexed to it. For when God commands vs to receiue the ſignes in faith, and withall promiſeth to the receiuers to giue the thing ſignified, he binds himſelf, as it were in bond vnto vs, to ſtand to his own word; euen as men binde themſelues in obligations, putting to their hands and ſeales, ſo as they cannot goe backe. And when the ſignes are thus vſed as pledges, & that oftẽ they greatly increaſe the grace of God; as a token ſent from one friend to another, renewes and confirmes the perſwaſion of loue.

Theſe are the two principall wayes whereby the ſacraments are ſaide to conferre grace, namely in reſpect of their ſignification, and as they are pledges of Gods fauour vnto vs. And the very point here to be conſidered is, in what order and manner they confirme. And the maner is this: The ſignes and viſible elements affect the ſenſes outward and inward: the ſenſes conuey their obiect to the mind: the mind directed by the holy Ghoſt reaſoneth on this manner, out of the promiſe annexed to the ſacramẽt: He that vſeth the elements aright, ſhall receiue grace thereby: but I vſe the elements aright in faith and repentance, ſaith the mind of the beleeuer: therfore ſhall I receiue from God increaſe of grace. Thus thẽ, faith is confirmed not by the worke done, but by a kind of reaſoning cauſed in the minde, the argument or proofe whereof is borrowed from the elements beeing ſignes and pledges of Gods mercy.

The third difference. The Papiſts teach that in the Sacrament by the worke done, the very grace of iuſtification is conferred. We ſay no: becauſe a man of yeares muſt firſt beleeue and be iuſtified, before he can bee be a meete partaker of any ſacramẽt. And the grace that is conferred, is onely the increaſe of our faith, hope, ſanctification, &c.

Our reaſons.

Reaſon. I. The word preached and the ſacraments differ in the manner of giuing Chriſt and his benefits vnto vs: becauſe in the word the ſpirit of God teacheth vs by a voice conueied to the minde by the bodilie eares: but in the ſacraments annexed to the worde, by certaine ſenſible and bodilie ſignes viewed by the eye. (a) Sacraments are nothing but viſible wordes and promiſes. Otherwiſe for the giuing it ſelfe they differ not. Chriſt himſelfe ſaith, that in the verie worde, is eaten his owne fleſh, which hee was to giue for the life of the world: and what can be ſaide more of the Lords ſupper? Auguſtine ſaith, that beleeuers are partakers of the bodie and blood of Chriſt in baptiſme: and Hierome to Edibia, that in baptiſme wee eate and drinke the bodie and blood of Chriſt. If thus much may be ſaid of baptiſme, why may it not alſo be ſaide of the word preached? Againe, Hierome vpon Eccleſiaſtes ſaith, It is profitable to be filled with the bodie of Chriſt and drinke his blood, not onely in miſterie but in knowlede of holy Scripture. Now vpon this it follows, that ſeeing the worke done in the word preached confers not grace, neither doth the worke done in the ſacrament conferre any grace.

Reaſon II. Matth. 3. 11. I baptize you with water to repentance: but hee that commeth after me is ſtronger then I,——hee ſhall baptize you with the holy Ghoſt and with fire. Hence it is manifeſt, that grace in the ſacrament proceedes not from any action in the ſacrament: for Iohn, though he doe not diſioyne himſelfe and his action from Chriſt, and the action of his ſpirit, yet doth he diſtinguiſh them plainely in number, perſons, and effect. To this purpoſe Paul, who had ſaid of the Galatians, that he trauelled of them and begat them by the Goſpel, ſaith of himſelf that he is not any thing, not onely as he was a man, but as he was a faithfull Apoſtle: thereby excluding the whole Euangelicall miniſterie whereof the Sacrament is a part, from the leaſt part of diuine operation, or efficacie in conferring of grace.

1. Cor. 7. 3.

Reaſon III. The bleſſed Angels, nay the verie fleſh of the ſonne of God hath not any quickning vertue from it ſelfe; but all this efficacie or vertue is in and from the godhead of the ſonne: who by meanes of the fleſh apprehended by faith, deriueth heauenly and ſpirituall life from himſelfe to the members. Now if there bee no efficacie in the fleſh of Chriſt, but by reaſon of the hypoſtaticall vnion: how ſhall bodilie actions about bodilie elements conferre grace immediately?

Reaſon IV. Paul, Rom. 4. ſtands much vpon this, to prooue that iuſtification by faith is not conferred by the ſacraments. And from the circumſtance of time he gathereth that Abraham was firſt iuſtified, and then afterward receiued circumciſion, the ſigne and ſeale of his righteouſneſſe. Now wee know that the generall condition of all ſacramentes is one and the ſame, and that baptiſme ſucceeded circumciſion. And what can be more plaine then the example of Cornelius, Act. 10? who before Peter came vnto him, had the commendation of the feare of God, and was indued with the ſpirit of prayer: and afterward when Peter by preaching opened more fully the way of the Lord, hee and the reſt receiued the holy Ghoſt. And after all this they were baptiſed. Now if they receiued the holie Ghoſt before baptiſme, then they receiued remiſſion of ſinnes, and were iuſtified before baptiſme.

V Reaſon. The iudgement of the ancient Church. Baſil, I*f there be any grace in the water, it is not from the nature of the water, but from* the preſence of the ſpirit. Hierome ſaith, Man giues water, but God giues the holy Ghoſt. Auguſtine ſaith, Water toucheth the bodie, and waſheth the heart: but he ſhewes his meaning elſwhere. There is one water (ſaith he) of the ſacrament, another of the ſpirit: the water of the Sacrament is viſible, the water of the ſpirit inuiſible. That waſheth the bodie and ſignifieth what is done in the ſoule; By this the ſoule is purged and healed.

Lib de Spir. ſan. cap. 15 in Eſa. 14, Tract. 6, in epiſt Ioh

Obiect. Remiſſion of ſinnes, regeneration, & ſaluation is aſcribed to the ſacrament of baptiſme, Act. 22. 21. Eph. 5. Gal: 3. 27. Tit. 2. Anſ. Saluation and remiſſion of ſinnes is aſcribed to baptiſme and the Lords ſupper, as to the word; which is the power of God to ſaluation to all that beleeue: and that, as they are inſtruments of the holy Ghoſt to ſignifie, ſeale, and exhibite to the beleeuing minde the foreſaid benefits: but indeede the proper inſtrument whereby ſaluation is apprehended is faith, and ſacraments are but proppes of faith furthering ſaluation two waies: firſt, becauſe

becauſe by their ſignification they helpe to nouriſh and preſerue faith: ſecondly becauſe they ſeale grace and ſaluation to vs: yea God giues grace and ſaluation when we vſe them well: ſo be it wee beleeue the word of promiſe made to the ſacrament, whereof alſo they are ſeales. And thus we keepe the middle way, neither giuing too much, nor too little to the ſacraments.

The XX. point. Of ſauing faith: or, the way to life.

Our conſent.

Concluſ. I. They teach it to bee the propertie of faith, to beleeue the whole word of God, and eſpecially the redemption of mankind by Chriſt.

Concluſ. II. They auouch that they beleeue and looke to be ſaued by Chriſt and by Chriſt alone, and by the meere mercie of God in Chriſt.

Concluſ. III. Thirdly the moſt learned among them hold and confeſſe, that the obedience of Chriſt is imputed vnto them for the ſatisfaction of the lawe, & for their reconciliation with God.

Concluſ. IV. They auouch that they put their whole truſt & confidence in Chriſt, and the meere mercie of God, for their ſaluation.

Concluſ. V. laſtly they holde that euerie man muſt applie the promiſe of life euerlaſting by Chriſt vnto himſelfe: and this they graunt we are bound to doe. And in theſe fiue pointes do they and we agree, at leaſt in ſhew of wordes.

By the auouching of the fiue concluſions, papiſts may eaſily eſcape the handes of many magiſtrates. And vnleſſe the myſterie of popiſh doctrine be well knowne, any common man may eaſily be deceiued, and take ſuch for good proteſtants that are but popiſh prieſts. To this ende therefore, that we may the better diſcerne their guile, I wil ſhewe wherein they faile in each of their cõcluſions, & wherin they differ from vs.

The difference.

Touching the firſt concluſion, they beleeue indeede all the written worde of God, and more then all: for they alſo beleeue the bookes Apocryphal, which antiquitie for manie hundred yeares hath excluded from the canon: yea they beleeue vnwritten traditions receiued (as they ſay) from councills, the writings of the Fathers, and the determinations of the Church: making them alſo of equal credit with the written word of God, giuen by inſpiration of the ſpirit. Now wee for our parts deſpiſe not the Apocrypha, as namely the bookes of the Machabees, Eccleſiaſticus, & the reſt, but wee reuerence them in all conuenient manner, preferring them before any other bookes of men, in that they haue beene approoued by an vniuerſall conſent of the Church: yet we thinke them not meete to bee receiued into the Canon of holy ſcripture, and therefore not to be beleeued, but as they are conſenting with the written word. And for this our doing, we haue direction from Athanaſius, Origen, Hierome, and the Councell of Laodicea. As for the vnwritten Traditions, they come not within the compaſſe of our faith, neither can they: becauſe they come vnto vs by the hands of men, that may deceiue & be deceiued. And wee hold and beleeue, that the right Canon of the bookes of the old and newe Teſtament, containes in it ſufficient direction for the Church of God to life euerlaſting, both for faith and manners. Here then is the point of differẽce, that they make the obiect of faith larger thẽ it ſhold be, or cã be: & we keep our ſelues to the written word; beleeuing nothing to ſaluation out of it.

In the ſecond concluſion, touching ſaluation by Chriſt alone, there is a manifeſt deceit: becauſe they craftily include and couch their owne workes vnder the name of Chriſt. For (ſay they) workes done by men regenerate, are not there owne, but Chriſts in them; & as they are the workes of Chriſt; they ſaue, and no otherwiſe. But we for our parts looke to bee ſaued onelie by ſuch workes as Chriſt himſelfe did in his owne perſon: and not by any worke at all done by him in vs. For all workes done, are in the matter of iuſtification and ſaluation, oppoſed to the grace of Chriſt: Rom. 11. 6. Election is of grace, not of workes: if it be of workes, it is no more of grace. Againe whereas they teach that wee are ſaued by the workes of Chriſt, which he worketh in vs, & maketh vs to worke; it is flat againſt the word. For Paul ſaith, We are not ſaued by ſuch workes as God hath ordained that men regenerate ſhould walke in Eph. 2. 10. And he ſaith further, that he counted all thinges euen after his converſion loſſe vnto him, that hee might be found in Chriſt, not hauing his owne righteouſneſſe which is of the lawe. Philip. 3. 8. Againe, Heb. 1. 3. Chriſt waſhed away our ſinnes by himſelfe: which laſt last words exclude the merit of all workes done by Christ within man. Thus indeed the papists ouerturn all that which in word they seeme to hold touching their iustification and saluation. We confesse with thē that good workes in vs are the workes of Christ: yet are they not Christs alone, but ours also, in that they proceed from Christ by the minde and wil of man: as water from the fountaine by the channell. And looke as the channell defiled, defiles the water, that is without defilement in the fountain; euen so the mind and will of man defiled by the remnants of sinn, defile the works, which as they come from Christ, are vndefiled. Hence it is that the workes of grace, which we do by Christ, or Christ in vs, are defectiue: and must be seuered from Christ in the act of iustification, or saluation.

The third conclusion is touching the imputation of Christs obedience; which some of the most learned among them acknowledge, and the difference betweene vs stands on this manner. They hold that Christs obediēce is imputed only to make satisfaction for sinne, and not to iustifie vs before God. We hold & beleeue that the obedience of Christ is imputed to vs euen for our righteousnesse before God. Paul saith, 1. Cor, 1, 30. Christ is made vnto vs of God, wisdome, righteousnes, sanctification, and redemption. Hence I reason thus. If Christ bee both our sanctification, and our righteousnes; then he is not onely vnto vs inherent righteousnesse, but also righteousnes imputed. But he is not onely our sanctification (which the Papists themselues expound of inherent or habituall righteousnesse) but also our righteousnes: for thus by Paul are they distinguished. Therefore hee is vnto vs both inherent and imputed righteousnesse. And verie reason teacheth vs thus much. For in the ende of the World at the barre of Gods iudgement, we must bring some kinde of righteousnes for our iustificatiō, that may stand in the rigour of the lawe according to which we are to be iudged. But our inherent righteousnes is imperfect and stained with manifold defects, and shal bee as long as we liue in this world, as experience tels vs: and consequently it is not sutable to the iustice of the lawe: and if wee goe out of our selues we shal finde noe righteousnes seruing for our turnes eyther in mē or Angels, that may or can procure our absolution before God and acceptation to life euerlasting. Wee must therefore haue recourse to the person of Christ, and his obedience imputed vnto vs must serue not onely to bee a satisfaction to God for al our sinnes, but also for our perfect iustification, in that GOD is content to accept of it for our righteousnes, as if it were inherent in vs or performed by vs.

Touching the fourth conclusion, they holde it the safest and surest course to put their trust and confidence in the mercie of God alone for their saluation: yet they condescend, that men may also [a] put their confidence in the merit of their owne workes, and in the merits also of other men, so it be in sobriety. But this doctrine quite marres the conclusion: because by teaching that men are to put confidēce in the creature, they ouerturne all confidence in the Creatour. For in the verie first commandement wee are taught to make choice of the true god for our god, which thing we do when we giue to God our harts: and we giue our hearts to God, when we put our whole cōfidence in him for the saluation of our soules. Now then to put confidence in men, or in workes, is to make them our Gods. The true and auncient forme of making confession was on this manner: I beleeue in God the father, in Iesus Christ, and in the holy Ghost, without mention making of any confidence in workes or creatures: the auncient Church neuer knew any such confession or confidence. Cyprian saith, Hee beleeueth not in God, who putteth not affiance concerning his saluation in God alone. And indeed the Papists themselues when death comes, forsake the confidence of their merits, and fly to the meere mercie of God in Christ. And for a confirmatiō of this I alleadge the testimonie of one Vlinbergius of Colen, who writeth thus. There was a booke founde in the vestry of a certaine parish of Colen, written in the dutch tongue in the yeare of our Lord 1475. which the priests vsed in visiting of the sicke. And in it these questions be found. (a) Doest thou beleeue that thou canst not bee saued but by the death of Christ? The sicke person answered, Yea, Then it is said vnto him, Go too then, whole breath remaines in thee, put thy confidence in this death alone: haue affiance in nothing else: commit thy selfe wholly to this death: with it alone couer thy selfe: dine thy selfe in euery part into this death: in euery part pearse thy selfe with it: infold thy selfe in this death. And if the Lord will iudge thee, say: Lorde, I put the the death of our Lord Iesus Christ betweene me and thy iudgement, and by no other meanes I contend with thee. And if hee shall say vnto thee, that thou art a sinner, saie: Lord, the death of my Lord Iesus Christ, I put betweene thee and my sinnes. If hee shall say vnto thee, that thou hast deserued damnation, say: Lord, I oppose the death of our Lord Iesus Christ betweene thee and my euill merits, and I offer his merit for the merit which I should haue, and haue not. If hee shall say, that he is angrie with thee, say: Lord, I oppose the death of our Lord Iesus Christ betweene me and thine anger. Here wee see, what Papists dooe and haue done in the time of death. And that which they hold and practise, whē they are dying; they should hold & practise euery day while they are liuing.

In the last conclusion they teach, that we must not onely beleeue in generall but also applie vnto our selues, the promises of life euerlasting. But they differ from vs in the verie manner of applying. They teach that the promise is to be applied, not by faith assuring vs of our owne saluation: but onely by hope, in likelihood coniecturall. Wee hold that we are bound in dutie to apply the promise of life by fayth without making doubt thereof, and by hope to continue the certentie after the apprehension made by faith. VVe doe not teach that all and euery man liuing within the precincts of the church, professing the name of Christ, is certen of his saluation, and that by faith: but that hee ought so to be, and must indeauour to attaine thereto. And here is a great point in the misterie of iniquitie to be considered: for by this vncertен application of the promise of saluation, and this wauering hope, they ouerturne halfe the doctrine of the Gospell. For it inioynes two things: first to beleeue the promises thereof to be true in themselues: secondly to beleeue, and by faith to applie them vnto our selues. And this latter part, without which the former is void of comfort, is quite ouerturned. The reasons which they alleadge against our doctrine, I haue answeared before: now therfore I let them passe.

To conclude, though in coloured tearmes they seeme to agree with vs in doctrine concerning faith; yet indeede they denie and abolish the substance thereof, namely, the particular and certen application of Christ crucified and his benefits, vnto our selues. Againe they faile, in that they cut off the principall dutie and office of true sauing faith, which is to apprehend and to apply the blessing promised.

The 21. point. Of Repentance.

Our consent.

Conclus. I. That, repentance is the conuersion of a sinner. There is a twofold conuersion, passiue, and actiue: passiue, is an action of God whereby he conuerteth man beeing as yet vnconuerted. Actiue is an action whereby man beeing once turned of God, turnes himselfe: & of this latter must this conclusion bee vnderstood. For the first conuersion, considering it is a worke of God turning vs vnto himselfe, is not the repentance whereof the Scripture speaketh so oft, but it is called by the name of regeneration: and repentance, whereby we beeing first turned of God doe turne our selues and do good works, is the fruit thereof.

Conclus. II. That, repentance stands specially for practise, in contrition of hart, confession of mouth, and satisfaction in worke or deede. Touching contrition there be two kindes thereof: Legal, and Euangelical. Legal contrition is nothing but a remorse of conscience for sinne in regard of the wrath and iudgement of God, and it is no grace of God at all; nor any part, or cause of repentance: but onely an occasion thereof, and that by the mercie of God: for of it selfe, it is the sting of the law and the very entrance into the pit of hell. Euangelical contrition is, when a repentant sinner is grieued for his sinnes, not so much for feare of hell, or any other punishment; as because hee hath offended and displeased so good and mercifull a GOD. This cōtrition is caused by the ministerie of the Gospel, and in the practise of repentance it is alwaies necessarie, and goes before as the beginning thereof. Secondly we hold, and maintaine that confession is to bee made, and that in sundrie respects; first to God, both publikely in the congregation, and also priuately in our secret and priuate prayers. Secondly to the Church, when any person hath openly offended the congregation by any crime, and is therefore excommunicate. Thirdly to our priuate neighbour, when we haue vpon any occasion offended and wronged him. Math. 5. 23. If thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there remembrest that thy brother hath ought against thee, go first and be reconci- led

led to him: now reconciliation presupposeth confession. Lastly in all true repentance, wee hold and acknowledge there must be satisfaction made; first to GOD, and that is when we intreat him in our supplications to accept the death and passion of Christ, as a full, perfect, and sufficient satisfaction for all our sinnes. Secondly it is to be made vnto the Church, after excommunication for publike offences; and it standes in duties of humiliation that fitly serue to testifie the truth of our repētance. Thirdly satisfaction is to bee made to our neighbour: because if hee be wronged, he must haue recompence and restitution made, Luk, 19, 8. and there repētance may iustly be suspected, where no satisfaction is made if it lie in our power.

Conclus. III. That, in repentance wee are to bring outward fruits worthy amēdment of life: for repentance it selfe is in the heart, and therefore must be testified in all manner of good workes: whereof the principall is, to indeauour day by day, by Gods grace to leaue and renounce all and euery sinne, and in all thinges to doe the will of God. And here let it bee remembred that we are not patrons of licentiousnesse and enemies of good workes. For though wee exclude them from the act of our iustification and saluation: yet wee maintaine a profitable and necessarie vse of them in the life of euery Christian man. This vse is threefold, in respect of God, of man, of our selues. Workes are to be done in respect of God, that his commandements may be obeied, 1, Ioh, 5, 12. that his wil may be done, 1, Thes. 4, 3. that we may shew our selues to be obedient children to God our Father, 1, Pet. 1, 14. that we may shew our selues thankful for our redemption by Christ, Tit, 2, 14. that we might not grieue the spirit of God, Eph, 4. 30. but walke according to the same, Gal, 5, 22. that God by our good workes may bee glorified, Mat. 5, 16. that we may be good followers of God, Eph, 5, 1 Againe, works are to be done in regard of men: that our neighbour may bee helped in worldly things, Luk 6, 38 that hee may be won by our example to godlines, 1. Pet, 3, 14. that wee may preuent in our selues the giuing of any offence, 1, Cor, 10, 32 that by doing good, we may stoppe the mouthes of our aduersaries. Thirdly and lastly, they haue vse in respect of our selues: that we may shew our selues to be new creatures, 2, Cor, 5, 17. that we may walk as the children of light, Eph. 5. 8. that wee may haue some assurance of our faith & of our saluation, 2. Pet. 1. 8. 10. that wee maye discerne dead and counterfait faith, from true faith, Iam. 2. 17. that faith and the giftes of God may be exercised and continued vnto the ende, 2. Tim. 1. 6. that the punishments of sinne both temporall and eternall may bee preuented, Psal. 89. 32. that the rewarde may bee obtained, which God freely in mercie hath promised to men for their good works. Gal. 6. 9.

The difference.

VVee dissent not from the Church of Rome in the doctrine of repentance it selfe, but in the damnable abuses thereof; which are of two sorts, generall and speciall. Generall are those which concerne repentance wholly considered; and they are these. The first is, that they place the beginning of repentance partly in thēselues, and partly in the holy Ghost, or, in the power of their naturall freewill beeing helped by the holy Ghost: whereas Paul indeede ascribes this worke, wholly vnto God, 2. Tim. 2. 15. Prooouing if God at any time shall giue them repentance. And men that are not weake but dead in trespasses & sinnes, cānot doe any thing that may further the cōuersion, though they be helped neuer so much: no more then dead men in their graues, can rise from thence. The second abuse is, that they take penance, or rather repentance for that publike discipline and order of correction that was vsed against notorious offenders in the open congregation. For the Scripture settes downe but one repentance, and that common to all men without exception: and to be practised in euery part of our liues for the necessarie mortification of sinne: whereas open Ecclesiasticall correction pertained not to all and euerie man within the compasse of the Church, but to them alone that gaue any open offence. The third abuse is, that they make repentance to be not onely a vertue, but also a sacrament: whereas for the space of a thousand yeares after Christ, and vpward, it was not reckoned among the sacraments: yea it seemes that Lumbard was one of the first that called it a sacrament: and the schoolmen after him disputed of the matter and forme of this sacrament; not able anie of them certenlie to define, what should be the outward element. The fourth abuse is touching the effect and efficacie of repentance: for they make it a meritorious cause of of remission of sinnes, and of life everlasting, flat against the worde of GOD. Paul saith notably, Rom. 4. 24. Wee are iustified freelie by his grace through the redemption which is in Christ Iesus, whom God hath set to be a reconciliation by faith in his blood. In these words these formes of speach, redemption in Christ, reconciliation in his blood, by faith freely by grace, must be obserued and considered: for they shew plainely that no part of satisfaction or redemption is wrought in vs, or by vs; but put of vs onely in the person of Christ. And therefore wee esteeme of repentance not onely as a fruit of faith and the effect, or efficacie of it, to obtaine remission of our sinnes, and our reconciliation before God. It will be said that remission of sinnes and life everlasting, are promised to repentance. Ans. It is not to the worke of repentance, but to the person which repenteth and that not for his owne merits or worke of repentance, but for the merits of Christ, which he applieth to himselfe by faith. And thus are wee to vnderstand the promises of the Gospel, in which workes are mentioned, presupposing alwaies in them the reconciliation of the person with God, to whome the promise is made. Thus we see wherefore we dissent from the Romane Church touching the doctrine of repentance.

Special abuses doe conterne Contrition, Confession, and Satisfaction. The first abuse concerning contrition is, that they teach it must bee sufficient and perfect. They vse now to helpe the matter by a distinction: saying, that the sorrow in contrition must be in the highest degree in respect of (a) value and estimation. Yet the opinion of (b) Adrian was otherwise, that in true repentance a man should bee grieued according to all his indeauour. And the Romane Catechisme saith as much, that the sorrow conceiued of our sinnes must bee so great, that none can bee conceiued to be greater: that we must be contrite in the same manner we loue God, and that is with all our heart and strength, in a most vehement sorrow: and that the hatred of sinn must bee not onelie the greatest, but also most vehement and perfect, so as it may exclude all sloth and slacknes. Indeed afterward it followes, that true contrition may be effectuall though it be imperfect: but how can this stand, if they will not only commend but also prescribe and auouch, that contrition must be most perfect and vehement? We therefore onely teach, that GOD requires not so much the measure, as the truth of anie grace: and that it is a degree of vnfained contrition to be grieued, because we cannot be grieued for our sinnes as we should. The second abuse is, that they ascribe to their contrition the merit of congruitie. But this cannot stand with the all-sufficient merit of Christ. And an ancient counsel sayth, God requires into the first of all the faith and loue of himselfe, no merits going before, that we may faithfully require the sacrament of baptisme, and after baptisme doe that thing that pleaseth him. And wee for our parts hold, that God requires contrition at our hands, not to merit remission of sinnes; but that wee may acknowledge our owne vnworthines and be humbled in the sight of God, and distrust all our owne merits: and further, that we may make the more account of the benefits of Christ, whereby wee are receiued into the fauour of God: lastly, that we might more carefully auoid all sinnes in time to come, whereby so many paines and terrours of conscience are procured. And we acknowledge no contrition at all to be meritorious, saue that of Christ: whereby he was broken for our iniquities. The third abuse is, that they make imperfect contrition or attrition arising of the feare of hell, to be good and profitable: and to it they apply the saying of the Prophet, The feare of God is the beginning of wisdome. But seruile feare of it selfe is the fruit of the law, which is the ministerie of death and condemnation: and consequently is in the way to eternall destruction, if God leaue men to themselues: and if it turne to the good of anie, it is only by accident; because God in mercie makes it to be an occasion going before, of grace to bee giuen: otherwise remorse of conscience for sinne is no beginning of repentance, or the restrainement of anie sinne: but rather is and that properly the beginning of vnspeakeable horrours of conscience, and euerlasting death, vnlesse God shewe mercie. And yet this feare of punishment, if it be tempered and delaied with other graces and gifts of God in holy men, it is not vnprofitable; in whome there is not onely a sorrowe for punishment, but also and that much more for the offence. And such a kind of feare, or sorrow is commanded. Malac. 1, 6. If I bee a father, where is my feare? If I be a Lord, where is my feare? And Chrysostom sayth, that the feare of hell in the heart of a iust man, is a strong man armed against the sinnes & rob- bers to driue them from the house. And Ambrose saith, that Martyrs in the time of their sufferings, confirmed themselues against the cruelties of persecuters by setting the feare of hell before their eyes.

Abuses touching Confession are these. The first is, that they vse a forme of confession of their sinnes vnto God, vttered in an vnknowne language; beeing therefore foolish and ridiculous, withall requiring the aide and intercession of dead men and such as bee absent: whereas, there is but one Mediatour betweene God and man the man Iesus Christ. The second is, that they in practise make confession of their sinnes not onely to God but to the Saintes departed: in that they make praier to them in which they aske their intercession for the pardon of their sinnes: and this is, not onely to match them with God in seeing and knowing the heart, but also to giue a part of his diuine worship vnto them. The third and principall abuse is, that they haue corrupted Canonicall confession by turning it into priuate auricular confession: binding all men in conscience by a law made, to confesse al their mortall sinnes, with all circumstances that change the kinde of the sinne (as farre as possibly they can remember) once euerie yeare at the least, and that to a priest, vnlesse it bee in the case of extreame necessitie. But in the word of God there is no warrant for this confession, nor in the writings of Orthodox antiquitie for the space of many hundred yeares after Christ, as one of their owne side anoucheth. And the commandement of the holie Ghost, Confesse one to another, and praie one for another, Iames. 5. 17. bindes as well the priest to make confession vnto vs, as any of vs to the priest. And whereas it is said, Matth. 3. that many were baptized confessing their sinnes: and Act. 19. 18. many that beleeued came and confessed and shewed their workes, the confession was voluntarie & not constrained: it was also generall and not particular of all and euerie sinne, with the necessarie circumstances thereof. And in this libertie of confession the Church remained 1200. yeares till the Council of Lateran; in which the lawe of auricular confession was first inacted: beeing a notable inuention seruing to discouer the secrets of men, and to inrich that couetous and ambitious See, with the reuenewes of the world. It was not knowne to Augustine when he said, What haue I to doe with men that they should heare my confessions, as though they should heale my diseases? nor to Chrysostome, when he saith, I doe not compel thee to confesse thy sinnes to others. And, If thou be ashamed to confesse them to any man, because thou hast sinned, say them daily in thine owne minde. I doe not bid thee confesse them to thy fellow seruant, that he should mocke thee: confesse them to God that cureth them.

Confes. L. 10. c. 3.

De Dei nat. hom. tom. 5.

hom. 2. in Psal. 50.

The abuse of Satisfaction is, that they haue turned canonicall satisfaction, which was made to the congregation by open offendours, into a satisfaction of the iustice of God for the temporall punishment of their sinnes. Behold here a most horrible prophanation of the whole Gospel, and especially of the satisfaction of Christ, which of it selfe without anie supplie is sufficient euery way for the remission both of fault and punishment. But of this point I haue spoken before.

Hitherto I haue handled and prooued by induction of sundrie particulars, that we are to make a seperation from the present Church of Rome, in respect of the foundation and substance of true religion. Many more things might be added to this very purpose, but here I conclude this first point: adding onely this one caueat, that we make seperation from the Romane religion without hatred of the persons that are maintainers of it. Nay we ioyne in affection more with them, then they with vs a Deut. 13. 5 They die with vs not for their religion (although they deserue it) but for the treasons which they intend and enterprise: we are readie to doe the duties of loue vnto them inioyned vs in the word: wee reuerence the good gifts in many of them: we pray for them; wishing their repentance and eternall saluation.

Now I meane to proceede, and to touch briefly other pointes of doctrine contained in this portion of Scripture, which I haue nowe in hand. In the second place therefore out of this commandement, Goe out of her my people, I gather that the true Church of God is and hath beene in the present Romane Church, as corne in the heape of chaffe. Though Poperie raigned and ouerspread the face of the earth for many hundred yeares; yet in the middest thereof, God reserued a people vnto himselfe, that truly worshipped him: and to this effect the holie Ghost saith, that the Dragon, which is the deuill, caused the woman,

woman, that is, the Church to flie into the wilderneſſe, where he ſo ſought to deſtroy her but could not, and ſhee ſtill retaines a remnant of her ſeede which kept the commandements of God, and haue the teſtimony of Ieſus Chriſt. Nowe this which I ſpeake of the Church of Rome, cannot be ſaide in like manner of the cõgregations of Turks and other infidels, that the hidden Church of GOD is preſerued among them; becauſe there is no meanes of ſaluation at all: whereas the Church of Rome hath the Scriptures, though in a ſtrange language; and baptiſme, for the outwarde forme: which helpes God in all ages preſerued, that his elect might bee gathered out of the middeſt of Babylon. This ſerues to ſtoppe the mouthes of Papiſts, which demaund of vs, where our Church was foureſcore yeares agoe, before the dayes of Luther: whereby they would inſinuate to the world, that our Church and religion is greene or newe: but they are anſwered out of this verie text that our Church hath euer beene ſince the dayes of the Apoſtles, and that in the verie middeſt of the papacy. It hath been alwaies a Church, and did not firſt begin to bee in Luthers time: but onely then began to ſhewe it ſelfe, as hauing beene hid by an vniuerſall Apoſtaſie, for many hundred yeares together. Againe we haue here occaſion to conſider the dealing of God with his own Church and people. Hee will not haue them for externall ſocietie to bee mixed with their enemies, and that for ſpeciall purpoſe: namelie to exerciſe the humilitie and patience of his few ſeruants. Whē Elias ſaw idoletrie ſpread ouer all Iſraell, hee went apart into the wilderneſſe, and in griefe deſired to die. And Dauid cried out: Woe is me that I am conſtrained to dwell in Meſheck, and to haue my habitation in the tents of Kedar, Pſ. 120. 5. And iuſt Lot muſt haue his righteous ſoule vexed with ſeeing and hearing the abominations of Sodom.

Rev. 12, 17

Thirdly by this commandement wee are taught what opinion to carrie of the preſent Church of Rome. It is often demanded, whether it bee a Church or no; and the anſwer may hence bee formed on this manner. If by this Church be vnderſtood a ſtate or regiment of the people, whereof the Pope is head, and the members are all ſuch as doe ackowledge him to bee their head, and dooe beleeue the doctrine eſtabliſhed in the councill of Trent; we take it to bee no Church of God, Becauſe Babylon, which I haue prooued to bee the Church of Rome, is here oppoſed to the Church or people of GOD: and becauſe wee are commanded to come out of it: whereas wee maye not wholly forſake any people till they forſake Chriſt. Some will happilie ſay, the Church of Rome hath the Scriptures & the Sacramentes of baptiſme. I anſwer firſt of all, they haue indede the bookes of holy Scripture among them: but by the reſt of their doctrine they ouerthrow the true ſence thereof in the foundation, as I haue prooued before. And though they haue the outwarde forme of baptiſme, yet they ouerturne the inwarde baptiſme, which is the ſubſtance of al, ſtanding in the iuſtification and ſanctification of a ſinner. Again, I anſwer, that they haue the word & baptiſme; not for themſelues, but for the true Church of God among them: like as the lanterne holdeth the candle, not for it ſelfe but for others. Secondly, it may bee and is alleadged, that if the Pope bee Antichriſt, hee then ſittes in the temple, that is, the Church of GOD, and by this meanes the Romane Church ſhall be the true church. Anſw. He ſittes in the temple of God, but marke further howe: as God, that is; not as a member but as a manifeſt vſurper: like as the theefe ſittes in the true mans houſe. For the popiſh church and Gods church are mingled like chaffe and corne in one heape: and the Church of Rome maye bee ſayde to bee in the Church of God, and the Church of God in the Church of Rome, as we ſay the wheat is among the chaffe, and the chaffe in the wheat. Againe hee is ſaide to ſitte in the Temple of GOD; becauſe the Romane Church, though falſly, takes vnto it ſelfe the title of the true Catholike church. Some goe about to delay and qualifie the matter, by comparing this church to a man lying ſicke full of ſoares, hauing alſo his throat cut, yet ſo as bodie and ſoule are ioyned together, and life is remaining ſtill. But all things well conſidered, it is rather like a dead carkaſſe, and is voide of all ſpirituall life; as the popiſh errours in the foundation doe manifeſt. Indeede a knowne harlot may afterward remaine a wife and be ſo tearmed; yet after the bill of diuorcement is giuen, ſhee ceaſeth to be a wife, though ſhe can ſhew her mariage ring: now the church hath receiued the bill of her diuorcement in the written Word, namely, 2 Theſſ. 2. & Reu.

Furthermore in this commandement we may see a liuely portraiture of the state of all mankind. Here we see two sortes of men: some are pertaining to Babylon, a people rūning on to their destructiō: some againe are a people of God seuered from Babylon, and reserued to life euerlasting. If any aske the cause of this distinction; I answer, it is the very will of God vouchsafing mercie to some and forsaking others by withdrawing his mercy from them, for the better declaration of his iustice. Thus saith the Lord, Rom. 11.4. I haue reserued seuen thousand that neuer bowed the knee to Baal: and the Prophet Esai saith, Vnles the Lord had reserued a remnant, we had beene as Sodome and Gomorrha, By this distinction we are taught aboue all thinges to seeke to be of the number of Gods people, and to labour for assurance of this in our owne consciences. For if al should be saued, lesse care would suffice: but this mercie is not common to all: and therefore the more to be thought vpon.

Lastly Here I note the speciall care that God hath ouer his owne children. He first giueth them warning to depart, before he begin co execute his iudgement vpon his enemies, with whome they liue: that they might not bee partakers of their sinnes or punishments. Thus before God would punish Hierusalem, an angel is sent to marke them in the forehead that mourned for the abhominations of the people. And in the destruction of the first borne of Egypt the angell passed ouer the houses of the Iewes, that had their posts sprinkled with the blood of the paschall lambe: and this passing ouer betokeneth safetie and preseruation in the common destruction to those that haue their heartes sprinkled with the blood of Christ. This blessing of protection should mooue vs all, to become true and hearty seruantes of GOD. Men vsually become members of those societies and corporations, where they may inioye many freedomes and priuiledges. Well, behold: in the societie of the Saints of God, which is the true Church, there is the freedome from danger in all common destructions and from eternall vengeance at the last day. When Hester had procured safetie for the Iewes, and libertie to reuenge themselues vpon their enemies: it is saide, that many of the people of the land became Iewes. Euen so, considering Christ hath procured freedome from hell, death, and damnation for all that beleeue in him: we should labour aboue all things to become new creatures, ioyning our selues alwayes to the true Church of God.

Hitherto I haue spoken of the commādement: now followeth the reason therof drawne from the ende, that they bee not partakers of her sinnes: and that they receiue not of her plagues. Here I might stand long to shew what be the sinnes of the Church of Rome: but I will onely name the principall. The first sinne is Atheisme: and that I prooue on this manner. Atheisme is twofold, open, coloured. Open Atheisme is, when men both in word and deed deny God and his word. Coloured Atheisme is not so manifest: and it hath two degrees. The first is, when men acknowledge God the creatour and gouernour of heauen & earth, and yet deny the father, sonne and holy Ghost. Thus the Ephesians before they receiue the gospel, are said to be without God whome in their naturall iudgement they acknowleged: becausse they denied Christ and consequently worshipped an idol of their owne braine, in that they worshipped God out of Christ. And in this respect though the Samaritans worshipped the GOD of Abraham, yet our Sauiour Christ saith, they worshipped they knew not what. And the Psalmist saith of all the gentiles that their Gods are Idols. In this degree of Atheisme are placed Turkes and Iewes at this daie: the Anti-Trinitaries, and Arians, and all that conceiue and worship God out of the Trinitie. The 2. degree is, when men doe rightly acknowledge the vnitie of the godhead in the Trinitie of persons: yet so as by other necessarie consequents partly of their doctrine, and partly of the seruice of God they ouerturne that which they haue well maintained. And thus I say, that the very religion of the church of Rome is a kinde of Atheisme. For where as it makes the merit of the works of men to concur with the grace of God, it ouerthrowes the grace of God. Rom. 11. In word they acknowledge the infinite iustice, & mercie of God but by consequent both are denied. How can that be infinite iustice, which may any way be appeased by humane satisfaction? And howe shall Gods mercie bee infinite, when we by our satisfactions must adde a supply to the satisfaction of Christ? Again, He that hath not the sonne, hath not the Father; & he that hath neither father nor son, denies denies God. Now the preſent Romane religion hath not the Sonne, that is, Ieſus Chriſt, God and man, the Mediatour of mankind: but hath transformed him into a fained Chriſt. And I ſhew it thus. For one Ieſus Chriſt, in all things like vnto vs in his Humanitie, ſinne onely excepted; they haue framed a Chriſt, to whome they aſcribed two kinds of exiſting: one naturall, whereby hee is viſible, touchable, and circumſcribed in heauen: the other not onely aboue, but alſo againſt nature; by which, he is ſubſtantially according to his fleſh in the handes of euerie prieſt, in euerie hoſt, and in the mouth of euerie communicant, inuiſible, vntouchable, vncircumſcribed. And thus in effect they aboliſh his manhood. Yea they diſgrade him of his offices. For one Ieſus Chriſt, the onely king, lawgiuer, and head of the Church, they ioyne vnto him the Pope, not onely as a Vicar but alſo as a fellow: in that they giue vnto him power to make lawes binding conſcience, to reſolue and determine vnfallibly the ſenſe of holie Scripture, properly to pardon ſinne both in reſpect of fault and temporall puniſhment, to haue authority ouer the whole earth and a part of hell: to depoſe Kings, to whome vnder Chriſt euery ſoule is to be ſubiect, to abſolue ſubiects from the oath of allegeance, &c. For one Ieſus Chriſt the onely reall prieſt of the newe teſtament, they ioyne many ſecondarie prieſts vnto him, which offer Chriſt daily in the maſſe for the ſinnes of the quicke, and the dead. For one Ieſus Chriſt the al-ſufficient Mediatour of interceſſion, they haue added many fellowes vnto him to make requeſt for vs, namelie as many Saints as bee in the Popes kalender. Laſtly, for the onely merits of Chriſt, in whome alone the Father is well pleaſed, they haue deuiſed a Treaſurie of the Church, containing beſide the merits of Chriſt, the ouerplus of the merits of Saints to be diſpenſed to men, at the diſcretion of the Pope. And thus wee ſee, that Chriſt, and conſequently God himſelf to be worſhipped in Chriſt, is transformed into a phantaſie or idol of mans conceit. Againe there is alwaies a proportion betweene the worſhip of God, and our perſwaſion of him: and men in giuing vnto God any worſhip, haue reſpect to his nature, that both may be ſutable, and he well pleaſed. Let vs then ſee what manner of worſhippe the Romane religion affoardeth. It is for the greateſt part meere wil-worſhip, without any allowance or commandement from God, as Durande in his Rationale in effect acknowledgeth. It is a carnall ſeruice ſtanding of innumerable bodilie rites and ceremonies borrowed partly from the Iewes, and partly from the heathen: it is deuided betweene God and ſome of his creatures; in that they are worſhipped both with one kinde of worſhip: let them paint it as they can. Thus then, if by their manner of worſhipping of God, wee may iugde howe they conceiue of him, as we maye; they haue plainely turned the true God into a phantaſie of their owne. For God is no otherwiſe to be conceiued, then he hath reuealed himſelfe in his creatures and word, and ſpecially in Chriſt; who is the ingraue image of the perſon of the Father.

The ſecond ſinne is idolatrie, and that as groſſe as was euer among the heathen. And it is to bee ſeene in two thinges Firſt, that they worſhipp the Saints with religious worſhipp, which without exception is proper to God. Yea they transforme ſome of the into deteſtable idols making them in truth mediatours of redemption, ſpecially the virgin Marie, whome they call a Ladie, a Goddeſſe, a queene, whome (a) Chriſt her ſonne obeyeth in heauen, a mediatreſſe: life, hope, the medicine of the diſeaſed: and they pray vnto her thus, prepare thou glorie for vs: defend vs from our enemies, & in the houre of death receiue vs, looſe the bonds of the guiltie, bring light to the blind, driue away all deuills. Shew thy ſelfe to be a mother: Let him receiue the prayers. Againe, their idolatrie is manifeſt, in that they worſhipp God in, at, before images: hauing no commandement ſo to doe, but the contrarie. They alleadge, that they vſe and worſhip images onely in a remembrance of GOD. But this is all one as if an vnchaſt wife ſhould receiue many louers into her houſe in the abſence of her husband: and beeing reproued, ſhould anſwer; that they were the friends of her husband, and that ſhe kept them only in remembrance of him. Thirdly, their Idolatrie exceedes the Idolatrie of the heathen, in that they worſhip a Breaden-god, or, Chriſt in and vnder the formes of bread and wine. And if Chriſt according to his humanitie bee abſent from the earth, as I haue prooued, the Popiſh hoſt is as abominable an idol as euer was.

(a) Bellarm. l. 1, de ſanct. cap. 16. Miſſali & Breuiario refor.

The third ſinne is the maintenance of Adulterie. And that is manifeſt: firſt of all, 13.11.12.&c.

Furthermore in this commandement we may see a liuely portraiture of the state of all mankind. denies God. Now the present Romane religion hath not the Sonne, that is, Iesus Christ, God and man, the Mediatour of mankind: but hath transformed him into a fained Christ. And I shew it thus. For one Iesus Christ, in all things like vnto vs in his Humanitie, sinne onely excepted; they haue framed a Christ, to whome they ascribed two kinds of existing: one naturall, whereby hee is visible, touchable, and circumscribed in heauen: the other not onely aboue, but also against nature; by which, he is substantially according to his flesh in the handes of euerie priest, in euerie host, and in the mouth of euerie communicant, inuisible, vntouchable, vncircumscribed. And thus in effect they abolish his manhood. Yea they disgrade him of his offices. For one Iesus Christ, the onely king, lawgiuer, and head of the Church, they ioyne vnto him the Pope, not onely as a Vicar but also as a fellow: in that they giue vnto him power to make lawes binding conscience, to resolue and determine vnfallibly the sense of holie Scripture, properly to pardon sinne both in respect of fault and temporall punishment, to haue authority ouer the whole earth and a part of hell: to depose Kings, to whome vnder Christ euery soule is to be subiect, to absolue subiects from the oath of allegeance, &c. For one Iesus Christ the onely reall priest of the newe testament, they ioyne many secondarie priests vnto him, which offer Christ daily in the masse for the sinnes of the quicke, and the dead. For one Iesus Christ the al-sufficient Mediatour of intercession, they haue added many fellowes vnto him to make request for vs, namelie as many Saints as bee in the Popes kalender. Lastly, for the onely merits of Christ, in whome alone the Father is well pleased, they haue deuised a Treasurie of the Church, containing beside the merits of Christ, the ouerplus of the merits of Saints to be dispensed to men, at the discretion of the Pope. And thus wee see, that Christ, and consequently God himself to be worshipped in Christ, is transformed into a phantasie or idol of mans conceit. Againe there is alwaies a proportion betweene the worship of God, and our perswasion of him: and men in giuing vnto God any worship, haue respect to his nature, that both may be sutable, and he well pleased. Let vs then see what manner of worshippe the Romane religion affoardeth. It is for the greatest part meere wil-worship, without any allowance or commandement from God, as Durande in his Rationale in effect acknowledgeth. It is a carnall seruice standing of innumerable bodilie rites and ceremonies borrowed partly from the Iewes, and partly from the heathen: it is deuided betweene God and some of his creatures; in that they are worshipped both with one kinde of worship: let them paint it as they can. Thus then, if by their manner of worshipping of God, wee may iugde howe they conceiue of him, as we maye; they haue plainely turned the true God into a phantasie of their owne. For God is no otherwise to be conceiued, then he hath reuealed himselfe in his creatures and word, and specially in Christ; who is the ingraue image of the person of the Father.

Yea they transforme some of the into detestable idols making them in truth mediatours of redemption, specially the virgin Marie, whome they call a Ladie, a Goddesse, a queene, whome (a) Christ her sonne obeyeth in heauen, a mediatresse: or life, hope, the medicine of the diseased: and they pray vnto her thus, prepare thou glorie for vs: defend vs from our enemies, & in the houre of death receiue vs, loose the bonds of the guiltie, bring light to the blind, driue away all deuills. Shew thy selfe to be a mother: Let him receiue the prayers. Againe, their idolatrie is manifest, in that they worshipp God in, at, before images: hauing no commandement so to doe, but the contrarie. They alleadge, that they vse and worship images onely in a remembrance of GOD. But this is all one as if an vnchast wife should receiue many louers into her house in the absence of her husband: and beeing reproued, should answer; that they were the friends of her husband, and that she kept them only in remembrance of him. Thirdly, their Idolatrie exceedes the Idolatrie of the heathen, in that they worship a Breaden-god, or, Christ in and vnder the formes of bread and wine. And if Christ according to his humanitie bee absent from the earth, as I haue prooued, the Popish host is as abominable an idol as euer was.

(a) Bellarm. l. 1. de sanct. cap. 16. Missali & Breuiario reform.

The third sinne is the maintenance of Adulterie. And that is manifest: first of all, all, in the toleration of the stewes flatt against the commandement of God, Deut. 23.17. There shall be no whore of the daughters of Israell: neither shall there bee a whore-keeper of the sonnes of Israel. And this toleration is an occasion of vncleannes to many young Men and Women, that otherwise would abstaine from all such kind of filthines. And what an abomination is this when brother and brother, father & sonne nephew and vncle, shall come to one and the same harlot, one before or after the other? Secondly, their lawe beyond the fourth degree allows the marriage of anie persons: and by this meanes, they somes time allow incest. For in the vnequall collaterall line, the person next the common stock is a father or mother to the brothers or sisters posteritie, as for example:

Greg, c, 9, de consang.

Here Anne and Nicholas are brother and sister, and Anne is distant from Iames sixe degrees, he being her neece a farre off: and the marriage between them is allowed by the Church of Rome, they not beeing within the compasse of foure degrees: which neuertheless is against the lawe of nature. For Anne beeing the sister of Nicholas, is in stead of a mother to all that are begotten of Nicholas, euen to Iames, and Iames posteritie. Yet thus much I graunt, that the daughter of Anne may lawfully marrie Iames or Anthony, the case beeing altered, because they are not one to another as parents and children.

The fourth sinne is Magicke, sorcerie, or witchcraft, in the consecration of the hoste in which they make their breaden-god: in exorcismes ouer holy bread, holy water, and salt; in the casting out or driuing away of deuils, by the signe of the crosse, by solemne coniurations, by holy water, by the ringing of bels by lighting tapers, by reliques, and such like. For these things haue not their supposed force, either by creation, or by anie institution of God in his holy Word: and therefore if any thing be done by them, it is from the secret operation of the deuill himselfe.

The fifth sinne is, that in their doctrine they maintain periurie, because they teach with one consent, that a Papist examined may answere doubtfully against the direct intention of the examiner: framing another meaning vnto himselfe in the ambiguitie of his words. As for example when a man is asked, whether he sayd or heard Masse in such a place: though he did: they affirme he may say no: and sweare vnto it: because hee was not there to reueale it to the examiner: whereas in the verie law of nature, he that takes an oth should sweare according to the intention of him that hath power to minister an oath: and that in truth, iustice, iudgement. Let the cleare their doctrine from all defence of periury if they can.

The sixt sinne is, that they reuerse many of Gods commandemēts, making that no sinn which Gods Word makes a sinne, Thus they teach that if any man steale some little thing, that is thought not to cause anie notable hurt, it is no mortall sinne: that, the officious lie, and the lye made in sport are veniall sins: that, to pray for our enemies in particular is no precept but a counsel: and that none is bound to salute his enemie in the waie of friendship, flat against the rule of Christ, Mat. 5, 47. where the word Aspaseshe, signifieth all manner of dutie and courtesie: that, rash iudgement, though consent come thereto: is regularly but a veniall sinne: that it is lawfull otherwhiles to faine holines: that the painting of the face is ordinarily but a veniall sinne: that it is not lawful to for bidde begging: whereas the Lord forbad there should be anie beggar in Israel. Againe, they teach that men in their choller, when they are a chiding and sweare, wounds and bloud, are not indeede blasphemers.

Lastly their writers vse manifest lying, to iustifie their doctrine. They plead falsly that all antiquitie is on their side; whereas it is as much against them as for them: and as much for vs as them. 18 In the Counsell of Nice all saue 20. are forged.

19 Certaine Romane counsels vnder Sylvester are forged. For he was at this time dead, and therefore could not confirme thē Zozom. lib. 2.

20 To the sixt canon of the Counsell of Nice are patched these wordes, That the Romane church hath alwaies had the Supremacie.

21 Lastly I wil not omit that Pope Sozimus, Bonifacius, and Cœlestinus falsified the Canons of the Counsel of Nice, to proue appeales from al places to Rome; so as the Bisheppes of Africke were forced to send for the true copies of the said councel from Constantinople and the Churches of Greece.

I might here rehearse many other sinns which with the former call for vengeance vpon the Romane Church, but it shal suffice to haue named a fewe of the principall.

Nowe in this reason, our Sauiour Christ prescribes another maine duty to his own people: and that is, to be careful to eschew all the sinnes of the Church of Rome, that they maye withall escape her deserued plagues and punishments. And from this prescribed dutie I obserue two things The first is, that euerie good seruant of God, must carefully auoide contracts of marriage with professed Papists, that is, with such as hold the Pope for their head, and beleeue the doctrine of the Counsell of Trent. For in such matches men hardly keepe faith and good conscience, & hardly auoide communication with the sinnes of the Romane church. A further ground of this doctrine I thus propound. In gods word there is mentioned a double league betweene man and man, country & countrie. The first is the league of concord, when one kingdome bindes it selfe to liue in peace with another, for the maintenance of traffick without disturbance: and this kind of league may stand betweene Gods church and the enemies thereof. The second is the league of amitie: which is when men, people, or countries bind themselues to defend each other in all causes: and to make the warres of the one, the warres of the other; & this league may not bee made with those that be enemies of God. Iehosaphat, otherwise a good king, made this kind of league with Ahab: and is therfore reproued by the Prophet, saying, Wouldest thou help the wicked, and loue them that hate the Lorde? 2. Chro. 19. 2. Nowe the marriages of Protestants with Papists are priuate leagues of amitie, between person & person; & therfore not to be allowed. Againe Malac. 2. 11. Iudah hath defiled the holinesse of the Lorde which he loued, and hath married the daughters of a strange God: where is flatly cõdemned marriages made with the people of a false God. nowe the Papists by the consequents of their doctrine and religion, turne the true Iehoua into an idol of their owne braine, as I haue shewed, and the true Christ reuealed in the written word into a fained Christ made of bread. Yet if such a marriage be once made and finished it may not be dissolued. For such parties sinne not simply in that they marrie, but because they marrie not in the Lord, beeing of diuers religions. The fault is not in the substance of marriage, but in the manner of making it; & for this cause, the Apostle commands the beleeuing partie, not to forsake or refuse the vnbeleeuing partie, beeing a very infidel (which no Papist is) if he or shee will abide. 1 Cor. 7. 13.

The second thing is that euery seruant of God must take heed howe he trauels into such countries where Popish religion is stablished, least he partakes in the sinnes and punishments thereof. Indeede to goe vpon ambassage to any place, or to trauell for this ende, that we may performe the necessarie duties for our speciall or generall callings, is not vnlawfull: but to trauell out of the precincts of the Church onely for pleasures sake, and to see strange fashions, hath no warrant. And hence it is, that many men which goe forth in good order well minded come home with crased consciences. The best traueller of all is, he, that liuing at home or abroad can go out of himselfe, and depart from his owne sinnes and corruptions by true repentance.

FINIS.

An aduertiſement to all fauourers of the Romane religion ſhewing that the ſaid religion is againſt the Catholike principles and grounds of the CATECHISME.

GReat is the number of them that embrace the religion of the preſent Church of Rome; beeing deceiued by the glorious titles of Vniuerſalitie, Antiquitie, Succeſſion. And no doubt, though ſome bee wilfully blinded, yet manie deuoted this waie, neuer ſawe anie other trueth. Nowe of them and the reſt I deſire this fauour, that they will but weigh and ponder with themſelues this one thing, which I will nowe offer to their conſiderations, and that is, That the Romane religion nowe ſtabliſhed by the councel of Trent, is in the principall pointes thereof againſt the grounds of the Catechiſme, that haue beene agreed vpon euer ſince the dayes of the Apoſtles, by all Churches. Theſe grounds are foure; the firſt is the Apoſtles Creede: the ſecond is the decalogue or tenne commaundements; the third is the forme of prayer called the Lords prayer: the fourth is the inſtitution of the two ſacramentes, baptiſme and the Lords ſupper. 1, Cor, 11. 23.

That I may in ſome order manifeſt this which I ſay, I will beginne with the Symbole or Creede. And firſt of all it muſt be conſidered, that ſome of the principall doctrines beleeued in the church of Rome are, that the Pope or Biſhop of Rome is the vicar of Chriſt, and the head of the Catholike Church: that there is a fire of purgatorie after this life: that images of God and Saints are to be placed in Churches and worſhipped: that prayer is to be made to Saints departed & their interceſſion to be required: that there is a propitiatorie ſacrifice dayly offered in the maſſe for the ſinnes of the quicke and the dead. Theſe pointes are of that moment, that without them the Romane Religion cannot ſtand: and in the councell of Trent the curſe Anathema is pronounced vpon all ſuch as denie theſe or anie of them. And yet marke; the Apoſtles Creede which hath beene thought to containe all neceſſarie points in religion to be beleeued, and hath therefore been called the key and rule of faith; this Creed I ſay hath not anye of theſe pointes: nor the Expoſitions made thereof by the auntient Fathers, nor anye other Creede or confeſſion of faith made by any councell or church for the ſpace of many hundred yeares. This is a plaine proofe to any indifferent mā, that theſe be newe articles of faith neuer known in the Apoſtolike church: and that the fathers & councels could not find anie ſuch articles of faith in the books of the old and newe teſtament. Anſwer is made: that all theſe points of doctrine are beleeued under the article, I beleeue the Catholike Church, the meaning whereof, they will haue to bee this, I beleeue all things which the Catholike Church holdeth and teacheth to bee beleeued. If this be as they ſay, wee muſt needes beleeue in the Church: that is, put our confidence in the Church, for the manifeſtation & the certentie of all doctrines neceſſarie to ſaluation: and thus the eternall trueth of God the Creatour, ſhall depend on the determination of the creature & the written word of God in this reſpect is made vnſufficient; as though it had not plainly reuealed all points of doctrine pertaining to ſaluatiō. And the ancient churches haue been far ouerſeene, that did not propound the former pointes to be beleeued as articles of faith, but left thē to theſe latter times.

2. In this Creede, to beleeue in God, and to beleeue the Church, are diſtinguiſhed. To beleeue in, is pertaining to the Creatour, to beleeue, to the creature: as Ruffinus hath noted, when he ſaith, that by this prepoſition in, the Creatour is diſtinguiſhed from the creature, and things pertaining to God from things pertaining to men. And Auguſtine ſaith, It muſt be knowne that we muſt beleeue the Church, and not beleeue in the Church: becauſe the Church is not God, but the houſe of God. Hence it followes that we muſt not beleeue in the Saints, nor put our confidence in our workes, as the learned Papiſts teach. Therefore Euſebius ſaith, We ought of right to beleeue Peter and Paul, but to beleeue in Peter and Paul, that it, to giue to the ſeruants the honor of the Lord, we ought not. And Cyprian ſayth, He doth not beleeue in God which doth not place in him alone the truſt of his whole felicitie.

3. The article, conceiued by the holy ghoſt, is ouerturned by the tranſubſtantiation of bread and wine in the Maſſe, into the bodie die and blood of Christ. For here wee are taught to confesse the true and perpetuall incarnation of Christ, beginning in his conception, and neuer ending afterward: and we acknowledge the truth of his manhood, and that his bodie hath the essentiall properties of a true body, standing of flesh and bone hauing quantitie, figure, dimensions, namely length, breadth, thicknes: hauing part out of part, as head out of feet, & feet out of head, beeing also circumscribed, visible, touchable: in a worde, it hath all things in it, which by order of creation, belong to a bodie. It will be said, that the bodie of Christ may remaine a true bodie & yet be altered in respect of some qualities, as namely circumscription. But I say againe, that locall circumscription can no way be seuered from a bodie, it remaining a bodie. For to be circumscribed in place, is an essentiall propertie of euerie quantitie: and quantitie is the common essence of euerie bodie. And therefore a bodie in respect of his quantitie must needes be circumscribed in one place. This was the iudgement of Leo, when he said, The bodie of Christ is by no meanes out of the vrnuth of our bodie. And Augustine, when he saide Onely God in Christ so comes that hee doeth not depart: for returnes, that he doth not leaue vs: but man according to bodie is in place, and goes out of the same place, and when he shall come to another place, he is not in that place whence he comes. To helpe the matter, they vse to distinguish thus. Christs bodie in respect of the (a) whole essence thereof may be in many places; but not in respect of the whole quantitie, whereby it is only in one place but as I haue said, they speake contraries: for quantitie (by all learning) is the essence of a bodie, without which a bodie cannot be.

Epist, 70

Tract. 31 in Ioh.

a totalitate essentiæ, non totalitate quantitatis,

4. In the Creede we confesse that Christ is ascended into heauen, and there after his ascensiō sits at the right hand of his father, & that according to his manhood. Hence I conclude that Christs bodie is not really and locally in the Sacrament, and in euerie Host, which the priest consecrateth. This argument was good when Vigilius against Eutiches saide, When it (the flesh) was on earth, it was not in heauen: & because it is now in heauen, it is not on earth: and he addes afterward that this is the Catholike faith & confession. And it was good when Fulgentius said, According to his humane substance he was absent from earth, when hee was in heauen, and hee left the earth when hee ascended into heauen. And The same inseparable Christ, according to his whole manhood leauing the earth, locally ascended into heauen, and sits at the right hand, and according to the same whole manhood, hee is to come to iudgement. And it was good when Cyril saide, No man doubts but that when hee ascended into heauen, though he bee alwaies present by the power of his spirit, hee was absent in respect of the presence of his flesh. And it was good when Augustine saide, According to the flesh which the word assumed, he ascended into heauen, hee is not heere: there hee sits at the right hand of the father: and hee is here according to the presence of his Maiestie. And, Hee went as hee was man, and he abode as he was GOD: he went by that whereby hee was in one place; he aboade by that whereby hee was euerie where.

5. Againe in that wee beleeue the Catholike Church, it followes that the Catholike Church is inuisible: because things seene are not beleeued And the answer commonly vsed, that we beleeue the holines of the Church, will not serue the turne. For the words are plaine, and in them wee make confession that we beleeue not only the holinesse of the Church, but also the Church it selfe.

Lastly the articles, Remission of sinnes, Resurrection of the bodie, and Life euerlasting, containe a confession of speciall faith. For the meaning of them is thus much: I beleeue the remission of mine owne sinnes, and the resurrection of mine owne bodie to life euerlasting: and that by the iudgement of learned antiquitie. August. saith, If thou also beleeue that thou shalt rise againe and ascend into heauen (because thou art sure of so great a patrone) thou art certaine of so great a gift. And Make not Christ lesse, who brings thee to the kingdome of heauen, for remission of sinnes. Without this faith, if ante come to baptisme, hee shuts the gate of mercie against himselfe, And, Whosoeuer faithfully beleeueth, & holds this profession of his faith (in which all his sinnes are forgiuen him) let him prepare his will to the will of God, & not feare his passage by death. And, The whole Sacrament of baptisme stands in this that we beleeue the resurrection of the bodie & remission of sins to be giuen vs of God, And, He gaue these keies to the Church——, that whosoeuer in his church, should not beleeue his sinnes to bee forgiuen, they should not bee forgiuen vnto him: and whosoeuer beleeued, and turned from the abiding in the lappe of the said Church, at length shall bee healed by faith and amendment of life. And

That which thou haſt heard to bee fulfilled in the glorious reſurrectiō of Chriſt, beleeue that the verie ſame ſhall bee fulfilled in thee, in the laſt iudgement, and the reſurrection of thy fleſh, ſhall reſtore thee for all eternitie. For vnleſſe thou ſhalt beleeue that thou art to bee repaired by death, thou canſt not come to the reward of life eternal. And in auncient time the article of the reſurrection hath bin rehearſed on this manner, The reſurrection of this fleſh: and the laſt applied vnto it. To euerlaſting life. Hence then two maine opinions of the church of Rome are quite ouerthrown: one, that we cannot by ſpeciall faith bee certaine of the remiſſion of our ſinnes and the ſaluation of our ſoules: the other, that a man truely iuſtified may fall away and be damned. Nowe this cannot be, if the practiſe of the auncient Church bee good, which hath taught vs to beleeue euerlaſting life ioyntly with remiſſion of ſinnes.

Ruffin, in Symb, Aug. de Symb. l. 1 c. 6, ad Catech. & Enchir, c. 44.

To come to the Decalogue, firſt of all it is a rule in expounding the ſeuerall commandements, that where any vice is forbidden, there the cōtrary vertue is cōmanded, and all vertues of the ſame kind, with all their cauſes, occaſions, furtherances. This rule is graunted of all: and hence it followes, that counſells of perfection, if they haue in them any furtherance of vertue, are inioyned in and by the lawe, and therefore preſcribe no ſtate or perfection beyond the ſcope of the law.

Secondly the commandement, Thou ſhalt not make to thy ſelfe any grauen image, &c. hath two ſeuerall partes. The firſt forbids the making of carued or grauen images: the ſecond forbids the adoration of them. Nowe the firſt part is notably expounded by Moſes, Deut. 4. 16. Take good heede vnto your ſelues that yee corrupt not your ſelues and make you a grauen image or repreſentatiō of any figure in the likeneſſe of male or female. Marke the reaſon of this prohibition in the ſame place: for (ſaith hee) yee ſawe no image in the daye the Lorde ſpake vnto you in Horeb. and verſe. 15 Ye heard the voice of the wordes but ſawe no ſimilitude ſaue a voice. Now the reaſon being vnderſtoode of the image of GOD himſelfe, the prohibition muſt needes bee ſo vnderſtood. Againe there is no queſtion, that God directs his commandements againſt a ſinne in ſpeculation, but againſt ſome common and wicked practiſe of the Iewes & that was to repreſent God himſelfe in likeneſſes and bodilie formes. Eſai. 40, 18. And that was alſo the practiſe of the Gentiles, that were more groſſe in this kinde then the Iewes. Rom, 1. 23. This then is plaine to any indifferent man, that the firſt part of the commaundement forbiddes the making of grauen images or likeneſſes of the true Iehoua: and thus the Roman catechiſme vnderſtāds the words. As for the ſecond part, it muſt bee vnderſtood according to the meaning of the firſt: and therefore it forbids vs, to bowe downe to any image of God. Hence then it followes, that to worſhip God or Saints in, or at images, and to worſhip images with religious worſhip is abominable idolatry. And common reaſon might teach vs thus much. For they that adore & worſhip the true God in images, doe binde the preſence of God, his operation, grace, and his hearing of vs, to certaine things, places, ſignes, to which he hath not bound himſelfe, either by commaundement or promiſe: and this is, otherwiſe to worſhip God, and to ſeeke for his bleſſings, thē he hath cōmanded himſelf to be worſhipped, or promiſed to heare vs. Vpon this ground is plainely ouerthrowne the excuſe which they make, that they worſhip not images, but God and Saints in images: for neither God nor the Saints doe acknowledge this kinde of honour, but they abhorre it. Whence it followes neceſſarily that they worſhip nothing beſide the Image, or the deuice of their owne braine, in which they faigne to themſelues ſuch a God as will bee worſhipped, and receiue our prayers at images. It will be ſaide, that the Papiſts doe not otherwiſe tye the worſhip and inuocation of God to Images, then God tyed himſelfe to the ſanctuarie and the temple of Salomon. And I ſay againe, it was the will of God that he would ſhew his preſence, and bee worſhipped at the Sanctuarie, and the Iewes had the warrant of Gods Word for it: but we haue no like warrant, either by promiſe or commandement to tye Gods preſence to an image or crucifixe. Againe, reaſon yet further may diſcouer their idolatrie. They, which worſhip they know not what, worſhip an Idol: but the Papiſts worſhip they know not what: I prooue it thus. To the conſecration of the hoſt, there is required the intention of the Prieſt, at the leaſt vertually, as they ſay, and if this bee true, it followes that none of them can come to the maſſe, or pray in faith, but he muſt alwayes doubt of that which is lifted vp by the handes of the the priest in the masse, whether it bee bread or the bodie and blood of Christ. For none can haue anie certentie of the intention of the priest in consecrating this bread and this wine: but rather may haue a iust occasion of doubting be reason of the common ignorance and looseneſſe of life in such persons.

Thirdly the commandement touching the Sabbath, giues a libertie to worke sixe dayes in the ordinarie affaires of our callings: and this libertie cannot be repealed by any creature. The Church of Rome therefore erreth, in that is prescribeth set and ordinarie festiuall dayes, not onely to God, but also to Saints, inioyning them as straitly and with as much solemnitie to be obserued, as the Sabboth of the Lord.

Fourthly the third commandement, or (as they say) the fourth, inioynes children to obey father and mother in all things, specially in matters of moment, as in their marriage and choice of their callings: and that euen to death: and yet the Church of Rome against the intent of this commandement, allowes that clandestine marriages, and the vowe of religion shall be in force, though they be without, and against the consent of wife and carefull parents.

Fiftly, the last commandement of lust, forbiddes the first motions to sinne, that are before consent. I proue it thus. Lusting is forbidden in the former commandements as well as in the last, yea lusting that is ioyned with consent: as in the commandement, Thou shalt not commit adulterie, is forbidden lusting after our neighbours wife: and in the next, lusting after our neighbours goods, &c. Now if the last commandement also forbid no more but lust with consent, it is confounded with the rest: and by this meanes there shall not bee ten distinct words, or commandements: which to say is absurd: it remaines therefore that the lust here forbidden goes before consent. Againe, The Philosophers knewe that lust with consent was euil, euē by the light of nature: but Paul a learned Pharise and therefore more then a Philosopher, knew not lust to be sinne, that is forbidden in this commandement. Rom. 7. Lust therefore that is forbidden here, is without consent. Wicked then is the doctrine of the Romane Church, teaching that in euery mortall sinne is required an actu commanded of the will: and hence they say many thoughts against faith, and vncleane imaginations are no sinnes.

Mol. tract. 2. 37. conc. 4.

6. Lastly, the words of the second commandement, And shewe mercie to thousands on them that loue me and keepe my commandements, ouerthrowes all humane merits. For if the rewarde bee giuen of mercie to them that keepe the law, it is not giuen for the merit of the worke done.

To come to the third part of the Catechisme: the Lords prier is a most absolute and perfect forme of praier. For which cause it was called of Tertullian, The breuiarie of the Gospell: and Caelestinus saith, the law of praying is the law of beleeuing: and the law of beleeuing, the law of working. Now in this praier wee are taught to direct our prayers to God alone, Our Father &c. and that only in the name and mediation of Christ. For God is our father onely by Christ. It is needlesse therefore, to vse any inuocation of Saintes, or to make them our meditours of intercessiō vnto god: & it is sufficient if we pray only vnto god in the name of Christ alone.

2. In the fourth petition, wee say thus, Giue vs our dailie bread. In which words, wee acknowledge that euerie morsell of bread is the meere gift of god. What madnesse then is it, for vs to thinke that wee should merit the kingdome of heauen by workes, that cannot merit so much as bread?

3. In the next petition, Forgiue vs our debts, foure opinions of the Romane religion are directly ouerthrowne. The first is concerning humane Satisfactions. For the child of God is here, after his conuersion taught, to humble himselfe daie by day, and to pray for the pardon of his dayly sinnes: nowe to make satisfaction and to sue for pardon be contrarie. The second opinion here ouerthrowne, is touching merits. For wee doe acknowledge our selues to be detters vnto God, yea bankrupts: and that beside the maine summe of many thousand talents, we dailie increase the debt: therefore we cannot possibly merit any of the blessings of God. It is meere madnes to thinke, that they which cannot pay their debts, but rather increase them day by day, shold deserue or purchase any of the goods of the creditours, or the pardon of their debts: & if any fauour bee shewed thē, it comes of meere good wil without the least desert. In a word, this must be thought vpon, that if all wee can doe, will not keepe vs from increasing the maine sum of our debt, much les shal we be able by any merit to diminish the same: by good right therfore do al good seruāts cast down themselues themſelues & pray, Forgiue vs our debts. The third opinio is, that puniſhment may be retained, the fault beeing wholly remitted; but this cannot ſtand, for here ſinn is called our debt: becauſe by nature wee owe vnto God obedience, and for the defect of this paiment, we further owe vnto him the forfiture of puniſhment. Sin then is called our debt in reſpect of the puniſhment. And therfore when we pray for the pardon of ſin, we require the pardon not only of fault, but of the whole puniſhmet. And when a debt is pardoned, it is abſurd to thinke that the leaſt paiment ſhould remaine. The fourth opinion is, that a man in this life may fulfill the lawe, whereas in this place euerie ſeruant of God is taught to aske a daily pardon for the breach of the lawe. Anſwer is made, that our daylie ſinnes are veniall and not againſt the lawe, but beſide the law. But this which they ſay is againſt the petitio: for a debt that comes by forfiture is againſt the bond or obligation. Now euerie ſinn is a debt cauſing the forfiture of puniſhment; and therefore is not beſide, but directly againſt the law.

4. In this clauſe, as we forgiue our debters, it is taken for graunted, that we maie certenly know that we are in loue and charity with men, when wee make reconciliation: why then may we not know certenly that we repent & beleeue and are reconciled to God? which all Romane Catholikes deny.

5 In the laſt words, and lead vs not into temptation, we pray not, that God ſhoulde free vs from tẽptation (for it is otherwhiles good to be tempted, Pſal. 26. 1.) but that we be not left to the malice of Sathan, and held captiue of the temptation, for here to be lead into temptation, and to bee deliuered, are oppoſed. Now hence I gather, that he which is the child of God trulie iuſtified and ſanctified, ſhall neuer fall wholly and finally from the grace of God: and I conclude on this manner. That which we aske according to the will of GOD, ſhal bee graunted, 1. Iohn. 5. but this the child of God asketh, that he might neuer be wholly forſaken of his father and left captiue in tẽptatiõ. This therefore ſhall be graunted.

6 This clauſe Amen, ſignifieth a ſpecial faith touching al the former petitions, that they ſhal be graunted: and therefore a ſpecial faith concerning remiſſion of ſinnes: which the Romane Church denieth.

To come to the laſt place, to the Inſtitution of the ſacrament of the Lords ſupper, 1. Cor. 11. 23. In which firſt of all the Reall preſence is by many circumſtances ouerthrowne. Out of the wordes, hee tooke & brake, it is plaine, that that which Chriſt tooke was not his bodie: becauſe he cannot be ſaid with his owne hands to haue taken, held and broken himſelfe, but the verie bread. Againe Chriſt ſaid not: vnder the forme of bread, or in bread: but This, that is, bread is my bodie. 3. Bread was not giuen for vs, but onelie the bodie of Chriſt: and in this firſt inſtitution, the bodie of Chriſt was not reallie giuen to death. 4. The cup, is the newe teſtament by a figure: why may not the bread bee the bodie of Chriſt by a figure alſo? 5. Chriſt did eate the ſupper, but not himſelfe. 6. VVee are bidden to doe it, till hee come. Chriſt then is not bodilie preſent. 7. Chriſt biddes the bread to be eaten in a remembrance of him: but ſignes of remembrance are of thinges abſent. 8. If the Popiſh reall preſence be graunted, then the bodie and blood of Chriſt are either ſeuered or ioyned togither. If ſeuered, then Chriſt is ſtill crucified. If ioyned togither, then the bread is both the body & blood of Chriſt: whereas the inſtitution ſaith, the bread is the bodie, and the wine is the blood.

9 Againe, here is condemned the adminiſtration of the ſacrament vnder one only kind. For the commandement of Chriſt is, Drinke ye all of this, Matth. 26. 27. And this commaundement is rehearſed to the Church of Corinth in theſe wordes, Doe this as oft as ye drinke in remembrance of mee. v. 25. And no power can reuerſe this commandement: becauſe it was eſtabliſhed by the ſoueraigne head of the Church.

These fewe lines, as alſo the former treatiſe, I offer to the viewe and reading of them, that fauour the Romane religion: willing them with patience to conſider this one thing, that their religion, if it were Catholike and Apoſtolike (as they pretend) it could not be contrary ſo much as in one point, to the grounds of al Catechiſmes, that haue beene vſed in Churches, confeſſing the name of Chriſt, euer ſince the Apoſtles dayes. And whereas it croſſeth the ſaide groũds in ſundry points of doctrine, (as I haue proued) it is a plaine argument that the preſent Romane religion, is degenerate. I write not this, deſpiſing or hating their perſons for their religion, but wiſhing vnfainedly their conuerſion in this worlde, and their ſaluation in the world to come.

A DECLARATION OF THE TRVE MANner of knowing Christ crucified.

Galat. 6. 14.

God forbid that I ſhould reioyce but in the Croſſe of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, &c.

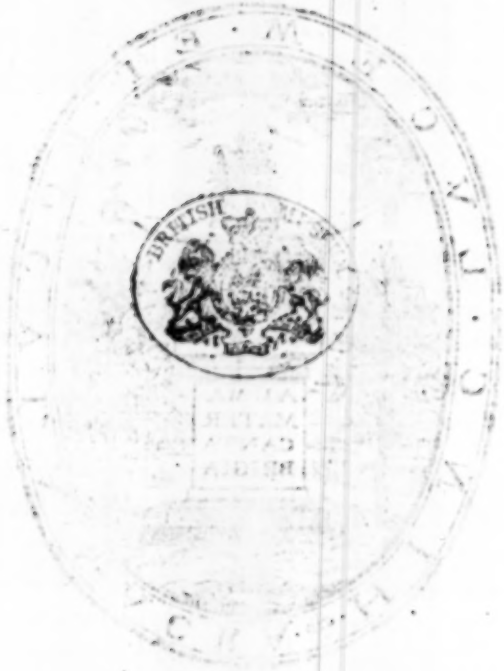
Printed by IOHN LEGAT, Printer to the Vniuerſitie of CAMBRIDGE. 1605.

TO THE READER.

IT is the common sinne of men at this day, & that in the very places of learning, that Christ crucified is not known as he ought. The right knowledge of him, is not to make often mention of his death and passion, & to call him our Saviour, or to handle the whole mysterie of God incarnate soundly and learnedly (though that be a worthy gift of God) but first of all, by the consideration of the passion to be touched with an inward & a lively feeling of our sinnes, for which our Redeemer suffered the pangs of hell, and to growe to a through dislike of our selues & our lines past for them, & from the ground of the heart to purpose a reformation & a cõformitie with Christ in al good duties that concerne man: secondly in the Passion as in a mirrour, to behold, and in beholding to labour to cõprehẽd the length, the breadth, the height, the depth of the loue of the father, that gaue his owne deare Sonne to death &, the goodnesse of the Sonne, that loued his enemies more then himselfe, that our hearts might be rooted and grounded in the same loue, and be further inflamed to loue God againe.

To further this true manner of knowing Christ crucified, I haue penned these fewe lines, read them at thy leisure, and haue care to put them in practise: otherwise, thou art but an enemie of the crosse of Christ, though thou professe his name never so much. Ian. 3. 1596.

W. Perkins.



Of the right knowledge of Christ crucified.

IT is the most excellent and worthy part of diuine wisedome, to know Christ crucified. The Prophet Esai Esa.53.11. saith; The knowledge of thy righteous seruant: that is, Christ crucified, shall iustifie many. And Iohn 17.1. Christ himselfe saith; This is life eternall, to know thee the onely GOD, and whome thou hast sent, Iesus Christ. And Paul saith; I haue
1.Cor.22. decreed to know nothing among you, but Iesus Christ, and him crucified. Againe, God forbid Gal.6.14. that I should reioyce in any thing, but in the crosse of our Lord Iesus Christ. Againe, I
Phil.3.5. thinke all things but losse, for the excellent knowledge sake of Christ Iesus my Lord, and doe iudge them but dung, that I might winne Christ.

In the right way of knowing Christ crucified, two points must be considered: one, how Man for his part is to know Christ: the other, how he is to be knowne of man.

Touching the first: Man must know Christ, not generally and confusedly, but by a liuely, powerfull, and operatiue knowledge: for otherwise, the diuells themselues know Christ.

In this knowledge, three things are required. The first is notice or consideration, whereby thou must conceiue in minde, vnderstand, and seriously bethinke thy selfe of Christ, as he is reuealed in the history of the Gospell, and as he is offered to thy particular person, in the ministerie of the word and Sacraments. And that this consideration, may not be dead and idle in thee, two things must be done. First, thou must labour to feele thy selfe to stand in neede of Christ crucified; yea, to stand in excessiue neede euen of the verie least droppe of his blood, for the washing away of thy sinnes. And vnlesse thou throughly feelest thy selfe, to want all that goodnesse and grace that is in Christ, and that thou euen stand in extreame neede of his passion, thou shalt neuer learne or teach Christ indeede and truth. The second thing is, with the vnderstanding of the doctrine of Christ, to ioyne thirsting, whereby man in verie soule & spirit, longs after the participation of Christ, and saith in this case as Sampson Iudg.15.18. said; Giue me water, I die for thirst.

The second part of knowledge is application, whereby thou must know and beleeue, not onely that Christ was crucified, but that he was crucified for thee; for thee I say, in particular. Heere two rules must be remembred and practised. One, that Christ on the Crosse was thy pledge and suretie in particular, that he then stoode in thy verie roome and place, in which thou thy selfe in thine owne person, shouldest haue stoode: that thy very personall and particular sins were imputed and applied to him: that hee stoode guiltie as a malefactour for them, and suffered the very pangs of hell, and that his sufferings are as much in acceptation with God, as if thou haddest borne the curse of the Law in thine owne person eternally. The holding and beleeuing of this point, is the very foundation of religion, as also the Church of God. Therefore in any wise, be carefull to apply Christ crucified to thy selfe: and as Elizeus, when he would reuiue the childe of the Shunamite, 2.Kin.4.34. went vp and lay vppon him, and put his mouth vpon his mouth, & his hands vpon his hands, and his eyes vpon his eyes, and stretched himself vpon him: euen so, if thou wouldst be reuiued to euerlasting life, thou must by faith as it were, set thy selfe vpon the Crosse of Christ, and apply thy hands to his hands, thy feete to his feete, and thy sinfull heart to his beleeuing heart: and content not thy selfe with Thomas, to put thy finger in his side, but euen diue and plunge thy selfe wholy, both body and soule, into the wounds and blood of Christ. This will make thee to crie with Thomas, and say; My Lord my God: and this is to be crucified with Christ. And yet doe not content thy selfe with this, but by faith also descend with Christ from the crosse to the graue, & bury thy selfe in the very buriall of Christ: and then looke, as the dead souldier tumbled into the graue of Elizeus, was made aliue at 2.Kin.13.21. the very touching of his body: so shalt thou by a spirituall touching of Christ dead and buried, be quickned to life euerlasting. The second rule is, that Christ crucified is shine, being really giuen thee of God the father, euen as truly as houſes & land are giuen of earthly fathers to their children: thus muſt thou firmely hold and beleeue: and hence is it, that the benefits of Chriſt, are before God, ours indeede for our iuſtification and ſaluation.

The third point in liuely knowledge is, that by all the affections of our hearts, wee muſt be carried to Chriſt, and as it were, transformed into him. Whereas hee gaue himſelfe wholy for vs, we can doe no leſſe then beſtow our hearts vpon him. Wee muſt therefore labour aboue all, following the Martyr Ignatius, who ſaid, that Chriſt his loue was crucified. Wee muſt value him at ſo high a price, that he muſt be vnto vs, better then ten thouſand worlds: yea, all things which we inioy, muſt be but as droſſe and dung vnto vs, in reſpect of him. Laſtly, all our ioy, reioycing, comfort, and confidence, muſt be placed in him. And that thus much is requiſite in knowledge, it appeares by the common rule of expounding Scripture, that workes of knowledge imply affection. And indeede it is but a knowledge, ſwimming in the braine, which doth not alter and diſpoſe the affections, and the whole man.

Thus much of our knowledge. Now followes the ſecond point, how Chriſt is to be knowne. Hee muſt not be knowne barely as God, or as man, or as a Iew, borne in the Tribe of Iudah, or as a terrible & iuſt Iudge, but as he is our Redeemer, and the very price of our redemption: and in this reſpect, hee muſt be conſidered as the common treaſure & ſtorehouſe of Gods Church, as Paul teſtifieth when he ſaith; In him are Coloſſ. 13. all the treaſures of knowledge and wiſedome hid. And againe; Bleſſed be God, which hath bleſſed Eph. 1. 4. vs with all ſpirituall bleſſings in Chriſt. And St. Iohn ſaith; that of his fulneſſe, we receiue grace for grace. Here then let vs marke, that all the bleſsings of God, whether ſpiritual or temporal; all I ſay, without exception, are conuaied vnto vs from the Father, by Chriſt: and ſo they muſt be receiued of vs, and no otherwiſe. That this point may be further cleared, the benefits which we receiue from Chriſt, are to be handled, and the manner of knowing them. The benefits of Chriſt are three, his Merit, his Vertue, his Example.

The merit of Chriſt, is the value and price of his death and Paſſion, whereby any man is perfectly reconciled to God. This reconciliation hath two parts, Remiſſion of ſinnes, and acceptation to life euerlaſting. Remiſsion of ſinnes, is the remouing, or the aboliſhing both of the guilt and puniſhment of mans ſinnes. By guilt, I vnderſtand a ſubiection or obligation to puniſhment, according to the order of diuine iuſtice. And the puniſhment of ſinne, is the malediction or curſe of the whole law, which is the ſuffering of the firſt and ſecond death. Acceptation to life euerlaſting is, a giuing of right and title to the kingdome of heauen, and that for the merit of Chriſts obedience imputed. Now this benefit of reconciliation muſt be known, not by conceit and imagination, nor by carnall preſumption; but by the inward teſtimonie of Gods ſpirit, certifying our conſciences thereof; which for this cauſe is called the ſpirit of Reuelation. And that wee may attaine to infallible aſſurance of this benefit, Eph. 1. 7. wee muſt call to minde the promiſes of the Goſpel, touching remiſsion of ſinnes, and life euerlaſting. This being done, we muſt further ſtriue and indeauour, by the aſſurance of Gods ſpirit, to apply them to our ſelues, and to beleeue that they belong vnto vs: and wee muſt alſo put our ſelues often to the exerciſes of inuocation and true repentance. For in, and by our crying vnto heauen, to God for reconciliation, comes the aſſurance thereof, as Scriptures and Chriſtian experience makes manifeſt. And if it ſo fall out, that any man in temptation, apprehend and feele nothing but the furious indignation and wrath of God, againſt all reaſon and feeling, he muſt hold to the merit of Chriſt, and know a point of religion, hard to be learned, that God is a moſt louing father to thē that haue care to ſerue him, euen at that inſtāt, whē he ſhews himſelfe a moſt fierce and terrible enemie.

From the benefit of reconciliation proceede foure benefites. Firſt, that excellent peace of God that paſſeth all vnderſtanding, which hath ſixe parts. The firſt is peace with God and the bleſſed Trinitie, Rom. 5. 1. Being iuſtified we haue peace with God. The ſecond, peace with the good Angels, Iohn 1. 51. Ye ſhall ſee the Angels of God aſcending and deſcending vpon the Sonne of man. And that angels, like armies of ſouldiers in campe about the ſeruants of God, and as Nurces beare them in their armes, that they be neither hurt by the diuell and his Augels, nor by his inſtruments, it proceeds of this, that they being in Chriſt, are partakers of his merits. The third is, peace with al ſuch as feare God, and beleeue in Chriſt.

Chriſt

Christ. This Esai foretold when he said; that the wolfe shall dwell with the lambe, and the leopard with the kidde, and the calfe, and the lyon, and a fatte beast together, and that a little childe shall leade them, &c. 11. vers. 6. The fourth is peace with a mans owne selfe, when the conscience washed in the blood of Christ, ceaseth to accuse and terrifie: and when the will, affections, & inclinations of the whole man, are obedient to the minde, enlightned by the spirit and word of God, Colos. 3. Let the peace of God rule in your hearts, The fifth is, peace with enemies, and that twoo waies. First, in that such as beleeue in Christ, seeke to haue peace with all men, hurting none, but doing good to all. Secondly, in that God restraines the malice of the enemies, and inclines their hearts to be peaceable. Thus God brought Daniel into loue and fauour with the chiefe of the Eunuches. The last is, peace with all creatures in heauen and earth, in that they serue for mans saluation, Psal. 91. 13. Thou shalt walke vpon the Lyon and the Aspe, the young Lyon and the Dragon, shalt thou treade vnder foote. Hos. 2. 18. And in that day will I make a couenant for them, with the beasts of the field, and with the fowles of heauen. Now this benefit of peace, is knowne, partly by the testimonie of the spirite, and partly by a daily experience thereof.

The second benefit is a recouerie of that right and title, which man hath to all creatures in heauen and earth, and all temporall blessings, which right Adam lost to himselfe, and euery one of his posteritie. 1. Cor. 3. 22. Whether it be the worlde, or life, or death, whether they be things present, or things to come, all are yours. Now, the right way of knowing this one benefite, is this. When God vouchsafeth meate, drinke, apparrell, houses, lands, &c. we must not barely consider them as blessings of God, for that very heathen men, which know not Christ, can doe: but we must acknowledge and esteeme them as blessings, proceeding from the speciall loue of God the father, whereby he loues vs in Christ: and procured vnto vs by the merit of Christ crucified: and we must labour in this point to be setled and perswaded: and so oft as we see and vse the creatures of God for our owne benefit, this point should come to our mindes. Blessings conceiued apart from Christ, are misconceiued: whatsoeuer they are in themselues, they are no blessings to vs, but in, and by Christs merits. Therefore, this order must be obserued touching earthly blessings: First, wee must haue part in the merit of Christ: and then secondly, by meanes of that merit, a right before God, and comfortable vse of the things wee enioy. All men that haue and vse the creatures of God otherwise, as gifts of God, but not by Christ, vse them but as flatte vsurpers and theeues. For this cause it is not sufficient for vs generally and confusedly, to know Christ to be our redeemer; but we must learne to see, know, and acknowledge him in euery particular gift and blessing of God. If men, vsing the creatures of meate and drinke, could, when they behold them, withall by the eye of faith, behold in them the merit of Christs passion, there would not be so much excesse and riot, so much surfetting and drunkennesse as there is: and if men could consider their houses and lands, &c. as blessings to them, and that by the fountaine of blessing the merits of Christ, there should not be so much fraud and deceit, so much iniustice and oppression in bargaining as there is.

That which I haue now said of meates, drinks, apparrell, must likewise be vnderstood of gentry and nobilitie, in as much as noble birth, without new birth in Christ, is but an earthly vanitie: the like may be said of phisicke, sleepe, health, liberties, yea, of the very breathing in the ayre. And to goe yet further, in our Recreations Christ must be knowne: For all recreation stands in the vse of things indifferent: and the holy vse of all things indifferent, is purchased vnto vs by the blood of Christ. For this cause it is very meete, that Christian men and women, should with their earthly recreations, ioyne spirituall meditation of the death of Christ, and from the one, take occasion to bethinke themselues of the other. If this were practised, there should not be so many vnlawful sports and delights, and so much abuse of lawfull recreation, as there is.

Consider Col. 3. 11. & 2. 10.

The third benefit is, that all crosses, afflictions, and iudgements whatsoeuer, cease to be curses and punishments to them that are in Christ, and are onely meanes of correction or triall; because his death hath taken away, not some few parts, but all, and euery part of the curse of the whole law. Now, in all crosses, Christ is to be known of vs on this manner. We must iudge of our afflictions, as chastisements or trialls, proceeding, not from a reuenging iudge, but from the hand of a bountifull and louing father; and therefore they must be conceiued ued in, and with the merit of Christ; and if we do otherwise regard them, we take them as curses and punishments of sinne. And hence it followes, that subiection to Gods hand in all crosses, is a marke and badge of the true Church.

The last benefit is, that death is properly no death, but a rest or sleep. Death therefore must be knowne and considered, not as it is set forth in the law, but as it is altered and changed by the death of Christ: and when death comes, we must then looke vpon it through Christs death, as through a glasse: and thus it will appeare to bee but a passage from this life to euerlasting life.

Thus much of the merit of Christ crucified. Now followes his vertue, which is the power of his godhead, whereby he creates new hearts in all them that beleeue in him, and makes them new creatures. This vertue is double: the first is the power of his death, whereby he freed himselfe from the punishment and imputation of our sinnes: and the same vertue serueth to mortifie and crucifie the corruptions of our minds, wils, affections, euen as a corasiue dooth waste and consume the rotten and dead flesh in any part of mans body.

The second is, the vertue of Christs resurrection, which is also the power of his Godhead, whereby he raised himselfe from death to life: and the very same power serueth to raise those that belong to Christ, from their sinnes in this life, and from the graue, in the day of the last iudgement. Now the knowledge of this double vertue, must not be onely speculatiue; that is, barely conceiued in the braine, but it must be experimentall: because wee ought to haue experience of it in our hearts and liues, and we should labour by all meanes possible, to feele the power of Christs death, killing and mortifying our sinnes, and the vertue of his resurrection, in the putting of spirituall life into vs, that wee might be able to say, that wee liue not, but that Christ liues in vs. This was one of the most excellent and principall things which Paul sought for, who saith; I haue counted all things losse, and doe iudge them to be dung, that I may know him, and the vertue of his resurrection. Philip. 3.10. And he saith; that this is the right way to know and learne Christ, to cast off the old man, which is corrupt through the deceiueable lusts, & to put on the new man, which is created in righteousnesse and true holinesse. Eph. 4.24.

The third benefite, is the example of Christ. We deceiue our selues, if we thinke that hee is onely to be knowne of vs as a Redeemer, and not as a spectacle or patterne of all good duties, to which we ought to conforme our selues. Good men indeede, that haue beene, or in present are vpon the earth the seruants of God, must be followed of vs: but they must be followed no otherwise then they follow Christ, & Christ must be followed in the practise of euery good dutie that may concerne vs without exception simply and absolutely, 1. Cor. 11.1.

Our conformitie with Christ stands either in the framing of our inward & spirituall life, or in the practise of outward and morall duties.

Conformitie of spirituall life is, not by dooing that which Christ did vppon the crosse and afterward, but a doing of the like, by a certaine kinde of imitation. And it hath foure parts. The first is, a spirituall oblation. For as Christ in the garden, and vpon the crosse, by prayer made with strong cries and teares, presented and resigned himselfe vp, to be a sacrifice of propitiation, to the iustice of his Father for mans sinne: so must we also in prayer, present and resigne our selues, our soules, our bodies, our vnderstanding, will, memorie, affections, and all wee haue to the seruice of God, in the generall calling of a Christian, and in the particular callings, in which he hath placed vs. Take an example in Dauid; Sacrifice and burnt offering (saith hee) thou wouldest not, but eares thou hast pierced vnto mee, then said, loe, I come: I desire to doe thy will, O God; yea, thy Law is within my heart, Psal. 40.7. The second is, conformitie in the crosse two waies. For first, as hee bare his owne crosse to the place of execution: so must we as good Disciples of Christ, denie our selues, take vp all the crosses and afflictions that the hand of God shall lay vpon vs. Againe, wee must become like vnto him, in the crucifying and mortifying the masse and body of sinne, which we carry about vs, Gal. 5.24. They which are Christs, haue crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts thereof. Wee must doe as the Iewes did, we must set vp the crosses and gibbets whereon we are to fasten and hang this flesh of ours: that is, the sinne and corruption that cleaues and stickes vnto vs, and by the sword of the spirit, wound it euen to death. This being done, we must yet goe further, and labour by experience, to see and feele the the verie death of it, and to lay it as it were in a graue neuer to rise againe: and therefore, we should daily cast new moulds vpon it. The third is, a spirituall resurrection, whereby we should by Gods grace vse meanes that we may euery day more and more come out of our sinnes, as out of a loathsome graue; to liue vnto God in newnesse of life, as Christ rose from his graue. And because it is an hard matter for a man to come out of the graue, or rather dungeon of his sinnes, this worke cannot be done at once, but by degrees, as God shall giue grace. Considering we lie by nature dead in our sinnes, and stinke in them as loathsome carrion: first we must begin to stirre our selues as a man that comes out of a swowne, awakened by the word and voice of Christ sounding in our deafe eares; secondly, we must raise vp our mindes to a better state and condition, as we vse to raise vp our bodies: after this we must put out of the graue, first one hand, then the other. This done, we must doe our indeauour as it were vpon our knees, at the least to put one foote out of the Sepulchre of sinne, the rather when we see our selues to haue one foote of the bodie in the graue of the earth, that in the day of iudgement wee may bee wholy deliuered from all bonds of corruption. The fourth part is, a spirituall ascension into heauen, by a continuall eleuation of the heart and minde to Christ, sitting at the right hand of the Father, as Paul saith, Haue your conuersation in heauen: and, If ye be risen with Christ, seeke things that are aboue.

Conformitie in morall duties, is either generall or speciall. Generall, is to be holy as he is holy, Rom. 8. 29. Those whome he knewe before, he hath predestinate to be like the image of his sonne, that is, not onely in the crosse, but also in holinesse and glorie. 1. Iohn 3. He which hath this hope, purifieth himselfe euen as he is pure.

Specially conformitie, is chiefly in foure vertues; Faith, Loue, Meekenesse, Humilitie.

We must be like him in faith. For as he, when he apprehended the wrath of God, & the very pangs of hell were vpon him, wholy staied himselfe vpon the aid, helpe, protection, & good pleasure of his father, euen to the last: so must we by a true and liuely faith depend wholy on Gods mercie in Christ, as it were with both our hãds in peace, in trouble, in life, and in the verie pang of death: and we must not in any wise let our hold go; no though we should feele our selues descend to hell.

We must be like him in meekenesse. Mat. 11. ver. 28. Learne of me, that I am meeke and lowly. His meekenesse shewed it selfe in the patient bearing of all iniuries and abuses, offered by the hands of sinnefull and wretched men, and in the suffering of the curse of the law, without grudging or repining, and with submission to his fathers will in all things. Now the more we follow him herein, the more shall we bee conformable to him in his death and passion, Philip. 3. 10.

Thirdly, he must bee our example in loue: he loued his enemies more then himselfe, Ephe. 5. 4. Walke in loue euen as Christ loued vs, and hath giuen himselfe for vs an oblation and sacrifice of sweete smelling sauour vnto God. The like loue ought we to shew, by doing seruice to all men in the compasse of our callings, and by beeing all things to all men (as Paul was) that wee might doe them all the good we can, both for bodie and soule. 1. Cor. 9. 19.

Lastly, we must follow Christ in humilitie, whereof he is a wonderfull spectacle, in that being God, he became man for vs: & of a man, became a worme that is troden vnder foote, that he might saue man. Phil. 2. 5. Let the same mind be in you that was in Iesus Christ, who being in the forme of God, humbled himselfe, and became obedient to the death, euen to the death of the crosse.

And here we must obserue, that the example of Christ hath something more in it then any other example hath or can haue: for it dooth not onely shew vs what wee ought to doe (as the example of other men doe) but it is a remedie against many vices, and a motiue to many good duties. First of all, the serious consideration of this, that the verie sonne of God himselfe suffered all the paines and torments of hell on the crosse for our sinnes, is the proper and most effectuall meanes to stirre vp our hearts to a godly sorrow for them. And that this thing may come to passe, euerie man must be setled without doubt, that he was the man that crucified Christ; that he is to be blamed as well as Iudas, Herod, Pontius Pilate, and the Iewes: and that his sinnes should be the nailes, the speares, and the thornes that pierced him. When this meditation beginnes to take place, bitternesse of spirit, with wailing and mourning, takes place in like manner. Zach. 12. 10. And they shall looke vpon him, whom they

haue pierced, and they ſhall lament for him as one lamenteth for his onely ſonne. Peter in his firſt Sermon ſtrooke the Iewes as with a thunder-clappe from heauen, when he ſaid vnto them, Ye haue crucified the Lord of glorie, ſo as the ſame time three thouſand men were pricked in their hearts, and ſaid, Men and brethren, what ſhall we doe to bee ſaued? Againe, if Chriſt for our ſinnes ſhedde his heart blood, and if our ſinnes made him ſweate water and blood; O then why ſhould not we our ſelues ſhedde bitter teares, and why would not our hearts bleed for them! He that finds himſelfe ſo dull and hardned that the paſsion of Chriſt doth not humble him, is in a lamentable caſe, for there is no faith in the death of Chriſt, effectuall in him as yet.

Secondly, the meditation of the paſsion of Chriſt, is a moſt notable meanes to breede repentance and reformation of life in time to come. For when we beginne to thinke that Chriſt crucified, by ſuffering the firſt and ſecond death, hath procured vnto vs remiſsion of all our ſinnes paſt, and freed vs from hell, death, and damnation: then if there be but a ſparke of grace in vs, we begin to be of another mind, and to reaſon thus with our ſelues: What? hath the Lord bin thus mercifull vnto me, that am in my ſelfe but a firebrand of hell, as to free me from deſerued deſtruction, and to receiue me to fauour in Chriſt? yea, no doubt he hath; his name be bleſſed therefore: I will not therefore ſinne any more as I haue done, but rather indeuour hereafter to keepe my ſelfe from euerie euill way. And thus faith purifies both heart and life.

Thirdly, when thou art in any paine of bodie or ſickneſſe, thinke how light theſe are, compared to the agonie and bloodie ſweat, to the crowne of thornes and nailes of Chriſt. When thou art wronged in word or deed, by any man, turne thine eie to the croſſe, conſider how meekely hee ſuffered all abuſes for the moſt part in ſilence, and prayed for them that crucified him. When thou art tempted with pride or vaineglorie, conſider how for thy proper ſinnes Chriſt was deſpiſed and mocked, & condemned among theeues. When anger and deſire of reuenge inflame thine heart, thinke how Chriſt gaue himſelfe to death to ſaue his enemies, euen then when they did moſt cruelly intreate him, and ſhedde his blood: and by theſe meditations, ſpecially if they be mingled with faith, thy mind ſhall be eaſed.

Thus we ſee how Chriſt crucified, is to be known: & hence ariſeth a threefold knowledge; one of God, the ſecond of our neighbours, the third of our ſelues.

Touching the firſt: if we would know the true God aright, and know him to our ſaluation, we muſt know him only in Chriſt crucified. God in himſelfe and his owne maieſtie, is inuiſible, not only to the eyes of the body, but alſo to the very mindes of men; and he is reuealed to vs onely in Chriſt, in whom he is to be ſeene, as in a glaſſe. For in Chriſt, he ſetteth forth and giues his iuſtice, goodneſſe, wiſedome, and himſelfe wholly vnto vs. For this cauſe, hee is called the brightneſſe of the glorie, and the ingrauen forme of the perſon of the Father. Heb. 1. 3. and the image of the inuiſible God. Coloſs. 1. 15. Therefore wee muſt not know God, and ſeeke him any where elſe but in Chriſt: and whatſoeuer out of Chriſt, comes vnto vs in the name of God, is a flatte idoll of mans braine.

As for our neighbours; thoſe eſpecially that are of Chriſts Church, they are to be knowne of vs on this manner: When wee are to doe any dutie vnto them, wee muſt not barely reſpect their perſons, but Chriſt crucified in them, and them in Chriſt. When Paul perſecuted ſuch as called on the name of Chriſt, he then from heauen cried; Saul, Saul, why perſecuteſt thou mee? Heere then let this be marked, that when the poore comes to vs for releefe, it is Chriſt that comes to our doores, and ſaith, I am hungrie, I am thirſtie, I am naked: and let the bowells of compaſsion be in vs towards them: as towards Chriſt, vnleſſe wee will heare that fearefull ſentence in the day of iudgement; Goe ye curſed into hell, &c. I was hungry, and yee fed me not, I was naked, and ye did not clothe me, &c.

Thirdly, the right knowledge of our ſelues, ariſeth of the knowledge of Chriſt crucified, in whom, and by whome, wee come to know fiue ſpeciall things of our ſelues. The firſt, how greeuous our ſinnes are, and therefore how miſerable we are in regard of them. If we conſider our offences in themſelues, and as they are in vs, we may ſoone be deceiued, becauſe the conſcience being corrupted, often erreth in giuing teſtimonie, and by that meanes, maketh ſinne to appeare leſſe then it is indeed. But if ſinne be conſidered in the death and paſsion of Chriſt, whereof it was the cauſe and the vileneſſe thereof, meaſured by the vnſpeakeable torments, endured by the

Sonne

Sonne of God: and if the greatneſſe of the offence of man be eſteemed by the endleſſe ſatisfaction made to the iuſtice of god, the leaſt ſinne that is, will appeare to bee a ſinne indeed, and that moſt grieuous and ougly. Therefore Chriſt crucified muſt be vſed of vs as a myrrour or looking glaſſe, in which we may fully take a view of our wretchednes and miſerie, and what we are by nature. For ſuch as the paſsion of Chriſt was in the eyes of men, ſuch is our paſsion or condition in the eyes of God, and that which wicked men did to Chriſt, the ſame dooth ſinne and Sathan to our verie ſoules.

The ſecond point is, that men beleeuing in Chriſt are not their owne, or Lords of theſelues, but wholy both body & ſoule belong to Chriſt, in that they were giuen to him of God the father, and he hath purchaſed them with his owne blood. 1. Cor. 3. Yee are Chriſts, and Chriſt Gods. Hence it commeth to paſſe (which is not to bee forgotten) that Chriſt eſteemeth all the croſſes and afflictions of his people, as his owne proper afflictions. Hence againe we muſt learne to giue vp our ſelues both bodie and ſoule to the honour and ſeruice of Chriſt, whoſe we are.

The third is, that euerie true beleeuer, not as he is a man, but as he is a new man, or a Chriſtian, hath his being and ſubſiſting from Chriſt, We are members of his bodie, of his fleſh, and of his bone, Ephe. 5. 30. In which wordes, Paul alludes to the ſpeech of Adam, Gen. 3. Thou art bone of my bone, and fleſh of my fleſh, and thereby hee teacheth, that as Eue was made of a rib taken out of the ſide of Adam, ſo doth the whole Church of God, and euerie man regenerate, ſpring and ariſe out of the blood that ſtreamed from the heart and ſide of Chriſt crucified.

The fourth is, that all good workes done of vs, proceede from the vertue and merit of Chriſt crucified: he is the cauſe of them in vs, and we are the cauſes of them, in and by him. Without me (ſayth he) yee can doe nothing: and, Euerie branch that beareth no fruit in me, marke well, he ſayth, in me, he taketh away, Iohn 15. 2.

The fift point is, that wee owe vnto Chriſt an endleſſe debt. For he was crucified onely as our ſuretie and pledge, and in the ſpectacle of his paſsion we muſt conſider our ſelues as the chief debters, and that the verie diſcharge of our debt, that is the ſinnes which are inherent in vs, were the proper cauſe of all the endleſſe paines and torments that Chriſt endured, that he might ſet vs moſt miſerable bankrupts at libertie from hell, death, and damnation. For this his vnſpeakable goodneſſe, if we doe but once thinke of it ſeriouſly, we muſt needes confeſſe that we owe our ſelues, our ſoules, and bodies, and all that we haue, as a debt due vnto him. And ſo ſoone as any man beginnes to knowe Chriſt crucified, hee knowes his owne debt, and thinks of the paiment of it.

Thus we ſee how Chriſt is to be known: now wee ſhall not neede to make much examination whether this maner of knowing and acknowledging of Chriſt, take any place in the worlde or no: for fewe there bee that knowe him as they ought. The Turke euen at this verie day knowes him not, but as he was a Prophet. The Iewe ſcorneth his croſſe, and paſſion. The Popiſh Churches, though in worde they confeſſe him, yet doe they not know him as they ought. The Friars and Ieſuites in their Sermons at this day, commonly vſe the paſsion as a meanes to ſtirre vp pittie and compaſsion towards Chriſt, who beeing ſo righteous a man, was ſo hardly intreated, and to inflame their hearts to an hatred of the Iewes, and Iudas, and Pontius Pilate that put our bleſſed Sauiour to death; but all this may be done in anie other hyſtorie. And the ſeruice of God which in that Church ſtands now in force by the Canons of the Councell of Trent, defaceth Chriſt crucified, in that the paſsions of Martyrs are made meritorious, and the verie word of the croſſe their onely helpe: and the virgin Marie the Queene of heauen, and a mother of mercie, who in remiſsion of ſins may command her ſon: and they giue religious adoration to dumbe crucifixes, made by the hand and art of man.

The common proteſtant likewiſe commeth ſhort herein for three cauſes. Firſt whereas in word they acknowledge him to be their Sauiour that hath redeemed thē from their euill conuerſation, yet indeede they make him a patrone of their ſinnes. The theefe makes him the receyuer, the murderer makes him his refuge, b the adulterer (be it ſpoken with reuerence vnto his Maieſtie) makes him the bawde. For generally men walke on in their euil waies, ſome liuing in this ſinne, ſome in that, and yet for all this, they perſwade themſelues, that God is mercifull, and that Chriſt hath freed them from death and damnation,

on. Thus Christ that came to aboliſh ſinne, is made a maintainer thereof, and the common pack-horſe of the world, to beare euerie mans burthen. Secondly, men are content to take knowledge of the merit of Chriſts paſsion for the remiſsion of their ſinnes, but in the meane ſeaſon, the vertue of Chriſts death in the mortifying of ſinne, and the bleſſed example of his paſsion, which ought to bee followed & expreſſed in our liues and conuerſations, is little or nothing regarded. Thirdly, men vſually content themſelues generally and confuſedly to know Chriſt to be their redeemer, neuer once ſeeking in euerie particular eſtate and condition of life, and in euerie particular bleſsing of God, to feele the beneſite of his paſsion. What is the cauſe that almoſt all the world liue in ſecuritie, neuer almoſt touched for their horrible ſinnes? Surely the reaſon is, becauſe they did neuer yet ſeriouſly conſider that Chriſt in the Garden lay groueling vppon the earth, ſweating water and blood for their offences. Againe, all ſuch as by fraud and oppreſsion, or any kinde of hard dealing ſucke the blood of poore men, neuer yet knew that their ſinnes drew out the heart blood of Chriſt. And prowd men and women, that are puffed vp by reaſon of their attire, which is the badge of their ſhame, and neuer ceaſe hunting after ſtraunge faſhions, doe not conſider that Chriſt was not crucified in gay attire, but naked, that he might beare the whole ſhame and curſe of the law for vs. Theſe & ſuch like, whatſoeuer they ſay in word, if we reſpect the tenour of their liues, are flat enemies of the croſſe of Chriſt, & tread his pretious blood vnder their feete.

Now then, conſidering this ſo weightie and ſpeciall a point of religion, is ſo much neglected, O man or woman, high or lowe, young or olde, if thou haue beene wanting this way, begin for verie ſhame to learn, and learning truly to know Chriſt crucified. That thou maiſt attaine to this, behold him often, not in the wooden crucifix after the Popiſh maner, but in the preaching of the word, and in the Sacraments, in which thou ſhalt ſee him crucified before thine eies, Gal. 3. 1. Deſire not here vpon earth to behold him with the bodily eye, but looke vpon him with the eye of true and liuely faith, applying him and his merits to thy ſelfe as thine owne, and that with broken and bruiſed heart, as the poore Iſraelites ſtung with fierie Serpents euen to death, beheld the brazen Serpent. Againe, thou muſt looke vppon him firſt of all as a glaſſe or ſpectacle, in which thou ſhalt ſee Gods glorie greater in thy redemption, then in thy creation. In the creation appeared Gods infinite wiſdome, power, and goodneſſe: in the redemption by the paſsion of Chriſt, his endleſſe iuſtice and mercie. In the creation thou art a member of the firſt Adam, and beareſt his image: in thy redemption thou art a member of the ſecond Adam. In the firſt thou art indued with naturall life, in the ſecond with ſpirituall. In the firſt, thou haſt in the perſon of Eve thy beginning of the rib of Adam: in the ſecond, thou haſt thy beginning as thou art borne of God out of the blood of Chriſt. Laſtly, in the firſt, God gaue life, in commaunding that to bee, which was not: in the ſecond, hee giues life, not by life, but by death, euen of his owne ſonne. This is the myſterie vnto which the Angels themſelues deſire to looke into. 1. Pet. 1. 12. Secondly, thou muſt behold him as the full price of thy redemption, and perfect reconciliation with God; and pray earneſtly to God, that he would ſeale vp the ſame in thy verie conſcience by his holy Spirit. Thirdly, thou muſt behold Chriſt as an example, to whom thou muſt conforme thy ſelfe by regeneration. For this cauſe giue diligence, that thou mayeſt by experience ſay, that thou art dead, and crucified, and buried with Chriſt, and that thou riſeſt againe with him to newneſſe of life: that he enlightens thy mind, and by degrees reformes thy wil and affections, & giues thee both the will and the deed in euery good thing. And that thou maiſt not faile in this thy knowledge, reade the hiſtorie of chriſts paſsion, obſerue all the parts and circumſtances therof, and apply them to thy ſelfe for thy full conuerſion. When thou readeſt that Chriſt went to the Garden, as his cuſtome was, where the Iewes might ſooneſt attach him, conſider that he went to the death of the croſſe for thy ſinnes willingly, and not of conſtraint; and that therefore thou for thy part ſhouldeſt doe him all ſeruice freely, and frankely, Pſal. 110. 3. When thou heareſt that in his agonie his ſoule was heauie vnto death, know it was for his ſins, & that thou ſhouldeſt much more conceiue heauineſſe of heart for the ſame: againe, that this ſorrow of his is ioy and reioycing vnto thee, if thou wilt beleeue in him; therefore Paul ſayeth, I ſay againe, reioyce in the Lord.

When

When thou readeſt that in the garden he praied lying groueling on his face ſweating water and blood, beginne to thinke ſeriouſly what an vnſpeakable meaſure of Gods wrath was vpon thy bleſſed Sauiour, that did proſtrate his bodie vpon the earth, and cauſe the blood to follow: and thinke that thy ſinnes muſt needes be moſt hainous, that brought ſuch bloodie and grieuous paines vpon him. Alſo thinke it a very ſhame for thee to carrie thy head to heauen with haughtie lookes, to wallow in thy pleaſures, and to draw the innocent blood of thy poore brethren by oppreſſion and deceit, for whome Chriſt ſweat water and blood, and take an occaſion from Chriſts agonie, to lay aſide the pride of thy heart, to be aſhamed of thy ſelfe, to grieue in heart, yea euen to bleede for thine owne offences, caſting downe and humbling thy ſelfe with Ezra, ſaying, O my God, I am confounded and aſhamed to lift vp mine eyes vnto thee, my God: for mine iniquities are increaſed, and thy treſpaſſe is growne vp into heauen. When thou readeſt that Chriſt was taken and bound, thinke that thy very ſinnes brought him into the power of his enemies, and were the very bondes wherewith he was tied: thinke that thou ſhouldeſt haue beene bound in the very ſame manner vnleſſe he had beene a ſuretie and pledge for thee: thinke alſo that thou in the ſelfe ſame manner art bound and tied with the chaynes of thine owne ſinnes, and that by nature thy will, affections, and whole ſpirit is tied and chained to the will of the deuill, ſo as thou canſt doe nothing but that which he willeth: laſtly, thinke and beleeue that the bondes of Chriſt ſerue to purchaſe thy libertie from hell, death, and damnation. When thou heareſt that hee was brought before Annas and Caiaphas, thinke it was meete, that thy, ſuretie and pledge, who was to ſuffer the condemnation due vnto thee, ſhould by the high Prieſt, as by the mouth of God, be condemned: and woonder at this, that the very coeſſentiall and eternall Sonne of God, euen the very ſouereigne Iudge of the world, ſtandes to be iudged, and that by wicked men; perſwading thy ſelfe that this ſo great confuſion comes of thy ſinnes. Whereupon beeing further amazed at thy fearefull eſtate, humble thy ſelfe in duſt and aſhes, & pray God ſo to ſoften thy ſtonie heart, that thou maieſt turne to him, and by true faith lay hold on Chriſt, who hath thus exceedingly abaſed himſelfe, that his ignominie may be thy glorie, and his arraignment thy perfect abſolution. When thou readeſt that Barrabas the murderer was preferred before Chriſt, though he exceeded both men and Angels in holines; thinke it was to manifeſt his innocencie, and that thy very ſinnes pulled vpon him this ſhamefull reproch; and in that for thy cauſe he was eſteemed worſe then Barrabas, thinke of thy ſelfe as a moſt heynous and wretched ſinner, and (as Paul ſaith) the head of all ſinners. When thou readeſt that he was openly and iudicially condemned to the curſed death of the croſſe, conſider what is the wrath and furie of God againſt ſinne, and what is his great and infinite mercie to ſinners: and in this ſpectacle looke vpon thy ſelfe, and with grones of heart crie out, and ſay, O good God, what ſeeteſt thou here before mine eyes? I, euen I haue ſinned, I am guiltie and worthy of damnation. Whence comes this chaunge, that thy bleſſed Sonne is in my roome, but of thy vnſpeakable mercie? Wretch that I am, how haue I forgotten my ſelfe, and thee alſo my God? O ſonne of God, how long haſt thou abaſed thy ſelfe for me? Therefore giue me grace O God, that beholding mine owne eſtate in the perſon of my Sauiour thus condemned, I may deteſt and loath my ſinnes that are the cauſe thereof, and by a liuely faith imbrace that abſolution which thou offereſt me in him, who was condemned in my ſtead and roome. O Ieſus Chriſt Sauiour of the world, giue me thy holy and bleſſed Spirit that I may iudge my ſelfe, and be as vile and baſe in mine owne eyes as thou waſt vile before the Iewes: alſo vnite me vnto thee by the ſame ſpirit, that in thee I may be as worthie to be accepted before God, as I am worthie in my ſelfe to be deteſted for my ſinnes. When thou readeſt that he was clad in purple & crowned with thornes, mocked and ſpit vpon, behold the euerlaſting ſhame that is due vnto thee, & be aſhamed of thy ſelfe, & in this point conforme thy ſelfe to Chriſt, and be content (as he was) to be reproched, abuſed, and deſpiſed, ſo it be for a good cauſe. Whē thou readeſt that before his crucifying, he was ſtript of all his cloathes, thinke it was that he being naked might beare thy ſhame on the croſſe, and with his moſt pretious and rich nakednes couer thy deformitie. When thou readeſt deſt the complaint of Chriſt, that he was forſaken of his father, conſider how he ſuffered the pangs and torments of hell as thy pledge and ſuertie. Learne by his vnſpeakable torments what a fearefull thing it is to ſinne againſt God, and begin to renounce thy ſelfe, and deteſt thy ſinnes, and to walke as a child of light, according to the meaſure of grace receiued. When thou commeſt to die, ſet before thine eies Chriſt in the midſt of all his torments on the croſſe: in beholding of which ſpectacle to thy endles comfort, thou ſhalt ſee a paradiſe in the midſt of hell; God the father recõciled vnto thee, thy ſauiour reaching out his hands vnto thee to receiue thy ſoule vnto him; and his croſſe as a ladder to aduance it to eternall glorie. Whereas he cried aloud with a ſtrõg voice at the point of death, it was to ſhew that he died willingly without violence or conſtraint from any creature, and that if it had ſo pleaſed him, he could haue freed himſelfe from death, and haue caſt his very enemies to the very bottom of hell. When thou readeſt that he commended his ſoule into the hands of his Father, conſider that thy ſoule alſo (ſo be it thou wilt beleeue in him) is deliuered vp into the hands of God, and ſhall be preſerued againſt the rage and malice of all thine enemies, and herupon thou maiſt be bold to commend thy ſpirit into the hands of God the father. When thou readeſt of his death conſider that thy ſinnes were the cauſe of it, and that thou ſhouldeſt haue ſuffered the ſame eternally, vnleſſe the ſonne of God had come in thy roome: againe conſider his death as a ranſome, and apprehend the ſame by faith, as the meanes of thy life: for by death Chriſt hath wounded both the firſt & ſecõd death and hath made his croſſe to be a throne or tribunall ſeate of iudgment againſt all his and thine enemies. When thou readeſt of the trẽbling of the earth at the death of Chriſt, think with thy ſelfe it did in his kind as it were grone vnder the burden of the ſinnes of men in the world: and by his motion then it ſignified, that euen thou & the reſt deſerued rather to be ſwallowed of the earth, and to goe downe into the pit aliue, then to haue any part in the merit of Chriſt crucified. When thou readeſt of his buriall, think that it was to ratifie his death and to vanquiſh death euen in his owne den: Applie this buriall to thy ſelfe, & beleeue that it ſerues to make thy graue a bed of doune, and to free thy body from corruption. Laſtly, pray to God that thou maiſt feele the power of the ſpirit of Chriſt weakning and conſuming the body of ſinne, euen as a dead corps rottes in the graue, till it be reſolued to duſt.

When thou haſt thus peruſed and applied to thy ſelfe the hiſtorie of the Paſſion of Chriſt, goe yet further, and labour by faith to ſee Chriſt crucified in all the works of God, either in thee or vpon thee. Behold him at thy table in meat & drinke, which is as it were a liuely ſermon and a daily pledge of the mercie of God in Chriſt. Behold him in all thine afflictions, as thy partner that pitieth thy caſe, & hath compaſſion on thee. Behold him in thy moſt dangerous temptations, in which the deuill thundreth damnation, behold him I ſay as a mightie Sampſon bearing away the gates of his enemies vpon his owne ſhoulders: and killing more by death then by life, crucifiing the deuill, euen then when he is crucified, by death killing death; by entrance into the graue, opening the graue and giuing life to the dead, and in the houſe of death ſpoiling him of all his ſtrength and power. Behold him in all the afflictions of thy brethren, as though he himſelfe weare naked, hungry, ſicke, harbourles, and doe vnto them all the good thou canſt, as to Chriſt himſelfe. If thou wouldeſt behold God himſelfe, looke vpon him in Chriſt crucified, who is the ingrauen image of the fathers perſon; and know it to be a terrible thing in the time of the trouble of the conſcience to thinke of God without Chriſt, in whoſe face the glorie of God in his endles mercie is to be ſeene, 2. Cor. 4. 6. If thou wouldeſt come to God for grace, for comfort, for ſaluation, for any bleſſing, come firſt to Chriſt hanging, bleeding, dying vpon the croſſe, without whome there is no hearing God, no helping God, no ſauing God, no God to thee at all. In a word, let Chriſt be all things without exception vnto thee, Coloſſ. 3. 11. for when thou praieſt for any bleſſing either temporall or ſpirituall, be it whatſoeuer it will be or can be, thou muſt aske it at the hands of God the father by the merit and mediation of Chriſt crucified: now looke as we aske bleſſings at Gods hand, ſo muſt we receiue them of him; and as they are receiued, ſo muſt we poſſeſſe and uſe them daily, namely as gifts of God procured to vs by the merit of Chriſt: which gifts for this very cauſe, muſt be wholy imploied to the honor of Chriſt.

TO ALL IGNORANT PEOple that deſire to be inſtructed

POore people, your manner is to ſoothe vp your ſelues, as though ye were in a moſt happy eſtate: but if the matter come to a iuſt triall, it will fall out farre otherwiſe. For you leade your liues in great ignorance, as may appeare by theſe your common opinions which follow.

1 That faith is a mans good meaning, and his good ſeruing of God.

2 That God is ſerued by the rehearſing of the ten Commaundements, the Lords prayer, and the Creede.

3 That ye haue beleeued in Chriſt, euer ſince you could remember.

4 That it is pitty he ſhould liue, which doth any whit doubt of his ſaluation.

5 That none can tell whether hee ſhall be ſaued or no certainely: but that all men muſt be of a good beleefe.

6 That howſoeuer a man liue, yet if he call vpon God on his death-bed, and ſay, Lord haue mercy vpon me: and ſo goe away like a lamb, he is certainely ſaued.

7 That if any be ſtrangely viſited, he is either taken with a planet, or bewitched.

8 That a man may lawfully ſweare, when hee ſpeakes nothing but the truth, and ſweares by nothing but that which is good, as by his faith, or troth.

9 That a Preacher is a good man no longer then he is in the pulpit. They thinke all like themſelues.

10 That a man may repent when he will, becauſe the Scripture ſaith, At what time ſoeuer a ſinner doth repent him of his ſinnes, &c.

11 That it is an eaſier thing to pleaſe God, than to pleaſe our neighbour.

12 That ye can keepe the commandements, as well as God will giue you leaue.

13 That it is the ſafeſt to doe in Religion as moſt doe.

14 That merry ballads and bookes, as Scoggin, Beuis of Southampton, &c. are good to driue away the time, and to remoue heart-quames.

15 That ye can ſerue God with all your hearts, and that ye would be ſory elſe.

16 That a man needs not heare ſo many ſermons, except he could follow them better.

17 That a man which commeth at no ſermons, may as well belieue, as he which heares all the ſermons in the world.

18 That ye know all the Preacher can tell you. For he can ſay nothing, but that euery man is a ſinner, that we muſt loue our neighbours as our ſelues, that euery man muſt be ſaued by Chriſt: and all this ye can tell as well as hee.

19 That it was a good world when the old Religion was, becauſe all things were cheape.

20 That drinking and bezeling in the Ale-houſe or Tauerne, is good fellowſhip, and ſhewes a good kinde nature, and maintaines neighborhoode.

21 That a man may ſweare by the Maſſe, becauſe it is nothing now, and by*t* Lady, becauſe ſhe is gone out of the Country.

22 That euery man muſt be for himſelfe, and God for vs all.

23 That a man may make of his owne, whatſoeuer he can.

24 That if a man remember to ſay his prayers euery morning, (though he neuer vnderſtand them) he hath bleſſed himſelfe for all the day following.

25 That a man praieth when he ſaith the ten Commandements.

26 That a man eates his Maker in the Sacrament.

27 That if a man be no adulterer, no theefe, nor murderer, and doe no man harme, he is a right honeſt man.

28 That a man neede not haue any knowledge of Religion, becauſe hee is not booke-learned.

29 That one may haue a good meaning, when he ſaith, and doth, that which is euill.

30 That a man may go to wizards, called Wiſe-men, for counſell; becauſe God hath prouided a ſalue for euery ſore.

31 That yee are to be excuſed in all your doings, becauſe the beſt men are ſinners.

32 That ye haue ſo ſtrong a faith in Chriſt, that no euill company can hurt you.

Theſe, and ſuch like ſayings, what argue they but your groſſe ignorance? Now where ignorance raigneth, there raignes ſinne: and where ſinne raignes, there the diuell rules: and where he rules, men are in a damnable caſe.

Ye will reply vnto me thus: that ye are not ſo bad I would make you: if neede be, you can ſay the Creede, the Lords prayer, and the ten Commandements: and therefore ye will be of Gods beleefe, ſay all men what they will, and you defie the diuell from your hearts.

I anſwer againe, that it is not ſufficient to ſay all theſe without booke, vnleſſe yee can vnderſtand the meaning of the words, and be able to make a right vſe of the Commandements, of the Creede, of the Lords prayer, by applying them inwardly to your hearts and conſciences, and outwardly, to your liues and conuerſations. This is the very point in which ye faile.

And for an helpe in this your ignorance, to bring you to true knowledge, vnfained faith, and ſound repentance: heere I haue ſet downe the principall point of Chriſtian religion, in ſix plaine and eaſie rules, euen ſuch as the ſimpleſt may eaſily learne: and hereunto is adioyned an expoſition of them, word, by word. If ye doe want other good doctrine, then vſe this my labour for your inſtruction. In reading of it, firſt learne the ſix principalls, and when ye haue them without the booke, and the meaning of them withall, then learne the expoſition alſo: which being well conceiued, and in ſome meaſure felt in the heart, yee ſhall be able to profite by Sermons, whereas now yee cannot: and the ordinary parts of the Catechiſme, namely the ten Commandements, the Creede, the Lords prayer, and the inſtitution of the two Sacraments, ſhall more eaſily be vnderſtood.

Thine in Chriſt Ieſus.

W. Perkins.

The foundation of Christian Religion, gathered into sixe Principles.

The first Principle.

Question.

WHat doost thou beleeue concerning God?

Ans. There is one God, Creator, and Gouernour of all things, distinguished into the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghost.

Proofes out of the word of God.

1. There is a God.

Rom. 1.19 For the inuisible things of him; that is, his eternall power and godhead, are seene by the creation of the world, being considered in his works, to the intent, that they should bee without excuse.

Act. 14.17. Neuertheless, hee left not himselfe without witnesse, in that hee did good, and gaue vs raine from heauen, and fruitfull seasons, filling our harts with foode and gladnesse.

2. This God one.

1. Cor. 8.4. Concerning therefore meate sacrificed to idolls, we know that an idoll is nothing in the world, and that there is none other God but one.

3. He is Creator of all things.

Gen. 1.1. In the beginning, God created the heauen and the earth.

Heb. 11.3 Through faith we vnderstand, that the world was ordained by the word of God: so that the things which we see, are not made of things which did appeare.

4. He is Gouernor of all things.

Prou. 15.3 The eyes of the Lord in euery place behold the euill and the good.

Math. 10.30. Yea, and all the haires of your head are numbred.

5. Distinguished into the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghost.

Math. 3.16. And Iesus when hee was baptized, came strait out of the water, and loe, the heauens were opened vnto him, and Iohn saw the spirite of God descending like a Done, and lighting vpon him.

verf. 17. And loe, a voice came from heauen, saying: This is my beloued Sonne, in whom I am well pleased.

1. Ioh. 5.7. For there are three which beare record in heauen. the Father, the Word, and the holy Ghost; and these three are one.

The second Principle.

Qu. What doost thou believe concerning man, and concerning thine own selfe?

An. All men are wholly corrupted with sin through Adams fal, and so are become slaues of Sathan, and guilty of eternall damnation.

1. All men are corrupted with sinne.

Rom. 3.10. As it is written, There is none righteous, no not one.

2. They are wholy corrupted.

1. Thess. 5.23. Now the very God of peace sanctifie you throughout, and I pray God that your whole spirite, and soule, and body, may be kept blameless vnto the comming of our Lord Iesus Christ.

Eph 4.17. This I say therefore, and testifie in the Lord, that yee henceforth walke not as other Gentiles walke, in vanity of their minde.

Verf. 18. Hauing their cogitation darkened, and being strangers from the life of God, through the ignorance that is in them, because of the hardnesse of their heart.

Gen. 6.5. When the Lord saw that the wickednesse of man was great in the earth, and all the imaginations of the thoughts of his heart, were onely euill continually.

3. Through Adams fall.

Rom. 5.12. Wherefore, as by one man sinne entred into the world, and death by sinne, and so death went ouer all men, for so much as all men haue sinned.

4. And so are become slaues of Sathan.

Eph. 2.2. Wherein in time past ye walked according to the course of the world, and after the prince that ruleth in the ayre, euen the spirite that now worketh in the children of disobedience.

Heb. 2.14 For as much then, as the children were partakers of flesh and blood, hee also himselfe likewise tooke part with them, that hee might destroy through death, him that had the power of death; that is, the diuell.

2. Cor. 4.4. In whome, the God of this worlde hath blinded the mindes, that is, of Infidells, that the light of the glorious Gospel of Christ, which is the image of God, shoulde not shine vnto them.

5. And guilty of eternall damnation.

Gal. 3.10. For as many as are of the workes of the law, are vnder the curse: for it is written; Cursed is euery man that continueth not in all things, which are written in the booke of the Law, to doe them. Likewise then, as by the offence of

Rom. 5.18. one, the fault came on all men to condemnation:

tion: so by the iustifying of one, the benefite abounded toward all men, to the iustification of life.

The third Principle.

Q. What meanes is there for thee to escape this damnable estate?

Ans. Iesus Christ the eternall Sonne of God, being made man by his death vpon the Crosse, and by his righteousnesse, hath perfectly alone by himselfe accomplished all things that are needefull for the saluation of mankinde.

1. Iesus Christ the eternall Sonne of God.

Ioh.1.14. And the word was made flesh, and dwelt among vs, and we saw the glory thereof, as the glory of the onely begotten (Sonne) of the Father, full of grace and truth.

2. Being made man.

Heb.2.16. For he in no sort tooke the Angells, but he tooke the seede of Abraham.

3. By his death vpon the Crosse.

Esa.53.5. But hee was wounded for our transgressions, he was broken for our iniquities, the chastisement of our peace was vpon him, and with his stripes we are healed.

4. And by his righteousnesse.

Rom.5.19. For as by one mans disobedience, many were made sinners, so by the obedience of one, shall many also be made righteous.

2.Cor.5.21. For hee hath made him to bee sinne for vs, which knew no sinne, that we should be made the righteousnesse of God in him.

5. Hath perfectly

Heb.7.25. Wherefore hee is able also perfectly, to saue them that come vnto God by him, seeing he euer liueth to make intercession for them.

6. Alone by himselfe

Acts4.12. Neither is there saluation in any other, for among men, there is giuen none other name vnder heauen, whereby we must be saued.

7. Accomplished all things needefull for the saluation of mankinde.

1.Ioh.2.2. And hee is the reconciliation for our sinnes, and not for ours only, but also for the sinnes of the whole world.

The fourth Principle.

Q. But how maiest thou be made partaker of Christ and his benefits?

Ans. A man of a contrite and humble spirite, by faith alone apprehending and applying Christ with all his merites vnto himselfe, is iustified before God, and sanctified.

1. A man of a contrite and humble spirit.

Esay.57.15. For thus saith he that is high and excellent, He that inhabiteth the eternity, whose name is the Holy one, I dwell in the high and holy place, with him also that is of a contrite and humble spirite, to reuiue the spirite of the humble, and to giue life to them that are of a contrite heart.

Psal.51.17. The sacrifices of God, are a contrite spirite, a contrite and a broken heart, O God, thou wilt not despise.

2. By faith alone.

Mar.5.36. As soone as Iesus heard that word spoken, hee said vnto the Ruler of the Synagogue, Be not afraid, onely beleeue.

Num.21.19. So Moses made a Serpent of brasse, and set it vp for a signe, and when a serpent had bitten a man, then he looked to the Serpent of brasse, and liued.

Ioh.3.14. And as Moses lift vp the Serpent in the wilderneſſe, so must the Sonne of man be lifted vp.

Verse 15. That whosoeuer beleeueth in him, should not perish, but haue eternall life.

3 Apprehending and applying Chirst with all his merits vnto himselfe.

Iohn 1.12. But as many as receiued him, to them he gaue power to be the sons of God, to them that beleeue in his name. Iohn6.35. And Iesus saide vnto them, I am the bread of life, he that commeth to me, shall not hunger, and hee that beleeueth in me, shall neuer thirst.

4. Is iustified before God.

Rom.4.3. For what saieth the Scripture, Abraham beleeued God, and it was counted to him for righteousnesse.

Verse 6. Euen as Dauid declareth the blessednesse of the man, vnto whom God imputeth righteousnesse without workes, saying:

Verse 7. Blessed are they, whose iniquities are forgiuen, and whose sinnes are couered.

5. And sanctified.

Acts 15.19. And hee put no difference betweene vs and them, after that by faith hee had purified their hearts.

1.Cor.1.30. But ye are of him in Christ Iesus, who of God is made vnto vs wisedome, and righteousnesse, and sanctification, and redemption.

The fifth Principle.

Que. What are the ordinary or vsuall meanes for the obtaining of faith?

Ans. Faith commeth only by the preaching of the word, and increaseth daily by it: as also by the administration of the Sacraments and praier.

1. Faith commeth onely by the preaching of the word, and increaseth daily by it.

Rom. 10.14. But how shall they call on him, in whome they haue not beleeued? How shall they beleeue in him, of whome they haue not heard? And howe shall they heare without a Preacher?

Prou.29.18. Where there is no vision, the people decay: but he be that keepeth the law is blessed.

Hos.4.8. My people are destroyed for lacke of knowledge: because thou hast refused knowledge, I will also refuse thee, that thou shalt be no Priest to me, and seeing thou hast forgotten the lawe of thy God, I will also forget thy children.

2. As also by the administration of the Sacraments.

Rom.4.11. After he receiued the signe of circumcision, as the seale of the righteousnesse of the faith, which he had when he was vncircumcised, that he should be the Father of all them that beleeue, not being circumcised, that righteousnesse might be imputed to them all.

1 Cor.10.1. Moreouer brethren, I would not that ye should be ignorant, that all our Fathers were vnder the cloud, and all passed through the sea, &c.

3. And Prayer.

Rom.10.13 For whosoeuer shall call vpon the name of the Lord shall be saued.

The sixt Principle.

Q. What is the estate of all men after death?

A. All men shall rise againe with their owne bodies, to the last iudgement, which beeing ended, the godly shall possesse the kingdome of heauen: but vnbeleeuers and reprobates shall be in hell, tormented with the diuell and his angels for euer.

1. All men shall rise againe with their owne bodies.

Ioh.5.28. Marueil not at this, for the houre shall come, in the which all that are in the graues shal heare his voice.

verse 29. And they shall come foorth that haue done good, vnto the resurrection of life: but they that haue done euill, vnto the resurrection of condemnation.

2. To the last iudgement.

Eccle.12.14. For God will bring euery worke vnto iudgement, with euerie secret thing, whether it be good or euill,

Math.12.36. But I say vnto you, that of euerie idle word that men shall speake, they shall giue account thereof, at the day of iudgement.

3. Which being ended, the godly

2.Pet.2.7. And deliuered iust Lot, vexed with the vncleane conuersation of the wicked.

Ezech 9.4. And the Lord said vnto him: goe through the middest of the Citie, euen through the middest of Ierusalem, and set a marke vpon the foreheades of them that mourne, and crie for all the abhominations that be done in the midest thereof.

4. Shall possesse the kingdome of God.

Math.25.34. Then shall the king say to them on his right hand, Come ye blessed of my father, inherit ye the kingdome prepared for you, from the beginning of the world.

5. But vnbeleeuers and reprobates shal be in hell, tormented with the diuell and his angels.

verse 41. Then shall hee say vnto them on the left hand, depart from me ye cursed into euerlasting fire, which is prepared for the diuell and his angels.

The Scriptures for proofe were onely quoted by the author, to moue thee to search them: the words themselues I haue expressed at the earnest request of many, that thou maiest more easily learne them: if yet thou wilt be ignorant, thy malice is euident: if thou gainest knowledge, giue God the glorie in doing of his will.

Thine T. S.

THE EXPOSITION OF THE PRINCIPLES.

The first Principle expounded.

Question.

WHat is God?

a Iohn 4.24. A. God is a a spirit, or a spirituall substance, most wise, most holy, eternall, infinite.

Q. How doe you perswade your selfe that there is a God?

A. Beside the testimonie of the Scriptures, plaine reason will shew it.

Q. What is one reason?

b Rom. 1.20. Act.14.17. A. When I consider b the wonderfull frame of the world, me thinkes the seelie creatures that bee in it could neuer make it: neither could it make it selfe, and therefore besides all these, the maker of it must needs be God. Euen as when a man comes into a strange countrie, and sees faire and sumptuous buildings, and yet finds no liuing creatures there, besides Birds and Beasts, he will not imagine, that either birds or beasts reared those buildings, but he presently conceiues, that some men either were, or haue been there.

Q. What other reason haue you?

c Rom.1.29. Gen.38.10. & 13,14. A. c A man that commits any sinne, as murder, fornication, adulterie, blasphemie, &c. albeit he doeth so conceale the matter, that no man liuing know of it, yet oftentimes he hath a griping in his conscience, and feeles the verie flashing of Hell fire: which is a strong reason to shewe, that there is a God, before whose iudgement seate he must answer for this fact.

Q. How many Gods are there?

d 1.Cor. 8.6 A. No d more but one.

Q. How doe you conceiue this one God in your mind?

e Deut. 4. 16. Amos 4.13. A. Not e by framing any image of him in my mind (as ignorant folkes doe, that thinke him to be an old man sitting in heauen) but I conceiue him by his properties and workes.

Q. What be his chiefe properties?

f Iob 12.13. A. First, he is, f most wise, vnderstanding all things aright, and knowing the reason of them. Secondly, he is g most holy, which appeareth in that he is most iust and merciful vnto his creatures. Thirdly, he is h eternall, without either beginning or end of dayes. Lastly, he is i infinite, both because he is present in all places, and because he is of power sufficient to doe whatsoeuer he k will.

g Esay 6.3. Exod. 20. 5,6 h Esa.41.4.

i Psa 139 all.

k Iob.9 4. Deut. 10. 17.

Q. What be the workes of God.

l Iere. 10 12. Psal.33.6. A. l The creation of the world, and euery thing therein, and the preseruation of them being created by his speciall prouidence.

Q. How knowe you that God gouerneth euery particular thing in the worlde by his speciall prouidence?

A. To omit the m Scriptures, I see it by experience: n Meate, Drinke, and clothing being voyde of heate and life, could not preserue the life of man, vnlesse there were a speciall prouidence of God to giue vertue vnto them.

m Mat.10.30. Prou. 16.33. n Leu.26.26. Matth.4.4.

Q. How is this one god distinguished?

A. o Into the Father which begetteth the Sonne: into the Sonne who is begotten of the Father: into the holy-Ghost, p who proceedeth from the Father and the Sonne.

o 1.Iohn 5.7 Matth.3.12 p Iohn 15.26

The second principle expounded.

Q. Let vs now come to our selues, and first tell me what is the naturall estate of man?

Ans. Euery man is by nature a dead in sinne as a loathsome carrion, or as a dead corps lieth rotting and stincking in the graue, hauing in him the seede of al sinnes.

a Ephe.2.1 1. Tim.5.5

Q. What is sinne?

A. Any b breach of the lawe of God, if it be no more but the least want of that which the Lord requireth.

b Iohn3.4 Rom.7.7 Galat.5.10

Quest. Howe many sortes of sinne are there?

A. Sinne is either c the corruption of nature, or any euill actions that proceede of it as fruites thereof.

c Coloss.3.5 Psalme 15.5

Qu. In whome is the corruption of nature?

An. In all men, d none excepted.

d Rom.3.10

Q. In what part of man is it?

An. In euery e parte both in body and soule, like as a leprosie that runneth from the crowne of the head to the soale of the foote.

e Genes 6.5. 1.Thess 5.23

Qu. Shew me how euery parte of man is corrupted with sinne?

A. First, in the f minde there is nothing but ignorance and blindnesse concerning heauenly matters. Secondly, g the conscience is defiled, beeing alwayes eyther benummed with sinne, or else turmoyled with inward accusations & terrors. Third ly, h the will of man only willeth and lusteth after euill. Fourthly, the i affections of the heart, as loue, ioy, hope, desire, &c. are mooued and stirred to that which is euill f 1.Cor.2.14. Rom.8.5. g Tit.1.15. Ephes.4.18. Esay 57.20.

euill to imbrace it, and they are neuer ſtirred vnto that which is good, vnleſſe it be to eſchewe it. Laſtly, the k members of the bodie are the inſtruments and tooles of the mind for the execution of ſinne.

k Rom.6.13.

Q. What be thoſe euill actions that are the fruits of this corruption?

A. l Euill thoughts in the minde, which come either by a mans owne conceiuing, or by the ſuggeſtion m of the diuell: euill motions and luſts ſtirring in the heart, and from theſe ariſe euill wordes and deedes, when any occaſion is giuen.

l Gen.6.5.
m Ioh.13.2. Act.5.3. 1 Chro.21.1.

Q. Howe commeth it to paſſe that all men are thus defiled with ſinne?

A. By n Adams infidelitie and diſobedience, in eating the forbidden fruit: euen as we ſee great perſonages by treaſon doe not onely hurt themſelues, but alſo ſtaine their blood, and diſgrace their poſteritie.

n Rom.5.12. 16.19. Gen.3.

Q. What hurt comes to man by his ſinne?

A. o He is continually ſubiect to the curſe of God in his life time, in the ende of his life, and after his life.

o Gal.3.10.

Q. What is the curſe of God in this life?

A. p In the bodie, diſeaſes, aches, paines: in the ſoule, blindneſſe, hardneſſe of heart, horrour of conſcience: in goodes, hinderances, and loſſes: in name, ignominie and reproch: laſtly, in the whole man, bondage vnder Sathan the prince of darkneſſe.

p Deut.28. 21.22.27. 65,66,67.

Q. What maner of bondage is this?

A. This bondage q is when a man is the ſlaue of the diuell, and hath him to raigne in his heart as his God.

q Heb.2.14. Ephe.2,2. 2 Cor.4.4. Luke.11.21.

Q. Howe may a man know whether Sathan be his God or not?

A. He may know it by this, if he giue obedience to him in his heart, and expreſſe it in his conuerſation.

Q. And how ſhall a man perceiue this obedience?

A. If he r take delight in the euill motions that Sathan puts into his heart, and doe fulfill the luſts of the diuell.

r Iohn.8.44. 1 Iohn.3.8.

Q. What is the curſe due to man in the end of this life?

A. s Death, which is the ſeparation of bodie and ſoule.

s Rom 5.12.

Q. What is the curſe after this life?

A. t Eternall damnation in hell fire, whereof euery man is guiltie, and is in as great danger of it as the traitour apprehended is in danger of hanging, drawing and quartering.

t Gal.3.10. Rom.3.12.

The third principle expounded.

Q. If damnation be the rewarde of ſin, then is a man of all creatures moſt miſerable. A dogge or a toade when they die, all their miſerie is ended: but when a man dieth, there is the beginning of his woe.

Anſ. It were ſo indeede if there were no meanes of deliuerance, but GOD hath ſhewed his mercie, in giuing a Sauiour to mankind.

Q. How is this Sauiour called?

A. u Ieſus Chriſt.

u Matt.1.21

Q. What is Ieſus Chriſt?

A. x The eternall Sonne of God made man in all things, euen y in his infirmities like other men, ſaue onely in ſinne.

x Heb.1.19. Iohn 1.14. y Heb.5.7. Matth.13.18

Q. How was hee made man voyde of ſinne?

A. He was z conceiued in the wombe of a virgin, and ſanctified by the holy-ghoſt at his conception.

z Math.1.18

Queſt. Why muſt our Sauiour be both God and man?

A. He a muſt be a man, becauſe man hath ſinned, and therefore a man muſt die for ſinne to appeaſe Gods wrath: he muſt be God to ſuſtaine and vpholde the manhoode, to ouercome and vanquiſh death.

a 1.Tim.2.5

Queſt. What be the offices of Chriſt to make him an al-ſufficient Sauiour?

A. He b is a prieſt, a prophet, a king.

b Pſalme 45.7 Luke 4.18. Deu.18.15,18

Q. Why is he a prieſt?

A. To worke the meanes of ſaluation in the behalfe of mankind.

Luke 1.33 Pſa.100.all

Q. How doth he worke the meanes of ſaluation?

A. c Firſt, by making ſatisfaction to his father for the ſinne of man: Secondly, by making interceſſion.

c Math.20.28 Hebr.7.25,26

Q. How doth he make ſatisfaction?

An. By two meanes: and the firſt is by offering a ſacrifice.

Q. What is this ſacrifice?

A. d Chriſt himſelfe, as he is man, conſiſting of body and ſoule.

d Eſa.53.10.

Q. What is the e Altar?

e Apoc.8.3

Anſ. Chriſt, as he is God, is the Altar on which he ſacrificed himſelfe.

Hebr.3.10.

Q. Who was the prieſt?

A. None but f Chriſt, and that as he is both God and man.

f Hebr.5.5,6.

Q. How oft did hee ſacrifice himſelfe?

A. Neuer but g once.

g Hebr.9.28

Q. What death did he ſuffer when he ſacrificed himſelfe?

A. A death vpon the croſſe, peculiar to himſelfe alone: for h beſides the ſeparation of body and ſoule, he felt alſo the pangs of h Eſay 55.5 Iohn 12.2 Reu.19.15. Luke 21.44.

hell,

hell, in that the whole wrath of God due to the sinne of man, was powred forth vppon him.

Q. What profite commeth by his Sacrifice?

a Heb. 9 26. A. a Gods wrath is appeased by it.

Q. Could the sufferings of Christ, which was but for a short time, counteruaile euerlasting damnation, and so appease Gods wrath?

b Act. 20. 28 2. Cor. 5. 16. A. Yea: for seeing Christ suffered b God suffered, though not in his Godhead: and that is more then if all men in the worlde had suffered for euer and euer.

Q. Now tell me the other meanes of satisfaction?

A. It is the perfect fulfilling of the law.

Q. How did he fulfill the law?

c 1. Cor. 1. 30. Rom. 1. 19. 2. Cor. 5. 21. A. By c his perfect righteousnes: which consisteth of two parts, the first the integritie and pureuesse of his humane nature: the other, d his obedience in performing all that the law required.

d Rom. 5. 11. Rom. 4. 8.

Q. You haue shewed how Christ doth make satisfaction, tell me likewise how he doth make intercession?

e Rom. 5. 8. 1. Pet. 2. 5. A. He alone doth continually e appeare before his Father in heauen, making the faithfull and al their praiers acceptable vnto him, by applying of the merits of his owne perfect satisfaction to them.

Q. Why is Christ a Prophet?

f Ioh. 6. 45. Math. 3. 17. A. To f reueale vnto his Church the way and meanes of saluation, and this he dooth outwardly by the ministerie of his word, and inwardly by the teaching of his spirit.

Q. Why is he also a King?

g Esai 9. 7. A. That g he might bountifully bestowe vpon vs, and conuey vnto vs al the aforesaid meanes of saluation.

Q. How doth he shew himselfe to bee a King?

h Act. 10. 30. Ephe. 4. 8. Act. 2. 9. A. In h that being dead and buried, hee rose from the graue, quickened his dead bodie, ascended into heauen, and nowe sitteth at the right hand of his father, with ful power and glorie in heauen.

Q. How else?

i Esai. 9. 7. & 50. 11. A. In i that he doth continually inspire and direct his seruants by the diuine power of his holy spirit according to his holy word.

Q. But to whom will this blessed King communicate al these meanes of saluation?

k Mat. 20. 16. Iohn. 1. 11. 1. Iohn. 2. 2. A. He k offereth them to many, and they are sufficient to saue all mankind; but all shall not be saued thereby, because by faith they will not receiue them.

The fourth Principle expounded.

Q. What is faith?

l Iohn. 1. 12. & 6. 35. Gal. 3. 27. Col. 2. 12. A. Faith is a l wonderfull grace of God, by which a man doth apprehend and apply Christ, and all his benefits vnto himselfe.

Q. How doth a man apply Christ vnto himselfe, seeing we are on earth, and Christ in heauen?

m 1. Cor. 2. 11. Rom. 8. 16. A. This m applying is done by assurance, when a man is verily perswaded by the holy spirit of Gods fauour towards himselfe particularly, and of the forgiuenes of his owne sinnes.

Q. How doth God bring men truly to beleeue in Christ?

A. First he prepareth their hearts, that they might be capable of faith: and then he worketh faith in them.

Q. Howe dooth God prepare mens hearts?

n Ezec. 11. 19. Hos. 6. 11. A. n By brusing them, as if one would breake an hard stone to powder: and this is done by humbling them.

Q. How doth God humble a man?

A. By working in him a sight of his sins, and a sorrow for them.

Q. How is this sight of sinne wrought?

o Rom. 3. 20. & 7. 7, &c. A. By the o morall lawe: the summe whereof is the ten commaundements.

Q. What sinnes may I find in my selfe by them?

A. Ten.

Q. What is the first?

a Com. I. A. a To make something thy God which is not God, by fearing it, louing it, so trusting in it more then in the true God.

Q. What is the second?

b II. A. b To worship false gods, or the true God in a false maner.

Q. What is the third?

c III. A. c To dishonour God, in abusing his titles, words and workes.

Q. What is the fourth?

d IIII. A. d To breake the Sabboth, in doing the works of their calling, and of the flesh: and in leauing vndone the workes of the spirit.

Q. What be the fixe latter?

e V. f VI. g VII. h VIII i IX. k X. A. To doe any thing that may hinder thy neighbours e dignitie, f life, g chastitie, h wealth, i good name, k though it be but in the secret thoughts and motions of the heart, vnto which thou giuest no liking nor consent.

Q. What is sorrow for sinne?

l Act. 2. 37. A. It is l whē a mans conscience is touched ed with a liuely feeling of Gods displeasure for any of these sinnes in [m] such wise, that he vtterly despaires of salvation, in regard of any thing in himselfe, acknowledging that he hath deserued shame and confusion eternally.

m 1.Tim.1.15. Luk.15.21. Rom.7.24.

Q. How doth God worke this sorrow?

A. By the terrible curse of the law.

Q. What is that?

A. He [n] which breakes but one of the commandements of God, though it be but once in all his life time, and that onely in one thought, is subiect to, and in danger of eternall damnation therby.

n Gal.3.

Q. When mens hearts are thus prepared, how doth God ingraft faith in them?

A. By working certaine inward motions in the heart, which are the seedes of faith, out of which it breedeth.

Q. What is the first of them?

A. When a man humbed vnder the burden of his sinnes, doth [o] acknowledge and feele that he stands in great neede of Christ.

o Esa.55.1. Ioh.7.37. Luk.1.53.

Q. What is the second?

A. An [p] hungring desire and a longing to be made partaker of Christ and all his merits.

p Rev.21.26.

Q. What is the third?

A. A [q] flying to the throne of grace, from the sentence of the lawe pricking the conscience.

q Heb.4.16

Q. How is it done?

A. By [r] praying, with sending vp loud cries for gods fauour in Christ in the pardoning of sinne: and with feruent perseuerance herein, till the desire of the heart be graunted.

r Luk.15.18.19. Matth.15.22. 23. Act.8.22. 2.Cor.12.1.

Q. What followeth all this?

A. God then, [s] according to his mercifull promise lets the pore sinner feele the assurance of his loue wherewith he loueth him in Christ, which assurance is a liuely faith.

s Mat.7.7. Esa.65.24. Iob.33.26.

Q. Are there diuers degrees and measures of true faith?

A. [t] Yea.

t Rom.1.17. Luk.17.5.

Q. What is the least measure of true faith that any man can haue?

A. When a man of an humble spirit by reason of the [u] liuelinesse of his faith, doth not yet feele the assurance of the forgiuenesse of his sinnes, and yet he is perswaded that they are pardonable, and therefore desireth that they should be pardoned, and with his heart praieth to God to pardon them.

u Esa.42.3. Matth.17.20. Luk.17.5.

Q. How doe you know that such a man hath faith?

A. These [x] desires and prayers are testimonies of the spirit, whose propertie it is to stirre vp a longing and a lusting after heauenly things, with sighes and groanes for Gods fauour and mercie in Christ. [y] Nowe where the spirit of Christ is, there is Christ dwelling: and where Christ dwelleth, there is true faith, how weake soeuer it be.

x Rom.8.23, 24. Gal.4.6. Marb.5.6.

y Rom.8.9. Eph.3.17.

Q. What is the greatest measure of faith?

A. When a man daily increasing in faith comes to be [a] fully perswaded of Gods loue in Christ towards himselfe particularly, and of the forgiuenesse of his owne sinnes.

a Rom.8.38. 39. Cant.8.6.7.

Q. When shall a Christian heart come to this full assurance?

A. Not [b] at the first, but in some continuance of time, when he hath bene well practised in repentance, and hath had diuers experiences of Gods loue vnto him in Christ: then after them will appeare in his heart the fulnesse of perswasion: which is the ripenesse [c] and strength of faith.

b 2.Tim.4.7.8. Psal.23.6. with 1.2.3.4. verse.

c Rom.4.20.21.

Q. What benefits doth a man receiue by his faith in Christ?

A. Hereby [d] he is iustified before God and sanctified.

d 1.Cor.1.30. Act.15.9. Rom.4.3.

Q. What is this, to be iustified before God?

A. It [e] comprehendeth two things: the first, to be cleared from the guiltinesse and punishment of sinne: the second, to be accepted as perfectly righteous before god.

e Rom.8.35.

Q. Howe is a man cleared from the guiltinesse and punishment of his sinnes?

A. By Christs [f] sufferings and death vpon the crosse.

f Col.1.22. 1.Pet.2.25. 1.Iob.1.17.

Q. Howe is he accepted righteous before God?

A. By the [g] righteousnesse of Christ imputed to him.

g 2.Cor.5.22.

Q. What profit comes by beeing thus iustified?

A. Hereby [h] and by no other meanes in the world, the beleeuer shall be accepted before Gods iudgment seat, as worthie of eternal life by the merits of the same righteousnesse of Christ.

h Rom.4.17. Apoc.21.27.

Q. Doe not good workes then make vs worthie of eternall life?

A. No: for God who is perfect righteousnesse it selfe, will finde in the best works we doe, more matter of damnation then of saluation: and therefore [k] we must rather condemne our selues for our good workes, then looke to be iustified before God k Psal.143.2. Esa. 64.6. Iob.9.3.

God therby.

Q. How may a man knowe that he is iustified before God?

A. He neede not ascend into heauen to search the secret councell of God;[l] but rather descend into his own heart to search whether he be sanctified or not.

l. Rom.8.3. 2.Ioh.3.9.

Q. What is it to be sanctified?

A. It comprehendeth two things: the first to be purged from the corruption of his own nature: the second to be indued with inward righteousnes.

Q. Howe is the corruption of sinne purged?

A. By the [n] merits and power of Christs death, which beeing by faith applied is as a corasiue to abate, consume, and weaken the power of all sinne.

n Rom.6.4. 1.Pet.4.1.2.

Q. How is a man indued with inherent righteousnes?

A. Through the [o] vertue of Christs resurrection, which beeing applyed by faith is as a restoratiue to reuiue a man that is dead in sinne to newnesse of life.

o Rom.6.5.6. Phil.3.10.

Q. In what part of a man is sanctification wrought?

A [p] In euery part both bodie and soule.

p 1.Thess.5.23.

Q. In what time is it wrought.

A. It is [q] begunne in this life, in which the faithfull receiue onely the first fruites of the spirit, and it is not finished before the end of this life.

q Rom.8.23. 2.Cor.5.2.3.

Q. What graces of the Spirit doe vsually shew themselues in the heart of a man sanctified?

A. The hatred [r] of sinne, and the loue of righteousnes.

r Psal.119.113.& 40.9.& 101. 3. Rom.7.22.

Q. What proceedes of them?

A. Repentance, which is [s] a setled purpose in the heart, with a carefull indeauour to leaue all his sinnes, and to liue a Christian life, according to all Gods commandements.

s Psal.119.57. 112.

Q. What goeth with repentance?

A. A continuall fighting and struggling against the assaults of a mans owne flesh against the motions of the deuill, & the inticements of the world.

Q. What followeth after a man hath gootten the victorie in any temptation or affliction?

t Rom 5.3. 2 Cor.1.7.

A [t] Experienc of Gods loue in Christ, and so increase of peace of conscience, and ioy in the holy Ghost.

Q. What follows, if in any temptation he be ouercome, and through infirmitie fall?

A. After a while [u] there will arise a godly sorrow, which is, when a man is grieued for no other cause in the world but for this only, that by his sin he hath displeased God, who hath beene vnto him a most mercifull and louing father.

u 2.Cor.7.8.9. Math.26.75.

Q. What signe is there of this sorrowe?

A. The true signe [x] of it is this, when a man can be grieued for the very disobedience to God in his euill word or deede, though he should neuer be punished, and though there were neither heauen nor hell.

x 1.Pet.2.19.

Q. What followes after this sorrow?

A. Repentance [y] renewed afresh.

y 2.Cor.7.11.

Q. By what signes wil this repentance appeare?

A. By [z] seauen. 1. A care to leaue the sinne into which he is fallen. 2. An vtter cõdemning of himselfe for it, with a crauing of pardon. 3. A great anger against himselfe for his carelesnesse. 4. A feare least he should fall into the same sinne againe. 5. A desire euer after to please God. 6. A zeale of the same. 7. Reuenge vpon himselfe for his former offence.

z 2.Cor.7.11.

The fifth Principle expounded.

Q. What outward meanes must we vse to obtaine faith & all blessings of God which come by faith?

A. The preaching [a] of Gods word, and the administration of the Sacraments, and praier.

a Pro.26.18. Rom.10.14. Math.21.19.22.

Q. Where is the word of God to be found?

2.Tim.3.16.

A. The whole word of God needfull to saluation, is set downe in the holy scriptures.

Q. Howe knowe you that the Scriptures are the word of God, and not mens pollices?

A. I am assured of it. First, [b] because the holy Ghost perswadeth my conscience that it is so. Secondly, I see it by experience: for the preaching of the [c] Scriptures haue the power of God in them to humble a man, when they are preached, and to cast him downe to hell: and afterward to restore and raise him vp againe.

b Eph.1.13.

c Heb.4.12. 1.Cor.14.25.

Q. What is the vse of the word of god preached?

A. First it [d] breedeth, and then it increaseth faith in them which are chosen to saluation: but vnto them that perish it is by reason of their corruption an occasion of their further damnation.

d Rom.1.17. 2.Cor.2.16. Heb.4.2.

Q. How must wee heare Gods word

that that it may be effectuall to saluation?

e Isa.1.19. Acts 16.14. Heb.4.2. Esa.66.2. Luke 2.51. Psal.119.11.

An. We e must come vnto it with hunger-bitten hearts, hauing an appetite to the word, we must marke it with attention, receiue it by faith, submit our selues vnto it with feare and trembling, euen then when our selues are reproued: lastly, we must hide it in the corners of our hearts, that we may frame our liues and conuersations by it.

Qu. What is a Sacrament?

f Rom.4.11. Gen.17.12. Gal.3.2.

A. A f signe to represent, a seale to confirme, an instrument to conuey Christ and all his benefites to them that doe beleeue in him.

Qu. Why must a Sacrament represent the mercies of God before our eyes?

A. Because we are dull to conceiue and to remember them.

Qu. Why doth the Sacrament seale vnto vs the mercies of God?

An. Because we are full of vnbeleefe, and doubting of them.

Qu. Why is the Sacrament the instrument of the Spirit, to conney the mercies of God into our hearts?

An. Because we are like Thomas, we will not beleeue, till we feele them in some measure in our hearts.

Qu. How many Sacraments are there?

g 1.Cor.10. 1,2,3.

An. Two, g and no more: Baptisme by which we haue our admission into the true Church of God: and the Lords Supper, by which wee are nourished and preserued in the Church, after our admision.

Qu. What is done in Baptisme?

h Acts 2.38 Tit.3.5. Acts 22. 16 Mat.28.19.

An. h In the assembly of the Church, the couenant of grace, betweene God and the party baptized, is solemnly confirmed and sealed.

Qu. In this couenant, what dooth God promise to the party baptized?

i Gal.3.27. 1.Pet.3.21.

A. i Christ, with all blessings that come by him.

Que. To what condition is the party baptized, bound?

k Mar. 16.16.

An. k To receiue Christ, and to repent his sinne.

Qu. What meaneth the sprinkling or dipping in water?

l 1.Pet.1.2.

An. It l seales vnto vs remision of sins & satisfaction, by the obedience & sprinkling of the blood of Christ.

Qu. How commeth it to passe, that many after their baptisme, for a long time feele not the effect and fruit of it, and some neuer?

A. The fault is not in God, who keepes his couenants; but the fault is in themselues, in that they doe not keepe the condition of the couenant to receiue Christ by faith, & to repent of all their sinnes.

Q. When shall a man then see the effect of his baptisme?

m Heb.10.20. 1.Pet.3.21.

An. At m what time soeuer he doth receiue Christ by faith, though it bee many yeares after, hee shall then feele the power of God to regenerate him, and to worke all things in him, which hee offered in baptisme.

Qu. How if a man neuer keepe the condition, to which he bound himselfe in baptisme?

n Deut.23.21, 22. Eccles.5.4.

An. His n damnation shall be the greater, becaus hee breaketh his vow made to God.

Qu. What is done in the Lords Supper?

o 1.Cor.11. 23,24,25. & 12,13.

An. The former couenant solemnly ratified in Baptisme, is renued in o the Lords Supper, betweene the Lord himselfe, and the receiuer.

Qu. What is the receiuer?

p 1.Cor.11. 30,31. Math.5.22,23 Esa.66.23.

An. Euery one p that hath beene baptized, and after his baptisme hath truly beleeued in Christ, and repented of his sinnes from his heart.

Qu. What meaneth the bread and wine, the eating of the bread, and drinking of the wine?

q 1. Cor. 10. 16,17.

Anſ. These ontward actions q are a second seale, set by the Lords owne hand vnto his couenant. And they doe giue euery receiuer to vnderstand, that as God doth blesse the bread and wine, to preserue and strengthen the body of the receiuer: so Christ apprehended and receiued by faith, shall nourish him, and preserue both body and soule vnto eternall life.

Qu. What shall a true receiuer feele in himselfe, after the receiuing of the Sacrament?

r 1.Cor.10.17 & 11.12.

A. r The increase of his faith in Christ. the increase of sanctificatiō, a greater measure of dying to sinne, a great care to liue in newnesse of life.

Q. What if a man after the receiuing of the Sacrament, neuer finde any such thing in himselfe?

A. He may well suspect himselfe, whether he did euer repent, or not: and thereupon, to vse meanes to come to sound faith and repentance.

Qu. What is another meanes of increasing faith?

An. Prayer.

Qu. What is prayer?

An. Two things: an earnest desire, and faith.

Q. t What things must a Christian mans heart desire?

t Mat. 11. 24.

An. Six things especially.

Qu. What are they?

An. 1. a That hee may glorifie God. 2. That b God may raigne in his heart, and not sinne. 3. c That he may doe Gods will and not his lusts of the flesh. 4. d That he may relie himselfe on Gods prouidence, for all the meanes of this temporall life. 5. e That he may be iustified, and be at peace with God. 6. f That by the power of God he may be strengthened against all temptations.

The sixth Principle expounded.

Que. After that a man hath led a short life in this world, what followeth then?

A. Death, which is the parting asunder of body and soule.

Qu. Why do wicked men and vnbeleeuers die?

Ans. That q their bodies may go to the earth, and their soules may bee cast into hell fire.

q Luk. 16. 22, 23.

Q. Why do the godly die, seeing Christ by death hath ouercome death?

An. They die for this end, that r their bodies may rest for a while in the earth, and their soules may enter into heauen immediately.

r Luke 23. 43. Acts 7. 70. 1. Thess. 4. 3. Heb. 2. 14. 2. Cor. 15. 5.

Q. What followeth after death?

An. The day of iudgement.

Q. What signe is there to know this day from other daies?

An. s Heauen and earth shall be consumed with fire immediatly, before the comming of the Iudge.

s 2. Pet. 3. 11, 12.

Q. Who shall be the iudge?

An. Iesus Christ the Sonne of God.

Q. What shall be the comming to iudgement?

Ans. Hee t shall come in the clowdes in great maiesty and glory, with infinite company of Angells.

t 1. Thess. 4. 16, 17.

Q. How shall all men be cited to iudgement?

An. At the u sound of a trumpet, the liuing shall be changed in the twinckling of an eye, and the dead shall rise againe, euery one with x his owne body, and all shall be gathered together before Christ: and after this, the good shal be seuered from the bad, y these standing on the left hand of Christ, the other on the right.

u Math. 24. 3. x Iob 19. 26. y Mat. 25. 32, 33.

Q. How will Christ try and examine euery mans cause?

An. a The bookes of all mens doings shall be laide open, mens consciences shall be made, either to accuse them, or excuse them, and euery man shall be tried by the workes which hee did in his life time, because they are open and manifest signes of faith, or vnbeleefe.

a Reu. 20. 12. Dan. 7. 10. b Iohn 3. 18, & 5, 24.

Q. What sentence will he giue?

An. He will giue c sentence of saluation to the elect and godly: but hee will pronounce sentence of damnation against vnbeleeuers and reprobates.

c Math. 25. 34, 41.

Qu. What state shall the godly be in after the day of iudgement?

A. d They shall continue for euer in the highest heauen, in the presence of God, hauing fellowship with Christ Iesus, & raigning with him for euer.

d Math. 25. 34. Apoc. 21. 3, 4, 11.

Q. What state shall the wicked be in after the day of iudgement?

A. In eternall perdition and destruction in hell fire.

Q. What is that?

A. It e stands in three things especially. First, a perpetuall seperation from Gods comfortable presence. Secondly, fellowship with the diuell and his angells. Thirdly, an horrible pang and torment of both body and soule, arising of the feeling of the whole wrath of God, powred forth on the wicked, for euer world without end: and if the paine of one tooth, for one day, be so great, endlesse shall bee the paine of the whole man, bodie and soule for euer.

A GRAINE OF MVSTARD-SEEDE:

OR,

THE LEAST MEASVRE OF grace that is or can be effectuall to Saluation.

Corrected and amended by M. W. Perkins.

Printed by IOHN LEGAT, Printer to the Vniuersitie of CAMBRIDGE. 1605.

TO THE RIGHT HONOVRAble and vertuous Ladie, the Ladie Margaret, Countesse of Cumberland, Grace and peace.

RIght Honourable, the kingdome of heauen, of which the scripture speaketh so oft, is properly a certaine state or condition, whereby we stand in the fauour and loue of God, in and by Christ. And this kingdome is compared to a graine of Musterd-seede, to teach vs that a man is euen at that instant already entred into the kingdome of heauen, when the Lord that good husbandman hath cast but some little portion of faith or repentance into the ground of the heart; yea though it be but as one graine of musterd seed. Of this little graine I haue penned this Treatise in quantitie answerable there to: & now I present the same to your Ladiship, not to supply your want, (for I hope you are stored with many graines of this kind) but to performe some dutie on my part. Hoping therefore that your Ladiship will read and accept the same, I take my leaue, commending you to the blessing and protection of the Almightie.

Your Honours to command,
W. Perkins.

A GRAINE OF MVSTERD-

seede: Or, the least measure of grace that is, or can be effectuall to salvation.

IT is a very necessary point to bee knowne, what is the least measure of grace that can befall the true childe of God, lesser then which, there is no grace effectuall to salvation. For first of all, the right vnderstanding of this point, is the very foundation of true comfort vnto all troubled and touched consciences. Secondly, it is a notable meanes to stirre vp thankfulnesse in them that haue any grace at all; when they shall in examination of themselues consider, that they haue receiued of God the least measure of grace, or more. Thirdly, it will be an inducement and a spur, vnto many careless & vnrepentant persons, to imbrace the Gospel, and to begin repentance for their sins; when they shall perceiue, and that by the word of God, that God accepts the very seedes and rudiments of faith and repentance at the first, though they be but in measure, as a Graine of Musterd-seede. Now then for the opening and clearing of this point, I will set downe sixe seuerall conclusions, in such order, as one shall confirme and explaine the other, & one depend vpon the other.

1 Conclusion.

A man that doth but begin to be conuerted, is euen at that instant, the very childe of God, though inwardly he be more carnall than spirituall.

The Exposition.

IN a man, there must be considered three things; the substance of the body and soule, whereof man is said to consist; the faculties placed in the soule, & exercised in the body, as vnderstanding, will, affections: the integrity & purity of the faculties, whereby they are conformable to the will of God, and beare his image. And since the fal of Adam, man is not depriued of his substance, or of the powers and faculties of his soule, but onely of the third, which is the purity or integrity of nature. And therefore the conuersion of a sinner, wherof the conclusion speaketh, is not the change of the substance of mā, or of the faculties of the soule, but a renewing and restoring of that purity and holinesse, which was lost by mans fall, with the abolishment of that naturall corruption, that is in all the powers of the soule. This is the worke of God, and of God alone, and that on this manner. First of all, when it pleaseth God to worke a change in any, hee doth it not first in one part, then afterward in another, as he that repaires a decayed house by peecemeale: but the worke, both for the beginning, continuance, and accomplishment, is in the whole man, and euery part at once, specially in the minde, conscience, will, and affections: as on the contrary, when Adam lost the image of God, he lost it in euery part. Secondly, the conuersion of a sinner, is not wrought all at one instant, but in continuance of time, & that by certaine measures and degrees. And a man is then in the first degree of his conuersion, when the holy Ghost by the means of the word, inspires him with some spirituall motions, and begins to regenerate & renew the inward powers of his soule. And he may in this case very fitly be compared to the night, in the first dawning of the day, in which, though the darknesse remaine, and be more in quantity than the light, yet the Sun hath already cast some beames of light into the ayre: whereupon we terme it the breaking of the day. Now then, the very point which I teach, is, that a man at this instant, and in this very state, (God as yet hauing but laid certaine beginnings of true conuersion in his hart) is the very child of God, and that not only in the eternall purpose of God, (as all the elect are) but indeed by actuall adoption: and this is plaine by a manifest reason. There be foure speciall workes of grace in euery child of god: his vniō with Christ, his adoption, iustification, & conuersion: and these foure are wrought all at one instant, so as for order of time, neither goes before nor after other; and yet in regard of order of nature, vniō with Christ, Iustification and adoption, go before the inward conuersion of a sinner, it being the fruit and effect of them all. Vpon this it followeth necessarily, that a sinner in the very firſt act of his conuerſion, is iuſtified, adopted, and incorporated into the myſticall body of Chriſt. In the parable of the prodigall Sonne, the father with ioy receiues his wicked child; but when? ſurely when he ſaw him comming a far off, and when as yet he had made no confeſsion or humiliation to his father, but onely hadde conceiued with himſelfe a purpoſe to return & to ſay; Father, I haue ſinned againſt heauen and againſt thee, &c. And Paul ſaith of many of the Corinthians; that he could not ſpeak vnto them as ſpiritual men, but as carnall, euen babes in Chriſt, 1. Cor. 3. 1. When Dauid reproued by Nathan, did but begin to repent & to ſay; I haue ſinned: preſently Nathan the Prophet of the Lord ſaid; The Lord hath taken away thy ſin. Of this thing Dauid ſeemes to ſpeake in the 32. Pſal. v. 5. I ſaid, [that is, I purpoſed and thought with my ſelfe] I will confeſſe againſt my ſelfe, mine vnrighteouſneſſe, and thou forganeſt mine iniquities. Vpon theſe words Auguſtine ſaith; Mark, he doth not confeſſe, but promiſeth to confeſſe, and God forgiueth him. Againe, There be (ſaith he) 3. ſilables, peccaui, I haue ſinned: and from theſe three ſilables, the flame of a ſacrifice did aſcend into heauen before God. Aug. Homil. 41.

II. Concluſion.

The firſt materiall beginnings of the conuerſion of a ſinner, or the ſmaleſt meaſure of renewing grace, haue the promiſes of this life, and the life to come.

The Expoſition.

THe beginnings of conuerſion muſt be diſtinguiſhed. Some are beginnings of preparation, ſome beginnings of compoſition. Beginnings of preparation are ſuch as bring vnder, tame, and ſubdue the ſtubburnnes of mans nature, without making any change at all. Of this ſort are the accuſations of the conſcience, by the miniſtery of the law, fears & terrors ariſing thence, compunction of hart, which is the apprehēding of gods anger againſt ſinne. Now theſe & the like, I exclude in the concluſion; for though they goe before, to prepare a ſinner to his conuerſion following, yet are they no graces of God, but fruites both of the law, being the miniſterie of death, as alſo of an accuſing conſcience. Beginnings of compoſition, I terme all thoſe inward motions & inclinations of Gods ſpirit, that follow after the work of the law, vpon the conſcience, and riſe vpon the meditation of the Goſpel, that promiſeth righteouſneſſe & life euerlaſting by Chriſt: out of which motions the conuerſion of a ſinner ariſeth, and of which it conſiſteth: what theſe are, it ſhal afterward appeare. Again, grace muſt be diſtinguiſhed: it is twofold, reſtraining grace, or renewing grace. Reſtraining grace, I terme certaine common gifts of God, ſeruing only to order and frame the outward conuerſation of men to the law of God, or ſeruing to bereaue men of excuſe in the day of iudgement. By this kind of grace, heathen men haue been liberall, iuſt, ſober, valiant, merciſull. By it, men liuing in the Church of God, haue been inlightned, and hauing taſted of the good word of God, haue rejoyced therein, and for a time, outwardly conformed themſelues thereto. Renewing grace, is not cōmon to all men, but proper to the elect, & it is a gift of Gods ſpirit, whereby the corruption of a ſin, is not only reſtrained, but alſo mortified, and the decaied image of God, reſtored in righteouſneſſe and true holineſſe. Now then the concluſion muſt only be vnderſtood of the ſecond, and not of the firſt: for thogh a man haue neuer ſo much of this reſtraining grace, yet vnleſſe he haue the ſpirit of Chriſt, to create faith in the hart, and to ſanctifie him, he is as far from ſaluation, as any other. Thus then the ſenſe & meaning of the concluſion is, that the very leaſt meaſure of ſauing grace, and the very beginning of ſeedes of regeneration doe declare, and after a ſort, giue title to men, of all the merciful promiſes of God, whether they concerne this life, or the life to come; and are therefore approued of God, if they be in truth, and accepted as greater meaſures of grace. That which our Sauiour Chriſt ſaieth of the work of miracles, Mat. 17. 20. If ye haue faith as a Graine of Muſterdſeede, ye ſhal ſay vnto this mountaine, remoue hence to yonder place, and it ſhall remoue, muſt by the law of equall proportion, be applied to ſauing faith, repentance, the feare of God, and all other graces; if they bee truely wrought in the the heart, though they bee but as ſmall as one little graine of Muſtard-ſeede, they ſhalbe ſufficiently effectual to bring foorth good works, for which they are ordained. The Prophet Eſa. 42. 3. ſaith, that Chriſt ſhall not quench the ſmoking flaxe, nor breake the bruiſed reede. Let the compariſon be marked: fire in flaxe muſt be both litle and weake, in quantitie as a ſparke or twain, that cannot cauſe a flame, but only a ſmoke, ſpecially in a matter ſo eaſie to burne. Here thē is ſignified, that the gifts and graces of gods ſpirit, that are both for meaſure and ſtrength as a ſparke or twain of fire, ſhall not be neglected, but rather accepted and cheriſhed by Chriſt. When our Sauiour Chriſt heard the young man make a cōfeſsion of a practiſe but of outward and ciuill righteouſnes, he looked vpon him and loued him: Mark. 10. 21. and whē he heard the Scribe to ſpeak diſcreetly but one good ſpeech, that to loue God with all the heart is aboue all ſacrifices, he ſaid vnto him, That he was not farre from the kingdome of heauen. Therefore no doubt, he will loue with a more ſpecial loue, and accept as the good ſubiects of his kingdome, thoſe that haue receiued a further mercie of God, to be borne anew of water and the ſpirit.

III. Concluſion.

A conſtant and earneſt deſire to be reconciled to God, to beleeue, and to repent, if it be in a touched heart, is in acceptation with God, as reconciliation faith, repentance it ſelfe.

The Expoſition.

LVſt or deſire is twofold, naturall and ſupernaturall. Naturall is that whoſe beginnings & obiect is in nature, that is, which ariſeth of the naturall will of man, & affecteth ſuch things as are thought to be good according to the light of nature. And this kind of deſire hath his degrees, yet ſo as they are al limited within the cōpaſſe of nature. Some deſire riches, honours, pleaſure, ſome learning and knowledge, becauſe it is the light and perfectiō of the minde: ſome go further, and ſeeke after the vertues of iuſtice, temperance, liberalitie, &c. and thus many heathen men haue excelled. Some againe deſire true happineſſe, as Balaam did, who wiſhed to die the death of the righteous: becauſe it is the propertie of nature to ſeeke the preſeruation of it ſelf. But here nature ſtaies it ſelfe: for where the mind reueales not, the will affects not. Supernatural deſires, are ſuch as both for their beginning & obiect, are aboue nature: for their beginning is from the holy Ghoſt; and the obiect or matter about which they are conuerſant, are things diuine and ſpirituall which concerne the kingdome of heauen: and of this kind are the deſires of which I ſpeake in this place. Againe, that we may not be deceiued in our deſires, but may the better diſcerne them from flittering and fleeting motions, I adde three reſtraints. Firſt of all, the deſire of reconciliation, the deſire to beleeue, or the deſire to repent, &c. muſt be conſtant and haue continuance, otherwiſe it may iuſtly be ſuſpected. Secondly it muſt be earneſt and ſerious, though not alwaies, yet at ſometimes, that we may be able to ſay with Dauid, My ſoule deſireth after thee, O Lorde, as the thirſtie land. And, As the Hart braieth after the riuers of water, ſo panteth my ſoule after thee O Lord, my ſoule thirſteth for God, euen the liuing god. Thirdly, it muſt be in a touched heart; for when a man is touched in conſcience, the heart is caſt downe and aſmuch (as it can) it withdrawes it ſelfe from God. For this cauſe then; if there be any ſpirituall motions whereby the hart is lift vp vnto God, they are without doubt from the ſpirit of God. Thus then I auouch that the deſire of reconciliation with God in Chriſt, is reconciliation it ſelfe: the deſire to beleeue, is faith indeede: and the deſire to repent, repentance it ſelfe. But marke how. A deſire to be reconciled, is not reconciliation in nature (for the deſire is one thing, and reconciliation another) but in Gods acceptation: for if we being touched throughly for our ſins, do deſire to haue them pardoned, & to be at one with god. God accepts vs as reconciled. Again, deſire to beleeue, it is not faith in nature, but only in Gods acceptation; God accepting the will for the deed. That this doctrine is the wil & word of God, it appeares by theſe reaſons. Firſt of al God hath annexed a promiſe of bleſſednes, and of life euerlaſting to the deſire of grace, Mathew 5. Bleſſed are they which hunger and thirſt after righteouſneſſe, for they ſhall be ſatisfied, Iohn 7. 38. If any man thirſt, let him come to mee and drinke, Reuelation. 21. I will giue vnto him which is a thirſt, of the well of the water of life freely. Now what is this to thirſt? properly it is, when wee are in a drought or drineſſe, and want drink to refreſh vs, to deſire it. And therefore by all reſemblance, they are ſaide to thirſt after righteouſneſſe, that want it, and would faine faine haue it And they thirst after Christ, that feele themselues out of Christ, and desire, yea long after the blood of Christ, that they might bee refreshed with it in their consciences. Here then we see, that the desire of mercie, in the want of mercie, is the obtaining of mercie; and the desire to beleeue in the want of faith, is faith. Marke then: though as yet thou want firme and liuely grace, yet art thou not altogether void of grace, if thou canst vnfainedly desire it, thy desire is the seede, conception, or bud of that which thou wanteſt. Now is the spring time of the ingrafted word or the immortall seede cast into the furrowes of thy heart: waite but a while, vsing the good meanes to this ende appointed, and thou shalt see the leaues, blossomes, and frut will shortely follow after. Secondly the desire of any good thing is accepted of God, as the liuely inuocation of his holy name. Psal. 10. God heareth the desire of the poore. Psal. 145. He will fulfill the desire of them that feare him. When Moses saide nothing, but onely desired in heart the helpe and protection of God at the redde Sea, the Lord said vnto him, Why crieſt thou vnto me? Exod. 14.15. And when we know not to pray as we ought, Paul saith, that the spirit maketh request by the inward groanes of the heart, Rom. 8.26. Hence I gather, that when a man in his weaknes prayes with sighes and groanes, for the gift of liuely faith, the want whereof he findes in himselfe, his very prayer on this manner made, is as truly in acceptation with God, as a prayer made in liuely faith. And here it is further to be considered, that Paul calles these groanes vnspeakable, and why? Of most Interpreters they are thought to be vnspeakable, by reason of their greatnesse, and this I will not denie: it seemes neuertheleſſe that they are so termed by reason of their weakneſſe, for they are commonly small, weake, and confused in the hearts of Gods children when they are distressed: and the wordes following seeme to import thus much: for when it had beene said, that Gods spirit in vs makes request with groanes not to be vttered, some man might happily replie and say, if we cannot discerne and vtter these groanes in our selues, what are we the better? Paul addes therefore, that although we know not, yet God a searcher of all things hidden in the heart, knowes the minde and meaning of the spirit. And thus the words yet further affoord a comfortable instruction to the children of God, namely that being in distreſſe, whether in life or death, if by grace we can but sigh, or sob vnto God, though it be weake, and feeble like the faint pulse in the time of death; we, or the spirit of God in vs, do indeed make request vnto God that shall be heard, yea, (as the words are) we doe more then make request: and though we do not alwayes see what Gods spirit makes vs to sigh after, yet God doth. To the testimony of Scripture I adde the testimonies of godly and learned men, not to prooue the doctrine in hand; but to shew a consent, and to prooue thus much, that the thing which I auouch, is no priuate phantasie of any man. Easily (saith Ambrose of God) is he reconciled, a if he bee instantly intreated. Lib. 7. in Luc. c. 66. Augustine saith, Let thy desire be before him, and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly: for thy desire is thy prayer, and if thy desire bee continuall, thy prayer is continuall. He addes further in the same place, that the desire is a continuall voice, and the crie of the heart, and the inward inuocation of God, which may be made without intermission. Againe, To desire the helpe of grace, is the beginning of grace. Againe, b The whole life of a good Christian, is an holy will and desire. And that which thou desirest, thou seest not: but by desiring, art (as it were) inlarged and made capable, that when it shall come which thou shalt see, thou maist be fulfilled. Basil saith, Onely thou must will, and God will come of his owne accord. c Bernard saith, What, is not a desire a voice? yea, a verie strong voice. God heareth the desire of the poore, and a continuall desire, though we speake nothing, is a voice continued. d Luther saith, Christ is then truly omnipotent, and then truly raignes in vs, when we are so weake that we can scarce giue any groane. For Paul saith, that one such groane is a strong crie in the eares of God, filling both heauen and earth. e Againe, verie few know, how weake and small faith and hope is, vnder the crosse, and in temptation. For it appeares, then to be as smoking flaxe, which a good blast of winde would presently put out: but such as beleeue in these combates, and terrours against hope, vnder hope, that is, opposing themselues by faith in the promise of Christ, against the feeling of sinne, and the wrath of God, doe finde afterwarde that this little sparke of faith (as it appeares to reason, which hardly perceyueth it) is peradaunture as the whole Element of fire which filleth all heauen, and swalloweth vp all terrours and sinnes. f Againe,

The more we finde our vnworthines, and the lesse we find the promises to belong vnto vs, the more must we desire them, being assured that this desire doth greatly please God, who desireth and willeth that his grace should be earnestly desired. This doth faith, which iudgeth it a precious thing, and therefore greatly hungreth and thirsteth after it, and so obtaines it. For God is delighted to fill the hungrie with good things, and to send the rich emptie away.

i Vrsinus saith, Faith in the most holy men in this life is imperfect and weake. Yet neuertheles, whosoeuer feeles in his heart an earnest desire, and a striuing against his naturall doubtings, both can and must assure himselfe that he is indued with true faith. Againe, Wicked men doe not desire the grace of the holy spirit, whereby they may resist sinne. And therefore they are iustly deprined of it: for he that earnestly desireth the holy Ghost, hath it alreadie: because this desire of the spirit cannot be but from the spirit: as it is said, Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousnesse: for they shall be satisfied.

k Bradford saith, Thy sinnes are vndoubtedly pardoned, &c. for God hath giuen thee a penitent and beleeuing heart: that is, an heart which desireth to repent and beleeue: for such an one is taken of him (hee accepting the will for the deede) for a penitent and beleeuing heart indeede.

k Bille to Carelesse.

m Taffine saith, Our faith may bee so small and weake, as it doth not yet bring forth fruit, that may be liuely felt in vs, but if they which feele themselues in such estate, desire to haue these feelings [namely of Gods fauour and loue] if they aske them at Gods hands by praier, this desire and praier are testimonies that the spirit of God is in them, and that they haue faith alreadie: for, is such a desire a fruit of the flesh, or of the spirit? it is of the holy spirit who bringeth it forth onely in such as he dwells in, &c. Then these holy desires and praiers, being the motion of the holy Ghost in vs, are testimonies of our faith, although they seeme to vs small and weake. As the woman that feeleth the mouing of a child in her bodie, though very weake, assureth her selfe that shee hath conceiued, and that shee goeth with a liue child: so if we haue these motions, these holy affections, and desires be- fore mentioned, let vs not doubt but that we haue the holy Ghost (who is the author of them) dwelling in vs, and consequently that we haue also faith. Againe he saith, 1. If thou hast begunne to hate and flie sinne, 2. if thou feelest that thou art displeased at thine infirmities, and corruptions: 3. if hauing offended God thou feelest a griefe, and a sorrow for it: 4. if thou desire to abstaine: 5. if thou auoidest the occasion: 6. if thou trauailest to doe thy endeauour: 7. if thou praiest to God to giue thee grace: all these holy affections proceeding from none other then from the spirit of God, ought to be so many pledges, and testimonies that he is in thee.

n Pfal. 6.

n Maister Knokes saith, Albeit your paines sometimes be so horrible that you finde no release nor comfort, neither in spirit nor bodie, yet if thy heart can onely sob vnto God, despaire not, you shall obtaine your hearts desire. And destitute you are not of faith: for at such time as the flesh, naturall reason, the lawe of God, the present torment, the deuill at one doe crie, God is angrie, and therefore there is neither helpe nor remedie to be hoped for at his hands: at such time, I say, to sob vnto God, is the demonstration of the secret seede of God, which is hidde in Gods elect children: and that onely sob is vnto God a more acceptable sacrifice, then without this crosse, to giue our bodies to be burnt euen for the truths sake. More testimonies might be alleadged, but these shall suffice.

Against this point of doctrine it may be alleadged, that if desire to beleeue in our weakenes be faith indeede; then some are iustified and may be saued wanting a liuely apprehension and full perswasion of Gods mercie in Christ. Answ. Iustifying faith in regard of his nature is alwaies one and the same, and the essentiall propertie thereof, is, to apprehend Christ with his benefits, and to assure the very conscience thereof. And therefore without some apprehension and assurance, there can be no iustification or Saluation in them that for age are able to beleeue. Yet there be certaine degrees and measures of true faith. There is a strong faith, which causeth a full apprehension and perswasion of Gods mercie in Christ. This measure of faith the Lord vouchsafed Abraham, Dauid, Paul, the Prophets, Apostles, and Martyrs of God. It were a blessed thing if all beleeuers might attaine to this height of liuely faith, to say with Paul, I am perswaded, that neither life, nor death, nor any thing else, shall be able to separate vs from the loue of God in Christ: but all cannot; therefore there is another degree of faith lower then the former, and yet true faith, called a little or weake faith, and it also hath a power to apprehend and applie the promise of saluation, but as yet by reason of weaknes, it is infolded (as it were) and wrapt vp in the heart, as the leafe and blossome in the bud. For such persons as haue this weake faith, can say indeede, that they beleeue their sinnes to be pardonable, and that seriously in their hearts they desire to haue them pardoned: but as yet they can not say, that they are without all doubt pardoned. And yet the mercie of God is not wanting vnto them, For in that they doe, and can desire, and indeauour to apprehend, they doe indeede apprehend; God accepting the desire to doe the thing, for the thing done. This which I say will the better appeare, if the grounds thereof be considered. Faith doth not iustifie in respect of it selfe, because it is an action or vertue: or because it is strong, liuely, and perfect: but in respect of the obiect thereof, namely Christ crucified, whome faith apprehendeth as he is set forth vnto vs in the word and Sacraments. It is Christ that is the author, and matter of our iustice, and it is he that applieth the same unto vs: as for faith in vs, it is but an instrument to apprehend and receiue that which Christ for his part offereth and giueth. Therefore, if faith erre not in his proper obiect, but follow the promise of God, though it doe but weakely apprehend, or at the least cause a man onely to Endeauour and Desire to apprehend, it is true faith, and iustifieth. Though our apprehension be necessarie, yet our saluation stands rather in this, that God apprehends vs for his owne, then that we apprehend him for ours. Phil. 3. v. 12. And rather in this, that we are knowne of him, thē that we know him. Gal. 4. 9.

Out of this conclusion springs another not to be be omitted, that God accepteth the endeauour of the whole man to obey, for perfect obedience it selfe.

THat is, if men endeauour ro please God in all things, God will not iudge their doings by the rigour of his law: but will accept their little and weake endeauour, to doe that which they can doe by his grace, as if they had perfectly fulfilled the law. But here remember I put this caueat; that this indeauour must be in and by the whole man; the very minde, conscience, will, and affections, doing that which they can in their kinds: and thus the indeauour to obey, which is a fruit of the spirit, shall be distinguished from ciuill righteousnes, which may be in heathen men, and is onely in the outward and not in the inward man. The truth of this conclusion appeares by that which the Prophet Malachi saith, that God will spare them that feare him, as a father spares his child: who accepts the thing done, as well done, if the child shew his good will to please his father, and doe what he can. Mal. 3. 17.

IV. Conclusion.

To see and feele in our selues the want of any grace pertaining to saluation, & to be grieued therefore, is the grace it selfe.

The Exposition.

VNderstand this conclusion as the former, namely that griefe of heart for the want of any grace necessarie to saluation, is as much with God as the grace it selfe. When beeing in distresse, we cannot pray as we ought; God accepts the very groanes, sobs, and sighs of the perplexed heart, as the praier it selfe. Rom. 8. 29. When we are grieued, because we cannot be grieued for our sinnes, it is a degree and measure of godly sorrow before God. Augustine saith well: Sometimes our praier is lukewarme, or rather cold, and almost no praier: nay sometime it is altogether no praier at all, and yet we cannot with griefe perceiue this in our selues: for if we can but grieue because we cannot pray, we now pray in deede. Hierome saith, Then we are iust when we doe acknowledge our selues to be sinners. Againe, This is the true wisedome of man, to know himselfe to be imperfect: and (that I may so speake) the perfection of all iust men in the flesh is imperfect. Aug. againe saith, That the vertue which is now in a iust man is thus farre forth perfect, that vnto the perfection thereof, there belongs a true acknowledgement and an humble confession of the imperfection thereof. A broken and contrite heart after an offence, is as much with God, as if there had bin no offence at all. And therfore so soone as Dauid after his grieuous fall, in heauinesse of heart confessed his sinne, saying in effect but thus much, I haue sinned, the prophet in the name of the Lord pronounceth the pardon of his sinne his ſinne in heauen, and that preſently.

V. Concluſion.

He that hath begunne to ſubiect himſelfe to Chriſt and his worde, though as yet he be ignorant in moſt points of religion, yet if he haue a care to increaſe in knowledge, and to practiſe that which he knoweth, he is accepted of God as a true beleeuer.

The Expoſition.

SVndry perſons by the Euangeliſts are ſaide to beleeue, which had onely ſeene the miracles of Chriſt, and as yet had made no further proceedings but to acknowledge Chriſt to be the Meſsias, and to ſubmit themſelues to him and his doctrine, which afterward ſhould be taught. On this manner the woman of Samaria beleeued, and many of the Samaritans vpon hir report: and a certaine ruler, by reaſon of a miracle wrought vpon his ſonne, is ſaid to beleeue, and all his houſhold. Ioh. 4. 42, 52 When our Sauiour Chriſt commended the faith of the Apoſtles, terming it a rocke, againſt which the gates of hell ſhould not preuaile, it was not the plentifull knowledge of the doctrine of ſaluation (for they were ignorant of many articles of faith, as namely of the death, reſurrection, aſcenſion, and kingdome of Chriſt) but becauſe they beleeued him to be the ſonne of God, and the Sauiour of mankind, and they had withall reſolued themſelues to cleaue vnto him, and the bleſſed doctrine of ſaluation which he taught, though as yet they were ignorant in many points. The holy Ghoſt commendeth the faith of Rahab when ſhe receiued the ſpies. Now this her faith was indeed but a ſeede and beginning of liuely faith: for then ſhee had onely heard of the miracles done in Egypt, and of the deliuerance of the Iſraelites, and was therevpon ſmitten with feare, and had conceiued a reſolution with her ſelfe, to ioyne her ſelfe to the Iſraelites, & to worſhip the true God. Now theſe and the like, are termed beleeuers, vpon iuſt cauſe: for though they be ignorant as yet, yet their ignorance ſhall be no continuing or laſting ignorance: and they haue excellent ſeedes of grace, namely a purpoſe of heart to cleaue to Chriſt, and a care to profit in the doctrine of ſaluation, whereof they haue ſome little knowledge.

VI. Concluſion.

The foreſaid beginnings of grace are counterfeit vnleſſe they increaſe.

The Expoſition.

THe wickednelſe of mans nature, and the depth of hypocriſie is ſuch, that a man may and can eaſily transforme himſelfe into the counterfeit and reſemblance of any grace of God. Therefore I putte downe in this laſt concluſion a certaine note whereby the gifts of God may be diſcerned, namely, that they growe vp and increaſe as the graine of Muſterd ſeede to a great tree, and beare fruit anſwerably. The grace in the heart is like the graine of Muſterdſeed in two things. Firſt it is ſmall to ſee to at the beginning: ſecondly, after it is caſt into the ground of the hart, it encreaſeth ſpeedily, & ſpreads it ſelfe. Therfore, if a man at the firſt haue but ſome little feeling of his wants, ſome weake and faint deſire, ſome ſmall obedience, hee muſt not let this ſparke of grace goe out, but theſe motions of the ſpirit muſt be encreaſed by the vſe of the word, Sacraments, and prayer: and they muſt daily be ſtirrd vp by meditating, endeuouring, ſtriuing, asking, ſeeking, knocking. The maſter deliuering his talents to his ſeruants, ſaith vnto them, Occupy till I come, and not hide them in the earth, Matth. 25. 26. Paul vſeth an excellent ſpeech to Timothie: I exhort thee to ſtirre vppe the gift of God which is in thee, namely as fire is ſtirred vp by often blowing, and putting to of wood. 2. Tim. 1. verſe 6. As for ſuch motions of the heart that laſt for a weeke, or a moneth, and after vaniſh away, they are not to be regarded: and the Lorde by the Prophet Oſee complaineth of them, ſaying, O Ephraim, thy righteouſneſſe is like the morning deaw, chap. 6.

Therfore conſidering, grace vnles it be confirmed and exerciſed, is indeede no grace; I will here adde certaine rules of direction, that we may the more eaſily put in practiſe the ſpirituall exerciſes of inuocation, faith, and repentance: and thereby alſo quicken and reuiue the ſeeds and beginnings of grace.

1 In what place ſoeuer thou arte, whether alone or abroad, by day or by night, and whatſoeuer thou art doing, ſet thy ſelf in the preſence of God, let this perſwaſion alwayes take place in thy heart, that thou art before the liuing God: and doe thy endeuour that this perſwaſion may ſmite thy heart with awe and reuerence, and make thee afraide to ſin. This counſell the Lord gaue Abraham, Geneſ. 17. 1. Walke before me and be vpright. This thing alſo was practiſed by Enoch, who for this cauſe is ſaid to walke with God.

me

2 Eſteeme of euery preſent day as the day of thy death: and therefore liue as though thou were dying, and doe thoſe good duties euerie day, that thou wouldeſt doe if thou were dying. This is Chriſtian watchfulneſſe, and remember it.

3 Make catalogues and billes of thine owne ſinnes, ſpecially of thoſe ſinnes that haue moſt diſhonoured God, and wounded thine owne conſcience: ſet them before thee often, ſpecially then, when thou haſt any particular occaſion of renewing thy repentance, that thy heart by this dolefull ſight may be further humbled. This was Dauids practiſe when he conſidered his waies, & turned his feet to Gods commandements. Pſa. 119.57. And when he confeſſed the ſinnes of his youth: Pſal. 25. This was Iobs practiſe, when he ſaid, he was not able to anſwere one of a thouſand of his ſinnes vnto God. Iob 9.1.

4 When thou firſt openeſt thine eies in a morning, pray to God, and giue him thankes heartily: God then ſhall haue his honour, and thy heart ſhal be the better for it the whole day following. For we ſee in experience, that veſſels keepe long the taſte of that liquor wherwith they are firſt ſeaſoned. And when thou lieſt downe let that be the laſt alſo: for thou knoweſt not whether falſen aſleepe, thou ſhalt euer riſe againe aliue. Good therefore it is, that thou ſhouldeſt giue vp thy ſelfe into the hands of God, whileſt thou art waking.

5 Labour to ſee and feele thy ſpirituall pouertie, that is, to ſee the want of grace in thy ſelfe, ſpecially thoſe inwarde corruptions, of vnbeleefe, pride, ſelfe-loue, &c. Labour to be diſpleaſed with thy ſelf: and labour to feele, that by reaſon of them thou ſtandeſt in need of euery drop of the blood of Chriſt to heale and cleanſe thee from theſe wants: and let this practiſe take ſuch place with thee, that if thou be demaunded, what in thine eſtimation is the vileſt of the creatures vpon earth? thine heart and conſcience may anſwer with a loud voyce, I, euen I, by reaſon of mine owne ſinnes: and againe, if thou be demaunded, what is the beſt thing in the world for thee? thy heart and conſcience may anſwere againe with a ſtrong and loud crie, One drop of the blood of Chriſt to waſh away my ſinnes.

6 Shew thy ſelfe to be a member of Chriſt, and a ſeruant of God, not onely in the generall calling of a Chriſtian, but alſo in the particular calling in which thou art placed. It is not inough for a magiſtrate to be a Chriſtian man, but he muſt alſo be a Chriſtian Magiſtrate: it is not inough for a maſter of a familie to be a Chriſtian man, or a Chriſtian in the Church, but hee muſt alſo be a Chriſtian in his familie, and in the trade which he followeth dayly. Not euerie one that is a common hearer of the word, and a frequenter of the Lords table, is therefore a good Chriſtian, vnleſſe his conuerſation in his priuate houſe, and in his priuate affaires and dealings be ſutable. There is a man to be ſeene what he is.

7 Search the Scriptures, to ſee what is ſinne, and what is not ſinne in euery actiō: this done, carrie in thy heart a conſtant & reſolute purpoſe, not to ſinne in any thing: for faith and the purpoſe of ſinning can neuer ſtand togither.

8 Let thine indeauour bee ſutable to thy purpoſe: and therefore do nothing at any time againſt thy conſcience, rightly enformed by the word: exerciſe thy ſelfe to eſchew euerie ſinne, and to obey God in euerie one of his commandements, that pertaine either to the generall calling of a Chriſtian, or to thy particular calling. This did good Ioſias, who turned vnto God with all his heart. according to all the law of Moſes, 1. King. 25.25. and thus did Zacharie, and Elizabeth that walked in all the commaundements of God without reproofe. Luke 1.6.

9 If at any time againſt thy purpoſe and reſolution, thou be ouertaken with any ſin little or great, lie not in it, but ſpeedily recouer thy ſelfe by repentance: humble thy ſelfe, confeſsing thine offence, and by prayer intreate the Lord to pardon the ſame, and that earneſtly, till ſuch time as thou findeſt thy conſcience truly pacified, and thy care to eſchewe the ſame ſinne increaſed.

10 Conſider often of the right and proper ende of thy life in this world, which is not to ſeeke profite, honour, pleaſure, but that in ſeruing of men, we might ſerue God in our callings. God could, if it ſo pleaſed him, preſerue man without the miniſterie of man, but his pleaſure is to fulfill his worke and will, in the preſeruation of our bodies, and ſaluation of our ſoules, by the imployment of men in his ſeruice, euery one according to his vocation. Neither is there ſo much as a bondſlaue, but he muſt in and by his faithfull ſeruice to his maſter, maſter, ſerue the Lord. Men therefore doe commonly profane their labors and liues, by ayming at a wrong end, when all their care conſiſteth onely in getting ſufficient maintenance for them and theirs, for the obtaining of credit, riches and carnal commodities. For thus men ſerue themſelues, and not God, or men: much leſſe doe they ſerue God in ſeruing of men.

11 Giue all diligence to make thy election ſure, and to gather manifolde tokens thereof. For this cauſe obſerue the workes of Gods prouidence, loue, and mercy, both in thee, and vpon thee, from time, to time: for the ſerious conſideration of them, and the laying of them together when they are many and ſeuerall, miniſter much direction, aſſurance of Gods fauour and comfort. This was the practiſe of Dauid, 2. Sam. 17. 33. Pſal. 23. all.

12 Thinke euermore thy preſent eſtate whatſoeuer it be, to be the beſt eſtate for thee: becauſe whatſoeuer befalles thee, though it be ſickneſſe, or any other affliction, or death, befalls thee of the good prouidence of God. That this may the better be done, labor to ſee and acknowledge a prouidence of God. That this may the better be done, labour to ſee and acknowledge a prouidence of God, as well in pouerty, as in abundance, as wel in diſgrace, as in good report, as well in ſickeneſſe, as in health, as well in life, as in death.

13 Pray continually, I meane not by ſolemne and ſet prayer, but by ſecret and inward eiaculation of heart, that is, by a continuall eleuation of minde vnto Chriſt, ſitting at the right hand of God the Father, & that either by prayer, or giuing of thankes, ſo often as any occaſion ſhall be offered.

14 Thinke often of the worſt and moſt grieuous things that may befall thee, either in this life, or death, for the name of Chriſt; make a reckoning of them, and prepare thy ſelfe to beare them; that when they come, they may not ſeeme ſtrange, but be borne the more eaſily.

15 Make conſcience of idle, vaine, vnhoneſt, and vngodly thoughts, for theſe are the ſeeds and beginnings of actuall ſin, in word and in deede. This want of care in ordering and compoſing of our thoughts, is often puniſhed with a fearefull temptation in the very thought, called of Diuines, Tentatio blaſphemiarum, a tentation of blaſphemies.

16 When any good motion or affection riſeth in the heart, ſuffer it not to paſſe away, but feede it by reading, meditating, praying.

17 Whatſoeuer good thing thou goeſt about, whether it be in word or deede, doe it not in a conceit of thy ſelfe, or in the pride of thy heart, but in humility, aſcribing the power whereby thou dooſt thy worke, and the praiſe thereof to God, otherwiſe thou ſhalt finde by experience, God will curſe thy beſt doings.

18 Deſpiſe not ciuill honeſty: good conſcience and good manners muſt go together: therefore remember to make conſcience of lying, and cuſtomable ſwearing in common talke: contend not either in deede or word with any man, be curteous and gentle to all, good and bad: beare with mens wants and frailties, as haſtineſſe, frowardneſſe, ſelfe-liking, curiouſneſſe, &c. paſsing by them as being not perceiued: returne not euill, for euill, but rather good for euill: vſe meate, drinke, and apparrell, in that manner and meaſure, that they may further godlineſſe; and may be as it were ſignes, in which thou maieſt expreſſe the hidden grace of thy heart: Striue not to goe beyond any, vnleſſe it bee in good things: goe before thine equalls in giuing of honour, rather than in taking of it: make conſcience of thy worde, and let it be as a bond: profeſſe no more outwardly than thou haſt inwardly in heart: oppreſſe or defraud no man in bargaining: in all companies, either do good, or take good.

19 Cleane not by inordinate affection to any creature, but aboue all things, quiet and reſt thy minde in Chriſt, aboue all dignity and honor, aboue all cunning and pollicy, aboue all glory and honour, aboue all health and beauty, aboue all wealth and treaſure, aboue all ioy and delight, aboue all fame and praiſe, aboue all mirth & conſolation, that mans heart can feele or deuiſe beſide Chriſt.

With theſe rules of practiſe, ioyne rules of meditation; whereof I propound ſixe vnto thee, as I finde them ſet downe by a learned Diuine, called Victorinus Strigelius.

I.

We muſt not fall away from God for any creature.

II.

Infinite eternity is farre to be preferred before the ſhort race of this mortall life.

III.

We muſt hold faſt the promiſe of grace, thogh we looſe all temporall bleſsings, and they alſo in death muſt needes be left.

IIII.

Let the loue of God in Chriſt, and the loue of the Church for Chriſt, be ſtrong in thee, and preuaile againſt all other affections.

V

It is the principall Art of a Chriſtian, to beleeue things inuiſible, to hope for things deferred, to loue God when he ſhewes him to be an enemy, and thus to perſeuere vnto the end.

VI.

It is a moſt effectuall remedie for any griefe, to quiet our ſelues in a confidence of the preſence and helpe of God, and to aske of him, and withall, to waite, either for ſome eaſement, or deliuerance.

VII.

All the works of God are done in contrary meanes.

THE TRVE GAINE: MORE IN WORTH THEN all the goods in the world

Philip. 3.7.

Printed by IOHN LEGAT, Printer to the Vniuersitie of CAMBRIDGE. 1605.

TO THE RIGHT WORSHIPfull, Sir Edward Dennie Knight.

IT is a concluſion of our religion worthy to be conſidered: That Chriſt alone is our Mediatour, Iuſtifier, Propitiatour, Saviour, by workes and merites which hee himſelfe wrought within himſelfe, and not by any workes, or merites, which he worketh in vs by his ſpirite. The Scripture ſaieth thus much in expreſſe words: Iuſtified freely by the redemption; THAT IS IN CHRIST IESVS, Rom.3.14. He hath by HIMSELFE, purged our ſinnes, Heb.1.3. He was made ſinne for vs, that we ſhould be made the righteouſneſſe of God IN HIM, 2.Cor.5.21. IN HIM are ye compleate, Coloſſ.3.10. By his OWNE BLOOD hee entred once into the holy place, and obtained eternall redemption, Heb.9.12. Againe, Chriſt is ſaide to purge our conſciences from dead workes by his blood: becauſe he offered himſelfe by his eternall ſpirit, without ſpot to his father. v.14. And common reaſon tells vs as much. For if men be myſtically vnited to Chriſt, and by this vnion, doe receiue the ſpirit of Chriſt, and by the ſpirit doe good workes, and conſequently merite eternall life, they are then become partners with Chriſt, and are receiued into fellowſhip with him, in the worke of mans redemption: whereas he in the act of our reconciliation with God, admits neither deputy nor partner.

This concluſion being thus of infallible truth, it ſerues greatly to exalt the grace of God, to abaſe nature, and to beate downe the pride of all Iuſtitiary perſons and religions. And for the further explaning of it, ſerues this treatiſe following, which I preſent to your Worſhip. And the reaſon of my doing is thus, I remember almoſt two yeares agoe, in ſpeech you entred into commendations of that golden text, Phil.3.v.7. and withall gaue ſignification of your deſire, that ſomething might be ſet downe, whereby you might be brought to a further vnderſtanding of that place of Scripture. Therefore, to ſatisfie your deſire, I haue heere penned a ſhort expoſition of it. And I haue further preſumed to publiſh it in your name, deſiring it may be a teſtimony of a thankefull minde, for your loue and fauour towards me.

This wiſhing to your Worſhip, continuance and encreaſe of loue to the holy word of God, I take my leaue. Ann. 1601. Ian. 20.

The text, Phi. 3.7. containes a comparison of Vnequalls.
Protasis, the first part. I count all thinges Dung for Christ. Here consider what things are dung. All things.
Vertues and workes before his conuersion.
Vertues and works after his conuersion.
howe they are dung, shewed by a gradation.
1. I account all things losse.
2. I deprive my selfe of them.
3. I account them dung.
Apodosis, the second part. Christ is my gain. Here consider the amplification by a gradatiō.
1. I esteeme the knowledge of Christ an excellent thing.
2. I Desire to gaine Christ.
3. I desire to be found in Christ in the day of indgement.
the degrees of Gaine in Christ.
1. Iustice by the faith of Christ.
2. Fellowship with Christ in the vertue of his Resurrection. Death.
3. Attainement to the resurrection of the dead.

5 DE 60

Phil. 3. 7. But the thinges which were aduauntage to me, the ſame I accounted loſſe for Chriſt.

Yea, doubtleſſe I count all things but loſſe, for the excellent knowledge of Chriſt Ieſus my Lord, for whom I haue counted all things loſſe, and doe iudge them to bee doung, that I might winne Chriſt,

And be found in him———.

THe ſcope of theſe wordes, is this. In the ſecond verſe, Paul admoniſheth the Philippians, to take heede of certaine counterfeite Apoſtles, which ioyned Chriſt and circumciſion in the cauſe of their ſaluation: and put confidence in the fleſh, that is, in the outward workes of the ceremoniall and morall lawe. and that this Admonition might take the better place, he vſeth two reaſons. The firſt propounded in the 3. verſe, is this: True circumciſion is to worſhip God in ſpirit, to reioyce in Chriſt, and not to put any confidence in the fleſh. The ſecond reaſon is framed thus, if any man might put confidence in outwarde things, then I much more: but not I: therefore no man. The propoſition or firſt part of the reaſon is propounded in the 4. ver. and confirmed in the fift and ſixt. The ſecond part, or, aſſumption [but I do not put confidence in outward things] is confirmed in the ſeuenth, and eight verſes, thus: All things are loſſe to me in reſpect of Chriſt: therefore I put no confidence in any thing out of Chriſt. And this is the very drift of the former words.

In the ſecond place the proper ſenſe & meaning of this portion of ſcripture is to be conſidered. And for this cauſe, we are to be aduertiſed of ſundrie things in the wordes themſelues. And firſt of al, let it be obſerued, that Paul in the 7. verſe ſaith, in the time paſt, I haue counted all things loſſe: and in the next verſe, in the time preſent, I doe count all things loſſe. The former ſpeech is meant of that time in which he was firſt called to the knowledge of Chriſt: the ſecond is ſpoken of the time, when he had long continued an Apoſtle of Chriſt, and writ this Epiſtle to the Philip. This diſtinction of times in one and the ſame worde, makes much to the cleering of the doctrine that ſhal afterward be deliuered. Secondly whereas in our tranſlation, it is ſaide in the eight verſe, for whome I haue counted all things loſſe, the wordes are too ſcant, and doe not fully expreſſe the meaning of the holy ghoſt. For the words fully tranſlated, ſignifie, I haue made all things loſſe, or, I haue caſt away all things, or, I haue deprined my ſelfe of all things for Chriſt: And whereas Paul had ſaide before, [I count all thinges loſſe,] his meaning is to amplifie his owne woordes, by ſaying, I deprine my ſelfe of all things, and iudge them dung for Chriſt. Thirdly, the worde tranſlated [doung] ſignifieth ſuch things in the intrals of beaſts, as beeing vnfit for mans vſe, are caſt to dogges: and by it Paul ſignifies, that he did not only eſteeme all things as loſſes, and depriue himſelfe of them, but alſo caſt them away with loathing, in a mind neuer to ſeeke the recouerie of them. Laſtly, it muſt bee knowne, that Paul in theſe verſes vſeth a ſimilitude borrowed from the Merchant man; and it may be framed on this maner. The merchant, in hope of a treſure, is content to eſteeme his commodities no commodities, but loſſes; yea hee is further content to caſt them out into the ſea, and to eſteeme them as things caſt to dogges, that he may obtaine his intended treaſure: ſo, ſaith Paul, doe I count all my former prerogatiues as loſſe, and am content to depriue my ſelfe of them, yea to loathe them as dung, for the obtaining of Chriſt.

Furthermore the ſumme and ſubſtance of the woords, is a compariſon of things vnequall, and it may be formed thus: All thinges are loſſe to mee for Chriſt: and Chriſt is my gaine. The firſt parte of the compariſon is of Pauls loſſes, and it is amplified two wayes. Firſt, hee ſettes downe, what things be his loſſe: & they are of two ſortes. Priuiledges, vertues, and works before his conuerſion when he was a Phariſie: Againe, priuileges, vertues, and works after his conuerſion when he was an Apoſtle of Chriſt: the firſt are mentioned in the vij. verſe, the latter in the eight. Secondly, Paul ſets downe, how all things are loſſes to him by a gradation, thus: I count al things loſſe: I deprine my ſelfe of them, I count them dung.

The ſecond part of the compariſon is of Pauls Gaine. And it is amplified by a contrarie gradation, thus: I eſteeme the knowledge of Chriſt an excellent thing: I deſire to gaine

gaine Christ: and I desire to be found in him. Of these points in order: and first of Pauls losses before his conuersion, in these words:

For the things which were vantage to me, I counted losse for Christ.

That these things may be well knowne, let vs yet more narrowly search the meaning of these words. The things that were vantage to Paul are of three sorts. First his priuiledges, that he was borne a Iewe, that is, a member of the Church: & againe, that he was circumcised and brought vp in the straight sect of the Pharisies: Secondly his vertues, namly, his iustice and zeale in his religion: thirdly his works, whereby he for outward cariage obserued the ceremonial and morall law, without reproofe. And all these things are called his advauntage because he put his confidence in them, and thought to merit eternal life therby, when he was a Pharisie. He addes further, that he counted these his aduantage to be his losse; because so soon as he knew Christ, his cõfidence ceased, his former merits were no merits, but as things lost and cast away, yet not simply, but for Christ, that is, that he might gain Christ, and be found in Christ, as he expoundes himselfe in the wordes following.

The meaning thus laid downe, sundrie things may be learned. The first, that it was an heresie of the Pharisies, to put confidence in their workes, and to thinke that they could merit eternall life by them: for here Paul saith, that beeing a Pharisie, workes were his gaine & aduantage in the cause of saluation. And hence we learne, what to iudge of the Popish religiõ, which teaches in substãce the very same doctrine of confidence in workes, and of the merit of saluation thereby. And therfore the Papists of our time are the children of the old Pharisies, reuiuing and renuing the old heresie touching merit, with new & fresh colours. If they alledge that they ascribe merit to the works, not of the ceremonial, but of the morall law, and to works not of nature, but grace; I answer that the Pharisies did the same, as the Pharisie acknowledgeth in his praier, when he saith, I thank thee O Lord, I am not as other men, &c. Secondly, in Pauls example being a Pharisie, we learne, that it is the pride and arrogancie of mans nature, to be somthing within himself, and to erect vp somthing vnto himself to be his righteousnes, and a meanes of his saluation out of Christ. The iust (saith Habacuk) liues by his faith, but he whose soul is not right in him, Hab. 2. 4. puts vp himselfe, or builds towers of defence to himselfe by vaine confidence out of God. The prodigall sonne must haue his part alone by himself from his father. Paul saith of the Iewes that they established their owne righteousnes, and would not be subiect to the righteousnes of God. Rom. 10. 3. This being so, let vs learne to see and detest this pride in our selues. For where it raigns and takes place, there Christ is not truly acknowledged: & when men begin to know Christ, this hidden & spirituall pride giues place. And further by this, we learn not to maruell, that Turks & Iewes deny Christ, and that Papists in the cause of their saluation, beside the passion of Christ, foyst in something of their own, namely their own merits and satisfactions: for it is the proud nature of man to set vp himselfe, in whole, or in part, and to relie himselfe vpon somthing of his owne out of Christ. No maruaile then, that such as be otherwise learned and wise, liue and die in the opinion of iustification by their owne good workes. Thirdly, wheras Paul accounts things of aduauntage to be his losse, we learne, that no priuiledges out of Christ, minister true comfort or true happines. It is a priuiledge to haue knowne Christ, and to haue eaten and drunken with him: but of such Christ saith, Depart from me, I know you not. Luk. 13. 26. It is a priuiledge to be of the kinred of our Sauiour Christ, but it is of no moment: for Christ saith, Who is my mother and brethren? Mark. 3. 33. he that doth the will of my father, is my brother, sister, and mother. It is a priuiledge that the virgin Marie was the mother of Christ: but if she had not as well borne him in heart by faith, as she bare him in her wombe, she had not bin saued. It is a priuiledge to propheſie in the name of Christ, but of such Christ saith, Depart from me ye workers of iniquitie, Math. 7. Lastly, it is a priuiledge to be indued with all kind of learning, of artes, and tongues; but alas all is nothing: for if a man had all wit, wisdome and learning, and could speake in all matters with the tongue of men and Angels, vnlesse he be found in Christ, he is no better in the sight of God than a damned wretch. This being so, we must learne first of all, to moderate our care and our affections, for worldly profites, honours, pleasures; and our principall care must euermore bee cast on CHRIST. Secondly, such persons as liue in an honest and ciuill life, and stand vppon this, that they are no theeues, no murtherers, no adulterers, no blasphemers, but in outward duties shewe loue to God and man, they must I say, take heede least they deceiue themselues, building vpon false grounds. For though ciull honestie be a thing commendable before God, yet it is not sufficient to saue vs before God. And Paul who was a strait obseruer of the law, after he came to the knoledge of Christ counted all his morall obedience, in which he had formerly trusted, but losse and dung for Christ.

Fourthly is hath bin the doctrine of the popish Church this many yeares, that before a man can be in Christ, and be iustified, he must first of all prepare and dispose himselfe to receiue his iustification: & that when he is sufficiently disposed, he doth merit of congruitie that God should infuse righteousnesse, whereby of a sinner he is made no sinner and righteous before God. But I demād of the Patrōs of this doctrine; whether, when the workes of preparation are done, the doer is in Christ or out of Christ? If he be in Christ, he is also iustified before he is iustified. If he be as yet out of Christ, Paul hath giuen the sentence, that the said workes are to be esteemed as losse, and that the merit of congruitie is not meat for them that desire to feed on Christ, but rather food for dogs.

Lastly, hence we learne, how Christ is to be receiued of vs. Such as would truely come to Christ and receiue him, must make losses of all things: they must come naked and emptied of all their own righteousnes. As men in a Shipwracke cast out their commodities, and when there is no remedie leaue their ship and betake themselues to the sea, and thus come swimming to the shore: euen so must all men first forsake all, & then come to Christ. Beggars, that they may obtain their almes, come in their rags, vnfolding legs and armes, that their sores & botches may be seene. Benadad king of Syria, that he might recouer the fauour of the king of Israel, cast off his crowne and royall robes: he and his men come in sackcloth with halters about their heads: and thus he obtaines his desire. In like manner comming to Christ we must lay aside all opinion of our goodnesse, and in abasing of our selues follow beggers fashions, & with Benhadad cloath our selues with signes of guiltinesse and confusion of face. We must first be annihilated and vtterly in respect of goodnesse be made nothing in our selues, that we may be what we are out of our selues in Christ. There is no entering into the kingdome of heauen, except wee receiue it and Christ as a little child in all meekenes and humilitie. For there must be nothing in vs to receiue Christ, but meere faith resting on meere mercie. Let all such thinke on this, as desire to be in Christ, & to receiue true comfort by him.

Thus much of Pauls losses before his conuersion: now come to be considered the things which were his losses after his conuersion: and they are set downe in the words following. But, [doubtles I doe thinke all things losses for the excellent knowledge of Iesus Christ my Lord.] That these losses may be the better knowne, let vs a litle consider the meaning of the words. Whereas before Paul had said, that therefore he counted things to be losse vnto him for Christ, that had bin his aduantage: some mā might happily think, this is but rash iudgement in Paul, he therfore, to cut off this surmise saith, doubtles I count all things losse, that is, that I may not be thought to speak rashly, I say more, that I do now account all things losse, and I speake it confidently, as beeing resolute what I say. When he saith, I doe count, he speaks in the time present of himselfe as beeing not only a Christian but also an Apostle of Christ. And when he saith, All things, the generall speech must be obserued: for he excepteth nothing pertaining to him, but his knowledge and faith in Christ. Here therefore we must first of all vnderstand the priuiledge of an Apostle: secondly all inward and Christian vertues, as hope, feare, loue of God, good conscience, &c. for of all the inward gifts none is excepted but faith (as I haue said.) Thirdly here we must vnderstand workes not of nature but of grace, done and effected by the spirit of God in vs. For in the verse following hee doth reiect his owne righteousnes which is of the lawe. Now he saith of all these, that they are his losses for Christ. But how are they losses? The speach must warily be vnderstood, least it be offensiue. They are losses not in respect of godly conuersation: for they are the causes thereof, and they are meanes of shewing our thankfulnes to God and loue to man. Now then they are losses onely in respect of iustification and saluation: when they are reputed and maintained as meritorious causes thereof either in whole or in part. Though, when they are rightly vsed and applied, they are the excellent gifts of God; yet when they are brought into the Act of iustification and saluation, they become become as losses and dung. And this I take to be the meaning of these wordes. To the like purpose the prophet Isai saith in the name of the whole Church confessing her sinnes, All our righteousnesse is as a cloath vtterly to be cast away. And Paul to the Galatians: If righteousnesse be by the lawe, Christ died without cause, or in vaine; that is, if the righteousnesse of the lawe be our aduantage, Christ must be our losse: and on the contrarie, if he be our aduantage, the righteousnesse of the lawe must be our losse.

Isa.64.6.

Gal.2.21.

This doctrine of Paul, that all vertues and workes both of nature and grace are losses in the case of our saluation, sounds not in mās reason, & there be many things brought to the contrarie. First, it is alleadged, that God doth accept and crown our workes: and therefore that they are not losses. I answer: God doeth as it were keepe a double court. One of iustice, the other of mercie. In the court of iustice he giues iudgment by the lawe, and accurseth euery man that doth not continue in all things written in the lawe to doe them. In this court nothing can stand but the passion & righteousnesse of Christ, and for the best workes that we can doe, we may not looke for any acception or reward: but vse the Plea of David. Enter not, O Lord, into iudgement with thy seruant, for no flesh shall be iustified in thy sight. Nowe in the court of grace and mercie, God hath to deale with his own children that stand before him iustified and reconciled by Christ. And the obedience of such he accepteth in this court, & mercifully regardeth, though otherwise it be imperfect; yet not for the merit thereof, but for the merit and worthinesse of Christ. Thus then good works in rigour of iustice are worthie condemnation, and are accepted of mercie procured by the merit of Christ. Secondly, it is alleadged that works are necessarie to saluation, and therefore not to be reputed losses. I answer, workes may be considered either as causes of saluation, or onely as a way directing thereto. If they be considered as causes, they are not necessarie, but in this respect they are dung. If they be respected as a way leading and directing to eternall life, they are indeede necessarie thus, and no otherwise. Thirdly it is obiected: that the lawe requires works, and the lawe must be satisfied, and therefore that be which is iustified, must be iustified by workes. The answer is, that whosoeuer is iustified and saued, is iustified and saued, by workes. But workes must be distinguished. Some are personall workes done in & by our selues. These neither iustifie nor saue any man, but in the cause of saluation are losse and dung. Besides these, there be workes that are out of vs, wrought in and by the person of our Sauiour Christ, namely the workes of obedience in satisfying and fulfilling the lawe. These indeede are the workes which iustifie and saue vs, and none that proceede from vs. To this effect Paul saith, That we are iustified freely by the redemption that is in Christ. Lastly it is alleadged, that if all vertues be losse for Christ, then faith is selfe. I answer; Faith must diuersly be considered, first of all as a vertue working and bringing forth many good fruits in vs. And thus it is to be reputed losse, as all other vertues are. Secondly it must be considered not as a vertue, but as an instrument or hand not to giue or worke any thing, but to apprehend and receiue Christ and his benefits. And thus it is no losse, but as a thing excepted in this text. Now the we see that the doctrine of Paul is manifest, that all vertues and works both of nature and grace, are meere losses in the cause of our iustificatiō and saluation.

Rom.3.24.

Hence sundrie things may be learned. The first, that the most holy works of holy men can not iustifie or merit eternall life; When they are brought within the Acte of iustification as causes, Paul saith they are but losse, & as offals to be cast to dogs. Let this be noted and remembred for euer against all iustitiarie papists. Who, if they would but seriously consider this one text, they might be farre better resolued then they are.

Secondly, hence the doctrine of our church is plainly gathered, namely, that we are saued and iustified by faith alone. For all things except our knowledg and faith in Christ are made as dung. And that this our doctrine may not be scandalous, sundrie things must be remebred. The first is the right meaning of the doctrine, which is, that there is nothing within vs, that is any cause either efficient, materiall, formall or finall of iustification but faith. The second that faith is no principall cause, but onely an instrument. The third, that faith is no instrument to procure or worke our iustification and saluation, but an instrument to receiue or to apprehend our iustification giuen by the father, procured by the sonne, sonne, applied by the holy Ghost. The last, that faith must be cõsidered as a cause, or else as a way of saluation. If, as an internal cause in vs, it only iustifieth, and consequently saueth vs. If as a way, it doth not saue alone. For other vertues and workes, though they be not causes, yet are they wayes to eternall life as well as faith. Here then when Papists make out-cries against vs, saying that we look to be saued by faith alone: the true and plaine answer to them is this; We consider faith two waies: first as a cause within vs, not meriting any way, but instrumentally apprehending pardon in Christ, & applying it to vs for our eternall happines. Secondly, faith may be considered as a way wherein we are to walke for the attainmẽt of euerlasting life. In the first sense faith alone iustifieth & saueth, & nothing else within vs. To this do the learned fathers agree. Basil saith; This is perfect reioycing in God, when a man is not puffed vp for his owne iustice, but acknowledgeth that he wants iustice, a and that he is iustified by faith alone in Christ. Hillarie: That is remitted of Christ by faith, which the law could not loosen: for faith alone iustifies. Ambrose: They are iustified freely which b doe nothing, nor repay like for like, are iustified by faith alone, through the gift of God. Againe, in his Commentarie vpon the Epistle to the Cor. This is appointed of God, that he which beleeues in Christ should be saued without workes, by faith alone: receiuing remission of sinnes. Hierom. God iustifieth by faith alone.

Neuertheless, if we speake of the way to life, then we are not saued only by faith. For though faith be the only instrument to apprehend Christ, yet it is not the onely way to life: repentance also is the way, yea all vertues, and all workes are the way. In this sense, affliction is said to worke vnto vs a more excellent weight of glorie: not as a cause, but as a way giuing direction. And mothers are said to be saued by bearing of children, not as by a cause, but as by a straight and narrow way. Againe, Abrahams faith went not alone, but had a kind of co-operation with his works: faith and workes both being considered as a way to happines or as markes in a way. In this sense the fathers haue ascribed saluation to many things, not as to causes, but as to waies. Bernard said well, that workes are the way to the kingdome of heauen, and not the causes of raigning. Lactantius saith, Great is the helpe of repentance: which whosoeuer taketh away, cuts off to himselfe the way of life. Chrysostome: Some by watching, by sleeping on the bare ground, by tewing their bodies with daily labour doe blotte out their sinnes: but thou mayest obtaine the same by a more easie way, that is, by forgiuing. Thus many hundred places of the fathers are to be vnderstoode, when they ascribe remission of sins to martyrdome, to fasting, prayer, works of mercy, and such like.

Thirdly, here is laid downe the foundation of true humilitie. For if all our vertues and works be losses in the case of our saluation, thẽ all boasting is excluded, & we are to take nothing to our selues but shame & confusion, & giue all glory to god. Yea the more our virtues are and workes, if we put any trust in them, the greater are our losses.

Thus wee see what things are losses to Paul: in the next place let vs consider how they are losses. This Paul sets downe by a gradation thus, I count them losse, I make them my losses, I count them as dong. This gradation is nothing else but a repetition of one and the same thing inlarged and amplified in speech. Nowe repetitions in Scripture are not idle and vaine, as they are oftentimes in the writings of men, but they commonly signifie two things, namely the certainty, and the necessity of the thing repeated: and in this place they signifie the certainty and the necessity of Pauls losses.

Certaine they are; becausse hee that will be saued by Christ must certainely indure those losses without recouery. The foundation of this certainety lies in an impossibility of merit by any works of man, which I will make manifest by fiue reasons. The first is this: It is a principal part of christian inherent righteousnes to haue and keepe a good conscience: nowe Paul expresly excludes it from iustification, saying; I know nothing by my selfe, yet I am not thereby iustified, 1. Cor. 4. 4. The second is this, Paul saith Eph. 2. 9. We are not saued by workes: nowe hee meanes no other woorkes but such as follow faith, and are done by the spirite of God. And this appeareth by the reasons which hee vseth, that wee are created to good workes. And againe, that they are ordayned that we should walke in them. The third: before a worke can merit, it must please God: before the worke please God, the worker must please him: before the worker please him he must be reconciled to God and perfectly iustified. Iustification therefore goes in order before good workes, and for this cause works cannot be brought within the act of iustification as causes. Good workes make not good mẽ in whole or in part: but men men first of al made good by the goodnes of Christ imputed, made good workes by their goodnesse. The fourth is this: The humanitie of Christ is the most excellent of al creatures in heauen and earth: yet being considered by it selfe, it cannot possibly merit at Gods hand. In a worke properly meritorious there be three conditions. First, the doer thereof must doe it by him selfe, and not by another, for then the praise is his by whom he doth it, & not his owne. Secondly, the worke to be done, must not be a debt and dutie, for then the doer deserues nothing. Thirdly, there must be a proportion betweene the worke and the reward of life eternall. Now the manhood of Christ considered apart by it self, cannot performe these three conditions. For it dooth what it dooth by the spirit of God, whereby it was conceiued and is filled without measure. Againe, it is a creature, and therefore whatsoeuer it is, hath, or can doe, it oweth all to God. Lastly, it can not do a worke proportionall to eternall glorie; becauſe it takes all of God, and can giue nothing to him. If then it be demaunded, how his manhood of Christ merits in our behalfe: I answer, not by it selfe, but by meanes of the personall vnion, whereby it is exalted and preferred into the vnitie of the second person, the eternal word of the Father. Hence it is that Christ meriteth: none can merit of God but God. Now then if Christ merit onely in this regard, no meere creature, man, or angell can possibly merit by any worke. The fifth reason is this: there be two kinds of transgression of the law, one when a worke is directly against the law: the other is, when that is done that the law requires, but not in that manner and perfection the law requires. The second kind of transgression is in euerie good worke which is done by men vpon earth: now where any trausgression is, there must be pardon: where pardon is, there is no merit.

That this doctrine of the certentie of our losses may yet the better be cleared, I will set downe the supposed groundes of merit, and discouer their weaknesse. They are two: the first is, the promise that God hath made to workes, whereby he hath bound himselfe to reward them with eternall glorie. I answer, that this very promise is made of the good pleasure, and meere good will of God: and of the same goodnesse it is, that any man is a doer of anie good worke, either by nature or grace. Therefore if a man could fulfill the whole law, he should not merit at Gods hand. Thus saith the lord. Ex. 20. 6. That he will shew mercie vpon thousands of them that loue him and keepe his commaundements. The second ground is, that vertu of meriting is deriued from Christ the head to his members by diuine influence. I answer, it is a thing vnpossible. For the vertue of meriting is in Christ, not simply as he is man, but as he is in one person God and Man. The worke which meriteth is done or acted euen by the manhood; but the merit of the worke is from the godhead, or from the excellencie of the person. Now then if this vertue be in Christ, not as he is man, but in respect he is Man-god, or God-man; it cannot be deriued to vs that are but men, vnles euery beleeuer should be Deified, and made of a meere man God-man, which is impossible. Therefore there is no capablenesse or possibilitie of merit in the work of any meere man or creature whatsoeuer. For this cause the true Church of God euer detested humane merit. The merit of congruitie before iustification, is a Pelagian conceit, and was neuer maintained of the orthodoxe fathers. Stapleton confessed thus much. The merit of congruitie (sayth he) in respect of the first grace was of olde hissed out: neither was it euer admitted of the better sort of Schoolemen, as of Thomas in his summe, and his latter writings, nor of his followers. And the [a] merit of condignitie, whereby workes are said of their owne dignitie and that properly to deserue the increase of the first iustification, and eternall life, was not receiued of the learned in the Church for more then a thousand yeares after Christ. Radulphus Ardens, a very learned man in his time, saith thus: Seeing by one grace we come to another, [b] they are called merits, and that improperly. For as Augustine witnesseth, God crownes onely his owne grace in vs. Againe, No man may thinke that God is bound as it were by a bargaine, to repay that which he hath promised. For as God is free to promise, so is he free in respect of repaying, especially considering that as well merits as rewards are his grace. For God crownes nothing else in vs but his grace: because [c] if he would deale with vs in extremitie, none liuing should be iustified in his sight. And hereuppon the Apostle, who laboured more than all, saith: I thinke that the afflictions of this time are not worthie the glorie that shall be reuealed. Therefore this couenant or bargaine is nothing else but a voluntarie rie promise. Anselme after him saith, If a man should serue God a thousand yeares, and that most zealously, [d] he should not worthely deserue to be in the kingdome of heauen so much as halfe a day. S. Bernard saith, Touching eternall life, we knowe that the sufferings of this time are not worthy of the glorie to come; no not if one should suffer all. For the merites of men are not such, that eternall life may bee due for them, or that God should doe some iniurie if he gaue it not. For to let passe, that all merits are the gifts of God, and so man is rather debter to God for them, then God to man, what are all merites to so great a glorie? Lastly, who is better then the Prophet, to whome the Lorde giueth so worthy a testimonie, saying: I haue found a man according to mine owne heart? for all that he had neede to say to God, Enter not into iudgement with thy seruant. Againe in the processe of time, when the merit of condignitie had taken place, it was not generally receiued: for it was reiected of sundrie schole men, and others, as of Gregorie of Arimine, of Durand, of Waldensis, of Burgensis, and Scotus. Wherefore to conclude, it now appeares to be an infallible certentie, that he that desires to be saued by Christ, must indure the losse of all his works and vertues whatsoeuer, in the cause of his owne iustification. Now then if this doctrine be so certaine and infallible, as it is: then also must we be setled in this poynt without doubting, that the present Church of Rome erreth greiuously, in that it magnifieth the merit of works. Yet in this regard it reuerseth the very foundation of true religion. For if they make aduantage in the matter of saluation by their workes, Christ must needes vpon infallible certentie be their losse: because Paul makes all workes losse, that Christ may be aduantage. Therefore, farre be it from vs al, to haue any dealing or contract of societie with that Church, lest we be partakers of her dangerous and fearefull losses.

Ber. de assumt. Virg. serm. 2. anno 1140.

Againe, in that all vertues and works of grace are but losses for Christ; we must not onely in our first conuersion, but euer afterward, though we be iustified and sanctified, euen in the pang of death, by meere faith, rest on the meere mercie of God, and apprehend naked Christ, that is, Christ seuered, in the case of saluation, from all respect of all vertues and works whatsoeuer. For there is nothing opposed to the seuere iudgement of God, but meere Christ. If we doe presume to oppose any of our doings to the sentence of the lawe, hell, death, cõdẽnation, we are sure to goe by the losses,

Thus much of the certaynty of Paules losses now followes the necessitie of them. They are necessarie, in as much as without them, no man can haue part in Christ. For the merit of our vertues and good works, and the grace of God in Christ can not stand together: yea they are contrarie as fire and water, and one ouerthroweth the other in the cause of iustification and saluation. Paul, to signifie this contrarietie saith, If election be of grace, it is not workes: & if it be of workes, it is not of grace. And againe, if ye be iustified by the lawe, ye are abolished from Christ. And to the same purpose Ambrose saieth, grace is wholy receiued, or wholy lost: and Augustine, It is no way grace, that is not freely giuen euery waie. Hence it folowes, that the present religion of the Church of Rome aboliseth Christ, in as much as it mainetaines and magnifies the merit of good workes. And this may be gathered by the very doctrine of that Church. For it teacheth, that men must be saued by their praiers, fastings, almes, pilgrimages, buildings of churches, chappels, bridges, &c. What then shal the passion of Christ doe? whereto serues it? They answer, that it frees vs from death, and giues to our woorkes, the merite of eternall life, and makes them meritoriously to increase our iustification. Hence it followes, that Christ is no more but the first cause of our saluation, and that we our selues are secondary causes vnder him, & with him. And thus hee is made, of a Sauiour, no Sauiour. For either he must be a ful and perfect Sauiour in himselfe, or no Sauiour. Secondly, by the former necessitie we learne, that whosoeuer will be saued by the merit of Christ, must come vnto him without vertues or works of his owne, not carrying in heart, so much as the least confidence in them, esteeming himselfe to be a most vile, wretched, and miserable sinner, as the Publicane did, who praied, Lord be mercifull to me a sinner.

Gala. 5.4.

Rom. 11.6.

Hitherto of Pauls losses: now followes the second part of the comparison, touching Pauls gaine, But Christ is my Gaine. A sentence to be remembered, and to be writ in the tables of our heart for euer. And the reason thereof is manifest, Christ our mediatour God and man, is the only fountaine of all good things, that are, or can be thought on, whether spirituall or temporall. Saint Iohn saieth. Of his fulnesse we re- ceiue grace for grace. Againe Paul saith, In him all the treasures of wisedome and knowledge are hidde: and, Ye are compleate in him. And he calles Christ our Ransome, or Counterprice. And as he makes Adam the roote of all euill in mankind, so he makes Christ the roote of all grace and goodnes. For the better clearing of this doctrine, two points are to be handled: When Christ is our gaine? and how? Touching the time when, I set downe three things. He is our gaine in this life: he is our gaine in death: & he is our gaine after death. To returne to the first: he is our gaine in life, if we turne from our euill waies, and beleeue in him; in as much as he hath giuen for vs many benefites, which I will reduce to ten heads.

Colos.2.9,10.
1.Tim.3.6.

1 The first is, pardon of sin, without tearme of time, whether past, present, or to come: Yet must we here remember, that pardon of sinne is not giuen absolutely, whether men repent or no, but vpon condition of

2 our repentance. The second is, the imputation of Christs obedience in fulfilling the law, for our iustification before God. From the former benefit ariseth our freedome from hell, and from the law, in respect of the curse thereof: and from the second ariseth a Right to eternall life; whereof the possession is reserued to the life to come.

3 The third is our Adoption, whereby we are the children of God, and brethren of Christ. And hence haue we a Right of Lordshippe or dominion ouer the whole world, and all things contained therein, whether in heauen or in earth: which right was lost by Adam, and is now restored by Christ. Indeede wicked men and infidels haue and vse the things of this life at their wills, & that by Gods permission: but they receiue and inioy them no otherwise, then children of traitors doe the goods of their parents, who peraduenture are suffered to take the benefit of some part of them for the preseruing of their liues, though title and interest to them be not restored. The 4 fourth is the ministery, that is, the presence, Heb.1.14. aide, and protection of good angels. The 5 fifth gaine or benefit is, that all the miseries and calamities of this life, cease to be curses, and are made blessings, being turned Rom.8.28. to the good of them that are to be saued by 6 Christ. The sixth is the mortification of originall sinne, with all the parts thereof, by the vertue of the death of Christ. The se-

7 uenth is a spirituall life, whereby we liue not, but Christ liues in vs, making vs partakers of his Annointing, and thereby enabling vs to liue as Prophets, Priests, Kings. Prophets, to teach and make confession of our faith in Christ: Priests, to dedicate and present our bodies and soules to God for the seruice of his Maistie: Kings, to beare rule and dominion ouer the corruptions, and lusts of our harts. The eight 8 gaine is, that Christ presents all our praiers and good works to his Father in his owne name: and thus by his owne Intercession makes them acceptable vnto him. The ninth gaine is, the presence of his spirit: For 9 when Christ ascended, he tooke with him Iohn 16.
our pawne, namely our flesh, and left with vs his owne pawne, the presence of the Comforter, to supply his owne presence, to guide, comfort, and to assure vs of our adoption and saluation. The tenth & last 10 is Perseuerance in hauing and holding the former gaines. For thus saith the Lord, Ierem.31.40
I will put my feare in their hearts, that they shall not depart from me. And it must be remembred, that these woordes are not spoken onely in generall to the Church, but also in singular to euery true member thereof: becaus they are the wordes of the couenant. Againe Dauid saith, that the righteous man is like a Psalm.1.3.
tree planted by the waters side, whose leafe neuer withereth: who therefore hath alwaies sappe of grace in the heart to the end.

Againe, as Christ is our gaine in life, so is he also our gaine in death, in as much as he hath taken away the sting of death, and hath changed the condition of it, by making it, of the gate of hell, to be the way to eternall life.

Thirdly, hee is our Gaine after death three waies. Our first gaine is the resurrection of our bodies to eternall life in the day of iudgement. The second, is a priuiledge to iudge the world. For first of all 1.Cor.6.2.
iudgement shall passe vpon the godly: which done, they shall be takē vp to Christ, and there as witnesses & approouers of his sentence of condemnation, iudge together with him, the wicked world. The third is, the eternall retribution, in which God shal be all in all, first in Christ, and then in all the members of Christ, and that for euer and euer.

The next point to be handled, is, How Christ is our gaine? For the answering of this, 2. questions are to be opened. The first is, According to what nature is Christ our gaine? I answer, folowing the ancient and catholike doctrine, That (a) whole Christ is

is our gaine, according to both natures. The godhead of Christ profites no sinner without the manhoode, nor the manhoode without the godhead. And as Leo saieth; Each nature worketh that which is proper vnto it, having communication with the other. Againe, God may be considered two waies; God absolute, or, God made man. God absolute, that is, God absolutely cõsidered without respect to Christ, is indeed a fountaine of righteousnesse and life; but this fountaine is closed, sealed vp, and not to be attained vnto: because our sinnes make a seperation betweene God & vs: and God thus considered, is a Maiestie full of terror to all sinfull men. But God considered as he was made man, and manifested in our flesh, is also a fountaine of goodnesse; yea the same fountaine opened, vnsealed, and flowing forth to al mankind. Hence it is that Christ is called the light of the world; the bread and water of life; the way, the truth, the life. Heere againe wee must remember to make a difference or distinction of the natures of Christ: For the godhead of Christ is our gaine, not in respect of essence, but in respect of vertue and operation shewed in, or vppon the manhoode of Christ, whereby it makes things which were done and suffered in the saide manhoode, apt and sufficient to appease Gods anger, and to merite eternall life for vs. As for the manhood, it is not onely in effect and operation, but also really communicated to the faith of the beleeuing heart: and heereupon it is as it were a treasury & storehouse of all the rich graces of God, that serue to iustifie, saue, or any way to enrich the Elect of all ages and times, through the whole world. If any doubt of this, let them consider three things of this most glorious manhoode. The first, is the grace of personall vnion; whereby it is receiued into the Vnity of the second person, and hath no being or subsisting, but onely in the subsistance thereof. And hence it is truely termed, the humanity of the Sonne of God, or of the Word. The second is, that this manhoode hath in it all fulnesse of grace, commonly called in schooles, habituall grace. Now this fulnesse of grace containes in it all the gifts of the holy-Ghost, and that, in the highest degree of perfection. It hath therefore in at gifts more for number, and greater for measure, than all men and Angells haue. The third is, that it receiueth this excellency of gifts & graces, not for it selfe, but that it may be as it were a pipe or conduit to conuey the same graces to all the Elect. Our saluation and life dependeth on the fulnesse of the Godhead, which is in Christ: neuertheless it is not conueied vnto vs, but in the flesh, and by the flesh of Christ. Thus much Christ signifieth, when he saieth; My flesh is meate indeede. And, Except yee eate the flesh of the Son of man, and drinke his blood, yee haue no life in you. And, Hee which eateth my flesh, abideth in me, and I in him. And Iohn the Baptist saieth; Of his fulnesse, we receiue grace for grace. The Supper of the Lord, is ordained for the increase and continuance of grace and life: and of it Paul saieth; The bread which we breake, is a fellowship or communion with the very body of Christ. On this manner Christ is saide to bee made vnto vs of God, wisedome, righteousnesse, sanctification, redemption, Wisedome, not because the essentiall wisedome of the God-head is giuen to vs: for that is infinite and incommunicable. Neither againe, because hee is the authour of our wisedome, giuing vs knowledge of our saluation, as the Father and the holyghost do. Nor because hee is the matter of our wisedome, the knowledge of whome is eternall life: but for an higher cause than all these. Our mediator the man Iesus Christ, who is also God, is an head vnto vs, and a roote of our wisedome. For he was annointed with the spirit of wisedome in the assumed manhood, not priuately for himselfe, but that we also which beleeue, might be partakers of the same annointing, and that wisedome from him by his flesh, might be conueied vnto vs. Therefore from his wisdome there is wisedome deriued in some measure, to all that are mystically vnited vnto him, as light in one candle is deriued of an hundred, or as heate is deriued from heate. Againe, he is our iustice, not onely because hee is the author and giuer of our iustice, with the Father and the holy-Ghost: neither because the essentiall iustice of Christ is giuen to vs: for then wee should be all deified: but because that iustice which is in the manhoode, consisting partly in the purity of nature, and partly in the puritie of action, whereby hee obeyed his Fathers will, and suffered all things to be suffered for vs: this iustice I say, is imputed to vs, and accounted ours, according to the tenour of the couenant, as if it were inherent in vs. Hee is our Sanctification, not onely because hee is the authour of it, neyther because the sanctity of holinesse of the Godhead, is communicated to vs: but because Leo Epist. 10.

Ioh. 6. 53. 54.

1. Cor. 1. 30.

Ioh. 3. 35.

he was sanctified in his manhood aboue all men and Angells. And from this holinesse of his, our holinesse is deriued, and springs as a fruit; as the corruption in Adams posterity is deriued from the corruption of Adam. Christ saith; For their sakes sanctifie I my selfe, that they also may be sanctified through the truth. Cyrill saith; As God, he giues himselfe the spirite, as man he receiues it: which hee doth not for himselfe, but for vs, that the grace of sanctification out of him, and in him first receiued, might passe to all mankind. Againe he saith; That the body of our Lord, being sanctified by the vertue of the Word, ioyned to it, is made so effectuall for mysticall benediction, that it can send forth his sanctification into vs. Lastly, Christ is is our Redemption or life, on this manner. In the person of the Mediator, being one and the same, there is a double life: one vncreated and essentiall, agreeing to Christ as he is God. And this life is not giuen to vs at all, saue in respect of the efficacy thereof. For in God we liue, moue, and haue our being. The other is the created life of the manhoode; and it is either naturall, or spirituall. Naturall, is that wherewith he liued in the estate of humiliation by ordinary meanes, as all other men doe. Spirituall, is that whereby hee now especially liueth in the estate of exaltation and glory. And this life he liueth not onely for himselfe, but also for vs; that wee being partakers thereof, may liue together with him. Thus the auntient Church hath taught; the flesh of Christ vnited to the Word, is made quickening flesh; that it might further quicken them with spirituall life, that are vnited to it.

Iohn 17.19. Cyril in Iohn libr. 11. c. 15. Lib. 11. c. 22. Rom. 6. 8. Cyril. in Ios. lib. 3. c. 37. & 4 21. 14. & li. 20. 13.

The next question is, In what estate Christ is our Gaine? The estate of Christ is twofold: the estate of humiliation from his birth to his death; and the estate of exaltation in his resurrection, ascention, and his sitting at the right hand of God. In this first estate, he workes and procures our Gaine. Christ lying basely in the manger, and crucified ignominiously on the Crosse, gained our deliuerance from hell, and a right to life euerlasting. In the second estate, hee communicates to vs the gaine before named, and by degrees, puts vs in possession of it. And for this end, hee now sits at the right hand of God, and makes request for vs.

The vse of this doctrine, that Christ is our gaine, is manifold. For it sheweth, that wee in our selues are poore and altogether destitute of spirituall good things. For to this end is Christ our gaine, that hee may supply our want, and fill them with graces that are otherwise empty and euen hunger-starued. Secondly it teacheth, that men doe in vaine seeke for so much as the least drop of goodnesse out of Christ, who alone is the storehouse of all good things. Heauen and earth, men and Angells, and all things are but as nothing to vs, if by them, wee seeke to enioy any thing out of Christ: yea, God is no GOD to vs without Christ. Thirdly, we learne to detest the Treasury, which the Church of Rome maintains and magnifies. It is as it were a chest, in which is contained, not onely the ouerplus of the merites of Christ, but also of Martyres and Saints, to be dispensed in pardons at the Popes pleasure. But Christ is alone our full and perfect gaine; and therefore in himselfe there is an al-sufficient Treasury of the Church: and as Paul saith, in him we are compleate. As for the merites of Martyres and Saints, they bring no aduantage to the people of God, but are indeede matter for the dunghill. Fourthly, if Christ be our treasure and gaine, our hearts must be set on him. Our mindes vse to be vpon our penny, and we hunger after gaine: let vs therefore hunger after Christ; hee is our penny, and he is our gaine. Nay, wee must aboue all pleasures, honors, profits, loue him, and reioyce in him: yea, wee should be swallowed vp with loue of him. Lastly, heere is matter of comfort. In the losse of goods and friends, and all calamities of this life, wee may not be dismaied: all the losses of this life, are but petty losses, so long as we haue Christ for our gaine. Nothing can be wanting vnto vs, in the midst of all our losses and miseries, so long as wee receiue of his fulnesse, who is the fountaine of goodnesse, neuer dried vp.

Coloss. 2. 10.

To proceede further, the second part of the comparison [Christ is my gaine] is amplified by a gradation on this manner: Ieesteeme the knowledge of Christ Iesus my Lord an excellent thing; I desire to gaine Christ; I desire to be found in Christ. Of these in order. By the knowledge of Christ, we are to vnderstand the doctrine of the Gospel, or the doctrine of the person and offices of Christ, conceiued and knowne of vs. To this knowledge an excellency is ascribed, of which I will speake a little. This excellency appeares, partly in the matter and contents, and partly in the effects thereof. Touching the matter, it is full of excellent mysteries, which Paul reduceth to sixe heads in his Epistle to Timothy. The first is, the

1. Tim. 3. 16.

Incarnation of the Sonne of God in these wordes, God made manifest in the flesh. And heere two wonders offer themselues to be considered: the first, whereas Adams flesh and Adams sinne are inseparably ioyned together, in respect of all that Nature can doe, yet did the Sonne of God take vnto him mans nature and flesh without mans sinne: because he was conceiued of a Virgine by the operation of the holy-Ghost: whereas if hee had beene conceiued by naturall generation, he had with Adams flesh taken Adams corruption. The other wonder in the Incarnation of Christ is, that the flesh of man is vnited to the person of the Sonne of God, and thence hath his subsistance, otherwise hauing no subsistance of his owne. The like example is not to be found in the world againe: sauing that we haue some resemblance therof in the plant called Miscelto, which hath no roote of his owne, but growes as a braunch of the oake, or some other tree, and hath his life
2 and sappe from the roote thereof. The second mysterie in the knowledge of Christ, is the iustification of Christ in these words, Iustified in the spirit: and it was on this manner. Christ made man became our suretie, and was made subiect to the Lawe for vs. Heereuppon our sinnes were imputed to him, and the punishment due thereto laide vpon him, that is, the first death with the paines of the second: yea further, death in the graue had dominion ouer him. After all this, by his spirite or power of the Godhead hee raised himselfe from death, and thereby acquit himselfe of our sinnes; and this acquitall or absolution is his iustification, whereby hee declareth himselfe to be a Sauiour perfectly righteous. For if hee had not satisfied the wrath of God to the full, and brought perfect righteousnesse, he had neuer risen againe, considering he was iudged and condemned for our sinnes.
3 The third mysterie is, the sight of Angels, who desired to looke into the Incarnation of Christ: in which they saw three things, as Luke testifieth. The first, that it was a Luke 2.14. meanes to manifest the glorie of God: the second, that it brought peace and good successe to men vpon earth: the third, that it was a meanes to reueale the good will of God to the worlde. The fourth is, the preaching
4 of Christ to the Gentiles. This appeareth to be a great mysterie; because the knowledge of Christ was kept secret from the nations, for the space of more than 4000.
Rom. 16.25 yeares. For from the creation to Moses the Church of God was shut vp in a little family: from Moses to Christ, it was included within the precincts of Iewrie: which was not so much as the fourth part of England. The fifth mysterie was the conuersion 5 of the worlde to the faith of Christ. And this is so much the greater wonder; bicause this conuersion was wroght by the preaching of the Gospell, which is flatte against the naturall reason and will of man, and therefore vnfit to perswade: and the preachers hereof were simple and seely men to see to: and some of them which were conuerted, were the very Iewes that crucified Christ. The last mysterie was the ascension of Christ into glorie. The greatnesse of this mysterie appeares in two things. The first, that Christs ascension was a reall and full opening of the Kingdome of Heauen, which had formerly been shut by our sins. The second, that the ascention of Christ, was no personall or priuate ascention: for hee ascended in the roome and steade of all the Elect: and they ascended together in and with him, and now after a sorte are together in and with him in glorie. Thus we see the excellency of the knowledge of Christ in respect of the Mysteries contained therein: the like excellencie appeares in the effects thereof; which are two, the knowledge of God, and of our selues.

For the first, by the knowlege of Christ, we know God aright. Hence Christ is called, the brightnesse of the glorie of the Father: Hebr. 1.3. and, the ingrauen image of his person: and, the Colos. 1.15 image of the inuisible God. And Paul saieth notably, that when God shineth in our hearts by the light of the Gospel, his glorie 2 Cor. 4.6. is to be seene in the face of Christ. The wisedome, power, and goodnesse of God is made manifest in Christ: and that more fully than euer it was in the creation. In the creation Adam beeing but a meere man was our head; but in the estate of grace, Christ is our head, God and man. By creation wee receiue but a naturall life to bee continued by foode: by Christ we receiue a spirituall, to be preserued eternally without foode: by the operation of the spirite. As the Spouse of Adam was bone of his bone, and flesh of his flesh: so is the spouse of Christ bone of his bone, and flesh of his flesh: and that in more excellent manner: bicause euery particular man, as he is borne anew, and the whole Catholicke Church the true Spouse of Christ, springeth and ariseth out of the merite and efficacie of the blood that distilled out of the heart and side of Christ. In the creation God makes life of nothing: but by Christ he draws our life forth of death, and changeth death it selfe into life. Againe in the law the iustice of God is set downe and reuealed: in Christ wee see more, namely perfect iustice and perfect mercie, reuealed to the full; yea (which is a woonder) iustice and mercie reconciled. Lastly, in Christ wee see the length, the breadth, the height, the deapth of the loue of God, in Iohn 17.23. that God vouchsafeth to loue the Elect with the very same loue wherewith he loueth Christ.

As by Christ we know God: so also by Christ wee knowe our selues: and that on this manner. First wee must consider, that in the Passion hee tooke our person vpon him, and that vpon the crosse, hee stoode in our place, roome, and steade. Secondly we are to consider the greatnes of his agonie and passion, set foorth vnto vs especially by fiue things. The first is the testimonie of the Euangelists, who say in Matth.27.37 emphaticall wordes, that he was full of sorrow, and grieuously troubled. The second, his complaint, that his soule was heauie vnto the death: and, that he was forsaken of the father. The third, his prayer with strong cries: saue mee from this houre: let this cuppe passe. The fourth, the comming of an Angel to comfort him. The last, his sweate of water and thicke or clotted blood. Now in Christ thus considered, we see the greatnes of Gods anger against vs for our sinnes: we see the greatnes of our sinnes: wee see the vilenes of our persons: we see the hardnesse of our hearts, that neuer so much as sigh for our offences, for which the sonne of God sweat water and blood: we see our vnthankfulnes, that little respect or regard this work of Christ. Lastly, we see our dutie: that wee are to be throughly touched with true repentance, and to humble our selues as it were to the very pit of hell: for if the Sonne of God mourne and crie for our sinnes imputed, wee are much more to Zach.12.10. cry and bleed in our hearts for thē, seeing they are ours properly, & with thē we haue pierced Christ. And thus the excellencie of the knowledge of Christ is manifest.

Hence we learne sundry things: first, if the knowlege of Ghrist be so excellent, we may not maruell, that by the malice of the diuell it hath bin corrupted many hundered yeares in the Romish church: which teacheth, that the Gospel is nothing else in effect but the lawe of Moses perfected. Now if this were so, Christ doubtlesse died in vaine, and we might place our hope in our owne righteousnes; and the promise of life eternall by Christ, should be of none effect. For the lawe neuer iustifies before God, til it be perfectly kept: which condition of perfection if men could performe, there should be little neede of Christ, or of the Gospell. Secondly, if this knowledge be of such excellencie, it must be learned of vs, and that in speciall manner. If to other inferiour learning we lend the vnderstanding and memorie, to this wee are to apply the whole man. The minde must learne it by opening it selfe to conceiue it: the memorie must learne it, by storing it vppe: the will and affections must learne it, by resigning and conforming themselues in their kinde vnto it. Thus Paule teacheth, that to learne Christ; as the truth is Eph.4.21.22 in Christ, is to put off the olde man, and to put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousnesse and holinesse. Thirdly, by this we learne to value & prise the knowledge of Christ, aboue all thinges in the world. The Angels of God themselues desire to profite in this knowledge. Dauid, who in the darknes of the olde Testament Psal.84.
desired to be a doorekeeper in the house of God, if he were now liuing on earth, wold be content with an office a thousand folde more base, that he might inioy this cleare light of the knowledge of Christ. But alas, there are no such Dauids nowadayes. It is our fault, and the fault of our times, that this knowledge is of little or no value and account among men; and little fruit thereof to be seene. And therefore it is to be feared, that God will take this treasure of knowledge from vs, and send forth strong 2. Thess.2.10.
illusions to beleeue lies; becausse it is little or nothing loued.

Paul yet further commends this knowledge, in that he calles it, The knowledge of Christ, HIS LORD. Nowe hee is our Lord foure waies. First, by the right of donation (becausse all the Elect are giuen to him of the Father in the eternall counsel of election:) secōdly, by creation: thirdly, by the right of redemption: fourthly, by the right of headshippe; in that as a liuing head hee giues sense and spirituall life to them that beleeue in him. And Paul calls Christ his Lorde, becausse hee beleeued his owne election, in which he was giuen to Christ, his creation and redemption by him, and his mystical coniunction with him, as with his head. And heere Paul in his example teacheth

teacheth vs two things. The first, how we ſhould know Chriſt, & the doctrine of the Goſpel. For the right knowledge whereof, there is required, beſide generall vnderſtanding of Chriſt & his benefits, with generall aſſent, a ſpeciall application thereof. It is not ſufficient to beleeue the election, redemption, iuſtification, glorification of Gods people: but we muſt go further, & beleeue the very ſame things in our ſelues. The reaſon may bee taken from the Contents of the Goſpell. For it containes two parts; the first is a promiſe, in which Chriſt with all his benefits is offered & propoũnded vnto vs. The ſecond is a commandement to apply the ſaide promiſe, and the ſubſtance thereof to our ſelues, and that by our faith. And hee that takes away this ſecond part, ouerthrowes halfe the Goſpell of Chriſt. Here is the foundation of ſauing knowledge, which iuſtifieth and bringeth life eternall; and the foundation of ſpeciall faith. The ſecond thing to be learned in Paules example is, that wee are to reſigne our ſelues, our bodies, & ſoules, and to render all ſubiection to Chriſt. For in that hee calleth him Lord, he profeſſeth himſelfe to be the ſeruaunt of Chriſt. The end of all preaching is to bring, not onely our words and deedes, but alſo our ſecret thoughts in ſubiection vnto him. And the end why Chriſt ſitteth in glorie at the right hand of the Father is, that euery knee may bow vnto him, of things in heauen & earth. It behooueth vs therefore to liue and carry our ſelues in our places as true and vnfained ſeruants of Chriſt.

1.Iohn 3.23.

Ioy 53.
Iohn 17.3.

1.Cor.10.5.

The ſecond degree in *Paul*ᵉ gradation is, that he deſires to gaine Chriſt. Now to gaine Chriſt is nothing elſe, but to make Chriſt his gaine, as appeeres by the oppoſition of the wordes. For hee ſaieth, hee had deprined himſelfe of all things, that is, made all thinges his loſſe, that he might gaine Chriſt. And he is made our gaine if two things be doone. Firſt hee muſt bee made ours, that is, thy Chriſt or my Chriſt in particular: ſecondly we muſt put our confidence in him. For the firſt, that Chriſt may be made ours, a double conſent is required: Gods conſent to giue Chriſt, and our conſent to receiue him. Gods conſent, that Chriſt ſhalbe ours, is giuen in the reuelatiõ of the promiſe touching the womans ſeede, made to our firſt parẽts, in the continuall renuing of the ſaid promiſe to our forefathers, in the incarnation and birth of Chriſt, in his paſsion, in the preaching of the goſpel, in the adminiſtration of both the ſacraments, baptiſm & the Lords ſupper. Our cõſent to receiue chriſt, is when we beginne to beleeue in him; yea when we begin to be touched in our harts for our ſins, and to hunger and thirſt after Chriſt. Thus by the cõcurrẽce of theſe two conſents is our Sauior Chriſt really made ours. And further yet, that hee may be not only ours, but alſo our gain, we muſt ſet & fix the whole confidẽce of our harts vpon him alone, for the forgiueneſſe of our ſins, and the ſaluation of our ſoules. For where the gaine is, there muſt the heart be. When riches increaſe wee may not ſet our heartes on them, bicauſe, though they be good, yet are they not our gaine or treaſure: Chriſt is not only good vnto vs, but our gain, & the very fountain of all good things: and therfore we muſt beſtow our harts on him.

Hence we learn that the popiſh religion teacheth wickednes. For it maintaines that we are not only to beleeue in God, but [a] alſo in the church: it maintaines an hope [b] & confidence in Saints, eſpecially in the virgin Mary: it maintains laſtly a [c] confidence in our own works: ſo it be as they ſay in ſobrietie. This is to make the creature our gain, & to put down Chriſt our redeemer.

Againe, Paul had ſaide in the [d] former chapter, that Chriſt was his gaine both in life and death: and yet now hee ſaith, that he ſtill deſires to gaine Chriſt. And by his example we learne, that in this life our affections muſt neuer bee ſatisfied and filled with the deſires of Chriſt, till we haue the full fruition of him. Naturally our deſires be inſatiable, in reſpect of riches, honours, pleaſures: but we muſt learne to moderate and ſtint our ſelues in ſeeking of earthly things; beeing content with the portion that God doth allot vs: and the inſatiableneſſe of our affections muſt indeede be directed & turnd vpon Chriſt. The woman in the Goſpel, that had the bloody iſſue, deſired to touch the hem of his garment; wee muſt goe further, not onely to touch him, but alſo by our faith to lay holde on him, and as it were with both the handes, and to hang vpon him. Thomas deſired for his contentation, but to put his finger into his ſide: wee muſt ſet before our eyes Chriſt crucified: & his pretious blood as it were, afreſh diſtilling from his hands, feet, & ſide: and we muſt not onely touch this blood, but ſprinckle our ſelues with it, yea dip, and as it were diue our ſelues into it, body, ſoule, and all.

d Phil. 1.21.

The third and laſt degree in Pauls gradation is, that hee desires to be found in Christ. And heere his desire is twofold, the first, to be in Christ: the second; to be found so of God in the day of iudgement. The first, To be in Christ, is to be taken out of the first Adam, and to be vnited vnto Christ as his very flesh, or as a true member of his mysticall body. Now this incorporation and vnion into Christ, is a mysterie; and for the better vnderstanding of it, foure rules must be obserued. The first, that not onely our soules are vnited to the soule or godhead of Christ; but also the whole person of him that beleeueth is vnited to the whole person of Christ. For the Redeemer and they which are redeemed, are vnited together: and Christ, God and man, redeemed vs, not onely in soule, but also in body. Wee therefore beleeuers, haue our whole persons vnited to the whole person of Christ.

1.Cor.6.15 And Saint Paul saith; that our very bodies are the members of Christ. And Christ himselfe

Iohn 6.56. saith; that wee must eate his flesh, and drinke his blood, that we may be in him, and he in vs. The second rule is, touching the order of this vnion: That wee are ioyned to the flesh of Christ, and by his flesh, to his godhead. For that which brings vs to haue fellowshippe with God, ioynes vs to God. Now by the flesh of Christ, wee haue our fellowshippe with God. It is as the vaile of the Temple,

Hebr.10.20. whereby the high Priest entered into the holy of holies, and in the presence of God. Againe, it serues as a pipe, or conduit, to derive the efficacy and operation of the Godhead vnto vs. The third rule is, that this vnion stands not in imagination, but is a true and reall coniunction. Neither doth the distance of place (wee being on earth, and the flesh of Christ in heauen) hinder this vnion. The minde is vnited after a sort, to the thing it mindeth. After the contract of marriage, two distinct persons being a thousand miles asunder, remaine one flesh. If nature affoord thus much: why may not the like bee found in the coniunction, that is, aboue nature? The last rule is, That the bond of this coniunction, is one and the same spirite, being both in Christ and vs: first in Christ, and then in vs. This

1.Iohn 3.13. teacheth S. Iohn, saying; that Christ dwells in vs by his spirit giuen vnto vs. Againe, this spirite worketh in vs faith, which also knits vs

Ephes 3 17. to Christ: who as Paul saieth; dwells in our hearts by faith. And by this wee further see that distance of place hinders not this vnion. The spirite of God being infinite, may dwell both in Christ, and vs: and our faith though it be seated within our hearts, yet can it reach forth it selfe, and apprehend Christ in heauen.

The second desire of Paul is, that he may be found of God to be in Christ, that is, that God would respect him as a member of Christ, and accept him into his fauour eternally for Christ. For the better vnderstanding of this, the order that God vseth in shewing his loue must bee obserued. First of all, he beginnes his loue in Christ, whome he loues simply for himselfe: then from Christ he descends to them that are vnited to Christ, considering them euen as parts of Christ: whome also he loueth, yet not simply, but respectiuely, in and for Christ. He that lookes vpon things of diuers kindes through a greene glasse, beholds them all to be greene: euen so, whom God respecteth in and for Christ, they are loued of God, as he is loued, and righteous as he is righteous. And this is the thing which Paul desireth, that in the day of iudgement he may be thus respected.

Hence we learne, that God will make an examination of all our hearts, liues, and workes, in the day of iudgement. For this Finding, which Paul mentioneth, presupposeth, that god sees, & obserues our waies, and will one day certenly discouer them, knowing euen now certenly whether we be in Christ or no. For this cause we are to call our selues to an account, yea to a strait account: for God will find out whatsoeuer is amisse, though we haue skill to make faire shewes before men. And we are withall to amend our selues. Salomon vpon this ground dissuades the yong man from fornication; why shouldest thou, my sonne (saith he) take delight in a strange woman, seeing the waies of men are before the eye of God, and hee pondereth all their paths? To this purpose the Iewes haue a saying woorth our marking: write, say they, 3 things in thy hart, & thou shalt neuer sinne: There is an eye that seeth thee, an eare that heareth thee, and a hand that writeth all thy doings in a booke. The cause of our manifolde sinnes is, that men falsely thinke, that God neither sees, nor heares them. Thus saieth Dauid of his enemies; They brag in their talke, and swords are in their lips; for say they, who heareth vs? Pro.5.21. Psal.59.8.

Againe, heere we see Pauls care, yea the pitch of all his desires and his principall forecast, that he might be found of God in the day of iudgement, to be a member of Christ. The like must be our care and forecast now in the time of this life: yea, this must must be the care of all cares, that we may be knit to Christ, and so accepted of God, when he shal rise to iudgement. Christ bids Luke 11.36. vs, Watch and pray, that we may stand before the Sonne of man: and this we cannot doe, vnles we be incorporated into Christ. We are bidden first to seeke the kingdome of heauen: and that is indeed to be in Christ. To be wise and circumspect in many matters, and yet to want forecast to compasse our maine and principall good, is the greatest folly of all. What is the fault of the foolish virgins? virgins they were as the wise: they caried the burning lamps of Christian profession: likewise they had oyle, that is, the oyle of grace: but alas, they had not oyle inough to furnish their lamps. Their fault was, that they wanted forecast to furnish themselues with oyle sufficient. And there is neuer sufficiencie of oyle, till we be true and liuelie members of Christ. And this was their damnable follie, that they contented themselues with the name and profession of Christ, and had not a serious and speciall care indeed to be members of Christ. Therfore let vs now diligently indeauour to be that in this life, which we desire to be found of god in the day of iudgement. There be three iudgements which we are to vndergo, the iudgement of men, of our selues, and of God. The two first we may falsifie, the third we cannot. For men we may deceiue, and our selues we may deceiue; but God we cannot. It is the foundation of all good things to be ingrafted into Christ: and for this cause, all the forecast of our heades, all other cares and studies should giue place that this might be accomplished. Some man may hereupon demand, what he should do, that he might be in Christ. I answer, two things: first he must breake off all his sinnes, and turne vnto God: secondly, he must pray ernestly euen vnto the death, that his heart may be knit to Christ. Again it may be demanded, how it may be knowne of vs, that we

1. Iohn 2.3. are in Christ. S. Iohn answereth, Hereby we know that he dwelleth in vs by the spirit which he hath giuen vs. And we may know that we haue the spirit of Christ, if the same minde, inclination, and disposition, the like loue to God and man, the like meekenes, patience, & obedience be in vs which was in Christ.

v. 9. —— Not hauing mine owne righteousnesse, which is of the law, but that which is of the faith of Christ, &c.

The Apostle hauing taught in generall termes, that Christ is his gaine, here beginnes to declare the same in more particular sort. For he sets downe a three-folde gaine which he desired to obtain of Christ: the first is, the righteousnesse of Christ: the second is, inward fellowship with him: the third is, the resurrection of the bodie to eternall glorie. Now this righteousnesse of Christ which Paul makes his first gain, is handled in the 9. v. for the better knowledge wherof, I will first open the meaning of the words. And first of all, it must be knowne, that they are an exposition of the wordes which went before. For whereas Paul had desired to be found in Christ, now he shews his own meaning, that he desired therein nothing else but that he might be accepted of God for Christs sake, and be esteemed righteous in his righteousnesse. And that this righteousnesse may be the better discerned, he sets downe two sorts of iustice: the one he refuseth, the other he desireth and chooseth. The righteousnesse refused, he calles it his owne: because it is within him, and it is exercised by the powers of his soule, namely, his mind, will, affections. He saith further, it is of the law, that is, of the works which the law requireth: for (as Paul saith) the righteousnes of the law is this, He that doth these things shall liue therein. Rom. 10.5. Againe of the iustice desired, he saieth, it is by the faith of Christ, that is, it ariseth of the obedience of Christ apprehended by faith. For in this manner to the Romanes, hee Rom. 3.22.25. puttes the faith of Christ, for faith in the blood of Christ. And whereas some man might happily say, that euen this righteousnesse is ours, as the former, Paul addeth further, that it is of God, wholy and onely, and not of vs, either in whole, or in parte; being freely giuen of him vpon our faith, that is, when we beleeue.

In these few wordes Paul coucheth many weighty poynts of doctrine. I will distinctly propound them one by one. First of all, he makes a double iustice, one of the Law, the other of the Gospel: yea hee opposeth them as contraries in the case of iustification; and that they may the better be conceiued, he discribes thē seuerally. Touching the iustice of the law, he sets it down by 2. things. First he saith, it is within vs: bicause it is nothing else but a conformitie of heart and life to the will of God reueald in the said law. And the lawe knowes not the righteousnes which is without vs. Secondly he notes the matter of it, that it consists of such virtues & works as the law prescribeth. Nowe the iustice of the Gospell it is likewise likewise set forth by foure things. First, it is not in vs, but forth of vs: because Paul opposeth it to the righteousnes which is ours, and within vs. Secondly, Paul sets downe the matter of it, or the person in whom it is, namely, Christ. Of whom Ieremy saith; Iehouah is our righteousnesse. And Christ must be considered two waies; as God, & as Mediatour: according to which two respects, he hath a double righteousnesse: One as God, and that is infinite, and therefore incommunicable: The other as Mediatour, is the obedience of Christ, which he performed in his manhoode, consisting of two parts: his sufferings in life and death, and his fulfilling of the law for vs. And this very obedience which is in Christ, and not in vs, is the very matter of the iustice of the Gospel. Thirdly, Paul sets down the means whereby this iustice is made ours, and that is faith, which doth rest on Christ, and apply his obedience to vs. Lastly, Paul sets downe the author of this iustice, and that is God, who of his grace and mercy, freely giues Christ and his obedience vnto vs, when we belieue. Out of these foure points a definition of the iustice of the Gospel may be framed thus. It is the righteousnesse of the Mediator, namely the obedience of Christ, giuen vs freely of God, and receiued by our faith.

By this distinction of Legall and Euangelicall iustice, wee learne the difference of the law and the Gospel. The law promiseth life vpon the condition of our workes, or obedience performed, according to the tenour of the law. The Gospel requires not the condition of merit, or of any worke to be done on our parts in the case of our iustification, but only prescribes vs to belieue in Christ, and to rest on his obedience, as our iustice before the tribunal seate of God. Secondly, by this we learne, that the Church of Rome, and the learned therein, are ignorant of the right difference betweene the law and the Gospel. For they teach, that the righteousnesse which stands in our inherent vertues and workes, done by vs, is required for iustification, as well in the Gospel, as in the Law: and that the difference lies onely in this, that the law is more darke, and without grace; the Gospel more plain, hauing also the grace of God annexed vnto it, to inable vs in our own persons, to do that which both Law and Gospel require. But this is indeede to make a confusion of the Law and Gospel, and to abolish the distinction of the two-fold iustice before named; which may not be.

The second point of doctrine deliuered by Paul, is, That a sinner stands iust before the Tribunall seate of God, not by the iustice of the law, but by the iustice of faith, which is the obedience of Christ, without any works of ours. And because this point of doctrine is of great moment, and is with all oppugned of many, I will further confirme it by some speciall reasons. First of all, in the iustification of a sinner, God manifests his mercy and iustice to the full. For as Paul saith; He iustifieth freely by grace: Rom.3. and in iustifying, hee is not onely a iustifier, but also iust. Now this concurrence of mercy and iustice, is no where to be found, but in the obedience of Christ, performed by him in our roome and steede. As for all Christian vertues and workes of godly men, they are by mercy accepted of God, but they doe not satisfie the iustice of God, according to the tenor of the law. Secondly, Paul in the Epistle to the Romans, considering Abraham not as an idolater vnconuerted, but as a beleeuer, yea as the father of all the faithfull, saith; that then he was iustified without works: Rom.4.2. and that, his faith, that is, the Messias apprehended by his faith, was counted vnto him for righteousnesse, long after his conuersion. Now as he, who is a patterne for vs to follow, is iustified; so must wee bee iustified, and no otherwise. Thirdly, as by Adams disobedience we are made sinners, so by Christs obedience wee are made righteous: but by Adams disobedience[a] imputed to vs, are wee made sinners: therefore wee are made iust by the obedience of Christ imputed. Bernard vsed this reason: Whom (saith hee) another mans fault defiled, another mans water washed. Yet in calling it another mans fault, I doe not deny it to be ours: otherwise it could not defile vs. But it is another mans, because wee all not knowing of it, sinned in Adam. It is ours, because we haue sinned, though in another; and it is imputed to vs by the iust iudgement of God, though it bee secret. Yet, that thou maiest not complaine, O man, against the disobedience of Adam, there is giuen thee the obedience of Christ: that being solde for naught, thou mayest be redeemed for naught. Againe, the doctrine of imputed iustice he teacheth expresly, saying; All are dead, that the satisfaction of one might bee imputed to all, as hee alone haue the sinnes of all. Againe, Death is put to flight by the death of Christ, and the righteousnesse of Christ is imputed to vs. Fourthly, Paul saith; Christ is made vnto vs of God, iustice, that is, iustice im-imputed: for in the next words he saith, he is made our sanctification, that is, our iustice not imputed, but inherent. Fiftly, as Christ was made sinne, so are we made the iustice of God, but Christ was made our sinne, not by any conueiaunce of any corruption into his most holy heart, but by imputation. We therefore are made the iustice of God by like imputation. And lest any man should yet surmise that this iustice is not imputed, but infused into vs, Paul saith, We are made the iustice of God in him, that is, in Christ. Hence it followeth manifestly, that there is no vertue or work within vs which iustifieth before God, and that our iustice, whereby we are iust in the sight of God, and accepted to life eternall, is out of vs, & placed in Christ. Thus much haue the Fathers obserued vpon this text of Paul. Augustine saith, that Christ was made sinne, that we might be made iustice, not our iustice, but Gods iustice, neither in vs, but in him: as he declared sinne not to be his, but ours, not placed in him, but in vs. Hierome saith, Christ being offered for vs, tooke the name of sinne, that we might be made the righteousnes of God in him, not ours, nor in vs. In the same manner speake Theophilact, Anselme, Sedulius presbyter and others. Lastly, Man considered as a creature before his fal, owed vnto god the fulfilling of the law, which as a certaine tribute was daily to be paid vnto him. After the fall, he doubled his debt, because he then became debter to God of a satisfaction due for the breach of the law. Now the not paiment of this double debt, is our vnrighteousnes. But where may we find a sufficient paiment for this debt? we our selues, by our sins, daily increase the said debt. And our owne workes, though proceeding of faith, are no conuenient payment; because we cannot by one debt pay an other. And if we shall search through heauen & earth, there is nothing to be found, that may stand for paiment with God, but the obedience of the Redeemer, which he hath presented & laide downe before the throne of the Almightie, as an endles treasure to make paiment in our behalfe. And becaufe the saide obedience is a satisfaction for our vnrighteousnes, it is also our iustice in the acceptation of God. By these and other reasons it appeares, that nothing can absolue vs before God, and procure the right of eternall life, but the onely obedience of the mediator Christ, God and man: and that without any vertue or worke of ours.

Hence it folows, that the present Church of Rome corrupts the article of iustification, by mingling things together, which can no more be compounded and mingled together, then fire and water: namely, the iustice of the gospel with the iustice of the Law. For it makes a double iustification: the first containes two parts, pardon of sinne by the death of Christ, and the infused habite of charitie. The second is, by works, which (they say) do meritoriously increase the first iustification, and procure eternall life. Here we see the soueraigne medicine of the Gospel, namely remission of sinnes, tempered with the poison of the law. For though vertues and workes prescribed in the law, haue their place, as good gifts of God, in our liues and conuersation; yet when they are set vp higher, and brought within the circle of iustification as meritorious causes; they are put quite out of their place, and are no better then poison: and hereupon are tearmed of Paul, Losse and Dung. But such as desire to be termed Catholiks, alleadge for themselues against vs, that the obedience of Christ, that is, the righteousnes of an other can not possibly be our righteousnes. I answer, that the iustice of another may be our iustice, if it be really made ours. And this is true in Christ. For when we beginne to beleeue in him, though our persons remaine euermore distinct and vnconfounded, yet are we made one with him, and according to the tenour of the Euangelicall couenant, are we giuen to him, and he to vs: so as we may truly say, Christ is mine, as we can truly say, this house, or this land is mine. Now if Christ be ours, then also his obedience is not onely his, but ours also: his, because it is in him; ours, because with him it is giuen vs of God. Againe they alledge, That when Paul refuseth the righteousnes of the law, he meanes nothing else but the works of the law, that are performed by the strength of Nature, and that he doth not exclude the works of grace. I answer, it is false: for he speaketh of himselfe in the time present when he was a Christian Apostle: and therefore he excludes all righteousnes of his owne, which he had by the law, euen when he was an Apostle. And the obiection, Rom. 6. 1. What then? shall we sinne that grace may abound? cannot be inferred vpon iustification by workes of grace: but vpon a iustification by the obedience of Christ imputed to vs, without all works of our owne.

Againe

Ephes. 2. 21. & 4. 16. Apoc. 21. 18.

Againe, that we are iuſtified, not by the iuſtice of the law, but by the iuſtice of faith, here is the foundation of our comfort. For hereupon, if we be tempted in the time of this life, we may oppoſe againſt the tempter this our iuſtice. If Satan pleade againſt vs, that we are ſinners, and therefore ſubiect to eternall damnation: let vs anſwer him, that the obedience of Chriſt hath freed vs from this damnation. If he pleade further, that we neuer fulfilled the law; and conſequētly, that we haue no right to eternall life: we muſt anſwer him, that Chriſt fulfilled the law for vs. If he ſhall vex and vpbraid vs with conſideration of our manifold wants and corruptions; let vs tell him, that ſo long as we turne vnto God, from all our euill wayes, bewaile our corruptions, and beleeue in Chriſt, all our wants are couered in his obedience. Againe, If in the time of death, the feare and apprehenſion of the iudgement and anger of God terrifie vs, we are to oppoſe this obedience of our Mediatour Chriſt Ieſus, to the iudgement of God, and to put it betweene Gods anger and vs: yea we are to reſt vpon it, and to infold and wrappe our ſoules in it, and thus to preſent them to God. Iſay the prophet ſaieth, that the Meſſiah is a place of refuge, ſhelter, or ſhade, againſt the tempeſt, or burning heate of the wrath of God. And Paul ſaith, he is our propitiatorie: to ſignifie, that, as the propitiatorie couered the Arke, and the Law in the arke, which is the hand-writing againſt vs, from the preſence of God: ſo Chriſt couereth our ſinnes, and puts himſelfe betweene vs and the indignation of his Father.

Iſa. 4.6.

Rom. 3.25.

The third and laſt point of doctrine here deliuered by Paul, is; That faith is the meanes to receiue and to obtaine the obedience of Chriſt for our iuſtice, That this may the better be conceiued, foure pointes are to be handled. What this faith is? how it is a meanes to obtaine iuſtice? whether alone by it ſelfe, or by the helpe of other vertues? when, and how long it is the only meanes? For the firſt: Faith is a ſpeciall gift of God, whereby we beleeue Chriſt and his benefits to be ours. In the firſt place I ſay, it is a gift of God: becauſe it comes wholy of God, and not from the minde or will of man. Thus Paul ſaith, It is giuen you for Chriſt to beleeue in him: and Chriſt our Sauiour ſaith to two of his diſciples, O fooliſh and ſlow of heart to beleeue: If it be obiected, that when we beleeue firſt, we then beleeue willingly: I anſwer, it is ſo indeede: yet is not this willingnes in vs by nature, but by grace: becauſe when God giues vnto vs the gifts of faith, he giues vs alſo to will to beleeue. None comes to Chriſt but hee is drawne of the father: and to be drawne, is, when the vnwilling will is changed, and by the power of God made a willing will. I adde further, that faith in the Meſsias is a ſpeciall gift for two cauſes. Firſt, becauſe it is a gift aboue, not onely corrupted, but alſo aboue the firſt created nature. For it was neuer in mans nature by creation. Adam neuer had it: neither did the morall lawe reueale it vnto vs; becauſe it neuer knew this faith. Neuertheleſſe other vertues, as loue of God and man, feare of God, &c. are reuealed of the law, and were in mans nature by creation. Againe, whereas all other gifts of God are giuen to them that are ingrafted into Chriſt, faith is giuen to them that b are to be ingrafted: becauſe it is the ingrafting, and therefore cannot be giuen to them that are alreadie in Chriſt, but to them that are to be in Chriſt. Further, I ſay, that by faith, we beleeue Chriſt and his benefits to be ours. For this is the propertie of faith, whereby it differs from all other graces of God. When Thomas had put his finger into the ſide of Chriſt, he ſaid, My Lord, and my God: to whome Chriſt replied, Becauſe thou haſt ſeene, thou haſt beleeued: where we ſee, that this is faith, to beleeue Chriſt to be our Lord & our God. Paul ſaith, I liue by the faith of Chriſt: now what he meanes by faith, he ſhewes in the next words: who hath loued ME and giuen himſelfe FOR ME.

Ioh. 20.28.

Mark 11.24.

If a man ſhal demand, on what grounds (becauſe we are not to goe by imagination) I ſay, vpon what grounds he is to conceiue a faith, that Chriſt is his Chriſt: I anſwer, the grounds are two. The firſt is the commandement of God, to beleeue Chriſt and his benefits to be ours, 1. Ioh. 3.23. This is the commaundement, that yee beleeue in the name of his ſonne Ieſus Chriſt. Now to beleeue in Chriſt, is to put our confidence in him: and we can put no confidence in him, vnleſſe we be firſt aſſured that he with his benefits is ours. And whatſoeuer we aske in praier, we are commaunded to beleeue that it ſhall be giuen vnto vs. Now aboue all things we are to aske, that Chriſt and his benefits may be giuen vnto vs of God. This therefore muſt we beleeue. The ſecond ground is this: we muſt conſider the manner that God vſeth in propounding the Gala. 1.23.

Phil. 1.29.

Luke 24.25.

the promise of grace vnto vs: for he doth not onely set it forth vnto vs in a generall sort, but also he vseth meete and conuenient meanes to apply it to the persons of men. First of all, he confirmes it by oath, that we our selues might the better apply it & reape sure consolation thereby. Secondly God giueth vnto vs the spirit of adoption; which beareth witnesse to our consciences of such things as God hath giuen vnto vs in particular, and are onely in generall manner propounded in the promise. And this testimonie must be certaine in it selfe, and also plainly knowne vnto vs; els is it no testimonie. Thirdly both the sacraments, are seales of the promise: in the lawfull vse whereof God offers, yea exhibits Christ vnto vs, and doth (as it were) write our names within the promise, that we might not doubt. Now then, looke as God giues the promise, so must we by faith receiue it. But God giues the promise, and withal applies it: we therefore must receiue the promise, and by faith apply it to our selues. If any man shall say, that he can not cõceiue a speciall faith vpon these grounds by reason of his vnbeleefe: I answer, that he must striue against his vnbeleefe, and indeauour to beleeue by desiring, asking, seeking, knocking: and God will accept the will to beleeue for faith it selfe, so be it there be an honest heart touched with sorrow for sinnes past, and a purpose to sin no more.

Heb. 6. 18.

That we may yet better know, what faith is; vnderstand that there be two kinds of false faith, like indeed to true faith, and yet no faith at all. The first, is when a man conceiues in his heart a strong perswasion, that Christ is his Sauiour, and yet carries in the same heart a purpose to sinne, and makes no change or amendment of his life. This perswasion is nothing but presumption, and a counterfeit of true faith, whose propertie is to purifie the heart and to shew it selfe in the exercises of inuocation and true repentance. The second is, when men conceiue a strong perswasion, that Christ is their Sauiour, and yet for all this contemne and despise the Ministerie of the word and Sacraments. This also is an other counterfeit. For true faith is cõceiued, cherished and confirmed by the vse of the word and sacraments. And wee must there seeke Christ, where God will giue him vnto vs: now God giues Christ in the word & sacraments; & in them he doth as it were open his hand and reach forth all the blessings of Christ vnto vs. We must not therefore imagine to finde Christ, where & how we list; but we must seeke him in the word and sacraments, and there must we receiue him, if we desire to receiue him aright.

The second point to be considered is: How faith is a meanes to iustifie? I answer thus. Faith doth not iustifie as it is an excellent worke of God in vs: for then all vertues might be meanes of iustification, as well as faith. It doth not iustifie as it is an excellent vertue in it selfe: because it is imperfect & mingled with vnbeleefe. It doth not iustifie as a meanes to prepare and dispose vs to our iustification: for so soone as we begin to beleeue in Christ, we are iustified [d] without any disposition or preparation comming betweene faith and iustification. Lastly it doth not iustifie as it cõtaines in it all other vertues and good workes, as the kernell containes the tree with all his branches. For then should it be a part, yea the principall part of our iustice. Whereas Saint Paul distinguisheth iustice and faith, saying, that our righteousnes is of God vpon faith: & not for faith, but, by faith. Nowe then faith iustifies, as it is an Instrument or hand to apprehend or receiue the benefits of Christ for ours; and this apprehension is made, whē we doe indeede beleeue Christ and his benefits to be ours. And least any should imagine, that the very actiõ of faith in apprehending Christ, iustifieth: we are to vnderstand that faith doth not apprehende by power from it selfe, but by vertue of the couenant. If a man beleeue the kingdome of France to be his, it is not therfore his: yet if he beleeue Christ and the kingdome of heauen by Christ to be his, it is his indeede: not simply because he beleeues, but because he beleeueth vpon cõmandement and promise: for in the tenour of the couenant, God promiseth to impute the obedience of Christ vnto vs for our righteousnesse, if we beleeue.

d Chrysost. hom. 7. in Rom. Quam primum homo crediderit, confestim simul iustificatus est.

The third point is, Whether faith alone be the meanes to obtaine the iustice of Christ for vs or no? I answer, it is the only meanes without the helpe of any other vertue or worke. For Paul here teacheth, that faith apprehendeth Christ for righteousnes, without the law: That is, without any thing that the lawe requires at our hands. And here by this exclusiue particle [without the lawe] he teacheth three things. The first, that nothing within vs is an efficient or meritorious cause, either principall or lesse principall, in whole or in part, of our iusti-fication or reconcilation with God. The ſecond, that nothing within vs is an inſtrument or means to applie the obedience of Chriſt vnto vs, but faith which is ordained of God to be an hand to receiue the free fauour of God in the merit of Chriſt. The third, that our renouation or ſanctification is no matter, forme, or part of our iuſtification, but that it wholly ſtands in the imputation of the iuſtice of Chriſt. In a word, Paul vtterly excludes all things that are within vs, whether by nature or by grace, from the act of iuſtification: that in this article, onely grace, onely Chriſt, onely faith, only mercie in pardon of ſinne may raigne. It may be here obiected that Abraham was iuſtified not by faith alone, but by works, as S. Iames teacheth. I anſwer, there is a double iuſtification, one of the perſon whereby a man of a ſinner is made no ſinner: the ſecond is the iuſtification of the faith of the perſon, whereby faith is declared to be true faith: and this ſecond is by workes: and of it S. Iames ſpeaketh as appeares v. 18. where he ſaith, Shew me thy faith by thy workes. And whereas he ſaith, that Abraham our father was iuſtified by workes, his meaning is, that Abraham by workes iuſtified himſelfe to be a true beleeuer, yea the father of all the faithfull: and his faith was made perfect by works, verſ. 22. that is, declared or iuſtified to be a true faith.

The fourth or laſt point is, When and how lõg faith alone iuſtifieth? I anſwer, not onely in the beginning of our conuerſion, but alſo in the continuance, and finall accompliſhment thereof. For here Paul deſires in the day of iudgement to ſtand before God only by the iuſtice of faith, without his owne iuſtice of the lawe. And Paul brings in Abraham (as I haue noted before) in the very middeſt of godly conuerſation and holy obedience to be iuſtified without any works by his faith in the Meſſias. And Paul auoucheth three things of faith: by it we haue acceſſe to the grace of God: by it we ſtand in the ſame grace: by it we reioyce vnder the hope of glorie. Thus then, we ſee there is one only way of iuſtification, namely that we are iuſtified and accepted of God to life eternall through grace alone, by faith alone, for Chriſt alone in the beginning, middle, and ende of our conuerſion. And here is plainly diſcouered the errour of the church of Rome. It makes a double iuſtification: one whereby a ſinner is made of an euill man a iuſt man; and this they ſay is by faith alone: the ſecond is, whereby a iuſt man of a iuſt man is made more iuſt: & this (ſay they) is by faith and works togither: but falſly, as I haue ſhewed.

Rom. 4.

Rom. 5. 2.

By all this which hath bin ſayde, we ſee how righteouſneſſe comes by, and vpon the faith of Chriſt. And hence we learne, that it ſtands vs in hand to prooue whether we haue faith or no: becauſe where is no faith, there is no iuſtice. Secondly our dutie is to labour for ſuch a faith, that can and doth iuſtifie it ſelfe to be true faith, by workes of leue to God and man. Thirdly we muſt by this faith, reſt and wholly relie our ſelues on the obedience of Chriſt both in life and death: yea whatſoeuer doth befall vs. Though God ſhould reach out his hand and deſtroy vs, we muſt ſtill reſt vpon him.

Secondly if our iuſtice be forth of vs, & we muſt by faith truſt God for it: then much more muſt we truſt him for health, wealth, libertie, peace, foode, and raiment, and for all the things of this life. And if we cannot truſt him in the leſſe, we ſhall neuer truſt him in the principall. Therefore it is our part to walke in the duties of our callings, and to obey God therein: and for the ſucceſſe of our labours, to truſt him vpon his word; yea when all wordly helps & ſuccours faile, to truſt in him ſtill. If we cannot truſt him for our temporall life we ſhal neuer truſt him for our ſaluation.

The ſecond gaine which Paul deſireth, is fellowſhippe with Chriſt, in the 10. verſe. Where it is ſet forth firſt generally, and thẽ by his parts. Generally in theſe wordes [That I may know him.] Here it muſt be remẽbred that knowledge is twofold, knowledge of faith, and of experience. Knoweledge of faith is to be aſſured of Chriſt & his benefits, though it be againſt all humane reaſon, hope, and experience. Of this Paul ſaith, It is eternall life to know thee the onely God, &c. The knowledge of experience is to haue a ſence and feeling of our inward fellowſhip with Chriſt, and vpon often obſervation of his goodnes to grow more and more in experience of his loue. Now this knowledge is here meant, & not the firſt, which was before mentioned, verſ. 8. And therefore Pauls deſire is, that he may growe more and more in holy experience of the endleſſe loue of God, & fellowſhip with Chriſt.

The parts of this deſired cõmunion are two: Fellowſhip with Chriſt in his reſurrectiõ, & fellowſhip with him in his death. The former is expreſſed in theſe words, [and the vertue of his reſurrection.] And for the better conceiuing of it; wee are to consider what the resurrection of Christ is? And what is the vertue thereof? That the resurrection of Christ may be rightly conceiued, fiue points are to be scanned. The first, touching the person of him that rose: and that was Christ, God and man. Indeede properly the body alone did rise, and not the soule or Godhead, yet by reason of the vnion of the two natures in the vnitie of one person, whole Christ arose, or God himselfe made man arose. This commends to vs the excellencie of Christs resurrection, and makes it to be the foundation vnto vs of our resurrection. The second point is, For whom he rose? Hee rose not as a priuate person for himselfe alone; but he rose in our roome and stead, & that for vs: so when he arose, all the elect arose with him, and in him. Thus saith Paul, that Ephes.1.6. the Ephesians were raised together with him. His resurrection therefore was publike: and this is the ground of our comfort. The third point is, When he arose? Hee arose then, when he lay in bondage vnder death, and that in the graue, which is as it were the castle and holde of death. When Peter Act.2.24. saieth, That God loosed the sorrowes of death, he signifieth that Christ was made captiue for a time to the first death, and to the sorrowes of the second. Now in the midst of this captiuitie and bondage, he raised himselfe: and this argues, that his resurrection is a full victorie and conquest ouer death and all our spirituall enemies. The fourth point is, That he rose by his owne power, Iohn 10.18. as he saith of himselfe, I haue power to lay downe my life, and to take it vp againe. If this had not bin, though he had risen a thousand times by the power of another, he had not bin a perfect Redeemer. The last point is, Wherein stands the resurrection of Christ? Ans. It consistes in three actions of Christ. The first is the reuniting of his bodie to his soule, both which were seuered for a time, though neither of them were seuered from the Godhead. The second action is the change of this naturall life, which he lead in the estate of humiliation, into a heauenly and spirituall life without infirmities, and not maintained by foode as before. For we find not that after his resurrection he euer tooke meate for necessitie, but onely vpon occasion, to manifest the the truth of his manhood. And this life he tooke vnto himselfe, that he might conuey it to all that shoulde beleeue in him. The third action is his comming foorth of the graue; whereby death it selfe did as it were acknowledge him to be a conqueror, and that it had no title or interest in him. These fiue thinges considered, the Article of Christs resurrection shal be rightly vnderstoode.

Touching the vertue of Christs resurrection, it is nothing els but the power of his Godhead, or the power of his spirit, whereby he raised himselfe mightily from death to life, and that in our behalfe. The excellencie of it may be knowne by the effects, which be in number eight. The first, that by it he shewed himselfe to be the true and perfect Sauiour of the worlde. For it was foretold of the Messias that he should die and rise againe, Psal. 16. Mat. 12. And all this was accordingly accomplished by the vertue of Christs resurrection. The second effect is, that by it he shewd himselfe to be the true and naturall sonne of God. Paul saith, Hee was declared mightily to be the Rom.1.
Sonne of God, by the spirite of holinesse in his rising from the dead. The third effect is, that by this vertue hee declared himselfe to haue made a full and perfect satisfaction for the sinnes of the world. For if hee had not satisfied to the full, he had not risen againe. And Paul saith, If Christ be not risen, 1.Cor.15.17
